The meeting reminded me of nothing so much as a meeting of strikers in the last weeks of a long and bitter struggle. Time and again I have seen that same spirit at meetings of hard fighting miners, steel workers, railroad men. Not a smile, not a bit of enthusiasm, nothing but grim determination to go on with the struggle. That was the dogged spirit of the Russian workers in the early hard years of their revolution, it is the spirit of the revolutionary German workers now. In this remarkable meeting this unconquerable, do or die spirit dominated and pervaded everything. It portrayed to me even more forcefully than the pictures themselves, the bitterness of the great struggle that the German working class is now passing thru.

The Socialist Party Gompersists

By PAUL JUDITZ.

If we wish to analyze the reasons for the present helpless condition of our trade unions, we must start at the very roots of the problem. We must see whence spring the policies which at present determine the course of our activities, and evaluate the methods used in the daily life and struggles of our organizations.

Abraham Baroff, General Secretary of the International, writing in the New York Jewish Daily (Socialist) "Forward" on April 2nd, tries to point out the difficulties lying in the way of organizing the workers in the ladies' garment industry, and says:

"When we examine the results of our organization campaigns carried on during the last two years, we first then realize the obstacles which we encountered. And we are often troubled with the thot that we are helpless in face of the circumstances."

For this reason, Baroff continues, he and the other leaders of the International came to the conclusion that "agitation and propaganda among the unorganized alone do not suffice." What then? "We must extend our agitation and propaganda to the community so that union-made products may be propertly appreciated. Such work must become part of our organized activity."

And Baroff has another "important" conclusion, namely, "that unions must not undertake to control all the conditions in an industry unless they have at their disposal enormous profits." This last point Baroff considers the most important one upon which the next convention of the International must act.

Baroff's article is quite characteristic from start to finish. The story is told of a certain quack doctor who had one remedy for the diseases of all his patients: exercise for them, two dollars for him. Baroff has a similar remedy. Is the union helpless? Do the workers suffer? Is it difficult to organize them? The solution is simple. Sew labels on garments, and give the union a fund.

Baroff is not the only one to believe that the union can become powerful by propagandizing the employers, or as he calls them, the "community." Nor is this a new viewpoint discovered by Baroff. Such a policy has long been the practice in our unions. Baroff's quack medicine has long been used in healing the wounds of the workers, but, as was to be expected, the pain is still the same.

Let us consider this more carefully. In the labor movement we find two fundamental and opposing points of view on the methods of labor organization and the tactics to be pursued in the struggles of the workers. There is the Marxist viewpoint, and the so-called Gomperist viewpoint. The former holds, that the emancipation of the workers can be achieved only by the workers themselves. The latter believes in peace between capital and labor. The one maintains that the workers must always carry on a persistent struggle not only for better conditions of living, but for their complete liberations. The other places its hope upon the good will of the capitalists rather than upon the struggle of the workers.

The Gompersist philosophy predominates not alone in the so-called American unions, but is very carefully followed even in the so-called Socialist unions. In the Jewish Labor movement, public opinion and the appeal to the good-will of the employers are guarded as very important weapons in the daily struggles of the workers. Morris Kaufman, of the Furriers' Union, is not the only one who strives to establish "hearty co-operation" between unions and employers.

In "Justice," issue of March 28th, appeared an article by Morris Sigman, which is based upon a longer statement sent to the capitalist press by the president of the "International." In this article Sigman tries his utmost to show that the union wishes to do its best not only for the workers, but also for the employers. "The program of the union," he states, is just as much in the interests of the jobbers and manufacturers as it is in the interests of the workers."

In another article published in "Justice," on February 22nd, Sigman appeals to the jobbers to be good and accept "the responsibility and obligations which modern manufacturers assume towards their employers". "We would then," he says, "have two powers of equal strength in the industry—on the one hand, the jobber with his capital; on the other, the organized worker with his force concentrated in his union. These two powers would estimate each other's strength and would try to maintain a balance conclusive to peace. This would benefit the entire industry."

Let it not be forgotten that the writer of this is one who constantly insists that he is an industrialist, a revolutionary.

The same Gomperists "peace policy" is in many respects even more scrupulously followed by the leaders of the Amalgamated. We will not cite facts here as we have a special article on the policies of the Amalgamated. The same policy is pursued in the Capmakers' Union, in the Journeymen Tailors' Union, and in other so-called radical unions. This Gompersist philosophy not only finds ex- but is the determining factor in every step of trade union activity. And this is the cause of the chaos, the demoralization, the helplessness of our union organizations.

At a time when truly progressive leaders are exerting all their energy to organize the workers so that they may be prepared to carry on a real struggle, the Gompersists strive to organize the workers only for the purpose of negotiating collectively with the employers. This policy of the Gompersist trade union leaders pression in the public statements of union officials or in press articles, was very clearly demonstrated in a feature article in the monthly journal of the metal polishers' international union.

"Every worker," the article states, "must be united with the other workers in his trade, so as to obtain, thru joint action, higher wages and better conditions of labor. No individual worker can gain these merely thru his own unaided efforts. When an employer deals with each of, say, 500 employes separately, he can easily treat them without the proper spirit of fairness. Thru collective negotiations we have greater possibilities for concluding agreements which may result in more desirable relations between capital and labor, and establish peace. Collective bargaining affords the only practical means of bettering the relations between proprietors and workers on a business-like basis. It guarantees a 'square deal' to both sides."

Several weeks ago the writer of this article attended a meeting of tailors called by the Journeymen Tailors' Union, at which various union leaders made propaganda speeches to show the necessity of organizing the workers. One organizer of the Journeymen Tailors' Union in Chicago, had this to say: "Should any one tell you that the purpose of organization is to carry on a struggle for better conditions thru strikes, let me assure you he does not know what [illegible] talking about. The aim of organization is to avoid strikes of the workers.

"In Chicago," he further declared, "our union has had no strike for the last 15 years. Do you know why? Simply because in Chicago we are organized. When you are unorganized the boss sometimes takes advantage of your position and treats you so badly that you are forced to strike When you are organized, however, the boss is compelled to deal with you differently, and the union can see to it that the situation leads to no strike."

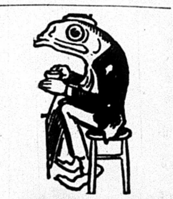
This is the "class" viewpoint of the present leadership in all the unions of the needle trades. The workers must be organized only to the extent necessary for collective bargaining with the employers. These leaders do not think of organization as a means of building up a working class power, which can carry on a struggle to maintain positions previously won and to achieve new gains.

We have no union leaders, concerned with educating the workers to class-consciousness, and actually leading them into the struggle for better living conditions.

We have merely "union mediators" who seek only to curry favors from the employers. It therefore often happens that union leaders make more effort to organize employers' associations than to strengthen the unions of the workers.

Hence all the methods of organization and struggle which they use have led the unions into a swamp. If the workers wish to escape from the swamp, they must first understand how injurious all the tactics are, which have been practiced to this day.

We shall describe these tactics more fully in the next article.



The Poor Fish says it looks like an even heat between the garment workers and the Pullman car workers as to which is putting up the better fight.

Lay Off 800 Textile Workers.

LAWRENCE, Mass., May 5.—More than 800 textile workers have been put on the streets with the closing of the Pemberton and Methuen cotton mills of Lawrence. Within the last month employment here decreased over 18 per cent according to Massachusetts department of labor figures. In Massachusetts 54 per cent of all factories are operating on part time or closed down entirely.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

Fred R. Marvin, editor of the Search-light department of the New York Commercial, is whining because the papers are not taking himself and his red exposures as seriously as he thinks the product of his fertile imagination deserves. His department carries from day to day "up-to-date and reliable information on the activitie of destructive movements seeking directly or indirectly to overthrow the government of the United States." He is sarcastically referred to as a "100 per cent American" by even some of the capitalist papers that do not know better, he complains.

Of course he continues it is not surprising that such papers as the Communist DAILY WORKER of Chicago should ridicule him but the "pinks" too have entered the fray. He is thinking of getting out an injunction restraining the press from criticizing his actions, particularly his efforts to shake down the bankers for cash. He swears that all his published stuff is authoritative. All those who have ribs prepare to break them now laughing at this idiot. Who do you think this gentleman considers reliable authority? Well, no less a person than the well-known crook and liar, Harry M. Daugherty, and his predecessor in office under Wilson, the unspeakable A. Mitchell Palmer. Marvin says he does not mind the hostility of the Communist press but the ingratitude of the capitalist papers is what makes him shed salt tears and stay awake nights cogitating on the thorny path that patriots must trod.

The Pullman Company really had a pretty way of giving its employes representation. It was a fifty-fifty proposition. Right off the reel you will agree that nothing could be fairer. Instead of having a labor union where the workers would have to rely on their own mental efforts, they had the advantage of having in their organization the leaders of the company to consult with, as to how best advance the interests of Florence Pullman, her beefy husband Frank O. Lowden and the fat swine on their "Ideal Farm." Let us say, five workers from the shops and five executives appointed by the company met to discuss their problems. In the event of no decision the head of the company had final say in the matter. Quite fair indeed. Relieved the workers of a lot of thinking!

When the Pullman company wanted to reduce the wages of their slaves 25 per cent, they announced a 40 per cent cut. The representatives of the workers in the Company Union succeeded in beating this down to the 25 per cent the company originally intended to cut them and thought they had won a victory. Even this fake sample of "industrial democracy" was irritating the big guns of the company so they finally decided to come out boldly and say they could no longer waste their time in this manner but would run their plant as they saw fit. Perhaps the workers may follow suit and decide not to waste their time but join up with the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen which is organizing them into a real union.

The Southern Railway is trying out the policy of class collaboration with its employes. The latter were granted a flat increase in wages of approximately five per cent—not a stunning raise—which will be in effect until March 1927. To this is added a bonus system which is expected to reduce the operating expenses of the carrier without costing an awful lot in the way of disbursements to the workers. The total operating expenses to gross revenue on the Southern Railway in 1923 were 21.42 per cent and this is known as the "test ratio."

In February, 1925, the ratio of these expenses to gross will be ascertained for 1924, and if despite higher wages the 1924 ratio is not in excess of the "test ratio," the management will pay in February 1926, a bonus to each employe of 1 1-2 percent of his total 192 salary. But if the 1924 ratio is found to be in excess of the "test ratio" such excess will be deducted from the 1 1- percent. The company however, generously agrees not to wipe out the percent increase no matter how the "ratio" goes. Under the most favorable circumstances, that is, granting the workers should worry the whole year round about saving fuel on their master's railroads, etc., the bonus allotment of a worker receiving $2,000 a year would be just $30.

This idea of getting the workers to feel that they own the railroads by hanging an imaginary $30 bill in front of their noses appeals tremendously to the capitalists in Wall Street who own the roads. It is reported in the Wall Street Journal that the men are already showing great enthusiasm for the scheme. The "bonus" is the chief topic of conversation among the system's employes and they are even soliciting business for the road in order to get a "Half Nelson" on that thirty dollars. These little schemes look pretty, but they never work—for the workers.

4,000,000 VOTES POLLED BY GERMAN COMMUNISTS

Glaziers Join Pullman Strike; Thousand Laid Off, Carshops Verge On Complete Paralysis

The glazers joined the Pullman car builders' strike and attended yesterday's strike meeting. Over one thousand men, in addition to the 700 strikers, have been laid off by the Pullman Company because, due to the strike, there is no work for them.

Company stool pigeons, and some of the men in the paymaster's department of the company, have let it leak out that the Pullman Company will have to close down their entire plant and cancel orders for outside contracts, if the strike is not settled at once. The Pullman Company is already laying off men every day.

Thru the organization of the striking car builders into the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, the workers in the Pullman shops, after winning the present strike, are going to force the eight-hour day and complete union conditions on the Pullman Company, John Holmgren, the strike leader, told over a thousand people at the K. of P. hall mass meeting Monday night.

Picketing Extended.

Picketing was extended today to take in the Blue Island and the Sixty-third street stations of the Rock Island Railroad, and all the railroad stations on the Illinois Central in the vicinity of the Pullman plant.

More men from out-of-town came into the employment gate yesterday. They were informed by the pickets that there is a strike on, and came over to the strike meeting. Arthur Patrick in a speech to the strikers, told how he was hired by an agency in Pittsburgh and shipped to Pullman at his own expense.

"I was hired in Pittsburgh to work as a riveter for $1.25 per hour," said Patrick. "I was guaranted my transportation money but was told there was no labor trouble."

O'Leary Says, "I Quit."

"When I learned there was a strike, I quit. O'Leary, the employment manager, said to his asssitant, 'Check this fellow out, and send out word that he is on the blacklist.' They put me on the blacklist, and kept me waiting for my money. When I went to get paid, my check was made out at the rate of 56 cents an hour instead of $1.25."

Patrick swore out an affidavit to the above, and turned it over to the strikers' attorney, David Bentall, empowering him to collect the money due.

Several men from Indianapolis also spoke to the strikers. Lee Helder turned over to the strikers' attorney an Indianapolis Star containing a good sized advertisement for men which declared there was no labor trouble.

The "ad" in the Star reads: "Riveters, buckers, heaters, for passenger car work. Open shop. No labor trouble. Free job. No charge. Shipment leaving Sunday night. Meet representative of the Pullman Car Company, Chicago, at Standard Employment Agency, 143 S. Illinois St., Indianapolis."

Attorney David J. Bentall declared this advertisement a direct violation of the law and declared those responsible for its insertion are liable to punishment.

Pullman Cut Only Start.

Another representative of the Pullman Company, Scot Helsell, is hiring men in Shirley, Indiana, under false pretenses. Everett Day, of Shirley, signed and turned over to the strike lawyer an affidavit, and also gave Bentall the power of attorney to collect money due for transportation and time lost.

Holmgren declared at Monday night's mass meeting that the Pullman Company is controlled by directors who also control the large railroad and steel shops in the entire

HOLLAND WILL RECOGNIZE RUSS GOVERNMENT

Grand Duke Nicholas Wakes From Jag

THE HAGUE, May 6.—The Dutch government will grant de jure recognition to the Soviet government within a very short time, it was hinted in official quarters today. The negotiations between the two governments are proceeding satisfactorily in spite of efforts on the part of anti-Soviet agencies to bring about a rupture.

A similar move is on in England and the Daily Herald of London stingingly rebuked A. O'Neill, National Liberal, for stating in a public speech that the Anglo-Russian conference had reached a deadlock. The opposite of this is true, the Herald declared, and the negotiations are proceeding on the road to a successful conclusion faster than even the most optimistic expected.

The Soviet government is stable, has the confidence of the masses as was demonstrated on May Day when hundreds of thousands of workers paraded without a single regiment of troops being on guard except the police force necessary to preserve order to prevent accidents. This evidence of Soviet stability gave the lie to the fantastic reports circulated by stool pigeons of the Czarist refugees disguised as reporters for the Associated Press and the Chicago Tribune who sent fantastic stories of riots against the government and arrests of workers by the thousand.

The growing tendency of the capitalist government of Europe to recognize Soviet Russia shows how little confidence those who have correct information have in the yarns circulated by the Russian Czarist emigres who are prowling around the dives of the European capitals living on the alms supplied to them by American wealthy men and women who vary their life of indulgence in riotous living and perversion, by getting a "thrill" out of the human wreckage that escaped the fate of the Czar.

The Associated Press representative succeeded in digging the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch out of some sewer and extracted an interview out of him. The Duke must be on a continual drinking orgy since the Czar's government was overthrown as he has left the heavy fighting against the Soviets to other and lesser bandits. He led the armies of the Czar for a period during the world war, but the only reputation he gained was thru his long legs and his ability to use them in running from the enemy.

It seems he is as good at hiding from the public as he was in escaping from the German army, but like a dog who comes out of his den on a warm day to pick the fleas off himself the Grand Duke emerged from his silence when he thought the discussion in the Communist Party of Russia presaged a split in the government. Should the Grand Duke act on that assumption to the extent of using his long legs to reach Moscow, your correspondent would not give a trainload of German marks for the probability that his head would burden his collar bone very long.

The lengthy gentleman, with more discretion than valor, confines himself to his cellar in Paris and to telling the world that Russia must be saved from Communist rule. He recklessly offered to die for Russia on the slightest provocation, and we can guarantee him that his wish can be very easily fulfilled by communists with the Red Army.

Like a senile dotard, this relic of a rotten, licentious and incompetent monarchy drools his inanities while the workers and peasants of the land which he and his class cursed with their presence are making the capitalist government of Europe come to them almost on bended knees and beg for concessions.

CAL'S KINDNESS TO BOOTLEGGER PERFECTLY "REGULAR," SWEARS CHICAGOAN; TAKES JAB AT LANDIS

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Assistant Attorney General Middlekauff of Chicago today told the Daugherty investigating committee that there were no irregularities in connection with the pardon of Phil Grossman, Chicago saloonkeeper, by President Coolidge.

Middlekauff declared that Judge Landis had "made statements untruthful, misleading and unwarranted" in charging the irregularities.

The committee chamber was thrown into an uproar over Middlekauff's statement.

DOOM OF MORGAN-DAWES PLAN SEEN BY BERLIN AND PARIS AS RESULT OF RECENT ELECTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, May 6.—France, if today's press correctly interprets her attitude, sees in the result of the German elections a fading out of hope for early fulfillment of the Dawes-Young plan.

The Paris morning papers declare the outcome, with the gains registered by the German Communist party, renders hopes of fulfillment illusory, altho none expects open resistance.

"Nothing will succeed against Germany except force," Pertinax, writing in the Echo de Paris, declares. He points out the difficulty of understanding where a sufficient majority will be found to carry on a government.

Le Matin forecasts that the general attitude of any new German government will be resistance to treaty obligations.

BERLIN, May 6.—The German people gave the Dawes-Young plan a bare majority in the national elections.

Whatever the ensuing government and parliament may do, official results of Sunday's polling showed today that at least 15 million of the 29 million voters are against the experts' proposals.

The total vote of the socialists, democrats, centrists and volkspartei candidates—all of whom were pledged to support the plan—was hardly half of the ballots cast.

Approximately 15,000,000 votes, those for nationalists, folkists and Communists, oppose the Dawes-Young report openly or can be counted to support a government that assails the Dawes plan.

CAL AND MELLON WHET VETO AXE FOR BONUS BILL

Profiteers Got Theirs, To Hell With Vets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 6. With strong indications from White House authorities that the veto will be exercised, President Coolidge today was understood to be prepared to act promptly on the insurance soldier bonus bill.

The measure, which arrived at the White House late yesterday, has been referred to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and General Lord, director of the budget, for study and to report whether the public treasury can stand the financial burden involved in the bill.

As an indication that the president's present attitude favor a veto, it was learned that the White House has advised General Hines, director of the veterans' bureau, against taking preliminary steps to put the proposed soldier insurance law into effect, in reply to an inquiry from Hines whether such action would be advisable in view of possible signature of the bill.

The bill is expected back at the White House with the reports of Secretary Mellon and General Lord within two or three days. Mellon is expected to advise the president that, despite estimates of members of congress who were in charge of the measure, that it will cost a total of only $2,000,000,000, the proposed law would mean a total cost to the nation of nearer $4,000,000,000.

St. Paul Banks In Panic Over Failure Of Capital Trust

St Paul, Minn, May 6.—Endangered by the failure of the Capital Trust and Savings bank Saturday, depositors in the Capital National Bank, a sister institution, were guaranted protection today by a merger of the latter with the Merchants National Bank of St. Paul.

John L. Mitchell, former member of the Federal Reserve Board, and head of the two capital institutions, said the Capital National was in an exceptionally strong cash position, but directors felt a merger with the Merchants National at this time was the best means of fully protecting depositors.

The merger in no way involves the Capital Trust and Savings bank which failed, having $5,000,000 deposits.

"SEDITION" TRIALS ROUSE STEEL TOWN

Court House Jammed For Farrell Cases

MERCER, Pa., May 6.—The Farrell sedition cases, the first now on trial, are adding six more chapters to the infamous labor-hating history of Pennsylvania. The court house at Mercer is jammed with people from miles around. Here we see the steel workers from nearby steel mills and farmers rubbing elbows: the grand dame of the village peeping over her eyeglasses at her sister from the steel towns; the village gossip straining her head to get every word spoken by the prosecutor and then nodding her head in approval.

When a white hot lie comes flowing from the stupid, cringing witnesses, who show that they have received expert coaching, a buzz of excitement runs up and down the court room compelling the court bailiff to dramatically rap on a slab of marble for order. The judge strains at his collar while the grand dame of the village looks disgustedly at the grimy faced workers from the steel mills just over the hills to the east.

Stools Catch All Conversations.

Out in the corridors impatient court lackeys pace back and forth drinking in every statement heard. One word to a juror, one word of protest and the prosecution has it immediately.

Everywhere we see the black mantle of persecution displaying itself and it seems that the master class has prepared this setting months in advance. Looking out from the court house we see the village monument to those that gave their lives during the Civil War and peeping inside the court room we see on the jury a black woman sitting in judgment on a white slave in revolt against his master.

Prosecutor Rickard looks up at the jury while his assistant, Myers, in correct movie fashion, lays back a few of his silver gray locks inclined to stray down on his forehead. Defense attorney Ferguson with his ever present smile questions the witness and in a very kindly way excuses him.

Rebels See New Day Coming.

Here we see the new day being proclaimed by men who have given the best years of their lives, rolling up golden profits for their steel masters. There is no denial from these men—they are rebels against the system enslaving them and the first one of the six defendants on trial, now and then looks across the room towards his wife, a pretty little woman, who smiles back encouragement at him. When his fellow slaves took the stand and repeated lie after lie, the defendant bowed his head—it was for these that he suffered. Yet the vision of the new day quickly raised up his head and stern lines shaped themselves on his face. He was again

STRIKE SPREADS TO MORE GREEK RESTAURANTS

Revolt Against 12-14 Hour Day Gains

Workers in four more Greek restaurants came out yesterday in the 6-day strike movement led by the Amalkamated Food Workers. Effective picketing is going on before all the eight struck restaurants.

A big mass meeting will pack the doors in the union hall at 214 N. State St. tonight. Hundreds of workers from the unorganized Greek restaurants will be there.

Enthusiasm has increased so much that Organizer Stewart declared that he expected the South Side restaurants to follow the lead of those now affected on the North Side.

Among the restaurants shut down by yesterday's walkout are the Washington, on Argyle near Sheridan Road; the Auto, on Lincoln near Lawrence, and the Presto at 4774 Lincoln. The 12-14 hour day and the seven-day week has been prevailing thruout the Greek restaurants of Chicago.

DEMOCRAT'S TAX PLANS WIN OVER MELLON'S RATES

Senators Prefer 40 Per Cent Maximum

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Senate Democrats proceeded to put the rest of their rates into the tax bill today as the session-long battle neared an end. Their emphatic defeat of the Mellon income rates made them feel strong enough to put their sliding scale tax on corporations and their inheritance levy into the measure.

The Mellon surtaxes were replaced by the Democratic 40 per cent maximum by a vote of 43 to 40 late yesterday, the three-vote margin revealed exclusively in the United Press poll of the Senate. The normal rates of 2, 4 and 6 per cent were adopted over the Mellon rates by a vote of 44 to 37.

Indications are that the Democrats can now safely hold their margin for the only remaining points to be disposed of—corporation and inheritance rates.

All sides now are confident that the bill will finally be gotten out of the way before Saturday and sent to conference. Night sessions begin tonight, and will continue until adjournment is taken the first of next month.

Big Bankers Urge Their Governments To Push Dawes Plan

LONDON, May 6.—An Inter-allied conference, which the United States will be invited to attend will be held here in June for discussion of means of making the reparations experts' plan effective, according to authoritative declarations here today.

The conference probably will be held in the first part of the month, it was said. Prior to the full conference Premier Mac Donald and Premier Poincare of France will meet, probably in London, to discuss the situation. It is expected that this meeting will be held about May 18.

UNITED REACTIONARY FRONT AS M'CORMICK GETS BEHIND DENEEN

Senator Medill McCormick has decided not to contest the nomination of Charles S. Deneen, former governor, to the Republican senatorial nomination. In a formal statement McCormick declared that inasmuch as Deneen has been certified the winner by the canvassing board, he saw no reason for seeking a recount. McCormick pledged his support to Deneen's election.

DRESS UNION BOOSTS FIGHT FOR VICTORY

Wire Convention As 11 More Are Arrested

TO THE OFFICERS AND DELEGATES OF THE 17th JUBILEE CONVENTION:

The striking Dressmakers of Chicago wish to thank the officers and delegates of the convention for their encouraging message that was received with great enthusiasm. We are determined to strike until our employers will come to terms. We have full faith in the officers of our International and we are confident that the convention will find ways and means both morally and financially to carry our banner to victory. ARE WE DOWNHEARTED? NO! HERE'S FOR VICTORY! The striking Dressmakers of Chicago.

This was the spirited answer of the striking garment workers sent from here yesterday to the convention in Boston, replying to the message received. The telegram sent from the 325 delegates of the convention to the striking workers here reads:

Convention Greetings

"Dressmakers' Union, Chairman of the Joint Board: The 17th Convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers assembled in Convention hall unanimously send a message of greeting and cheer to you. We are engaged in a mighty struggle for the right to live and work under humane conditions. The convention is aware of the wonderful fight you are putting up and we are with you heart and soul in this struggle and that we are confident that your indomitable spirit and courage will break down the opposition of your enemies and that you will score a wonderful victory."

The telegram from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Convention now in session in Boston was enthusiastically received when read here at the strike meeting.

11 More Strikers Arrested

Judge "Dennie" Sullivan was all but overwhelmed by the crowd of garment workers in court yesterday morning. Eleven new cases of girls and men arrested late Monday evening and the six cases transferred from Judge Hebel's court were added to the already full docket of Judge Sullivan. The Total number of strikers appearing was fifty-two. All of these cases were put off until next Tuesday, May 13.

About thirty cases come up again before Judge Foel this morning. They were put off from yesterday. Thirteen of these cases have already been heard and are waiting sentence. The remainder of the cases have yet to be tried.

The picket line was strong Monday night, but the bulls suddenly took a notion to make some more

MIGHTY GAIN BY REDS IN TEUT POLL

Ruhr Overwhelmingly For Revolution

BERLIN, May 6—All Germany is amazed at the successes of the Communist Party in the general election. Final count of votes shows that nearly 4,000,000 voted under the revolutionary banner of the international party.

Communist seats in the Reichstag will number 61 i stead of the 60 estimated on basis of earlier returns. It i even possible that several more seats have been gained in districts where the vote is disputed.

The government's raid on the Bolshevik embassy on the eve of the elections, had an opposite effect to that which the raiders planned. Communists came out in mass to the poll to see that no rough treatment wa accorded radical voters.

Nowhere did the workers will to Communism demonstrate itself better than in the occupied Ruhr districts, which went red except in isolated places where the Catholic party got out its entire vote.

Ruhr Cities Go Red.

Stuttgart went over altogether the Communists. Dusseldorff gave the Communists 250,000 votes or more than all the other six parties combined. The Stinnes party went down under the weight of its propaganda for the 10-hour day.

The strength of the Communists was greatest in the industrial districts of Germany and where the workers had been oppressed most.

Defeat of the private ownership of railroads, feature of the Dawes plan, is now regarded as a certainty if the German constitution is lived up to. The Marx-Stressmann government coalition has a bare 219 Reichstag votes as compared to about 219 in the various opposition and anti-Dawes plan groups. To put thru the necessary legislation for the partial transfer of the state owned railroads will require a two-thirds vote.

The entire Dawes plan may be smashed for the Socialists, Catholics People's party and other fragment of the coalition can not be counted o to vote solidly together.

Tremendous agitation against the Dawes-Morgan plan to make Germany a vassal nation for international capital is going on thruout Germany and politicians who support it are digging their political graves. The arguments of industrialists and Socialists that it will enable Germany to "get to work," are falling flat on the ears of citizens in two widely divided groups,—the radical workers on the one hand and the nationalistic forces on the other.

CHICAGO, May 6.—Drivers of Ch cago's milk wagons have been grante pay increases of $4 per week, assuring the city of milk deliveries for another year. The drivers threatened to strike unless their demands were met.

WORKERS PARTY CHEERS GERMAN COMMUNISTS ON ELECTION VICTORY

The Workers Party, American Section of the Communist International, has sent its comradely greetings to the German Communist Party, congratulating it on the splendid showing in Sunday's elections. The cable declares that the results in Germany will give new courage to the revolutionary struggle everywhere. The cable is as follows:

GREETINGS ACROSS THE SEAS

Chicago, Ill., May 6, 1924.

Communist Party of Germany,
Berlin, Germany.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party extends congratulations on splendid demonstration of solidarity and revolutionary will by workers of Germany under the leadership of the Communist Party. This great achievement gives us all new courage for revolutionary struggle for soviets and proletarian dictatorship. Long live Workers' Germany. Long live the Communist International.

C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary,
WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA.

HOWAT SPURNS $6,000 OFFER OF COAL OPERATOR

Militant Kansas Leader Stays With His Class

By W. MARSHALL.

PITTSBURGH, Kans., May 6.—That the coal operators do not consider that Alexander Howat is dead and that he has lost his influence among the coal miners, as John Lewis and his machine would have the people believe, is evidenced by the coal operators' latest move in District 14.

The Sheridan Coal Company, which is one of the largest independent coal companies, operating a number of mines in District 14, a few days ago made an offer, thru the president of the Sheridan Coal Company, Mr. Wynn McGeath, to Howat of a position as superintendent of all the Sheridan mines in District 14, at a salary of $6,000 per year and a minimum contract for five years. On three occasions in the last two weeks the high officials of the Sheridan Coal Company have personally visited Howat and urged him to accept the position.

Howat Rejects $6,000 Offer.

Howat had been kicked out of the union by John Lewis and his sycophants, at the behest of the coal operators and ex-Governor Henry Allen, father of the industrial court law. Howat has been expelled from the United Mine Workers of America without any trial, while in jail, fight- for the miners' rights and against industrial court slave law, and which by his courageous stand and fight he has thoroly discredited and beaten. Howat has been knifed by the traitors in his own organization, after spending sixteen months in jail fighting for the miners' rights, and is not even allowed to be a member of the United Mine Workers of America at this time. Yet this class conscious worker and rebel did not waver in the least in staying true to his class and to the confidence which the workers all over the world have in him, but turned down the Sheridan mines' offer without hesitation, stating in his rejection of the coal company's offer that the miners of District 14 for twenty-two years had stood by him in his fights for industrial justice and for the workers' rights and liberties, and had stood by him in his own efforts to vindicate himself against the vicious official machine in the United Mine Workers of America, and that it was his duty, and that he would at all times be found standing, fighting only on the miners' side.

The miners in District 14 are again confirmed in their confidence in their loyal and beloved leader, Alexander Howat.

Lewisites Do Differently.

How different reads the record of the Lewis stool pigeons, lieutenants and supporters, who as soon as they are forced out of office, use the knowledge gained in the paid service of the mine workers against the workers at every turn, and for the coal operators, the miners' traditional and natural enemy, as commissioners, superintendents, and representatives, in any form or manner in which they may gain employment with the coal operators.

The few Lewis toads and followers that exist in this district, who are against Howat, and who are so peculiarly friendly with the coal operators, are unable to understand how any man would not sell out at so fair a price, as it has always been their custom to take any job offered by the coal operators at any price offered them.

Scandinavians Tell Coolidge To Veto Immigration Bill

Denouncing the Johnson immigration bill and calling on President Coolidge to veto this infamous piece of legislation, 67 delegates from 30 Danish and Norwegian organizations of Chicago, met in Falkets Hall and decided to send representatives to the Chicago Council for the Protection of Foreign-born.

Similar declarations have been adopted by three Swedish mass meetings in various parts of Chicago.

TEACHERS TO FIGHT REACTION AT CONVENTION

NEW YORK, May 6.—Local 5, of the American Federation of Teachers, passed several resolutions for introduction by its delegates to the next convention of the federation.

Among the resolutions passed are ones dealing with the questions of political prisoners, the foreign born, and freedom of expression in schools and colleges.

The resolutions follow:

A. Membership and Organization.

Motion that the constitution be so amended as to permit college teachers to become members-at-large of the American Federation of Teachers or members of locals, and to permit the formation of locals of college teachers.

Motion that the Executive Council of the American Federation of Teachers be authorized to institute a nation-wide organization campaign among the college teachers.

Motion that the national secretary be authorized to organize at least one nation-wide organization campaign during the coming year: (1) To give the teachers' union movement the widest possible publicity among teachers; (2) To stimulate the formation of new locals; (3) To stimulate the growth of existing locals.

Motion that special efforts be made during the coming year to organize the rural school teachers and secure their affiliation with the American Federation of Teachers. The American Federation of Teachers pledges itself to strive energetically for better salaries and tenure for rural school teachers.

B. Freedom of Speech, Democracy.

The American Federation of Teachers pledges its suport to the efforts of teachers and students in the colleges A ?- of the country for the right to discuss freely questions of social importance.

We hold that all those who labor, with hand or brain, are entitled to full civil and social rights, without discrimination on account of nationality or color.

In this connection we place ourselves on record in opposition to any legislation discriminating against the foreign born.

In this connection we place ourselves on record in opposition to any efforts to discriminate thru legislation or social custom against the Negro.

We demand the repeal of all "gag" legislation, including the criminal syndicalist laws and other similar repressive measures.

We place ourselves on record as opposed to the Ku Klux Klan and other similar organizations of a reactionary character.

We demand the freedom of all political prisoners.

We stand for the same democratic methods and tolerance for minority opinion in the labor movement.

DOUBLE CROSSING RAILWAY LABOR BOARD FACES DEATH IN CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Having succeeded in limiting debate to three hours after the hottest fight of this session in the House, advocates of the Barkley bill to abolish the Railroad Labor Board will try today to force the measure thru to a final vote.

A coalition of Democrats and 40 Republicans last night hammered down a Republican filibuster which kept the House in session until midnight. After a 12-hour struggle in which 18 roll calls were forced, the coalition succeeded in:

1. Taking the bill from the committee.

2. Forcing its immediate consideration by the House.

3. Limiting debate to three hours.

But the resolute Republican filibuster led by Majority Leader Longworth succeeded in holding the coalition to this small gain and hoped today to force a two weeks' postponement of further consideration, which probably would mean the bill's death this session.

DIARY OF PULLMAN RIVETER, HIRED BY LYING DETROIT AGENT, TELLS OF 100 PER CENT STRIKE

By E. K. HOGAN

(For The Federated Press)

A growing sense of solidarity among the workers is seen in the fact that after more than two weeks of dishonest labor recruiting the Pullman Company is unable to operate its strike-bound steel erecting plant near Chicago, according to Doig, a riveter who hired out to the company in Detroit when the Pullman representative stated that there was no labor trouble at the plant.

Other Detroit workers hired with Doig say the word of Pullman will be quoted at a low figure on the Detroit labor exchange after they get back. They have found that this corporation which broke an agreement with its own company union in order to reduce wages can also send out lying agents to trap workers into becoming strikebreakers.

Finds 100 Percent Strike.

Doig took a job at the Pullman plant just long enough to find that the efforts of the company thruout Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Michigan and other states have only attracted from 50 to 60 amateurs to take the places of the 600 skilled workers who maintain a 100 percent strike that is gradually stopping the whole works. His account of the treachery of the company sets up in diary form as follows:

April 27, p. m.—Saw Baxter, employment agent Pullman Co. at Frontenac hotel, Detroit. He guaranteed $1 per hour. Must pay own transportation which will be refunded after 30 days' work. Baxter gave word of honor there was no strike.

Pickets Tell of Strike.

April 29, a. m.—Arrived Chicago. Started for Pullman employment office. Met by workers who told me there was a strike of 600 riveters, reamers, buckers and other steel men because Pullman had cut wages in violation of agreement. Went to strike meeting.

April 29, p. m.—Decided to take [illegible] to get look at plant. While waiting in outer office of employment manager O'Leary heard him pleading with men from Davenport, Iowa, offering full protection and to find them living quarters. They refused, some account of principle, other because scabbing is unhealthy.

O'Leary sent me to steel shop. Met two others quitting. They said: "Scab, there is a strike here." One was from Louisville and the other from Benton Harbor, Mich. Shop boss explains there is a little jam here but I will get protection. I act surprised and say something about Baxter's word of honor in Detroit. O'Leary standing by says he cant help what Baxter said. So I start a fuss and demand my back pay. They coax and promise protection. I answer they haven't got anybody working anyway.

Boys and Amateurs.

So I get treated to a personally conducted tour of inspection, and believe me, they had only 50 or 60 men in the shop, mostly boys and amateurs that spent most of their time trying to keep the hot scale from inside their shirt collars. After more fuss about transportation back to Detroit I left. O'Leary remarked, I'd get my fare back, like hell.

April 30, a. m.—Still trying to get that railroad fare to Detroit. Put matter in lawyer's hands but there don't seem to be any law to protect workers who are hired under false pretenses.

FARRELL "SEDITION" TRIALS ROUSE STEEL TOWN

the rebel having his day in his master's court.

Tony Kovacich First Defendant.

Tony Kovacich, was the first of the Farrell defendants to be placed on trial for alleged violation of the Sedition Law of Pennsylvania.

Attorney John Myers, former federal prosecutor and district attorney Leroy Richard appeared for the prosecution while I. E. Ferguson of Chicago, headed the attorneys retained by the defense.

Judge J. A. McLaughry, who presided at the Blankenstein trial in Pittsburgh is presiding here. Attorney Myers was the prosecutor that brought about the conviction of Blankenstein.

Upon request of the defense counsel, the jurors were subjected to individual examination, something unusual in this court. Eight jurors were examined before the first one was chosen. It took one hour to secure the first juror. The prosecution objected to the method of examination used by the defense, holding that capital and labor had nothing to do with this trial. After examining 32 jurors the selection was finally completed.

Jackass Sally of Prosecutor.

Assistant Prosecutor Myers, an ex-army officer, dramatically exclaimed that the government maintains the Workers Party is a seditious organization, and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania would prove that when the time came, but that the Socialist Party was no more seditious than the Republican or Democratic Party. This little sally on part of Myers caused some broad grins from the many steel workers and farmers crowded into the court room.

Six men and six women make up the jury. Mrs. Fanny Jasper of Greenville, is no doubt, the first colored woman ever to serve on a jury where the defendant is charged with sedition. The jury is very much interested in everything that takes place and seems to be impressed with the responsibility resting on their shoulders.

Praising Soviets, the Crime.

Today, Saturday, the prosecution put on the stand several Serbian workers, members of a Serbian nationalistic lodge in Farrell, who testified that the defendant worker spoke highly about the Soviet government of Russia and that he urged them to work for the same form of government in the United States. Further examination of the witnesses by attorney Ferguson brought out that they had attended meetings of the workers in Farrell and acted as stool pigeons for the non-uniformed police force of Farrell, commanded by the now celebrated Chief Leyshock who went on the stand today and was surprised to be let off so easy by the defense who did not pay him the honor of grilling him. Squire Franck of Farrell, who bound the defendants over to the grand jury, also testified that five or six years ago the defendant worker now on trial, sold him a pamphlet.

Attorney Ferguson petitioned the court to quash the indictments against the defendant. Judge McLaughry overruled the petition and ordered the trial to proceed.

Fears Workers' Government.

Minutes books and the membership roster taken by the police when they raided the homes of the defendants, was offered as evidence by the prosecution, claiming that these would show that the defendant now on trial was an organizer and speaker for the Workers Party of America—that he had urged the workers to revolt and set up a government of workers and farmers. This sounded pretty good to the many farmers present in the audience and no doubt, they will attend the trials every day from now on, hoping to hear more about this form of government of farmers and industrial workers.

The mass meetings charged to the Farrell branch of the Workers Party were never held for the simple reason that Leyshock always broke them up. Steel worker Tony Kovacich was a prominent worker in his language fraternal lodge and acted as chairman at some of their meetings. Free speech and peaceful assemblage for any working class organization has never been allowed by the bourgeois or police, yet the prosecution nicely finds witnesses who have attended anywhere from five to ten mass meetings of the Workers Party during the past year or two.

D. of J. "Red Terror."

When the court opens on Monday while the prosecution will thrill the countryside by having D. of J. dick Lennon of Pittsburgh, explain the "Red Terror" in detail. Rev. Medic, founder and sole owner of the Croation-American Protective Society, is in attendance and takes his seat inside the railing indicating to workers crowded on the otherside of the railing that the church and state still have much in common.

Attorney Ferguson is being assisted by attorneys Nelson, Marks and Barker, all of Mercer County.

GLAZIERS JOINING STRIKERS AT THE PULLMAN SHOPS

South side of Chicago.

"I am convinced," said Holmgren, "that these big capitalists selected the Pullman Company to introduce the drastic wage cut, hoping to put it over on all the main industries in Chicago. The Pullman Company was selected because of its long record as an unscrupulous labor smashing, anti-smashing company. If this strike had not occurred the wage reduction would have been made general."

Lauds Daily Worker.

Holmgren mentioned the help given the strike by the DAILY WORKER. He declared it was the only paper in Chicago carrying the strike news. The DAILY WORKER was on sale at the meeting. Charles Wills spoke on behalf of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Wills promised aid for the Pullman strikers, and urged organization into the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen.

Thomas Marsh, of Denver, a former employee of the Pullman Company who was blacklisted because of his activities in strike and union organization work, denounced the Pullman Company system of insurance. "They pretend to give you something for nothing," said Marsh, "but in reality they hold the pension and insurance system as a club to keep the man from striking. When the Pullman Company puts over a wage cut or lengthens the work day and the men start to strike, the Pullman officials declare, 'If you lose your strike we will take away your pension privileges and stop your insurance.'"

Speaker Urgues Picket Duty.

Max Salzman, organizer of the Young Workers' League, spoke at yesterday's strike meeting. He said that it was the duty of every striker to join the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, and to do regular picket duty. He promised the strikers the support of the 17 foreign language papers published by the Workers Party.

S. M. Surndall of La Grange, Illinois, was a visitor to the strike meeting. He declared he has been a union man for over 50 years. He also boasted of being a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER, from the first day of its existence.

Negro Tenants Meet Monday To Make Plan For Rent-Hog Fight

The Negro Tenants' League will hold an important meeting Monday evening at the Community Center, 3201 Wabash Ave. Several hundred negroes have already joined this organization and are studying how to make their united strength most effective against the gouging landlords, both negro and white.

The league has had only two meetings so far, but it is now cataloging the membership and issuing cards. It invites the assistance of all negro tenants and others who are concerned with the housing situation on the South Side.

According to Lovat Fort-Whiteman, the Negro Tenants' League intends to push its work ahead and make itself felt in the trying situation forced on the negro renters by greedy landlords. Monday evening's meeting should go far toward establishing a definite course of action for the league.

MILITANT MINERS OF ILLINOIS READY FOR CONVENTION

Will Fight Farrington's Appointive Power

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

BELLEVILLE, Ill., May 6.— With only one more week remaining before the lid is lifted, things, that promise a bitter battle in the Peoria convention, May 13, are being done by both the machine and their opponents in the Illinois Miners' Union.

Those who claim to know the "inside" affairs of the Farrington machine, say that the convention committees have been called to Springfield to be groomed for their part in the convention fights. Expectation of such maneuvers on the part of the machine has prompted the Belleville Sub-District miners to issue a call for a meeting of the Delegates to assemble in Belleville next Sunday, May 11th. The call, signed by seven delegates from this section, asks the delegates to come and discuss the vital issues affecting the Miners' Union.

A good-sized delegation is anticipated, and such things as the Appointing Power, Unemployment, Labor Party, The Kansas-Howat case and other important things will be gone over.

Appointees Fought Strike.

There is perhaps no other section of the Miners' Union, where the men are so bitterly opposed to the Appointive Power, as here in Belleville, and this is due to the abuses to which such power is subjected. This section, made famous by its "Wildcat strike" of 1919, which resulted in the revocation of many charters at that time, not to mention Farrington's expenditure of $27,000 to crush the strike, has been foremost always in the fight to wrest this power from the machine.

These "Wildcatters," a name which is gracefully accepted by the one's who took part in that strike, still remember the part played by the appointees who were paid out of that $27,000, and they will never rest until all the "machines" in the Miners' Union are stripped of such power. The $27,000 issue will be remembered by the delegates to the International convention of 1921, because it was made an issue there by John L. Lewis. At that time he was an avowed enemy of Frank Farrington and used that issue as a stepping stone to the crucifixion of the latter, but, owing to the welding together of the forces opposed to both Farrington and Lewis, a "peace pact" was signed and they are sailing gracefully along now in the same canoe.

State Convention May 13.

From Belleville the delegates will proceed to Peoria, Ill., where they will meet with other delegates of like thought, and when the convention opens next Tuesday morning, May 13th, the machine that has reigned, all too long to suit the delegates from the Belleville district, will meet the opposition of determined men.

PACKING HOUSE WORKERS JOINING ARGENTINE STRIKE

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, May 6. —Twenty-five thousand workers employed in the cold storage plants of the big packing companies are joining the general strike against the new pension law tomorrow.

Armour's, Swift's, Wilson's and other Chicago packing interests will be affected. British packing employes are already out.

Thirty thousand workers marched to President de Alvear's mansion and demanded postponement of the enforcement of the law. The workers are opposed to the collection of 5 per cent weekly from their wages, insisting that the employers and the government should bear the cost of the pension.

Federation Backs Strike.

The Federation of Labor has informed the government the strike will go on until the objectionable features are taken out of the bill.

Buenos Aires is paralyzed by the strike. The port is closed, and organized labor is providing for some food deliveries to its members, but food deliveries as a whole are stopped.

Bosses Double Cross Labor.

Employers are double crossing the workers. They supported the strike at first for the two reasons that they object to paying their own 5 per cent share and want to kill the law entirely, and for the second reason that they object to collecting the workers' 5 per cent. These collections, they fear, will lead to continual interruption of production.

Alarmed now by the tremendous workers' solidarity and the paralysis of profits which has come because the strike has gotten out of their hands, the employers are now trying to end it. President Joaquin Anchorena of the Commercial Association is lining up business men for an attempted resumption of trade.

CATHOLIC WOMEN MAY USE CANES ON CANINES; NOT WELCOME IN CHURCH

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 6.—Canes are quite popular with women here. The pastor of the Church of the Visitation, Catholic, posted a notice canes must be parked in the hall. "They are all right for hitting and beating off dogs, but inappropriate in church," the notice read.

MUSSOLINI FEARS VIOLENCE HE LOOSED IN ITALY

Workers Will Never Forgive Murderer

By GIUSIPPI GIGLIO.

LONDON, May 6.—Signor Benito Mussolini has publicly announced his intention to "abandon faction for the nation" and in consequence to cease the use of Fascist methods. This is the reply to a vigorous press campaign for the abandonment of violence and the restoration of law and order, as a result of the Fascist victory at the elections.

The argument used was that the election showed that Fascism had the support of the people, and need no longer use such methods.

I believe Mussolini was sincere in making his statement. There is no doubt that if he could govern the country without being forced to resort to criminal violence, he would not hesitate one moment to change to peace and law. I am quite convinced that he would be more pleased than anyone else to get rid of his wild supporters.

The question, however, is whether he can do that—that is, whether actual political and economic conditions in Italy do allow him to do so at this moment.

Moreover, it remains to be seen to what extent the Italian working class would be inclined to give Mussolini its support, supposing Mussolini did, in fact, move to the Left.

I do not see the least possibility of such change in his policy taking place at present, or in the near future. Mussolini has erected an unsurmountable barrier—the barrier of the workers slain by the Fascisti—between him and the Italian workers.

Workers' Suspicions.

There were in 1921 three and a half million organized workers in Italy, of whom two and a half million belonged to the General Confederation of Labor (entirely under the influence of the Socialist Party), the other million belonging to Catholic, Republican, and Syndicalist unions.

Now only 900,000 workers belong, even according to their own statements, to the Fascist unions. What has become of the other 2,600,000 workers?

They are not in the Socialist unions, because these have been smashed, and also because the worker cannot be expected to risk his life and expose his family to persecution, for remaining faithful to a union which could not protect him in any way against the employer. But these 2,600,000 workers have remained outside all unions, and refused to join the Fascist unions.

This proves clearly that the Italian working class still remains, as a whole, hostile to the Fascist Government.

Nor could Mussolini possibly turn to a policy of sincere democracy, since he is a prisoner of the capitalist class, and since there is no possibility of his being able to hold power against the will of his present supporters.

If he tried to he would be immediately confronted with a strong dissident movement in the Fascist Party, armed, financed and ultimately hurled against him by the magnates of Italian finance and industry, without his being able to counterweigh the loss of the capitalist support with any support from the working class.

Big Mass Meeting To Protest Anti-Alien Laws Planned For Friday

The local branch of the Council for the Protection of the Foreign Born will hold a mass meeting in the Douglas Park auditorium on Friday evening, May 9, at 8 p. m. Invitations have been extended to the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Socialist Party and the Workers Party to send speakers. Several local unions of the American Federation of Labor and independent unions are affiliated with the local council.

Australian Miners Defeat Bosses In Three Day Strike

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 6.— At Broken Hill, a big mining center in New South Wales, where the workers are 100 per cent-unionized, municipal employes struck work for higher wages, shorter hours, and improved conditions. There was a general strike and after three days, the municipal authorities granted an increase in wages of 50 cents per week, five-day week, and a conference to deal with minor matters.

I. L. G. W. U. SEES CHANGE IN INDUSTRY

Boston Convention Is Told Of New Problems

BOSTON, Mass., May 6.—After building up in 25 years one of the strongest unions in the country and winning a large share of control in the industy, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is faced with a basic change in the industry.

This necessitates new tactics by the union unless it is to lose its power. This challenge is thrown out to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union's biennial convention here by the executive board's report, which says:

Jobber Now In Control

"These two new developments are the transition in control in the industry from the manufacturer to the jobber, and the return on a wholesale scale to the smaller shop, the shop ostensibly owned by the sub-manufacturer or the contractor but virtually owned by the jobber. The jobbers are to all intents and purposes the manufacturers, but they carry no responsibility as far as work standards are concerned and practically have no obligations to the workers.

"The question of ascertaining definitely whether the jobber is sending his work to union or non-union shops is left largely to chance.

Small Shop is Sweat Shop

"Under such a system the jobber is bound to make huge profits, the workers, and in many instances the contractors, are the inevitable losers and suffers."

The report points out that the small shop means the sweat shop. In New York the union in negotiating a new agreement, is trying to reduce the number of shops from 3000 to 1000 or 500, and to make the jobber responsible for union conditions for the workers.

Membership Is 100,000

Membership in the union during the last two years has remained stable at about 100,000, says the report. But there are fewer members in the cloak and dress trade because the manufacturers of novelties—tucking, hemstitching, embroidery—has become a separate industry. This must be organized. Also the waist industry has about gone out of existence, and fur and knit coats are taking the place of some of the former cloak industry.

"There are still tens of thousands of women's garment workers in America unorganized. Entire branches of the industry have only been touched," the report confesses.

Markets Face Shrinkage

"In Philadelphia the market is shrinking, also in Baltimore and Cincinnati. Toledo is unorganized and St. Louis, except the small cloak trade. San Francisco is open-shop and Los Angeles largely so. The I. L. G. W. U. have no collective agreements in Toronto and Montreal.

Relatively the last two years have been peaceful," says the report. But Chicago is now in the midst of a dress strike, and negotiations for a New York contract have gone on for a month without results.

arrests and went up and down the streets picking out their people. Several strikers were taken when they were ready to get the car to go home and were not on the picket line at all.

May Drop Hymen Cases

Many of the cases to come before "Dennie" Sullivan next week are under the Hymen Bros. injunction and quite a number of the workers involved are from the Hymen shops. It was anticipated that these cases would be dropped, but such action has not yet been taken by the company.

Sullivan would surely have nightmares if he took his job seriously. He looked much annoyed at the crowded court-room yesterday but was as unobliging as ever. The hopeful young faces before him have no effect in softening his gristly heart.

Ask Veto of Immigration Bill.

NEW YORK, May 6.—Presidential veto of the immigration bill, allowing only 2 per cent quotas on the basis of the 1890 census, is demanded in a letter to Coolidge by the executive committee, Fellowship of Reconciliation, New York. The bill "is a violation of the principle of brotherhood, and is both disingenuous and mischievous," says Bishop Paul Jones who signs the letter.

BILLS AGAINST FOREIGN-BORN ARE CONDEMNED

Detroit Workers Send Protest Resolutions

DETROIT, Mich., May 6.—Two resolutions against the Johnson bill and other legislative measures designed to discriminate against the foreign-born were passed recently by Americans of Polish extraction. These resolutions have been sent to the President of the United States and to Congress and to the press.

The resolutions are:

Resolution on Immigration Legislation

Whereas, the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States have adopted the so-called Johnson Immigration Bill, which limits immigration to the United States to 2 per cent of the total number of residents of a given nationality at the time of the 1890 census, and

Whereas, this limits the immigration from Poland to scarcely a few hundred, and

Whereas, thousands of our brothers in Poland, as well as other countries of Europe, Africa, and Asia wish to emmigrate to this country and settle in it, as did the first settlers centuries ago, and to this they have an undeniable right.

Therefore, be it resolved, that we American citizens of Polish extraction, and factory workers, in mass meeting assembled on the 27th day of April, A. D. 1924, in the "Dom Polski" Hall on Forest avenue, E., at Detroit, Mich., petition the President of the United States to veto the so-called Johnson Immigration Bill, so as to enable those, whose brothers in this country have helped to build it up and to make it the power that it is, to come to this country, and

Be it further resolved, that we call upon all the workers of America to fight the limitation of immigration, and be it finally resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States and to the press.

Second Resolution.

Whereas, the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States have adopted the so-called Johnson Immigration Bill, which limits the immigration to this country and establishes, in fact, the registration of new immigrants, and

Whereas, several other bills directed against foreign-born workers have been introduced in Congress, said bills providing for the registration, fingerprinting, compulsory residence in certain industrial districts, and finally for contract and selective immigration, and

Whereas, the efforts to have these emergency immigration laws passed, laws which for severity are unknown in any other civilized country in the world, are being persistently made by organized capital and the chauvinists, who aim to establish industrial slavery, to destroy the organization of the working class, to install antagonism into its ranks, and to divide the workers into two categories, and thereby to lower their standard of living by cutting their wages and making worse the working conditions, and

Whereas, if capital succeeds, by means of these emergency immigration laws, to prevent the organization of the foreign-born workers in the basic industries, namely, the steel and coal industries, in which the foreign-born workers constitute the majority, then organized labor in general will be unable to carry on a successful struggle, even if it be only for a human existence.

Therefore, be it Resolved, that in view of the aforementioned facts, we, American citizens of Polish extraction and factory workers, in mass meeting assembled on the 27th day of April, A. D., 1924, in the "Dom Polski" Hall, on Forest Ave E., at Detroit, Michigan, call upon all the workers to unite in the conferences for the defense of the foreign-born workers, for the purpose of carrying on a successful struggle against the emergency legislation—which in reality places the foreign-born workers on par with criminals—and to unite this struggle with the whole American labor movement, and

Be it further resolved, that we address ourselves to the representatives and senators of the State of Michigan in the United States Congress with a demand that they vote and fight against the passing of any of the emergency laws against foreign-born workers, and

Be it finally resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to the representatives and senators of the State of Michigan in the United States Congress and to the press.

(Signed) Presidium: Vincent Niemyjeski, Jno. B. Novak, Frank Kaflik, Secretary Richard K. Chervinski.

Dollar Professor of Quaker State Flays Gov'ment Ownership

CONNECTICUT WORKERS, NOT LIKE PULLMAN LABOR, TAKES WAGE CUT

THOMPSONVILLE, Conn., May 6.—Four thousand workers at the Thompsonville plant of the Bigelow Hartford Carpet Co. are taking wage cuts averaging from 10 per cent to 20 per cent since May 5.

2,800 PER CENT IS SOME DIVIDEND FOR POOR COAL COMPANY

Day by day in every way Island Creek Coal Company's profits grow larger and larger. Tens of thousands of miners are idle and without the means of supporting their families but the stockholders will not miss their dividend checks. Profits for the first quarter of 1924 amounted to $7.76 a share on the common stock of $1 par value. That is a profit of 776 per cent in three months. For the same quarter of 1923 the company's profit was equivalent to 558 per cent on the common stock and profits for the entire year meant a return of 2,039 per cent to common stockholders. If the increased rate of the first quarter is maintained thruout 1924, stockholders will get in a single year a return of more than 2,800 per cent on their investment.

FREE UNIONISTS CHARGED WITH KILLING STOOL

NEW ORLEANS, May 6.—Unexpected intervention by Judge Edrington saved the lives of four New Orleans unionists who were put on trial charged with the murder of a labor spy January 2, during the electrical workers' strike last winter.

The charges, which were a frameup between the prosecutor and the public service company to crush the union, rested on nothing but a forced confession of one of the defendants.

Two Weeks of Torture.

When the judge learned that the confession had been wrung from the man by over two weeks of steady torture it was thrown out of court. The prosecution collapsed, and an instructed verdict of not guilty was rendered by the jury. Union men believe the spy was murdered by company agents to throw the odium on the unions.

The strike, which was won by [illegible] union, was fought by the public utilities corporation in approved big business fashion. Sluggers and labor spies were hired to work against the union. Strikebreakers were brought in under armed guard. The newspapers were full of defamatory articles against the union members.

Try To Frame.

The finding of the body of Bentley, the undercover man who had been operating for the corporation in the electrical workers union, was the signal for a mass attack on the reputation of the strikers. Two member of the union and two others were selected to be framed through the murder charges. Describing the process by which the confessions were third-degreed out of one of the men, the judge said; "This man was hounded by detectives. His mind was in such a state and was affected to such an extent that his whole mental condition made it impossible to consider the confession a free confession under the law. The man was beset by detectivees night and day for a series of nights and days. The party was hardly in responsible physical or mental conditions.

Sher'iff Confesses Torture.

Sheriff Vial, who was called to the stand, naturally denied there had been any undue "persuasion," but gave the torture process away when cross-examined.

Had the frameup succeeded, the four men would probably have been put to death, thus adding legal murder to the unofficial murder of five union carpenters by an American legion mob in Bogalusa, La., five years ago.

Malthusian Hobby Douched With Cold Water At Convention

(By The Federated Press)

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 6.—Birth control is a subject too dangerous to discuss, it was brought out by prolonged discussions at the National League of Women Voters' convention in session in Buffalo. After voting down a resolution proposing birth control as a league study for the coming year, the convention as the result of hot debate refused to permit a committee to consider the matter. Support for the proposed constitutional amendment giving congress the right to legislate on marriage and divorce was voted down, tho uniform state laws were favored.

Students' Strike On.

DECATUR, Ill., May 6.—Students of James Milliken University met yesterday in mass meeting to consider whether to continue their strike or not. The board of managers refused to reconsider their decision not to offer contracts to Prof. W. C. Casey and Dr. Watson Selvage. The board explained that it could not alter the administration system. Dr. A. R. Taylor, president emeritus of the university, has accepted an invitation to act as president of the school for the remainder of the year.

"A TALE OF TWO REPUBLICS" WILL THRILL CHICAGO

Great Film Contrasts Russia And Germany

"A Tale of Two Republics" will bring a graphic story of ruin in Germany, and progress in Russia to the eyes of the fortunate workers who see it at Orchestra hall the one night it is to be shown in Chicago. The film will be projected Wednesday, May 14th, at 7 and at 9 p. m., under the auspices of the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany. Proceeds go to German relief work, and the picture will emphasize how great is the need for help in Germany.

The contrast between the two republics, Germany and Russia, is strikingly brought out in this new film. In Germany the betrayal of the workers by their false Social-Democrat leaders is shown. The overthrow of the people's governments of Saxony and of Thuringia makes some of the most dramatic moments of the film.

The misery of the starving mobs is no phrase when seen on the screen. It is not mere words when the mounted troops charge on the rioters with tanks. One even forgets that actually the scene is on a screen in the comparatively placid city of Chicago and not in turbulent Berlin.

It is refreshing to follow the photographer into Soviet Russia after seeing distraught Germany. There the sixty-five nationalities are shown carrying on their communistic life and quietly rebuilding their country into the most powerful force in the modern world. The picture takes us into their schools, industries, cities, and even into their homes.

Stirring scenes from the life of the late leader Lenin are portrayed, giving one more phase of immorality to one who will long live in his writings and in the influence he had on the peoples of the world.

"The Tale of Two Republics" does not paint two pictures, one all black and one all white. It shows that even in sorry Germany the spirit of rebellion is strong and will sooner or later bring the workers to the place of power.

Tickets for the single Chicago performance may be obtained at 166 W. Washington st. or later at Orchestra Hall, 220 S. Michigan blvd.

Mellon Overridden By Senate Ruling On Earned Incomes

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Overriding recommendations of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the Senate today decided that no incomes of over $10,000 can be considered earned incomes.

Secretary Mellon wanted an item in the tax bill providing that all earned incomes be given a 25 per cent reduction in tax. The house voted to define earned incomes as only those under $20,000. The Senate Finance Committee reduced the definition to $10,000.

If the Senate's provision stays in the bill, all wage earners who do not get more than $10,000 a year will get a cut of 25 per cent from their tax. Persons with incomes exceeding $10,000 a year will have to pay the full tax on income above this sum.

Pleasure Autos Taxed By Senate; Exempt Flivvers

WASHINGTON, May 6.— A new automobile tax schedule was adopted by the senate today.

Without a record vote the senate wrote into the tax bill a substitute for the house automobile section which will provide:

A five per cent levy on all pleasure automobile chassis, bodies and motorcycles.

A two and a half per cent tax on all pleasure auto accessories.

Exemption for auto truck chassis valued at less than $1,000 and truck accessories valued at less than $200. This exempts Ford cars.

A three per cent tax on trucks and truck accessories valued above the exemption.

Railroads Fight Nebraska Taxes To Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, May 6. — The suits of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Chicago & Northwestern, and the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroads, challenging the taxes assessed against them in Nebraska, were returned to Federal District Court for Nebraska for trial by the Supreme Court Monday.

In this decision the lower court, which previously had ruled it was not empowered to hear the railroad suits, was reversed and directed to hear them.

RAID ON SOVIET EMBASSY MAY BRING RUPTURE

German Police Violate International Law

BERLIN, May 6.—The German government is weak at the knees today with fear that the action of the Berlin police in violating international law by entering the Russian embassy and arresting several employes of the Soviet trade commission may result in an open break with Russia. Coinciding with the elections, the illegal raid is expected to have the effect of arousing the radical German workers still more against the Fascisti government.

The police entered the embassy ostensibly in search of an escaped prisoner, but really to search the place for evidence of an alleged anti-German conspiracy which the capitalist press has been sensationally featuring here for weeks.

The correspondent of the Chicago Tribune has been sending inspired dispatches to his paper recently and appears to be on the inside of all the anti-Soviet plotting taking place here.

While Foreign Minister Stresemann officially admitted the police committed a mistake in invading the house they are holding onto a quantity of literature which they brand, in William J. Burns style, as incendiary literature. The Berlin police have arrested more than 700 employes of the Russian commercial mission.

Great excitement prevails thruout the country today as the elections are taking place. The fate of the Dawes report rests on the result. The Socialist and heavy industrials are for the bankers' plan to place the German workers in peonage while the Communists are putting up a bitter fight against it. The latter are expected to return no less than 60 deputies to the Reichstag. There are no less than twenty-three different political parties in the field.

Czarist Refugee Asks Dixieland To Weep For Nicholas

NEW ORLEANS, May 6.—Escapes from Bolshevists and eye witnesses tales of the death of the czar are now making the rounds of the sub-tropical jungles in the southern states, after having been worn threadbare in the rest of the country.

After three years in Brazil, Alexander Braghin, "once a member of the czar's personal staff," has come to New Orleans for lectures on the end of the Romanov family, the Einstein theory of relativity, the Hindu theory of philosophy, to say nothing of the fourth dimension and Kerensky Bolshevist, including Brakhin's escape to South America.

Brakhin confides that he almost rescued Czar Nicholas but came to the Siberian village only just in time to rescue the czarina's priceless emerald from a bonfire where the clothing and other relics of the family were being consumed. He did not bring the emerald to New Orleans via Brazil to verify his tale but says it can be found in Paris.

Henry Ford, Ku Klux Millionaire, Gives Large "Y" Donation

NEW YORK, May 6.—The Y. W. C. A. will select its officers for the coming two years at the general convention today.

On the official ballot, Mrs. C. R. Wilson of Detroit has been nominated as the next President—which means practically the same as election.

Henry Ford has donated $75,000—$25,000 a year for three years—to the Y. W. C. A. to be used in developing the Association's work in the rural communities, it was announced. Another gift of $50,000 to the Association also has been announced. The gift was by a former committee member, who desired her identity to be kept concealed.

War Veteran Scales Skyscrapers To Help Scrape Up A Living

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 6.—"Shipwreck" Kelly, a world war veteran, has found a way to help his fellow war veterans. The government appropriation for the veterans having been used up in the "graft splits," Kelly is now risking his life here climbing skyscrapers. While the gazers-on were thrilled today by the human spider, veterans passed around with hats collecting nickels and dimes for the veterans' home at Sawtelle, California. Several hundred dollars were thus collected. According to the Los Angeles Examiner, "the crowd got its money's worth in thrills."

Mars, bring on the next war for democracy!

Patternmakers See Light.

TOLEDO, O., May 6.—Patternmakers' Local of this town endorsed a Farmer-Labor Party at their last meeting. Two speakers supported the subject, telling of the oil-soaked condition of the two old parties, which have so long fooled the workers of factories, shops, and farms. The support of the union was unanimous.

AGGRESSIVE RAILWAY STRIKES RAGING IN SAXONY BUT OTHER WORKERS ACCEPT COMPROMISE

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

BERLIN, May 4.—Germany has just escaped being tied up with a general railway strike. As these lines are written, there are strikes on in Hamburg, Mannheim, Elberfield, Magdeburg, and various sections of Saxony, the more radical railroaders having refused to accept the compromise agreement finally ratified by the various railway unions (excepting the Free Railwaymen's union, a Communist body).

On March 27 the railway workers of Stuttgart went out on strike, as the state railway administration refused them the raising of their hourly wages from 6 1-2—8 1-2 to 11 1-4 cents. This strike first called nation-wide attention to the fact that there was a deep spirit of unrest among the railway workers.

So deep was this unrest that not only the German Railwaymen's Union, affiliated with the General Federation of Labor, but also the Catholic and the Democratic unions marched solidly in a united front and plainly told the government that unless their demands for better wages, etc., were granted, they would all go out together.

The federal minister of communications engaged in long negotiations with the railwaymen, as a result of which the unions scaled down their demands to an increase of 20 per cent. This figure was agreed to because the railway officialdom had just been given a 20 per cent raise. Finally the increase suggested by the unions as a last compromise, 6 pfennigs, or 1½ cents, was so laughably small that the government claim that this might unbalance the budget was simply laughed at.

At this threatening moment the big industrialists, thru the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, owned by the late Hugo Stinnes, sounded a note of alarm and requested the government to consider what a general tieup of the railway system would mean. The government took the hint and agreed to the 6 pfennig raise for even the lowest paid workers.

Petty Increase Offered.

Thus the strike was averted at the last moment. But it cannot be said that the railwaymen are satisfied. They regard the compromise as one that can be tolerated only for a short time. The rank and file is also dissatisfied with the provision by which, while the eight-hour day is recognized "in principle," it may for the present be lengthened to nine hours without paying double for overtime, and to ten hours by paying double for the tenth hour of overtime.

In Saxony the state organization of the German Railwaymen's Union voted to turn down the compromise accepted by the national body.

Foreign Women Must Prove They Are 'Dumb' Or Else Remain Silent

CINCINNATI, May 6.—War declared on the Cincinnati league of women voters by the local American legion has bullied the women into cancelling the invitation for the appearance here of the foreign women delegates to the Washington women's peace conference. The women, who were enthusiastically received at a reception in the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, are barred by the Cincinnati legion unless they will promise to speak only on Americanism.

A majority of the active spirits in the legion here saw their active service on the Ohio river front during the world war.

California Has Contracted Hoof And Mouth Disease

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., May 6.—Plans for lifting some of the quarantine restrictions levied in California on account of the hoof and mouth disease were under way today.

State and federal officials expressed the belief that the epidemic was rapidly becoming controlled and largely confined to Merced and Los Angeles counties.

Reports that human beings can contract the disease have been circulated many places and are vigorously denied by all authorities here. They point out that one suspected case in California is the only one on record in the west.

Capitalist Ruler Was Sloppy Crook; Is Now But A Cypher

ATLANTA, Ga., May 6.—Warren T. McCray, former governor of Indiana, who arrived here yesterday to begin a ten-year term in the federal penitentiary, has given up his name for a number.

Today the man who 48 hours ago held the highest office in the power of Indiana citizens, is now merely federal prisoner number 17746.

Prison officials, when questioned about McCray, said he would be given a few days to get acclimated, then put into the regular routine of the prisoners.

MINERS' LEADER TO USE DAILY HERALD FOR ALL UNION PRONOUNCEMENTS

LONDON, May 6.—A. J. Cook, newly elected secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain to succeed Frank Hodges, now minister in MacDonald's cabinet, announced that he would use the DAILY HERALD, the only labor daily in England for all official statements and pronouncements of the miners' union.

Cook is a radical and carried on a fight inside the miners' union for a number of years against the reactionary policies of Hodges, who is now bossing His Majesty's navy. Labor leaders of the Hodges type never showed more than a platonic interest in the DAILY HERALD until the Labor Party was confronted with the possibility of being called to form a government. They now realize its value and are supporting it. Cook believes in giving it practical support and letting the workers understand that it is their paper by making it the official daily of the miners. His predecessor in office preferred to give his statements publicity thru the capitalist press.

While the DAILY HERALD is not a Communist paper, it is the only daily organ the British workers have and deserves their support. In fact, when the labor fakers had all their plans ready last year to kill it, it was largely due to the big campaign carried on by the Communist Party of Great Britain in its behalf that it was saved.

Peons Saved Obregon's Neck; He Now Obeys Dollars, Imprisons Peons

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 6. — Replying to the claim made in the Washington Post, owned by E. B. McLean, that wholesale seizures of land were being made by Mexican radicals, the Mexican News Bureau announces that President Obregon has dealt effectively with the attempt made by a few agrarians in Laguna to divide up among the workers the lands leased by foreigners in the cotton region of that state. The seizures were assumed by the participants to be within the terms of the agrarian land law Obregon telegraphed instructions to the military governor of Sinaloa to restore the property to its legal holders, and this was done. Several offenders are held in jail.

Boycott on U. S. Goods.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway.—Boycotts on American films shown in movies and on American clothing and canned goods are in effect in the harbor town of Mo, on the west coast of Norway. Agitation for similar boycotts is going on among the syndicalist unions in other towns. The reason for the boycott is the imprisonment of workers belonging to the I. W. W.

WORKERS KILL OBNOXIOUS LAW IN ARGENTINE

Injunctions Would Not Stand Down There

ARGENTINE, May 6.—The Argentine government succeeded in passing its old age pension law, but is incapable of enforcing it in face of the opposition of the entire workingclass of the country, who object to having the employers check off 5 per cent of their weekly wages each pay day in order to provide the government with the necessary funds to fulfill the terms of the law.

Already it is announced that President Alvear, a reactionary, has decided to postpone operation of the law for one year. Other sources of information close to the government say that the president intends to enforce the law with certain amendments. It is clear, however, that in view of the completeness of the nation-wide strike that the government is powerless to enforce this obnoxious law.

The "wheels of industry" are stopped with a vengeance. Every worker, whether unionized or not, is idle. There is no violence because there is no attempt made to resume business.

The capitalists are not satisfied with the law because it levies a five per cent tax on their profits and they have no desire to further antagonize the workers by acting as collectors for the government.

A food shortage is threatened. Marine transport is at a standstill and the government threatens to use marine conscripts.

Japanese Workers And Farmers Form Strong Movements

TOKIO, Japan, May 6.—Goose-ste[illegible] of Japanese organized labor and [illegible] suppression of Communist activities since earthquake has made two reactionary movements in the rank and file of the labor movement. One is Communistic, upholding the agricultural labor conference held in Osaka and the Suihesha conference in Kyoto. The other is a trade union movement of government factory labor.

The inauguration of Governmental Work Trade Union Teikoku Kaikokai, which has 18,000 members in Kure Naval Work, was held in Futakawa Park in Kure City, lately with many guests from other government works. The following inauguration speech was given by Kuno, secretary of Kaikokai:

"It is an immeasurable pleasure to have this inauguration which has been waited for earnestly during ten long years. We, thus organized, as a nuclus of various labor unions on the basis of solidarity, get a clear understanding of the rank and file of the labor movement under the chaotic conditions such as nowadays prevail, and uphold the significance of fact that the progress, welfare, and promotion of personality of factory labor in government work as a whole, is dependent on us."

THEATRE BOSSES SPLIT FIGHTING ACTORS' EQUITY

Union Battle Won't End June First

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 6.—The anticipated split in the Producing Managers Assn. has occurred and the bosses' hope for victory in the proposed June 1, lockout against the actors union has gone glimmering. The Shubert-Selwyn group, controlling 74 percent of current theatrical productions, have replied to the P. M. A. anti-union stand by forming the Managers' Protective Assn., pledged to sign the new contract with the Actors' Equity Association, American Federation of Labor.

The union haters, who control 18 theaters in New York against 45 controlled by the pro-union group, say they will stage the lockout on the issue of an Equity shop. They have not yet expelled the pro-union managers' group from the P. M. A. There is apt to be a fight between the two groups over $100,000 in the P. M. A. treasury, raised by weekly assessments on the managers to fight possible strikes.

"The members of the new organization who have favored the latest Equity proposal recently submitted to the P. M. A., voted to accept the agreement as now drafted and will put their signatures to the contract as soon as the association is incorporated," says a statement by the new organization. "The new peace pact protects the Fidelity League (a small company union), which has been covered in all the negotiations with Equity."

Equity has turned down the P. M. A. proposal for arbitration by the Society of American Dramatists of the Equity shop demand. John Emerson, president of the union, speaking before the Federation of Womens' clubs, stressed the following points in the new agreement: Equity will in no way interfere with salaries, except a $30 weekly minimum for chorus girls. It will not interfere with the type of play or casting, and will not go on sympathetic strikes.

THE 115 WHEELING MINERS WERE MURDERED; BOSSES COULD HAVE PREVENTED DEADLY EXPLOSION

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The cheap valuation placed by the employing class upon the lives of the human machines they employ is again emphasized by the disaster at the non-union Benwood mine of the Wheeling Steel Corporation in which 115 West Virginia miners lost their lives. Perfectly feasible methods of avoiding such explosions are known and have been recommended by the U. S. buseau of mines but have been adopted by less than a dozen mine owners of the country. They prefer to wait until forced by law to make these safety provisions.

Three Times British Death Rate.

As a direct result the accident death rate among coal miners in this country runs more than three times as high as among miners in Great Britain, where precautionary measures have been enforced by a strict law. During 1923 the number of miners killed in the United States by coal mine accidents totaled 2,452 exceeding by 30 the average of the last 14 years. This means 4.61 miners killed for every 1,000 (300 day workers) employed. In British coal mines the rate varies from 1 to 1.30 per 1000.

Rock Dusting Safety Method.

Prevention of such explosions as that in the Wheeling company mine by means of rock-dusting has been known for at least 12 years and has been compelled by law in all naturally dry mines since June 30, 1920. Since that time there have been no explosions in thoroughly dusted mines. Where gas is ignited from any cause, rock-dusting will prevent explosions from propagating through the fine coal dust which is suspended in the air.

This method has been strongly recommended by the bureau of mines. As its cost is little more expensive than watering, which has proved ineffective, the fact that only three mines in the United States are using it proves that the deaths of hundreds of miners are due to criminal negligence on the part of the owners.

Safety First Explosive.

Another vital recommendation of the bureau which has met with equally tardy acceptance is the use of so-called premissible explosives in place of black powder and dynamite. These permissibles are hard to ignite and consequently nearly proof against accidental explosions. They also burn with a shorter and cooler flame when exploded, thus being less likely to ignite gas or coal dust. Records of the bureau of mines covering 1908 to 1923 show that 71 coal mine explosions have been caused directly by the use of black powder and dynamite, killing 857 men, injuring 173 others and doing enormous damage to property.

Short flame explosives have been made in the United States since 1902 and have been designated permissible explosives since 1908. But down to 1923 only one-fifth of the explosives used in the mines were of this safety class.

Utah Leads The Way.

Coal operators of Utah have worked out a new safety code which makes compulsory the most up-to-date precautions for preventing major mine disasters. But they did it only when forced to by public opinion after the death of 171 miners in the explosion at Castlegate No. 2 mine of the Utah Fuel Company on March 8, 1924.

The report of the investigators showed that the company was to blame for that disaster. The explosion started in a gas pocket, which should have been discovered, and spread through coal dust, which had not been properly sprinkled. The company accepted the report as correct and Vice-president Cameron said that most of the recommendations had already been put into effect. Too late, it might be remarked, to save the 171 miners for their families.

The new code which was drawn up by the Utah industrial commission working with the coal operators of the state provides: (1) Permissible explosives only to be allowed in the coal mines of the state and only 1 1-2 pounds in any hole; (2) Shot firing to be by electricity only with all execpt shotfirers out of mine; (3) Approved electric headlights to be used; (4) Rock dusting of all main entries, slopes and intake air courses, and whenever by analysis the rock dust material in any part of a mine shows a total incombustible content lower than necessary to render coal dust inert, the section in question to be fenced off or mine closed until sufficient inert material has been added to allow of safe operation; (5) Installation of rockdust barriers at every point opening from one working panel or level to another to prevent explosions originating in one part of the mine from extending to other parts. (6) Mining machines and loaders producing fine coal dust to be watered; (7) Sprinkling at every face with daily reports on sprinkling; (8) Mines to be shut down during removal of gas accumulations; (9) Abandoned workings to be cleaned up.

Not Effective Until July.

This code is to be effective July 1, 1924 except that (6) is to be effective June 1 and extensions may be granted for the installation or rock-dusting to extend not later than September 30, 1924. The code shows what should be the minimum of safety provisions enforced by law in all coal mines of the country.

PAINTERS SETTLE ST. LOUIS STRIKE AT $10.40 WAGE

Partial Victory Ends 2 Month Battle

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 6.—Gaining a partial victory as far as the wage scale is concerned, and a complete victory for the maintenance of the union, the strike of the painters here came to an end.

The bosses agreed to sign a new agreement calling for a scale of wages of $1.30 an hour. This agreement was affirmed by a two-thirds majority vote of the 2,300 members of the union at a meeting at Unity Hall. This new agreement also provides that all scabs who were imported during the strike shall either join the union or be discharged.

The wage increase gained by the St. Louis painters amounts to $1.40 a day, making the present scale $10.40 a day.

The painters and paperhangers struck on March 15, demanding a scale of wages of $12 a day, with certain improvements of working conditions. The bosses immediately got busy importing scabs and succeeded in getting some 500 men, who were, as usaul, given ample protection by hired gunmen and city police. The local newspapers launched an avalanche of propaganda against the striking workers, charging them with vandalism, which, however, soon developed to be acts of disgruntled scabs and private detectives, who in this manner tried to show the need of their service to the bosses. Many newly painted buildings were in this manner splattered with tar and creosote.

Closed Union Shop.

Altho the agreement provides for the maintenance of the closed shop, with full union conditions, it can safely be assumed that if the other trades operating in the building industry would have followed the example of the tinners and steamfitters and rendered real assistance to the painters, this victory would have been much more speedily accomplished.

Miners March May Day.

BENTLEYVILLE, Pa., May 6.—Over 2,000 miners marched two abreast in the mile-long May Day parade from this town to Gibson and back, according to Adam Getto, who participated in the demonstration. Getto says that more than half of the men wore the red badge boosting for a workers and farmers' movement. Officers took away badges from four of the Italian workers. Ludwig Lore, editor of Volkszeitung, was the chief speaker at the meeting held here upon the conclusion of the march.

Mayor Barks But Does Not Bite At Workers May Day

By GEORGE E. POWERS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., May 6.—"Hold a meeting here? Why this Workers' Party crowd ought to have their heads blowed off!" Thus exploded the Czar of Wilkes-Barre, Mayor Daniel Hart when told of the intention of the Workers' Party local branch, to hold a mass meeting in Wilkes-Barre.

"Test my right to stop them, will they?" snorted the corpulent mayor, his puffy features distorted with rage. "Why, I'm supreme here and nobody can interfere with my actions. You see those fellers out there?" pointing a fat finger out the window at a group of peaceful citizens standing on the sidewalk. "Well, I can arrest them on the spot if I want to, and nothing can prevent me!"

He raved on, "I have appointed a committee of the American Legion to handle all meetings in this city, and what they say goes! Anyone who wants to have a meeting in Wilkes-Barre must get permission from the Legion, and that settles it! No bunch of reds is going to preach Soviet principles in this city. If they try it, they will be lucky to get out alive!"

The representative of the Workers' Party then stated that his organization would under no circumstances have anything to do with the Legion, but would go ahead with the meeting as planned. With this the interview ended.

Despite the hectic ukase of the mayor, the meeting was held next day without interference, tho the "dicks" were present to note proceedings.

Children Slave In Field And Factory —Law Or No Law

(By Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 6.—Half of the child workers between 14 and 15 years of age in the United States are unprotected by law. Half of the factories of the country are working their employes longer than 48 hours a week. These are some of the points brought out by the report of the National Industrial Conference board, New York. The report states in part:

"Thirty-five states and the District of Columbia have fixed an 8-hour day as the maximum for children, while in Virginia 44 hours is their maximum work week. In 19 states the weekly period is shortened so that children may attend part-time school, and in a few such cases the working week for children under 16 is only 40 hours during the school year.

"The workday for women is held down to 8 hours by law in only 8 states. Fourteen permit a 9-hour day and in 18 states 10 hours or more are permitted. Although the customary legal limit of work for men is 10 hours a day, in special occupations it is set at 8 hours."

In agriculture, which has 46.6 per cent of all working children, according to the report, there is no legal protection. Nor are the many children in domestic service safeguarded by law.

Street Car Men Reject Wage Cuts In Three Cities

(By The Federated Press)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 6.—Only 10 men out of 1625 voted to accept the wage cut of the New York State railways for workers in Rochester, Syracuse and Utica. Representatives of the men, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Empolyes, are negotiating with the company regarding arbitration. The union demands joint arbitration, while the company wants to deal separately with each city.

The proposed reduction is 2 cents an hour or a scale of 49, 51 and 53 cents as a maximum after a year's service. The old contract expired May 1.

LANDLORD REFUSES TO RENT HALL TO ENGLEWOOD BRANCH OF YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE; FIND BETTER ONE

Nothing daunted by their landlord's refusal to rent his hall to young Communists, the members of the Englewood Branch have already found a new and better place for their meetings.

The new hall which has been procured has three good features to recommend it, viz.: It is large enough to accommodate the great numbers that are expected to attend the meetings; it is moderately priced enough not to flatten the branch treasury, and it is accessible enough to assure occasional visitors from those famous stamping grounds for Reds, the North and West sides. The new meeting place is the lower hall in the Carpenters' Union building at 6414 Halsted st. The meeting night has been changed to Wednesday.

In this new location, the branch will continue its efforts to interest and organize the working-class youth. It is planned to divert the young workers who had become accustomed to coming to the old hall, to the new place of meeting. It is felt that those among them, who are really interested in the League, will not cease their attendance. An intensive educational program will be inaugurated, and each member will be expected to carry on active league work. Englewood is out to become the premier branch of the Chicago league, both in membership and activity. It is going to establish a flourishing Red oasis in the bourgeois desert of Englewood. This Wednesday night will see the first meeting in the new hall. Important matters will be taken up, for discussion and action.

Striking Painters Hold Strong Front In Open-Shop L. A.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 6.—The original demand of the striking painters here was a small increase in wages. The smaller contractors granted their demand right in the beginning. Most of the strikers are working already under the new wage scale. It is the big fellows, the members of the association, that are stubborn.

Many of the big contractors are willing to settle with the union. They are refraining from doing it presently for fear of revenge from the Chamber of Commerce. They expect their credits to be cut off and delivery of material to be refused.

The strike as it stands now is against the open shop. The Chamber of Commerce allows to pay the higher wage scale, but insists on refusing to deal with the union. It is understood that they are paying the members of the association strike benefits, but benefits cannot do the work or pay the rents for the delayed and crippled contracts.

Dissatisfatcion has spread among the strike breakers. The association bosses cannot get real mechanics to break the strike. They are compelled to borrow them from each other. The strike breakers are those compelled to work every day for a different employer and on a different job. This condition worries and annoys them. Dissatisfatcion has spread rapidly among them. Instead of striking, they are getting careless on their jobs.

Contrary to this situation is the condition and the spirit of the strikers. Those working under the new wage scale are paying their strike assessments cheerfully. Those on strike are registering regularly and volunteering for strike duty. They have full confidence in the leadership and the outcome of the strike.

Hungry, Jumped In River.

NEW YORK, May 6. — Loretta Murphy, a telephone operator, may have been endowed with the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, but the right to work and to eat was denied her. So she tried to commit suicide by jumping into the East river. At the hospital it was found that she was suffering from hunger.

TEST SUIT IN STRIKE CASE.

CLEVELAND.—Union liability to employers for contract losses during strikes will be sought by the American Plan Association, backed by the large open shop employers of the country, in a test case in the Cleveland courts.

The American planners have filed suit for $6800 damages against locals of the Brotherhood of Painters and Paperhangers on the ground that a Minneapolis contractor lost the job of painting a local apartment house because of a strike against him for employing nonunion help, which he refused to adjust by paying a fine to the union.

The American Plan Association, declares that if successful in this suit, it will establish the precedent for damages everywhere whenever employers find their profits cut by the activities of organized labor.

CALL TO BUILD FARMER-LABOR PARTY IN N. Y

State Convention T Meet in Buffalo

NEW YORK, May 6.—The Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York City and the Buffalo Farmer-Labor Party have issued a call for th holding of a state convention for th purpose of forming a state Farme Labor Party, to be held in Schenectady on Sunday morning, May 18.

The statement exposes the capitalist government as the tool of the ma ter class, who own the means of production and distribution, and calls o the producers to unite against th capitalists in a class political party.

The statement follows:

"The privileged class, in order t maintain its privileges and to aid i its exploitation of the farmers and industrial workers, this privileged clas has fastened its grip upon the government. It uses the legislative, judicial and executive branches of th government alike as instruments i its service to secure greater an greater profits and to amass greate and greater wealth. The recent exposures of corruption in connectio with the Teapot Dome oil scandal i but one outstanding incident showin how the government power is use to loot the natural resources of th nation.

During the past few years million of farmers have been driven from th farms because unable to secure eve the means for a livelihood thru thei labor, as a result of their exploitatio by the ruling class. The industria workers, struggling to maintain thei organizations and a decent standar of living, have found that this privileged class has at its command th powers of the government wheneve the struggle over the right to organize and to secure better wages an working conditions, have resulted in strike.

The use of injunctions against th workers on strike is an every-day occurrence. The infamous Daugherty injunction against the railroad shopmen still stands, an injunction which at one stroke robbed the workers o every right supposed guaranteed by the constitution. The Republican an Democratic parties have proven themselves equally the instruments of th privileged class in using the governmental power against the farmers and industrial workers.

These conditions have developed a widespread movement of farmers and industrial workers to organize a political party which will fight their battles and challenge the continued rule of the privileged class in this country. The political organizations of farmers and industrial workers scattered over the country must be united for the coming presidential elections, so that they may represent a united front against the ruling class.

"A call has been issued by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York and the Buffalo Labor Party for the formation of a state Farmer-Labor Party. This state convention is to be held at Schenectady on Sunday morning, May 18, and all organizations are invited to immediately elect their delegates to this convention. Names of the delegates are to be sent to Mr. Frank Herzog, 63 Leroy avenue, Buffalo, N. Y."

Picket's Victory Against Boss Sets Precedent

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 6.— The verdict of $1000 damages recently awarded Hyman Hollander, a garment worker, here, against Frank Yawitz, owner of a tailoring shop, is likely to establish a precedent that will help all union workers unjustly arrested for picketing.

Hollander was arrested at the instigation of Yawitz when the worker was picketing during the garment workers' strike of September 1921. The circuit court has now granted Hollander delayed justice.

If garment workers in the present Chicago strike follow Hollander's suit and attack the bosses who have pointed them out for arrest, the Dress Manufacturers of that city will not indulge in such wholesale arrests of peaceful pickets.

Ice Cream Drivers Settle Strike On Sundaeless Sunday

Ice cream drivers have settled their strike with the manufacturers. The men wanted a $7 a week raise in their weekly wage and an increase of 3 cents per gallon on all package goods delivered and 1 cent per gallon on bulk ice cream. The settlement gives them a $10 weekly wage in summer and $21 in winter, with 7 cents per gallon commission on all goods delivered.

WASHINGTON HAS SUCCESSFUL MAY DAY CELEBRATION

Many Speakers at Big Meeting in Capitol

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 6.—Headquarters hall of the Workers Party was filled with an appreciative audience that listened to many speeches in celebration of labor's international holiday. Addresses were made by Comrades Pearlman, Foley, rvine, Starr, Avant, Hindes, Jackerson and Powell. A piano solo was played by eight-year-old Comrade Newman, who won great applause at the conclusion of her splendid performance.

Comrade Kate W. Foley acted as chairman, and in her introductory remarks related instances of May Day celebrations in the British Isles, where she has been active in the Communist movement. Comrade Foley has attended sessions of the British Parliament and her reminiscences of the Communist attitude at those sessions, of Comrade J. T. W. Newbold, M. P., was heartily enjoyed.

Comrade Avant roused the audience to a high pitch of excitement with his forceful and eloquent descriptions of labor battles in which he has participated thruout the South and on the Pacific Coast. Comrade Avant is engaged at present in spreading Communistic propaganda amongst the street car employes of Washington, and his appreciation of these men, as compared with the degenerate officials who are conducting the proceedings in the various government departments in the interests of corruption, was earnestly applauded.

Comrade Hindes of Boston, Marxist student, delivered a compact and accurate history of the Communist movement and its relation to May 1.

The Young Workers League was represented by Comrade C. Jackerson, who explained what her organization is doing in preparing its members for the time when the farmers' and workers' government shall replace the present Wall Street regime.

Announcement was made of the completion of arrangements for a series of lectures to be delivered by Comrade Powell every Friday evening to the members of the Young Workers League.

Several application blanks were filled out by members of the audience who desire enlistment in the Workers Party, and many subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER were given to Dr. Pearlman, local agent for the DAILY WORKER.

ON MONDAY MAY 12TH, the German Branch will have its meeting, and Comrade J. Schaefer of the Englewood Branch will speak there on the subject of "Anti-Alien Laws. The Menace of Super Blacklist." Comrade Schaefer is an able speaker and has done important educational work for the party in the past. This meeting will be held at the Workers Dramatic Club 1665 Bissel Street.

SPRING IS HERE—SO SAYS Y. W. L.

Official Date Set—May 10th, 1924.

A spring dance will be given in honor of Spring, that most charming Goddess of the Seasons, on May 10th, the official date set by the Young Workers League of Chicago.

Music for this breezy and balmy evening will be poured forth by Pan's Pipers who have won fame by their enticing recitations of symphonic jazz poems, via the saxaphone, trombone and et ta la.

There will be no occasion for food riots. However should there be any manifestations of this, refreshments as only the delicate hands of youth can prepare, will be served in a way which will murder all ravishing appetites and renew any losses for those who come without them.

Preparations for this ball, which will be held at Roosevelt Hall, 3437 West Roosevelt Road, on Saturday night, May 10th, have shown promises to make this event the best that the youth of Chicago have undertaken. The admission, fifty cents, includes wardrobe.

OUR POLICY IN THE FARMER-LABOR PARTY

A letter to a group of Finnish comrades. Authorized by the secretary of the Workers Party.

Dear Comrades: Your statement in regard to the policy which the CEC has instructed the Minnesota comrades to follow in relation to the Farmer-Labor Party, in which you state your criticisms of the policy outlined by the CEC has been considered by the CEC and I am instructed to send you the following reply:

In the first two paragraphs of your letter you state the fact that our Party has for some time now given the greater part of its strength to the work of building up the Farmer-Labor Party in the United States and contrast to the policy which the Party has followed the new policy which has ben laid down for the Party within the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota. From your letter it appears that you are under the impression that the Party has been following one policy up to the time of the Minnesota statement and has now suddenly adopted a new policy. For, you say in your letter "Then like a thunderbolt we received instructions that the Communists must put up their own candidates."

We are compelled to assume, from these statements, that you have not clearly understood the Party policy in relation to the FLP and are under some misapprehension as to our purpose in supporting the Farmer-Labor Party. From the viewpoint of the CEC there has been no change of policy at all. We have been supporting organization of a Farmer-Labor Party thru which masses of workers and farmers could be arrayed in opposition to and would enter into a struggle against the capitalist parties and the capitalist government. Our purpose in supporting the building of the FLP and arraying the workers and farmers in a struggle against capitalist parties was and is thru the experiences of their struggle to develop their revolutionary consciousness and develop class action against the capitalist class and the capitalist system. Now that in Minnesota a FLP exists, we are supporting that Party and endeavoring to develop revolutionary consciousness and class action by the workers and farmers.

The instructions of the CEC to the Minnesota DEC were that our Party must nominate its candidates in the FLP primaries and that these candidates must announce themselves as Communists and must propagate their Communist principles during the campaign. The instructions further stated that if our candidates are defeated in the FLP primaries, we shall then support in the election campaign the candidates selected by the FLP in the primaries.

We do not understand how anything more could be asked of us by the FLP and how we, as Communists, could do anything less than this.

From your letter we gain the impression that it is your view that we support the FLP, not as Communists, but as Farmer-Laborites, that is, that we should not, at any stage or at any time within the FLP, advoate more than the program which the FLP stands for. If we follow such a policy, how would we be different from the followers and supporters of the FLP, who are not Communists? What right would be have to call ourselves a Communist Party and distinguish ourseles from the mass of followers of the FLP?

We do not become Communists by merely calling ourselves by the name "Communists." In order to justify our calling our Party a Communist Party we must carry on work in support of Communist principles. The fundamental principles of a Communist Party are the struggle for a proletarian revolution, for Soviets, and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat. If we are a Communist Party, then we must carry on such a struggle. That is what the CEC directed the comrades in Minnesota to do. Our instructions were, in effect, that while we remain part of the FLP, while we loyally support the FLP in its struggle against the capitalist parties, within the FLP we carry on a struggle to win the workers and farmers for our program of a proletarian revolution, the Soviets, and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

The CEC well understands that the moment that we raise Communist issue in the FLP United Front, we will find ourselves in conflict with the so-called progressives. Naturally, these progressives want us to be only progressives and not Communists, but certainly you would not argue that we should be mere progressives and not Commuists. The policy which you suggest, however, would lead exactly to that result. Therefore, as Communists, in place of becoming frightened because we find ourselves in conflict with certain progressives, we should welcome this conflict as the best indication and proof that we are following a Communist policy.

You state in your letter that one of our comrades "has been treated like an enemy instead of a friend by those progressives whom we were expecting to get into the Party," as a result of the policy dictated by the CEC. If this is the case, comrades, then you have the best evidence that those progressives whom you expect to get into the Party are far from being ripe for membership in our Party. It is in the conflicts which arise in the United Front that the test is made whether any of the progressives are ready for membership in our Party. Those progressives who stand with us and work with us in spite of the fact that we show our Communist face and follow our Communist policies, are the ones who are ripe for Party membership, not those who desert us and become our enemies the moment we show in the least that we are Communists.

In closing your letter, you ask the question, "The question is what is really the policy of our Party in regard to the Labor Party. Have we meant anything by all our propaganda or not?" We answer that we have meant everything that we have said in regard to the FLP. We answer that it will be a great step forward for the American Labor movement if a mass party on a national scale is formed which will throw the workers and farmers into the struggle against the capitalist parties, but we answer also that we cannot be satisfied, we Communists, with the attainment of the goal of the formation of such a party. That is not the goal which we are striving for. Our aim is, for the formation of such a Party, and then to work within that Party and force it forward, step by step, as the lessons of experience make possible, into more revolutionary action against the capitalist government. That is our task as a Communist Party. We cannot fulfill that task unless we raise, in contrast to the FLP program, the Communist program—unless we point out to the worker and farmers, as the struggle goes on, that there is something more to be done than the FLP program calls for.

In Minnesota, we have taken the first step to perform this Communist duty, we have made the first move to differentiate ourselves as Communists from the Farmer-Laborites. The result, comrades, in place of bringing the calamity which you fear, has already been to greatly strengthen our Party.

For all of those reasons, the CEC has not concurred in your proposal that our candidates in the Eighth Congressional district withdrawn. It instructs the Party membership in that district to carry on a Communist campaign, to nominate our candidates as the candidates of the FLP in the FL primaries. If we are defeated in the primaries, then we shall pledge our support in the election campaign and will vote for, at the November elections, the candidate who is nominated by the FLP.

We trust that this statement of the Party policy will clarify the issue for you and that you will see the correctness of the policy which has ben authorized by the CEC.

Fraternally your,
(Signed) C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary.

THE PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE MISSION

By JAY LOVESTONE.

A new mission on which are represented some of the ablest and most fearless Filipino leaders, like Quezon and Osmena, has arrived in Washington to plead for the freedom of the Philippine Islands from the clutches of the Wall Street Washington government.

We are not particularly anxious to be harsh with these spokesmen for a cause which we indorse wholeheartedly and for which we have been fighting side by side with the Filipino laboring and farming masses. Yet there are a few little items to which we desire to draw the attention of the new Freedom mission. As friends of the brave Filipino people in general, and the poor tenant farmers and exploited workers of the Islands in particular, we feel we are fully justified in advising, and that our remarks will be welcomed by the newly-arrived representatives of the Philippines.

First of all, if the mission has come to Washington to seek freedom for their nation, they are bound to be disappointed. Today Washington is the last place on earth where national or working class freedom of any sort can be found. On the threshold of the steps leading to the rear of the White House is to be placed the blame for the most outrageous crimes that have been committed by the capitalist Military Governor General Leonard Wood in the archipelago.

Secondly, if the new mission expects to learn new lessons in the art of self-government for the masses, it is doomed to the severest disappointment. Washington is a nest of all the employing class agents that have been robbing the workers and farmers of the United States of the most elementary civil rights guaranteed them even by the Constitution. Washington is the capital of Teapot government. The Dohenys, Sinclairs, Falls and McLeans are the real rulers in Washington. More than that, Washington has been the headquarters from which operations were launched to destroy the first republic in the Orient, the Philippine Republic, and the Republic of Santo Domingo. Here the plot was hatched and the plans were laid for the destruction of more republics than in any other capital in the world today. For today Washington is the real headquarters of international capitalist imperialist reaction.

Finally, we feel sure that Washington is not the place where the Filipinos will find their genuine friends congregated. We are with the mission one hundred per cent in its demand on the Coolidge-Wall Street owned government for complete national freedom. But we fervently hope that these ardent champions of national Filipino freedom will not fool themselves into the untenable notion that Washington will ever give any oppressed nationality or class anything without a hard battle for it. We workers and farmers have had a good deal to do with our capitalist dictators, and we know their iron hand even when it is hidden in the silk gloves of sweet promises.

If the Filipino mission, if Quezon and Osmena, want to find their real friends, let them go to the working and farming classes of this country, who are opressed and exploited by the same coterie of financiers and industrial magnates as the Filipinos are. Towards this end we are ready to do everything in our power to unite the working and farming masses of the Philippines in one big fight against their one big and powerful enemy—the American imperialist capitalist ruling class.

Fewer Jobs in Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., May 6.—Employment continues to decrease in Detroit. The Employers' Association announces a further reduction in a week of 1,618 men in the 79 member shops of the organization This brings the total force to 235,358, of whom 8,577 in 10 shops are working on reduced schedules averaging 40.1 hours a week. The Association employs about two-thirds of the total employes in the city.

Paid to Get Jobs.

BROCKTON, Mass., May 6.—After an investigation by District Attorney Harold P. Williams, William H. Pierce of this city was arrested and charged with accepting money from five Lithuanians. Pierce is a foreman at the Diamond Shoe Company of Brockton, and these men worked in his department.

In the complaint as filed, Pierce is charged with receiving $160 from these men as payment to him for the jobs he was giving them. When taken to the district court Pierce pleaded not guilty.

Milwaukee Workers Hold May Day Fest While S. P. Silent

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 6.—One of the largest May Day celebrations was arranged by the Workers Party in Milwaukee, Wis. Over seven hundred people attended the United Front May Day meeting.

In a masterful speech Browder outlined the success of the revolutionary movement for the past year. One of the greatest achievements of the International movement, he said is the creation of the Communist International and its sections thruout the world. The workingclass is no longer blindly groping about, but is marching forward under the intelligent leadership of the Communist Parties.

Peter Herd, member of the Young Workers League delivered a very enthusiastic appeal calling upon the youth to celebrate the May Day by joining the Young Workers League.

In honor of Comrade Lenin and other martyrs of revolutionary movement, the Russian chorus sang the Funeral March. A very fine musical program was given by two German singing societies. Several organizations have participated in this united front celebration including the entire Arbeiter-Ring organization.

In addition to this large demonstration arranged by the City Central Committe, language branches of the Workers Party had also organized May Day celebrations. Hungarians and Russians at Miller's hall, South Slavic at South Side Turner hall.

The Workers Party in Action

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF WORKERS PARTY TAKES STAND FOR STRICT ENFORCEMENT OF DISCIPLINE

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has rendered the following decision in the case of Edward Hirschler and Sam Dragoonsty charged with failure to carry out party policies in their work:

Dear Comrades:—The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has considered the charges made against you in the letter of the D. E. C. on April 5th and your reply thereto on April 20th and I am instructed to convey to you the following decision of the C. E. C.:

1. It is a basic principle of a Communist Party that every member of the party must be guided in his work by the decision of the authorized party committees. Whether a party member is in agreement with the policies adopted by the party or not, he cannot and must not allow his actions to be influenced by this. When the party adopts a certain line of policy on any question, each and every member is duty bound to strictly adhere to the policy laid down and to work with all his energy to carry out that policy. It is the right, of course, of members of the party to express their viewpoint to the guiding party commitee on any question of party policy. Once the policy is adopted, and as long as the policy is in effect, party members must conscientiously work in support of the policy adopted.

It apears from the statement of the D. E. C. and from the statement in your own letter that you have not, in the past, followed this underlying principle of our party. The documents in the case, we believe, establish this fact. This fact would, if there were no extemating circumstances, warrant immediate disciplinary action by the C. E. C.

It appears however, from your letter, that you did not clearly understand in some of these instances that the policies which you were asked to put into effect were the policies adopted by the party and in arriving at a decision the C. E. C. has taken this fact into consideration.

The decision of the C. E. C. made in the light of the foregoing is as follows:

1. That you must immediately sever any connections which exist between yourself and any other caucus or organization other than the regular party industrial caucus or the T. U. E. L. group.

2. You are placed on probation as a party member. While your full rights to function in the organization as members are not limited in any way, the C. E. C. considers that you must show by your conduct in the future that you are entitled to remain members of the Workers Party. The condition of such continued membership is that you promptly and fully carry into effect in your work in other organizations all decisions which are conveyed to you as the decisions of the governing party committee. Any future violation of this fundamental principle of Communist discipline will result in immediate reopening of the question by the C. E. C. and prompt disciplinary action.

The C. E. C. of the party further instructs that a copy of this communication shall be sent to the D. E. C. and that the D. E. C. invite you to appear before it to state your future intentions to carry our party policy as required by the decisions of the C. E. C.

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) C. E. Ruthenberg.
Executive Secretary.

POLICE ATTEND BUFFALO MAY DAY MEETING

Report Speeches But Do Not Interfere

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 6.—The United Front May Day celebration was a great success and included among the audience a squad of police. There was an inspector of police, acting captain of the precinct, two lieutenants, half a dozen uniformed bulls, four plain clothes dicks, and two police stenographers to take down the speeches.

The bull battalion must have been interested in the Teapot disclosures and predictions of future world revolutions, for, in spite of a few jibes directed at them by the speakers, they remained and permitted the meeting to proced with no disturbance.

The assemblage was in the Temple Theater and was held under the auspices of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Besides John Ballam, Boston organizer for the clothing workers, who spoke in English, there were speakers in Italian, Jewish and Polish. The program included several musical numbers and a collection which netted $72.40.

Great Relief Film, "Russia-Germany," Arouses Interest

In spite of the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce of Decatur, Illinois, to stop the film "Russia and Germany—A Tale of Two Republics," there was a successful showing there on Friday evening, May 2, at the Alhambra Theatre. A showing which had been arranged for a previous date and was to be given at the Decatur High School, had to be called off because the superintendent of schools refused the use of the school, at the request of the president of the local Chamber of Commerce.

This film, which shows the ascendancy of Soviet Russia under workers' rule and the ruination of Germany under capitalist misrule, aroused great interest in Decatur. Disappointment and indignation were caused when the picture was stopped, and this indignation was so much the greater because the proceeds of the showing were to go for the relief of the starving workers of Germany. And the workers of Decatur insisted on having their way, they insisted on a showing of the relief film.

The "Russia and Germany" film has been having much success all over the country. In Boston, $1,000 net profit was cleared at the showing in Symphony Hall, on April 22, which includes a donation of $500 made on that occasion by Mrs. Harriet G. Flagg for the suffering workers of Germany.

The picture will be seen in New York on Friday evening, May 9, at 8:30 p. m. at the Central Opera House, 205 East 67th Street. In addition to the picture the Uthmann German Workers' Chorus of 50 men will sing some excellent selections.

The Committee for International Workers' Aid will present the film "Russia and Germany" in Chicago, at the Orchestra Hall on Wednesday evening, May 14. This will give a chance to Chicago to see stirring scenes from actual life and doings in the two countries, scenes of pioneer work of reconstruction, of workers toiling happily to make Soviet Russia the greatest country in the world and of turmoil in Germany caused by capitalist incompetence.

Civic Opera Announces Plays.

Cyrena Van Gordon, contralto, and Forrest Lamont, tenor, have been re-engaged by the Chicago Civic Opera. Gladys Swarthout of Evanston, has also been engaged.

NEW YORK CITY Party Activities

NEW YORK CITY, May 6.—Despite the fact that a permit for a parade was refused at the last moment, the workers gathered on the streets to show their solidarity with the workers the world over, and to protest against the various laws now before Congress aimed to keep out the foreign born workers. The workers gathered to demonstrate for the formation of a Farmer-Labor Party and a workers' and farmers' government.

The May Day demonstrations this year were the most successful in the history of the radical workers of New York. During the afternoon a number of open air meetings were held, and in each a large and enthusiastic audience gathered to celebrate labor's international holiday.

Socialists Try to Steal Meeting.

On Rutgers Square the Socialist Party tried to hold a meeting on the same spot that the United Front May Day Conference advertised a meeting. The police at first tried to prohibit us from holding the meeting in favor of the S. P. When that failed we were informed that neither of us would be allowed to hold a meeting. However, after protracted negotiations, both with the inspector and the chief inspector, we were given permission to hold the meeting, all the protests of the Forward, notwithstanding. When we were finally permitted to hold the meeting the large crowd that had assembled sent up a mighty cheer. The meetings in Harlem and Brooklyn were also rousing successes.

During the evening a number of indoor demonstrations were held in New York and Brooklyn. At Central Opera House, 67th street and 3rd avenue, by 7 p. m., there was a crowd ready to enter. By 8:30 every inch of space was occupied, the balconies were jammed and a good number of people filled the aisles. Even before the meeting there were spontaneous outbursts of singing and cheering. The May Day spirit of international solidarity captured the crowd and lasted after the meeting, when a large number of comrades sang on the way to the subway station.

Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Harry Winitsky, Tom Lewis, Becker and Krumbein were all greeted with enthusiastic cheers. The Hungarian Singing Society opened up the meeting with the singing of the "Internationale." Among the other artists, Robert Imandt played several violin solos. Yaroslavsky sang the finale of Pagliacci.

In the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum another rousing meeting was held. Every nook and corner of the hall was occupied until there was no more standing room left. The speakers were Cosgrove, Lily Lore, Bimba and Nesin, chairman. An excellent musical program rounded out the evening. The Finnish, Czecho-Slovakian and Ukrainian comrades held their own meetings.

Hearst's Hiram and Doheny's McAdoo Win L. A. Labor Councils

By MAUD McCREERY.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, May 6.—Organized labor here, at least that portion of it sitting as delegates in the Central Labor, Metal Trades, and Building Trades councils, is taking a lesson, it appears, from Sinclair, the oil king, and other capitalists who play both ends against the middle politically.

Beginning with the joint executive board of the councils of the various trades, a resolution was adopted here recently endorsing both Hiram Johnson and William G. McAdoo for president on the republican and democratic tickets respectively. From the joint board the resolution has been sent to the parent councils, and without much debate or opposition, has been adopted.

When asked how a body of delegates could endorse two candidates, running on opposition tickets, a labor leader (?) is reported as saying, "Why," the republicans will vote for Johnson and the democrats for McAdoo." He might have gone further and said, "It won't make any difference which one you vote for."

Let the Tribune Whine

Cowering before the colossal gains of Germany's Communists, in Sunday's elections, the Chicago Tribune tries to develop anti-red hysteria among its readers by pointing to the lesson it draws from the raid on the Soviet Trade Delegation in Berlin.

The thing that seems to trouble the Tribune most is that monarchists, czarists and other counter-revolutionary emigres from Russia, were not in control of the Soviet Embassy. The hundreds of Ebert-Socialist police, who raided the Soviet offices, found real Communists representing the First Workers' Republic, and to be sure, there was some Communist literature about. Russian Soviet rule has demanded an apology of the Berlin government, and will no doubt get it, just as the white terror governments of the Baltic states have bowed before Moscow, when they failed in their anti-Soviet plots.

This frantic Chicago Tribune, that skirts the fringe of lunacy every time it considers affairs Bolshevik, made no protest against the open attack of the United States government against Soviet Russia, when this country had declared no war on the Workers' Republic. Even now it closes its columns to the facts offered by Captain James V. Martin, as published in the DAILY WORKER, showing how the American Relief Administration under Herbert Hoover, aided Yudenitch in the west, and the confession of the anti-Soviet State Department, under Secretary Hughes, that the American government delivered 198,833 rifles and 13,594,026 rounds of ammunition to the Kolchakist white armies in the Far East.

The Tribune's propaganda of anti-Soviet hate will not go far when the workers and farmers learn these facts. Russian Communists are going to remain Communists even when placed on Soviet trade delegations, or assigned to Soviet diplomatic missions. And Communists do not need to spread propaganda in foreign lands. The local conditions, in each nation, developing out of the capitalist system, provide the lessons that will teach the workers and farmers that they must take over all power.

The capitalist class today holds power in all lands except in those nations under the banners of the Union of Soviet Republics. The Chicago Tribune is trying to safeguard that power, that has drenched the world in blood, that is fomenting new wars, that has plotted these past six years for the overthrow of the Russian Workers' Republic.

The Tribune has not been content to let conditions develop naturally in Soviet Russia. Neither has the capitalist government of the United States allowed the Russian workers and peasants to develop their own rule. Instead Washington has made use of every form of yellow propaganda, costing millions of dollars; it has sent its armies on an invasion of Soviet soil, it has furnished arms and ammunition to the white armies of the counter-revolutionaries.

The United States government has done all these things, and it has been applauded by the Tribune and by all the kept sheets of the bosses, because they know that all natural developments in Russia tend to the strengthening of Soviet Rule. They know that the Workers' and Farmers' Republic cannot be overthrown from within, so they must needs crush it from without, if they can. The Tribune confesses that this is also impossible thru its editorial whine over the fact that Communists are in control of, and that perhaps some Communist literature was found in the offices of the Russian Trade Delegation in Berlin. Let it whine.

South Dakota announces that it will send 100 delegates to the National Farmer-Labor Convention in St. Paul, June 17th. And they'll all be city and land workers who know why they are going to St. Paul. They all want a class party—an anti-capitalist party.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Convention is now in session in Boston. It has an opportunity to write history in the American labor movement by repudiating the expulsion policy of the Sigman administration in the union this past year.

Workers! Stay away from Pullman! There is a strike on there. Don't allow yourselves to be used as scabs. Better also stay away from every other strike zone. Be careful of the labor agents who come promising "good jobs" in distant cities.

There is only one way to civilize the Pullman Company. That way is to establish workers' and farmers' rule and take it out of the hands of the profiteers, along with all other industries.

The Argentine Strike

The labor movement in the Latin-American countries is going thru a very interesting and significant development. Because of the character of the industrial development achieved by these countries, their labor movement to date has been largely colored by anarcho-syndicalist tendencies. The great extent to which the industries of these countries are still in the small-scale, in places even in the handicraft stage, has proved fertile soil for individual, instead of mass reaction to the rule of the capitalist exploiters and landlord oppressors in those countries.

But recent years, particularly since the war, have seen an intensification of the tendency toward the development of large scale production and giant investments by foreign capitalists. Our American financiers have been especially active in such enterprises. With this development of industry there has come the natural rise of more highly centralized governments. Likewise the conditions for a highly political, working class revolutionary movement, are developing. This tendency has been evidenced in a recent strike wave that has hit practically every country of Latin-America. Of course, the mass unrest is intensified by the fact that the real power behind all the reactionary governments set up in Central and South America is the strong arm of a foreign group of capitalists—the Washington junta.

The present strike in the Argentine is only a phase of the great general unrest and discontent that is now brewing in South America. The industries of the country are paralyzed. The workers are bent upon preventing the government from forcing upon them a pension bill for which they have to pay 5 per cent of their wages, thru a check-off system, in which their bosses are the collectors for the government.

The deadly effectiveness of the general strike is causing the government great concern. Already there is talk of yielding to the workers. For the working class of the Argentine, and the other Latin-American countries, this strike will prove of considerable help in lending a new and firmer tone of class-consciousness to the labor movement. The out-and-out open conflicts with the government should serve to develop the political character of the class conflicts in the country. And we, the workers and poor farmers of the United States, have the right to welcome the increase of class power in the Latin-American countries as a most effective step in the direction of building a powerful revolutionary proletarian movement, a Communist movement, which alone can end the rule of the American imperialists on the North and South American continents.

Tailing Tammany Hall

It was not an accident that resulted in President Morris Sigman, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, presenting Mayor James Curley, of Boston, to the delegates of the union's convention now in session in that city.

And it was not an accident that Mayor Curley urged Governor Al Smith, of New York, upon the delegates as available presidential timber.

Curley and Smith are two peas in the Tammany Hall pod that dominates the democratic party. And the Sigman-Hillquit-Forward-Socialist administration that rules by dictatorship in "The International" has always had longing eyes on Tammany Hall, in New York, city and state.

It was the Sigman-Hillquit-Socialist alliance that tried to form a coalition with the Tammany Hallites in the labor movement, for the creation of the New York American Labor Party, with its boycott against all things Communist. But it will be remembered that, in the affair at Albany, the Tammany Hall machine dumped the Socialists—Hillquit-Sigmanites and all—into the street.

The expulsion of militants from "The International" is purely a Tammany Hall strong-arm method in politics, introduced into the trade union movement. When Sigman presented the Tammany Hallite, Curley, to the convention delegates at Boston, it was inevitable that he should himself attack the left wingers in his own opening remarks.

But the delegates will have something to say later on. It is they who will have to decide whether "The International" is to resume its lost position as a part of labor's vanguard, or whether the union is to be made a tail to the democratic party Tammany Hall machine. If the delegates are given an opportunity to register their real sentiments, we feel that Tammany Hall, with all its corrupt and destructive methods, will be given the boot by "The International."

The far-flung iron range in Northern Minnesota has gone solid for the June 17th Farmer-Labor Convention at St. Paul. That is, the miners on "the range" are for June 17th. The iron mine owners have their longing eyes on the republican convention in New York City, and the democratic pow-wow at Cleveland, wondering if any workers and farmers will longer be deluded into supporting these fake punch and judy shows.

The labor unions in Chicago are coming across in good shape in contributing to the strike fund of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. But they can do better. And they should.

Workers and farmers! Go to St. Paul, Minn., on June 17th, or get someone to speak for you there.

WHAT CAUSES THE PRESENT CHAOS IN NEEDLE INDUSTRY?

The First of a Series of Articles Relating to the Conventions This Month of the Needle Trades.

By PAUL JUDITZ.

THREE of our big unions hold their conventions. In the early part of May, the International, the Amalgamated, and the Furriers' Union assemble in Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago, respectively.

Never in their entire history have these unions faced so grave a situaton as at present. The needle trades unions are on the verge of complete bankruptcy—the employer in the industry is all-powerful; the workers suffer miserably; the organizations are demoralized. In their present condition the unions are incapable of healing either their own wounds or those of the workers.

Had the present leadership of our movement any real kind of responsibility, our unions would now, on the eve of conventions, be seriously considering the causes for their present woeful, chaotic condition. And were it so desired, a way would be found to lead the organizations out of the swamp into which they have been drawn. Our unions, however, are conducted according to traditions, rather than according to present needs. We are accustomed, so to speak, to beating on drums. Hence we talk about insignificant trifles in our unions, instead of analyzing the basic reasons for our condition. We talk about decorating the building when the entire foundation is decayed. We talk about some old grandmother's medicine when we must cut the cancer out at the very roots.

Let us therefore consider the problems more truly. We shall speak first of the chaos in the industry.

On this question various "industrial experts" have already expressed their opinion. But whoever had the opportunity of following the different explanations offered for the present condition of the needly industry, could easily see that most of them were simply products of the imagination, without any real worth.

Several months ago the most talked-of explanation was this: that the chaos was the result of an industrial crisis. But what caused the crisis? On that, too, there were many different views, which showed that the analysis was entirely false. So-called experts, for example, actually wrote early in January that unemployment in the men's clothing trades was due to the fact that the big manufacturers had stopped producing stock. And the only reason why they already had creased production as far back as November and December of last year was because they expected to conclude an agreement with the union in July which would carry a decrease in wages.

That this sort of an explanation is not correct, hardly needs to be stated.

There have been other opinions as to the causes of the present unemployment. Some declared that manufacturers and jobbers had stopped producing stock because the textile mills would no longer sell goods on long term credit. Others thought that the crisis in the needle industry sprang from the general critical state of labor thruout the country.

These latter views, tho they may have a little more justification than the others, are not entirely correct either. It is at least certain that the industrial crisis, insofar as it is even a fact, is not the cause of the unchecked chaos in our trades. The truth is, that the existence of a general crisis during the last two years has not been of such sigficance to us as many would have us believe. We are of course far from prosperity in the needle industry. Compared with the war-years of 1917-1918, the situation today is quite different. But it is difficult to differentiate the present situation from that of the years immediately preceding the war.

During last year many big firms made enormous profits. As an example take the well-known mail order house, the National Cloak and Suit Company. According to the company's own reports its net profits rose from $1,790,000 in 1922, to $2,160,000 in 1923. Its sales during the year increased to 7,042,000.

A great number of manufacturers in the needle trades augmented their profits considerably in 1923. It is true that the same year many others went bankrupt. This, however, was not due to a cirsis, but also to the general chaos reigning in the industry. It resulted from the uncontrolled speculation brought into the industry at the expense of the workers because of the greed for more profits; a speculation taking advantage of the lack of control by the unions of the conditions of labor. It resulted from the fact that manufacturers gambled upon the chaos in our trades, to which many fell victims while others profited hugely.

The chaos in the industry was introduced by the bosses in an attempt to break the power of the workers' organizations.

After the revolt of the workers in the needle trades years ago, as soon as the organized power of the workers was firmly established, the manufacturers realized that they could not conquer the unions in an open, direct struggle with the workers. Hence they decided upon a flank attack. They began to develop a network of contracting shops. New schemes of "reorganization" were time and again introduced in their regular factories. In the so-called union agreements they made every effort to leave the door open for all kinds of attacks upon the hard-worn positions of the workers.

These tactics had but one purpose in mind — to intensify competition amongst the workers. Attempts were made to increase the opression of the workers by strategic tricks so that inch by inch they themselves would be forced to yield the positions they had so bitterly fought for.

The union diplomats had seen and understood the maneuvers of the manufacturers but had never resisted them. They concluded agreements and supplementary agreements; they permitted the employers to interpret the agreements as they pleased. They allowed "impartial" agents of the bosses to act as chairmen and decide questions which often affected the very foundation of the union. They offered no opposition when false "reorganizations" were put thru in the regular factories, and workers thrown without cause into the ranks of the unemployed. They always trusted in the promises of the manufacturers to send their work only to union-controlled shops. They let the manufacturers continue their game of deception with their sub-manufacturing business. Jobbers gave their own material to scab contractors and pretend the material was sold. Then they take back ready-made clothes from the same scab contractors and say that these were bought.

Masses of workers have been driven to a state of complete hopelessness by these maneuvers of the manufacturers. The network of corporation and scab shops has widely spread. Every big manufacturer becomes also a jobber. Because of this, competition constantly increases not only in the contracting shops but even in the regular factories. Workers are compelled to give up some of their conditions in the regular factories so as not to be driven into the army of the unemployed. But owing to the strong pressure of the competition of workers in the outside shops, they are none the less forced to leave the regular factories in ever greater numbers. For this reason demoralization steadily grows. Unemployment increases with the result that the number of sweatshops is multiplied. Union control becomes constantly weaker. The organizations crumble and the great masses of workers struggle helplessly in a terrible maze.

Because conditions of labor are not fixed and determined, speculation among manufacturers and so-called jobbers continues to advance. In their greed for still greater profits they try to take advantage of the wretched state of the workers. They therefore invest more money in stock now than in former years. All kinds of clothes are being made in scab shops in what is usually a slack period, not when the season is at its height. Hence the seasons in these trades are not what they once were; which alone makes the condition of the workers more intolerable.

These jobbers and regular manufacturers speculate still further. They sell orders to so-called "buyers" without a fixed charge. They engage in cut-throat competition amongst themselves. One market competes with the other. Competition is carried on in the hope of getting the second batch of orders produced at a lower labor cost than the first. Gambling at the expense of working conditions knows no bounds. This naturally leads to what we stated above—one manufacturer makes enormous profits, while another is driven to bankruptcy. In such a manner a panic has been created. Some manufacturers may perhaps lose in it, but the sufferings of the workers are limitless. The cancers are far more terrible for them; and the unions, according to their present leadership, are entirely helpless to protect the workers.

What causes this helplessness? We shall deal with that in another article.

THE RED FLAG.

(To Whom It May Concern)

(The writer of these verses is over eighty years old. Her father suffered for his abolitionist activities; she remembers the days of Whittier, Greeley, Phillips and Garrison—a period which produced expressions that are applicable today. Ed. note.)

Verboten is our banner brave
(You thus our way would bar)
No more our gallant flag will fling
Its blood-red folds afar.

Well, be it so; no outward sign
We need to hold us true;
'Tis you must ever wave a flag
To keep your craven crew.

For always, when the spirit wanes
The symbol waxes great:
The soul that first inspired your flag
Has fled your traitor state.

"The flag," whose worship you compel,
Is now "a flaunting lie,"*
"And despots smile and good men frown
When e'er it passes by."

Good sirs: Your fears have played you false;
And hate has made you blind.
Your greed has choked the joy that comes
From service to mankind.

The Red Flag symbols only this:
"All nations of one blood,"
And still without a flag we'll work
For world-wide Brotherhood.

—CELIA BALDWIN.

OUR BOOK REVIEW SECTION

Samuel Adams, By Ralph Volney Harlowe: Henry Holt & Co., 1923.

I have had a desire to know more about Samuel Adams for over a year; that is, ever since an open letter appeared in the Outlook," advising the Communist Party of America to step out into the open and follow the shrewd example of Samuel Adams, "the chief incendiary of the American Revolution." Harlowe's volume has satisfied this desire.

The author is an Anglophile and Tory, out of sympathy with revolution past or present. Official history writing is rapidly passing into such hands. His bias, however, acts, if anything, as a dark background against which stand out more clearly the unvarnished tactics of the revolution. Harlowe's theses are up-to-the-minute. Adams was an incompetent tax collector who became a revolutionist to overcome an inferiority complex. The American Revolution was "materialistic," merely resolving itself into a fight by the colonists to continue their illicit commerce in molasses which they later distilled into rum for the slave trade. The revolution was not a spontaneous rising of the people, but simply the product of propaganda and agitation carried on by professional trouble-makers. Harlowe fails to prove these shallow propositions. But he unwittingly succeeds in showing that the American Revolution—in common with modern mass revolutions—required extensive preparation, organization and capable leadership to attain victory.

Samuel Adams was referred to by the Tories as "that disreputable leader of congregational and presbyterian republicans." He was the practical revolutionist, the organizer, the "manipulator," the agitator, the man who above all others prepared the ground for the outbreak of 1776. He made shrewd use of existing governmental machinery for his revolutionary purposes. He even turned his master's thesis at Harvard into a revolutionary instrument. It was he that formed and fostered the commitees of correspondence, the soviets, as it were, of the American Revolution. By tactful work he effected a united front of the thirteen colonies thru the medium of these committees. He directed the activity of the people step by step from the pasing of "resolves" to street demonstrations and armed action. He knew when to attack, but he also knew when to retreat, as shown by his evasion of an open conflict in the Gaspee affair. Adams thoroughly understood the need and method of preparation. In 1772 he already feared that the contest between the colonies and England "would end in rivers of blood." On a rumor of war between England and France in 1774, he began intensive preparations for a revolt, probably on the theory that "England's difficulty would be America's opportunity."

It is interesting to note that revolutionary tactics have not changed much in the last 150 years. Thus the American revolutionists put up demands for the annual election of legislators, the election of militia officers by the people, the boycott of disloyalist judges, extra-legal control committees to enforce the non-importation decrees. Tory merchants were denied freedom of assembly; disloyalists were disarmed by the committees of correspondence while the rebels were trained in the "art military." Power and victory were the essentials, and our revolutionary forefathers were prepared to use all means towards this end.

There is an interesting description of the rebellion of bankrupt farmers under Captain Shay in 1786. These farmers refused to pay taxes, burned the tax lists and dispersed the courts. Though put down, the revolt compelled the merchant government of Massachusetts to yield to the farmers a tax in kind, sale of public land and a temporary paper currency law.

Mr. Harlowe is very much put out by the identity in spirit between the American Revolution and the revolutionary movement of to-day. The Revolution, he declares, was inspired not so much thru hatred of England by the common people as by their hatred of the English creditor class. The spirit of 1776 was basically the levelling, the communistic spirit. What will the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution, Inc., say now?—W. K.

U. S. TO ARM MORGAN CUBAN REGIME

300,000 Ruhr Miners Strike To Save 8 Hour Day

Pullman Strike Ties Up Huge Car Contracts From Two Big Railroad Companies

Judge Clubs Strikers With Fines as Union Officials in Convention Hit at Militants

Foell Shows Same Bias As Sullivan

Judge Charles M. Foell has at last come out and shown his narrow-minded, puritanic, red-white-and-blue striped prejudice against workers and all those unfortunate enough to have been born under any but the American sun.

"The court has done all he felt it his duty to do and would be cowardly if he didn't do," announced Foell as the final word after sentencing the five men of the thirteen striking garment workers whose cases came before him yesterday afternoon.

Foell had just given four of the men: Morris Sudin, Sam Natesky, William Ellis and Fabian Tipschitz, fines of $25, Morris Scher he fined $50, characterizing this young man's behavior as "vicious disobedience."

Girls' Cases In Abeyance.

All of the thirteen strikers were found "technically guilty of violating the injunction," in spite of the fact that many of them had worked for shops not participating in the injunction. Judge Foell refused to excuse the workers on that account and issued a stay of sentence for the eight women involved.

All of these cases are held in obeyance and can be re-opened at the pleasure of the court. They are due for another hearing on May 21, when, if evidence is introduced showing that they have violated the injunction between now and then, all of the strikers may be given fines or jail sentences or both.

Foell is, stripe for stripe, of the same thing of "Dennie" Sullivan, except that he does not consider the offense of picketing such a severe crime as does Sullivan. At least his first sentences have not been as severe. But his prejudice is the same: that the strikers are guilty of violating the injunction, that the injunction is law and must be obeyed, that he will use his power to enforce it, and that the strikers are "the tools of some culprit who is responsible for their violations and is escaping punishment," as Foell put it yesterday.

The girls who came under Judge Foell's judgment yesterday, are Mary Gastina, Minnie Garshin, Mary Nathin, Ellen Weisen, Elizabeth Krusig, Mary Tschalkowski, Katherine O'Connor, and Ida Sulkoff. Over twenty other striking garment workers were

Try to Unseat Four New York Delegates

By REBECCA GRECHT.

BOSTON, Mass., May 7.—The battle for the rights of expelled members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union swept onto the convention floor here today with the report of the credentials committee, that reported it had been busy for two weeks preparing its recommendations.

The committee reported 95 local unions, joint boards and district councils represented by 297 approved delegates.

Makes Hypocritical Appeal.

It was this committee that laid down the attitude of the Sigman administration toward expelled members. It made serious charges against local unions and individual members, at the same time recounting the great international achievements of the Sigman administration, winding up with the usual heated, appeal to the loyalty of the union's membership.

The report urged the taking of disciplinary action against the so-called union disrupters, giving warning that "The International" would not tolerate their demoralizing actions. In true Gompers' style, it declared that the Sigman dictatorship would fight enemies both within and without.

N. Y. Delegates Refused Seats.

The recommendation to seat the 297 delegates, plus three from the general executive board, was accepted. There was objection to four delegates of local No. 1, of New York City, on the ground that their names had been illegally placed upon the ballot, after they had refused to sign a statement of withdrawal from the Trade Union Educational League submitted to them by the investigating committee of the General Executive Board. It was claimed that they had thus disqualified themselves as candiates for election.

The recommendation was made that four substitutes be seated in their places. An amendment was presented that action be deferred until the appeal of Local No. 1, from the decision of the General Executive Board could be taken up.

Steam Roller at Work.

President Sigman then got his steam roller into use, refusing to recognize the amendment, claiming that there was no relation between the appeal of the local and the challenge of the credentials of the local's delegates.

There was an immediate discussion started by the delegates to whom objections had been made.

In the meanwhile elaborate plans

TRADE UNIONISTS FROM HARDING'S TOWN ENDORSE OHIO CALL FOR STATE FARMER-LABOR CONVENTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, May 7.—Rallying to the standard of the class Farmer-Labor party a group of central labor bodies in Ohio's industrial centers have signed the following call for a state convention at Columbus, June 7, just ten days before the national Farmer-Labor convention. Enthusiasm for the class Farmer-Labor movement has received enormous impetus in this rail-and-steel state since the Teapot Dome revelations and the organizing work of the politically conscious members of the trade union movement here this year. One of the signers of the call is the central labor body of Marion, home of the late President Harding.

Since the call was signed the central labor body of the steel city of Massilon has endorsed it and similar endorsements are expected from Cleveland, and the other industrial centers.

To all Labor Unions, Central Labor Councils, Workers' Political Parties, Workers' Co-operative Associations, Fraternal Organizations and Farmers' Organizations in the State of Ohio.

Greetings:

Thruout the country the industrial workers and farmers are uniting their forces into State and Local Farmer-Labor Parties. The political domination of the employers, bankers and "open shoppers" is being challenged. Success has marked these first steps, in several instances, notably in the State of Minnesota, from which two United State Senators were elected on a Farmer-Labor Party ticket.

To link these Local and State parties together and unite the political organizations of farmers and indus-

Revolution Stares Cuba In the Face as Strike Sets Starvation Stalking In the Offing

HAVANA, Cuba May 7.—This city is in the throes of a young revolution following the calling of a strike by stevedores, a strike that has spread thru the city like a prairie fire and threatens to sweep the entire island.

Martial law has been declared and everywhere marines and soldiers are patrolling the narrow streets, the water front, railroad yards, water mains and other public utilities.

At the same time trouble is on foot aimed at the security of Alfredo Zayas, president of the republic and representative of American banking interests. Prominent political figures are back of it.

On every street corner are stationed mounted police to prevent gatherings. What few trolley cars are in operation are manned by members of the police department.

Few vehicles are in the thoroughfares of what is a heavily trafficed city under normal conditions. There are few automobiles for the pavements are littered with nails, broken bottles and in many sections, barricaded with trees, rocks and rubbish.

Following the stevedore walk-out street car men quit work. Twelve hours later, Havana "fotingos," taxi drivers, did likewise. Then came drivers of beer wagons and their ranks were strengthened by drivers of "Hielo" (ice) wagons. The bakers' union joined in the general strike and now famine stalks in the offing of this favorite winter oasis for thousands of parched Americans.

When the seriousness of the strike dawned upon what few American tourists were left in Havana, a general exodus fellowed. The Governor Cobb, operated between here and Florida was filled to capacity on two runs made this week, the only American boat to leave. Tourists were forced to walk from their hotels to the docks in the broiling sun. Many had to carry their own baggage. Inability to obtain vehicles for the transportation of trunks caused many to leave theirs behind.

In the harbor are scores of barges heavily laden with sugar for consignment to the states and other countries. Freighters are laying idle, decks piled high with merchandise for delivery here.

Stevedores are asking for a 20 per cent wage increase and a guarantee of $4 a day for day workers and $19.50 a week for laborers paid by the week.

The situation is described as the most serious that has hit Cuba since the Spanish-American war.

VICTORY IN CAR SHOP STRIKE SEEN AS BALTIMORE & OHIO AND CHICAGO & ALTON ORDER THEIR CONTRACTS SUSPENDED

Contract work for the Baltimore and Ohio and the Chicago and Alton Railroads, which have large contracts for the construction of passenger cars placed with the Pullman Company, must be suspended until after the strike of the Pullman carbuilders is over, representatives of these railroads informed the Pullman Company yesterday.

Inspectors for these railroads have been notified by their companies that they are not to allow further butchering of cars by amateur riveters such as has been going on since the start of the strike. These two railroads threaten to withdraw their contracts unless the strike is speedily settled.

Oriental Limited Tied Up.

The new Oriental Limited, crack thru train of the Great Northern Railroad, which is due to be delivered by the Pullman Company, is at present tied up in the shipping yards of the Pullman Company, and work on it has been suspended, John Helmgren, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, informed the DAILY WORKER.

Most of the rivets being driven on the contract jobs for these and other railroads, have been condemned by the railroad inspectors. So many have been burned out and re-driven that the Pullman Company has not been able to deliver a single passenger car to the railroads which passed the railroad inspectors. One car assembled for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, had hundreds of chalk marks over the rivets, meaning that these rivets were not "tight" and must be punched out.

New Strikers At Meeting

More men hired by the Pullman Company turned up at yesterday's strike meeting, and many of them have empowered David Benthal, the strikers attorney, to collect their transportation money for them. Theodore Rafson of Harvey, Illinois, told

Valentine Leaves Executive Council; Returns To Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—Joseph F. Valentine, who resigned recently as president of the Intl. Molders' union after 40 years in the A. F. of L., will make his home here.

M. J. Kehoe, former vice-president, succeeds to the presidency of the Intl. Molders' union with headquarters in Cincinnati. He will hold office under the union's constitution until the next convention in 1926.

Valentine's place on the executive council of the American Federation of Labor will be filled temporarily by the council itself. His successor will serve until the 44th annual convention of the A. F. of L. to be held in El Paso Nov. 17, 1924

Government Allows Indian Timber Sale

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 7.—Authority for the advertisement and sale by public bidding of ripe timber on two logging units of land on the Santa Clara Indian reservation, in New Mexico, was given at the Department of the Interior recently.

One of these units, the Mesa-Pine Springs, has an estimated stand of 1,100,000 feet of tribal timber, mostly yellow pine, while the other, known as the lower Santa Clara Canyon, has an estimated stand of 1,500,000 feet of tribal timber, principally yellow pine.

No bid of less than $3 per thousand feet board measure for yellow pine and Douglas fir, and 50 cents per thousand board measure for all other species will be considered for the timber on either of the tracts.

U. S. War Department Is Rushing Arms to Cuba to Aid Wall Street's Cause

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Secretary of War Weeks has approved two $100,000 shipments of arms and war material to Cuba, he announced today.

No airplanes will be sold. While the law provides for sale of munitions to Cuba, it gives no authority for disposal of planes.

Even if special permission were given for sale of airships Weeks said that there is no surplus stock from which withdrawals could be made without impairing the war department's efficiency.

RUHR COMMUNISTS ISSUE CALL FOR GENERAL STRIKE TO COUNTERACT LOCKOUT OF 300,000 COAL MINERS

BERLIN, May 7.—A critical situation exists thruout the Ruhr and Rhineland where already 300,000 miners are locked out as a result of a dispute over working hours.

Communist miners called a general strike for this forenoon, while the more conservative "Old Miners' League" voted against accepting recent arbitration awards.

Slim piles of coal testify to an impending shortage. The Ruhr miners refused to recognize the award of the arbitrators which justified an increase in working hours. The owners announced that only miners agreeing to work eight hours underground would be accepted. Declaration of a lockout followed.

GERMAN FASCISTI IN SURRENDER TO MORGAN TO WIN NEW CABINET

BERLIN, May 7.—Deputy Hergt, nationalist Fascist leader, who, within a fortnight, will be invited by President Ebert to attempt formation of the next German cabinet, today pledged his party's support to the Dawes-Young plan "with some reservations."

Herr Hergt, a former Prussian minister of the interior, who recently rose to leadership of the powerful nationalist group, declared his followers would make only such concessions as it was "physically possible to meet." Certain reservations, he added, were "unrenounceable."

The sum and substance of Herr Hergt's statement was that the nationalists will not sabotage the experts' report.

Such a declaration was a pre-requisite to obtaining necessary centrist (Catholic) and People's party consent to co-operate in a cabinet headed by Hergt.

If the nationalist leader fails to form a cabinet, the old coalition will be tried.

NORRIS SLAMS FERTILIZER DEAL OF CAL AND HANK

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Senator Norris, Nebraska, with his vituperative attack on President Coolidge "for playing politics" with Muscle Shoals, has aroused administration leaders to high resentment.

More and more the Ford offer for Muscle Shoals is becoming an intra-party as well as a bi-partisan issue with the Republicans, with waning chances that there will be final action on it this session.

In a session lasting far into the night, debate on the Shoals question grew very bitter. Norris led the attack on the Shoals question, declaring that Mr. Coolidge, Senators Harrison, Mississippi, Heflin, Alabama, and Henry Ford had become partners to get congressional sanction for Ford's enterprise.

Norris described the conference between Ford and the president, and pointed out that Ford became a fast friend and supporter of Mr. Coolidge thereafter. He also referred to the telegram sent to Ford's secretary by James Martin Miller, a contributor to the Dearborn Independent, in which Miller said Coolidge told him he was trying to "deliver" Muscle Shoals to Ford.

GERMAN ELECTION RESULTS CAUSE OF BANKER BLUES

Note Of Pessimism In Wall Street

NEW YORK, May 7.—Despite the professed satisfaction in banking circles over the German elections, there is an undercurrent of pessimism. The early return of J. P. Morgan to the United States is anxiously awaited.

Several results of the German elections disturb financiers who will be called upon to underwrite the $100,000,000 American loan to Germany if the Dawes plan goes thru. Of immediate importance is the question whether the Dawes plan is going thru—at least in its vital clauses, such as that calling for the return to private ownership of their railroads and their mortgaging to foreign capital.

Secondly, the financiers are disatisfied with the character of the coalition forces. It is felt that right wing Nationalists, asuming that they join the coalition, will be perpetually in controversy with Socialists and People's partyites. The Socialists themselves are a broken reed, reduced to half their former strength. There is no dominating party on which the international bankers can depend.

Alarmed at Communist Power.

Another factor contributing powerfully to the moodiness of the leading spirits of the banking world is the amazing Communist sentiment shown by the 4,000,000 votes which put 61 Communists into the Reichstag. It is argued that Germany is a dubious field for investment in view of the strength of the revolutionary party. Experience of the bankers with Russia shows that properties nationalized in a revolution return to absentee owners about as rapidly as molasses runs up hill.

GERMAN COMMUNIST VOTE IS NINE TIMES LARGER THAN BEFORE

BERLIN, May 7.—Growth of the Communist movement in Germany is not properly shown by a comparison of the 61 Communists elected to the coming Reichstag with the 18 seated in the last Reichstag. The Communist growth is better shown by a comparison of the votes cast at the two election. Last Sunday about 4,000,000 citizens voted under the red banner. At the previous election there were only 441,000 Communist votes. This means nine times as many Sunday, as at the previous test.

REPEATS CAL PROMISED TO DELIVER SITE

Miller Sticks by His Muscle Shoal Story

WASHINGTON, May 7.—James Martin Miller, former employee of the Dearborn Independent, who quoted President Coolidge as saying he was "trying to deliver Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford," today told the Senate agriculture committee that he had "correctly stated the President's words."

"I had a conference with the President on October 12, 1923, at 10:30 a. m. and 25 minutes later I sent the telegram to E. G. Liebold, Ford's secretary," Miller said.

"The president himself brought up the Muscle Shoals question at our conference," Miller said, "and he cannot deny it. The denial he issued, was a crass political dissimulation."

TEACHERS FIGHT IMPORTED SUPT'S BAN ON COUNCILS

Instructor's Union Is Up In Arms

Elementary school teachers of Chicago are holding a mass meeting this afternoon at 4:15 in the Studebaker Theater, 418 South Michigan avenue, to discuss the serious situation that has arisen over their differences with Superintendent William McAndrew. McAndrew has refused to issue an order to elementary school principals for the calling of the semi-annual School Teachers' Councils meeting due to be held this week.

McAndrew is fighting the Teachers' Councils, which have been in existence since 1898. He deliberately sabotaged the calling of the meetings this week because the matters of junior high schools and the introduction of the platoon system were to come up for discussion. These matters are to be before the Board of Education this week and naturally would be discussed in the Teachers' Councils.

Wants To Slip Platoon Over?

According to the Chicago Teachers Federation, McAndrew does not want the teachers to influence the Board of Education in regard to the junior high schools and possible acceptance of the platoon plan. McAndrew has been fighting the Teachers' Councils, especially during the last month, charging that he was not required to call them for school hours, altho the rules and by-laws of their organization specifically provide that the superintendent must call these Councils for sessions twice a year during school hours.

Miss Margaret Haley, business agent of the Teachers' Federation, brought the whole controversy to light in the mass meeting of teachers in the Auditorium Theater Tuesday night, when she made a bitter attack on Superintendent McAndrew. The whole matter will be further discussed tonight.

Charges have ben filed with the Board of Education calling for the resignation of Superintendent McAndrew for his failure to abide by the approved laws of the Chicago Elementary Teachers' Councils. Miss Haley preferred the charges April 30.

The whole correspondence between the Elementary Teachers' Councils representatives and Superintendent McAndrew has been printed at the request of the General Council of the teachers and they are now printing the special commission's report on the junior high schools which the school board has neglected to make public.

"Certain taxpayers" may have an injunction issued to support McAndrew in his stand against the teachers. The injunction will prevent McAndrew from issuing an order to close schools for the time required for Teachers' Councils to meetfl z ^zg TAOao Councils to meet.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 7.—Workers who wish to leave this state are having considerable difficulty in getting officials to sign their papers. County and municipal authorities must give every worker who wishes to go to another state a signed statement that "this labor can be spared," according to the ruling of Commissioner of Labor Stanley. The statute requiring official consent for workers to leave the state places the workers in the position of serfs bound to the land.

Work or Jail Choice.

LAKE CHARLES, La., May 7.—Men picked up and charged with vagrancy here are given the alternative of a jail sentence or picking strawberries for local truckers. The workers don't find much choice, for their wages are almost obscure when they work in the strawberry fields, and conditions are terrible. In jail they don't have to work and come out with about as much in their pockets as if they had worked for the truckers.

JUDGE FOELL FINES STRIKERS AS I. L. G. U. CONVENTION IS MEETING IN BOSTON TOWN

forced to remain in court waiting for their cases to come up only to have them postponed again until this morning. None of these cases have had more than the first hearing yet, while the thirteen other cases had all been heard several weeks ago.

Following the lead given him by the bosses' lawyer, Hyde, Judge Foell directly charged the strikers with lying. He said that he would not sentence them for perjury, as Hyde attempted to influence him to do, but he remarked:

Court Says Strikers Lie.

"They lie, but they are put up to it."

Attorney Sissman objected to the court's remarks, but to no effect. Foell's mind is like a piece of cast-iron, once molded never changed.

Judge Foell also wrongly assumed that all of the strikers before him were not Americans but immigrants to this "hospitable" shore who are nonetheless bound by the law, whether they understand it or not. Foell took an active role in cross-examining Attorney Sissman, representing the strikers, and would not allow Sissman to proceed with his summary of the case.

On the other hand when prosecutor Hyde began his summary, Sissman had not yet arrived. But the court said "Proceed" and Hyde did proceed to make the most of his opportunity and attempted to show that the garment strikers not only violated the injunction but committed perjury, thus showing "not only contempt of court but contempt of the whole court system." He deliberately misconstrued the slight and easily accounted for discrepancies between the answers filed by the respondents and their testimony on stand.

In replying to Hyde, attorney Sissman showed that the testimony of witnesses for the bosses was quite susceptible to doubt but that he would not prefer perjury charges against Patrick Moran and Collins, who had been the chief witnesses for the prosecution.

Moran got very red-faced and nervous, flushed down his neck and finally went up to whisper something to Hyde. Sissman said that he couldn't possibly remember serving all thirteen of these strikers with writs on the same day he had admitted serving nearly two hundred writs in all and that there were hundreds of people passing constantly on Market street where he is supposed to have served them.

Foell pointed his finger at Sissman in a weak gesture and attempted to confuse the defense attorney.

"Never before in my history on the bench," he said, "has a court order been dragged in the dirt and an effort made to stampede the court by people not even American citizens. . . . An injunction was issued. It is the law. It must be obeyed. They might as well make up their minds now," he concluded in a tight-mouthed, Cal Coolidge fashion.

Foell Brother to Cal.

Foell bears a surprising resemblance to Coolidge, "careful Cal"; a rat-like appearance. And he sits under the crossed American flags and thinks himself a little Coolidge in his own domain of the court, when he pronounces:

"They can't think the court impotent to enforce its own orders," and lays on the sentences.

Whether Judge Foell will continue to follow Judge Sullivan's precedent and increase the severity of his sentences as the cases pile up on him and begin to bore him too greatly remains to be seen. He already has shown himself to be the tool of the bosses and willing to give them every advantage the court can. The law is his god, tho the bosses made it, and by it he lives.

Fitzpatrick Stumps for Strikers.

Anton Johannsen reports that the special committee of the Committee of Fifteen are continuing their canvass of the local unions in an effort to get more funds for the striking dressmakers.

When John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Fed. of Labor, got on the job one night he succeeded in getting generous donations for the garment workers. The Ironworkers, Local No. 1, voted a 25 cent assessment on all their 1,600 members and the Hoisting Engineers voted an hour's pay, $1.25, from each of their 700 members.

The Jewish Painters local No. 521 assessed their membership for the garment workers. The report is that the assessment is $2 per member, but this is not confirmed yet. The Elevator Constructors voted an hour's pay apiece for their 800 members.

are being made for the reception and entertainment to be given Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, always a welcome guest of the administration forces of "The International," since Benjamin Schlesinger came asking favors of the Gompers' labor bureaucracy. Gompers has accepted an invitation to attend the convention. There is the usual flood of resolutions being introduced.

Five Capitalist Solons In The Dock Charged With Grafting In Booze

COVINGTON, Ky., May 7.—Taking of evidence was started today in the Federal Court trial of Congressman John W. Langley and four others, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government thru illegal removal of whisky from federal warehouses. A dozen or more prosecution witnesses were on hand ready to testify.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 7.—The northern and southern branches of the Methodist Church, divided since the Civil War, were united by an overwhelming majority, today.

FREE STATE TO HAVE MINISTER AT WASHINGTON

Increases Prestige Of Irish Government

LONDON, May 7.—The British government has consented to appointment of Professor Timothy Smiddy, as first minister of the Irish Free State to the United States, the Evening News reported today.

Smiddy, former faculty member of Cork University, now is in Washington, according to the newspaper. Formal announcement of his appointment awaits word from the State Department that he is persona grata to the United States government.

This action on the part of the British government is calculated to strengthen the position of the Free State government, which holds that acceptance of the 1921 treaty was a stepping stone to political separation from Great Britain. It is expected that it will correspondingly weaken the bourgeois republicans and compel the more radical followers of De Valera to line up with the Irish Labor Party, which has a Workers' Republic as its goal. While the Labor Party under the leadership of Thomas Johnson is very conservative in action, there is a strong tendency to rebel against his leadership.

Attorney General Fires $ A Year Millionaire Finks From D. of J.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Attorney General Stone has dismissed all "dollar-a-year" special agents of the Department of Justice, William J. Burns, chief of the bureau of investigation, told the Senate Daugherty investigating committee today.

Burns gave no reason for Stone's action. He previously testified that only twelve such men were on the department's rolls, among them Edward B. McLean, millionaire Washington publisher, and Fred W. Upham, treasurer of the Republican national committee.

Burns told the committee that Gaston B. Means, former department agent and "star witness" of the committee, had been constantly followed recently by a department agent named Bonner.

Texas for McAdoo.

DALLAS, Tex., May 7.—Control of Texas Democratic convention at Waco May 27 will be in the hands of the forces of William G. McAdoo, it was definitely determined today on the strength of results from Tuesday's county conventions. Two-thirds of the delegates to the state convention will be instructed for McAdoo, almost complete returns from the county meets showed.

Californians Are Not Alarmed Over Anthrax, Only Dangerous to Man

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—Officials expressed no alarm over discovery of anthrax-infected herds on three ranches in Lassen county. The disease, altho dangerous to communicate to humans, is more easily controlled than the hoof and mouth disease, and is not as liable to heavy losses among cattle.

California authorities are notorious for their disregard for human life, except of course the lives of the wealthy. Superstitious people claim that the deadly disease among the cattle is divine retribution for the executions and imprisonments of workers in this state for trifling offenses. It is not likely, however, that the ruling class of California would even listen to the voice of their favorite Jehovah, even tho his views on their anti-labor activities were manifested ever so clearly.

Representation by Industry.

PORTLAND, Ore.—W. S. U'Ren, known as the father of Oregon's system of direct legislation, is sponsor for a vocational representation plan for electing the Oregon Legislature. Signatures are being procured to place the bill on the ballot as an initiative. Housekeepers, clerks, bankers, bakers and candlestick makers and all other crafts would have direct representation instead of the present geographical plan.

MOSCOW, May.—The Russian Chemical Society received a present from the British Chemical Society in the form of three boxes of scientific books.

MOONEY'S JAILER TURNED DOWN IN CALIFORNIA VOTE

Johnson Hated More Than Teapot Cal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 7.—President Calvin Coolidge led Senator Hiram W. Johnson by over 20,000 votes in the count of ballots of yesterday's California primaries with the count about 80 per cent complete.

Returns from 4,758 precincts out of approximately 5,500 in the state gave:

Coolidge 219,933.
Johnson 196,139.
Coolidge's majority 23,794.

It was predicted that Coolidge would carry the state by nearly 30,000.

In the democratic column, William G. McAdoo of Pasadena, Calif., was the overwhelming favorit.

The count early today stood:

McAdoo, 73,599; unpledged, 14,328; McAdoo's majority, 59,271.

Johnson Beaten in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 7.—President Coolidge made a run-away race from Senator Hiram Johnson in the Indiana primaries yesterday, it was indicated today in returns from nearly half of the precincts. Coolidge is leading by about seven to one.

The Ku Klux Klan chalked up a victory thru the nomination of Ed. Jackson, Secretary of State, as the republican candidate for governor. Jackson is holding a good majority over the other five republican candidates. Mayor Shank of Indianapolis, anti-klan candidate, was running a poor second.

MASS PROTEST AGAINST JOHNSON BILL TOMORROW

Blacklist Law Arouses Chicago Workers

A monster mass protest demonstration will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. in Douglas park auditorium, Ogden and S. Kedzie avenues, to denounce the Johnson bill and other measures now in congress which would work against the foreign-born workers. The meeting is sponsored by the Chicago Council For the Protection of Foreign Born Workers.

Speakers have been invited from the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Socialist Party, and the Workers Party. Max Bedacht will represent the latter and will explain how the proposed bills would grow into a super black-list for the employers.

Gompers Was Foolish.

Samuel Gompers and the American Federation of Labor have made the mistake of endorsing the Johnson bill although it will work against the majority of the trade union membership.

Most of the other bills before congress are equally bad or worse than the Johnson bill. All of them are prompted by the same insane "Americanism" which froths about "America for Americans" when many of these same 100 percenters are immigrants themselves or descended from immigrants. (Some have "descended" a long, long way, altho their parents may have been foreign-born).

Davis An Immigrant.

Secretary of Labor Davis, who is supporting the bills discriminating against the foreign-born could himself be barred from the United States if he attempted to enter under the regime the bills would establish. Gompers and many of his misguided followers would likewise find themselves singing a different tune if they were trying to get into the country under the proposed legislation.

The doors of the hall will be open at 7:30 p. m. so that the first to come will get the benefit. Admission is free.

Commerce President Whines About Tax Bill; Slaps Radicals

CLEVELAND, O., May 7.—Congress was scathingly denounced for the passage of the Simmons income tax provisions of the revenue bill by President Julius H. Barnes, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, in his annual address at the chamber convention here today. Barnes revised his speech at the last moment so as to include caustic comment on the Senate's action yesterday.

Barnes declared there has been a slowing up of business and industry, due to a lack of confidence in Congress and set out a clear threat of widespread unemployment unless Congress should reconsider its course.

"The action of the senate is discouraging but not final," Barnes said.

"We may not expect the radical group to be sobered by the responsibility of this action, but men who bear the label of republicanism and then join the radical group, must bear their full responsibility."

VICTORY IN PULLMAN STRIKE SEEN AS TWO BIG RAILWAYS ORDER CONTRACTS SUSPENDED

the strikers that men are being hired by the Pullman Company in Harvey, and report to work at an employment bureau at 139 North Clark Street. The men are taken in trucks from this place and slipped into the gates at Pullman early in the morning or late at night. Some of these scabs are being boarded at Harvey, and are being given police protection.

Saw Strike In Daily Worker

Rafson declared he learned of the strike by reading about it in the DAILY WORKER. The strikers are going to spread word in Harvey, by selling DAILY WORKER, that there is a strike on at Pullman. S. W. Hill, W. Wright, E. Philabaum, H. B. Carter, Sam Hart, Elmer Mizlo and Steve Tuber, riveter from Bettendorf, Iowa, signed affidavits that they were hired by Jansen, of the Pullman Company, on condition that there was no labor trouble at Pullman. Raymond Brockhill, of Cape Firardian, Mo., also instructed Bentall to collect their money from the Pullman Company.

John Holmgren, at the strike meeting, pointed out to the strikers that they were fighting not only for themselves, but for the entire 110th Street shop. Altho many of the welders, cabinet men, vestibule men, and other men from departments were notified of a drastic wage reduction at the same time as the riveting department, after the strike of April 14th, the Company did not dare to attempt the enforcement of this cut on the other men.

Miners Are Watching

Barney Mass, who has just returned from a tour of the southern Illinois mine fields, declared that the miners, thru the DAILY WORKER, are watching the progress of the Pullman strike closely. "You are not only fighting against a wage reduction," Mass told the men, "You are fighting to take your place side by side with the miners and other organized union men who aim to wipe out the entire damnable system which makes you live like slaves."

Mass told how in St. Louis the painters in their struggle for union conditions, would rather win recognition of the union, than a mere wage increase. The bosses on the other hand, would rather lose money than see a strong union organized.

"I appeal to you men," Mass concluded, "In the name of the miners of this country, and in the name of all workers who are against the piece work system and against the domination of the bosses, to join the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen. You must not stop working for yourself until the Pullman Company recognizes your union."

Fight To The Last Ditch

Mass declared that "The miners of this country established their splendid organization with their sweat and blood and lives. The miners worship their organization. They will sacrifice everything to keep it alive and powerful, because they know that only thru organization can the workers rule themselves. These miners expect you to be as class conscious as they are, and to fight to the last ditch to unionize the Pullman Company."

Sam Hammersmark of the DAILY WORKER told the strikers that the army of the workers should "go over the top with one hundred per cent organization into the union. He urged the strikers to picket like an organized army, and to enforce army discipline in their fight on the Pullman Company.

Lithuanian Speaker

Justinos Battuses, of the Vilnis, the Workers' Party Lithuanian Paper, was introduced by one of the strikers, who told the strikers, in the Lithuanian language about the good write-ups which the Workers' party foreign papers are giving to the Pullman strike.

An exciting moment was caused at the meeting when the strikers heard someone roaming around back of the stage of Stancik's Hall. The men all made a rush for the stage, thinking they had unearthed a company spy, but he proved to be a striking heater boy and no damage was done.

Pullman Paper Lied

The Calumet Index, the local weekly paper, continues to side with the Pullman Company in their stories of the strike. The Index says the men "Average $12 to 14 dollars per day." The truth of the matter is that the men have a hard time averaging seven dollars per day.

Several of the men were injured yesterday when inexperienced riveters lost control of their riveting guns. The ambulance is being kept busy at the Pullman plant.

The jury trials of Nick Spynow, who was arrested and shot at a week ago by a drunken cop for selling the DAILY WORKER, and the case of Sam Green, arrested after he had sold out his papers, come up in the Municipal Court this morning. David Bentall, is defending the DAILY WORKER men. They are to appear at branch 38 of the municipal court, 8855 Exchange Avenue at 10 o'clock today.

Strike Picket Arrested.

Nick Leschner, of 113th street and Forest avenue, was the first strike picket arrested. He was taken into custody late yesterday while doing picket duty at 110th Place.

Leschner and other strike pickets had taken refuge in the automobile of a sympathizer during the pouring rain, when a police officer came along and threatened them with arrest for parking their car along the curb.

The men protested that there was no law against parking cars in that neighborhood, that many cars were left standing at the curb all day. When Leschner stated he would take the officer's number, he got the answer that he would be taken instead, and he was rushed off downtown.

Efforts were being made at a late hour to bail Leschner out. It is thought that his case will come up this morning in the South Chicago Court, at 98th street and Exchange Place, along with the cases of the two agents of the DAILY WORKER, arrested some time ago for selling their papers. Neither is there any law that can be turned against them, but they were arrested just the same.

HOOVER PRAISES BIG BUSINESS AT COMMERCE MEET

CLEVELAND, May 7.—Let business regulate itself! This was the idea running thru the speech which Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover made tonight before the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The business world, said Hoover, to the applause of his millionaire audience, is not an economic "dog eat dog." Taking a rap at "our home-made Bolshevist-minded critics," he declared that "our high general levels of comfort are dependent upon the maintenance and development of leadership in the world of industry and commerce." He said he believed the majority of these leaders were inspired by ethical ideals.

The three-year coal agreement was a shining example of self-regulation of an industry, asserted the commerce secretary. He admitted that it would result in some preliminary hardships, referring to the "stabilization" of the industry thru the closing down of numerous mines, with strikes forbidden.

Codfish State Provides Another Thorn For Republican Crown

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Frank Vanderlip anonunces that he has employed as his counsel in the research bureau he has established here, former Attorney General Allen of Massachusetts. Allen is reputed to be as unpopular with the Lodge-Weeks political and financial groups in New England as Francis J. Heney is with the Chicago meat packers. It will be his job to uncover evidence against Mellon and all other members of the cabinet if necessary, so long as they resist the inquiries of Congress.

Dawes Pipes Up For Bosses' Own Rail Labor Board

William R. Dawes, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, came to the defense of the Rail Labor Board in a letter to the Illionis members of the house and senate. He declares that the board thru its machinery has prevented many strikes on the railroads which would prove demoralizing to industry. The present board, in Dawes' opinion, is quite satisfactory to the capitalists who only obey its decisions when it cuits them but whenever the board, whether by accident or design, rules in favor of the railroad workers the bosses ignore the ruling and claim its decision is not binding.

When the workers rebel against a decision of the Rail Labor Board, Daugherty or whatever capitalist mannikin is at the head of the Department of Justice, throws the workers into jail. What is sauce for the capitalistic gander is prison mush for the worker goose.

WORLD CONGRESS OF R. I. L. U. TO MEET JUNE 25TH

Many Problems to Come Before Big Gathering

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, May 7.—The executive bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions has decided to convoke the Third World Congress of Red International of Labor Unions here, June 25, immediately following the Fifth World Congress of the Communist International. The following provisional agenda has been drawn up:

1. Report of the Red International Unions.
2. Next Tasks of the Revolutionary Trade Union Movement.
3. International Struggle for the Eight Hour Working Day.
4. Trade Unions and Factory Councils.
5. Attitude of the Revolutionary Trade Unions Towards the Professional Internationals.
6. Strategy of Strikes.
7. Organizatory Structure (Forms of Organization of the Opposition, Mutual Relations between Independent Unions and Opposition Minorities, One Big Union, etc.).
8. Tasks of the Adherents of the RILU. in England.
9. Tasks of the RILU. in the Colonial and semi-Colonial Countries. (British West India, Egypt, Algeria, Dutch Indies China, Indochina, Corea, etc.).
10. Peasants International and Unions of Agricultural Laborers.
11. Trade Unionism and Cooperation.
12. Elections.

All affiliated organizations and the evolutionary minorities, in view of the importance of the questions placed on the agenda of the World Congress, are requested to deal with them as quickly and thoroughly as possible and to submit their proposals not later than the 1st of June. They are also requested to submit to the Executive Bureau their reports on the situation of the Trade Union Movement in their countries, and their reports on their activity for the period since the II. World Congress.

Having regard to the length of the agenda and the importance of the questions, it is desirable that all the problems in dispute within the International Revolutionary Trade Unions Movement be gone into thoroughly at the present time, so that by the time the Congress meets, the entire international experience may be brought together.

The conditions of representation are in accordance with the statutes confirmed at the II. World Congress of the RILU.

With revolutionary Trade Union greetings:

(Signed) A. Lozovsky
General Secretary.

KU KLUX KLAN ARE LINING UP BEHIND M'ADOO

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 7.—The Ku Klux Klan issue came to the front in the democratic state convention held here today to choose delegates to the national convention. One faction sought to have the delegation pledged to William G. McAdoo's candidacy for the presidential nomination, while the other demanded an uninstructed delegation.

For Klan Support.

As the convention got under way, the main fight revolved around selection of national committeeman. Ed Seamans, a McAdoo supporter, and Scott Ferris, former congressman, who favors an uninstructed delegation, were the chief candidates. Seamans came out in support of Henry Johnson Perry, for temporary chairman of the convention, a move which Ferris supporters declared was designed to obtain Klan backing for McAdoo.

Mac Will Get Texas.

DALLAS, Tex., May 6.—Early returns from state-wide county conventions in Texas indicated that the forces of Wm. G. McAdoo will control the state democratic convention at Waco, May 27.

COURT FREES MEN CONVICTED BY THIRD DEGREE "CONFESSIONS" FOR DEATH OF RAILROAD FINK

MADISON, Wis., May 7.—Confessions obtained by third degree methods when introduced by prosecuting attorneys as evidence are sufficient grounds for reversing a jury decision convicting the confessor, according to a ruling by the supreme court of Wisconsin.

The court reversed a decision sentencing Arville and Oliver Jones to 15 and 18 years respectively in prison for killing a railroad detective and in relation to their alleged confession said:

"When a defendant is in custody of the law he should be dealt with according to law. There is no sanction of law in this state and there will be none so long as the courts endure that tolerates the methods of the inquisition or the prize ring. Our criminal procedure is complete enough to protect society without resort to inhuman or barbaric methods."

MEXICAN WHO EXPOSED DOHENY NOW IN ATLANTA

Oil Thief Gave Rebels Double Cross

By CORA P. WILSON.

SAN JOSE, Cal., May 7.—The following is a copy of a letter sent to the following senators: LaFollette, Wheeler, Walsh, Ladd and Borah, in connection with the imprisonment of Nicholas Senn Zogg, a Mexican, who is now five years in Atlanta Federal Prison:

"Dear sir: A few facts gleaned from correspondence with Nicholas Senn Zogg, now a prisoner at the Atlanta Federal prison may be of interest to you as you are one of the few Congressmen whom the common people can trust to clean up the great American cesspool—Congress. In 1917, Ed Doheny the oil magnate, entered into an agreement with Villa and Zogg in their program to secure the land and the government of Mexico for the peons.

"The oil magnate double-crossed the Mexicans which so enraged Zogg that he notified the United States government of the deal. Doheny had purchased thousands of rifles in order to carry out the program and when he found out that the Mexicans had revealed the plans, he hurriedly made a present of several hundred rifles to the Occidental College of Pasadena and told the U. S. government officials that he intended the balance as a gift to the California National Guard.

"As these rifles were of the make of 1907, you can imagine just how true his story is. Anyone knows that army equipment must be up-to-date. Later on, Doheny placed the guns on board a vessel bound for a Lower California port but Villa and Zogg engaged the boat in combat and sunk it with all on board. Then Doheny started out to get Zogg with the result that he was instrumental in having him arrested under the Spinach Act and due to the employment of a pimp and a prostitute regularly employed by the officials for that purpose, he was convicted and has now languished in prison for 6 years where he has contracted tuberculosis. He is not guilty of any crime. What has become of our boasted American justice? Why is Morse, the rich banker pardoned and men like Zogg still retained in prison?

Ranks Of Union Labor Growing Steadily In Japan

YOKOHAMA, Japan, May 7.—From one end of Japan to the other public meetings are being held and resolutions passed demanding the immediate granting of universal manhood suffrage, to be followed by a general election. In Tokio alone meetings are held almost daily, often attended by as many as 20,000 people.

At these meetings attacks are made against the aristocracy and the present autocratic rulers of Japan. Particular emphasis is laid on the manner in which the press is forced to suppress facts and to distort news.

The ranks of organized labor are being steadily swelled. The Labor government in Great Britain is hailed with delight by the masses.

LOYAL WORKER DIES IN PHOENIX; BROKEN FIGHTING CAPITALISM

PHOENIX, Ariz., May 7.—John Crawford, one of the most active workers for Communism, died here recently, reports William O'Brien, his friend. Crawford had been ill for fifteen months, having suffered a mental breakdown. He was only 34 years old when he died.

Crawford had always been one one of the best workers for the Friends of Soviet Russia in Phoenix and was well liked by all who ever met him. His breakdown was partly due to overwork in the movement, to which he devoted most of his time.

He was a native of England and had been a victim of the class war in California, where he was sent up at about the same time Ford and Suhr were, in 1914. Since his incarceration, his health had been bad.

Many workers all over the country will grieve when they learn of the death of John Crawford, one who gave himself in the cause of all.

STEEL BARONS STEAL MILLION; KILL WORKERS

BENWOOD, W. Va., May 7.— A triple funeral was held here Friday for miners burned in the explosion Monday morning. A great procession of friends of the dead workers came from all over the country to attend the last rites. It was a pitiful and sorrowful gathering, many of the participants still awaiting the finding of the bodies of their own relatives lost in the mine disaster.

Meanwhile President I. M. Scott remains unapprehended in his palatial million-dollar home in the Woodsdale section of Wheeling.

Million Profit in 3 Months.

The Wheeling Steel Corporation has just declared its quarterly dividend and announced a net profit of $941,901.59 for the first three months of this year. Nearly a million dollars net profit, after all possible deductions are made! And the net surplus of the company on March 31, 1924, was $7,836,249.61!

The stealing steel magnates get away with the swag and go free after murdering over 100 miners!

Fire Boss a Dick.

A detective named J. J. Doyle was employed as fire boss by the Wheeling Steel Corporation to spy on the union organizers and radicals who came to the Benwood men. This man was trying to get in with the radicals among the miners so that he could expose them. He had orders to make a house to house canvass of the miners' homes, posing as a radical himself. This he did.

On Sunday, April 27th, all the bosses were unroaroously drunk and had to be carried home. The fire boss slept until 6:30 in the morning and then marked the mine "safe" without ever examining it.

The men entered the mine in sections and some of these probably never left the car they went down in. The 36 bodies were found all together.

DAILY WORKER READERS RALLY IN SUPPORT OF JACOB DOLLA

In addition to the sums of money collected by readers of the DAILY WORKER for the relief of Jacob Dolla, who is lanquishing in a Pennsylvania penitentiary as a result of his activity in the great Steel Strike, a considerable additional amount of money has been collected.

Readers of the DAILY WORKER seem to appreciate that the support of Jacob Dolla in his case in Pennsylvania and the relief of his family who are suffering hardships is a major activity for working class militants.

The DAILY WORKER publishes a list of the recent donations for the Jacob Dolla fund and urges its other readers to donate and collect money for the same cause.

SEE U. S. RULE IN VENEZUELA AGAINST UNIONS

Labor Fights Aid To Dictator Gomez

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 7.—At last the revolution which has been due in Venezuela since the Castro dictatorship was supplanted by the Gomez dictatorship, is reported to have started.

A party of Venezuelan liberals has been in Washington during the past week, consulting other Latin-American liberals with regard to getting the truth concerning Venezuelan affairs to the American people.

The revolutionary forces feel that Secretary Hughes is about to apply the same crushing rule to the Venezuelans as to the Cubans—that the power of the United States will be thrown behind an oppressive government.

Juan Vicente Gomez was vice-president under Castro, and sixteen years ago became president. His brother was made vice-president. Some three years ago this brother was found murdered, and it was believed that the dictator's son, in order to get the vice-presidency at the hands of his own father, had causen his uncle to be assassinated. In any event the dictator's son is now vice-president. The Venezuelan minister to the United States, Senor Domenicci, resigned when the son ascended the vice-presidential "throne," saying that he could not identify himself with dynastic politics.

Recently the Mexican government has had trouble with Gomez, and two American citizens, residents of Porto Rico, have been expelled from Venezuela on the alleged accusation of Gomez' secret police that they were fomenting revolt. As a matter of fact they were trying to go into the drug business in Gomez' doman, and that line of business is monopolized by the dictator and his favorites.

Trade union organization is forbidden in Venezuela, under the most serious penalties. The Pan-American Federation of Labor is expected to issue a statement before Secretary Hughes commits the United States to support Gomez against the revolutionaries.

Bryan Wants Cuba To Hold Pine Isle For Sugar Trust

WASHINGTON, May 7. — When Cuba negotiated a treaty with her master, the United States, 20 years ago, giving to the United States two naval bases, she signed another treaty which acknowledged Cuban title to the Isle of Pines, 60 miles off the south coast of the main island. This Isle of Pines treaty has never been ratified, and now an effort is being made by Wm. Bryan and a committee of women who own sugar and fruit lands in the isle to have it disposed of. Bryan, who is said to be inspired by Florida truck-gardening and winter-resorting interests, wants the treaty approved. The women want it defeated, so the United States may assert ownership.

It appears that thousands of Americans bought land in the isle, long ago, under the assurance from politicians in Washington that the isle would remain a possession of the United States, since its disposition was reserved for separate action in the terms of the treaty of Paris in 1898. But Cuban political control was established in 1904, and has continued. These investors have paid taxes to Cuba, have paid export duties to Cuba and import duties to the United States when shipping their product here, and have survived. If they can become a part of the United States, however, they will make a great deal more from their crops, and will develop a winter resort which will rival Miami.

Old Elihu Root, who negotiated the treaty, is joining with Bryan in the present pro-treaty agitation. He is trying to help the sugar trust, which wants to please Cuban politicians in this matter, and which will receive handsome returns from said Cuban politicans. The sugar trust never boasts of its ownership of the Cuban government, because the more modest course pays better dividends. Root thinks the Latin Americans will be hurt if the isle is not definitely ceded to Cuba, Bryan agrees.

No action is likely at this session.

Students' Strike Going Strong On Milliken Campus

DECATUR, Ill., May 7.—More than four-fifths of the 525 enrolled students at James Millikin university are still on strike for academic freedom. An average of not more than five students attended each class. The strike started against the board of managers' refusal to re-employ W. G. Casey, professor of political science and Watson Selvage, professor of education, who had been dismissed.

Nine members of the faculty have signed a resolution endorsing the stand of Dean Wald who resigned in protest against the dismissals.

War Profiteers Incite Attacks On Peace, Say Women

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 7.—War prof- States and abroad are believed by pro- States and abroad are believed by promoters of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, in fourth general conference here, to be inciting the kept press of the country to traduce and ridicule the purpose and program of the women's world-peace organization.

Persecution and terror have been added by the corporation press and reactionary forces, including the notorious American Defense Society. In Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis the women's organizations that undertook to sponsor meetings to be addressed by the more distinguished foreign delegates, have wholly or in part wthdrawn their sanction. Individual women are arranging for these meetings.

Active in the hostile agitation in each city have been found reserve officers of the army. The wife of the head of the chemical warfare section of the army is active in the suppression movement here.

CALL NOW OUT FOR F.-L. MEET IN OHIO STATE

trial workers for the 1924 Presidential campaign, a National Farmer-Labor Convention has been called at St. Paul, Minnesota for June 17th, 1924.

This call has been issued by the Committee of Arrangements in the name of the following organizations, Washington Farmer-Labor Party, South Dakota Farmer-Labor Party, Montana Farmer-Labor Party, Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, Federated Farmer-Labor Party, Nebraska Farmer-Labor Party, and the Buffalo Farmer-Labor Party. Invitations to participate are based on endorsement of the following tentative program.

A. Public Ownership.
B. Government Banking.
C. Public Control of All Natural Resources.
D. Restoration of Civil Liberties Guaranteed by the Constitution.
E. Abolition of the use of Injunctions in Labor Disputes.

The forces of farmers and industrial workers of the State of Ohio must be united to be represented effectively at the June 17th convention. This is the only hope for success in the November elections.

In this State in many parts of which the farmers and industrial workers have shown their ability in the not distant past to defeat the political domination of employers, bankers, and "open shoppers," the unification of all workers and farmers' organizations on the basis of independent political action will assuredly result in much greater strides forward for the workers and farmers of this state than ever before.

Columbus Convention May 7th.

For this purpose the undersigned Provisional Arrangements Committee hereby issues the Call for a State Farmer-Labor Convention to be held at Columbus Federation Hall, 50½ W. Gay St., Columbus, Ohio, June 7th and 8th, 1924, to begin June 7th, 10 a. m.

Invited to send delegates to this convention are: All existing working class groups, political or industrial, central labor bodies, local unions, co-operatives, workers fraternal and farmers' organizations and others who endorse the principles as set forth. Also any group of ten farmers not otherwise represented thru an organization signing a statement endorsing the principles as set forth may send a delegate.

The purpose of this convention will be to create an organization in the State of Ohio which will be represented at the June 17th convention at St. Paul, Minnesota, to adopt a State platform, and to nominate a full ticket for the state election in November, 1924.

The convention will entail some financial expenditures. But it will be money well spent, and each organization sending delegates to these conventions are urged to contribute financially as liberally as possible to help defray the expenses.

United Action of the Ohio farmers and industrial workers is the need of the hour. We have already received word from many unions and other organizations from every part of the State that they have passed resolutions and motions in favor of a State Farmer-Labor Convention. This assures a highly successful gathering and the unification of the farmers and industrial workers of this State in this great move forward.

RUSSIAN CO-OPS WIN FUNDS FROM NAT'L CITY BANK

Centrosoyus Now Same As Pre-revolutionary

By LUDWELL DENNY
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

NEW YORK, May 7.—Almost two million dollars have been paid to the All-Russian Central Union of Consumers' Societies (Centrosoyus) by the National City bank, New York, as the result of the decision of Federal Judge Augustus N. Hand in the case brought against the bank by the United States government for the release of Centrosoyus deposits. The government receives $968,256.08, which had been assigned to it as collateral security for war supplies, such as textiles, food stuffs and machinery, purchased by Centrosoyus before the Russian revolution.

Centrosoyus claimed title to its National City bank deposits early in 1919. The bank, while not claiming the money for itself, questioned whether the present Controsoyus in view of the intervening revolution was legally the same organization which deposited the funds. The question of ownership and authority turned on the continuity of the legal existence of Centrosoyus as an independent corporation from the time of its incorporation under the czar in 1898 to the present time.

A committee consisting of Charles A. Marshall, Centrosoyus attorney, Major James A. Willis in behalf of the U. S. war department and department of justice, and Col. V. R. Ruehl for the N. Y. supreme court, was sent to Russia and other coutries to gather data. The documents recently brought back by the committee convinced the court of the identity and legal continuity of the organization.

Besides the payment to the government the court required the bank to pay Centrosoyus $1,946,774.50, and allowed the bank to retain $250,374.94 for an advance made by it to Centrosoyus.

WOMEN CONDEMN VIOLENCE AMID WAR RUMBLINGS

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 7.—"We condemn all violence in civil and class wars," says the manifesto adopted by the fourth congress of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom here, "but because they are most commonly the direct consequence of social injustice, and we cannot condemn the violence and not the causes. It is not enough to condemn, however. We must devote ourselves to abolishing these causes.

"The first step toward this end must be to bring about the organization of economic life, not for individual or class profit, but for the highest possible development of every human being."

International Government Longed For.

An international "organization," so constituted as to comprise all nations of the world on a basis of genuine equality, thereby making group-domination impossible, is proposed in the manifesto. It would organize international co-operation "to weld the scattered moral forces of the world into an effective political instrument," and would serve as a mediator in the settlement of disputes. It would protect minorities, raise the condition of labor, promote international education and health, guard the welfare of backward races, establish free trade, control the equitable distribution of food supplies and raw materials among the nations, and bring about the total disarmament of its members.

A desperate and bloody struggle in all countries between the economic classes was predicted as the next world war, by Frau Yella Hertska of Vienna, principal speaker at the Friday evening session of the congress.

She said this would be brought on by the exploitation of the working class by the profiteers and other capitalists, unless the pacifists bestirred themselves to prevent its outbreak by removing the menace of profit from the world. If the system of exploitation for profit, underlying all wars, is not peacefully removed, then the masses of men who refuse longer to be sent to death for others' profit, will take guns in their hands and remove it and the privileges of property. She said she did not mean that the right to own property would be taken away by this class war, but the workers would make it impossible for the holders of property to utilize it for oppression of humanity.

Kansas Miners Negotiate.

KANSAS CITY, May 7.—Negotiations are on between the southwestern operators and a committee of the miners' union in Kansas City. The mines in Kansas and Oklahoma were closed April 1 when the operators refused to accept the Jacksonville (Fla.) agreement as the basis for a new contract. That agreement covers Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania. If the negotiations result in changes in working conditions, as is predicted, the new contract may have a hard time in the referendum vote to which it must be submitted.

DOHENY'S SATCHEL CARRIER TESTIFIES BEFORE COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Edward Doheny, jr. of Los Angeles, son of E. L. Doheny, lessee of naval oil reserve number one in California, was a witness today before the Federal Grand Jury here, giving evidence concerning the leasing of the naval oil reserves.

Doheny spent only six minutes in the jury room, giving rise to the belief that he refused to testify.

According to testimony before the senate oil committee by his father, young Doheny brought the black satchel containing $100,000 in bills from New York to Albert B. Fall here on November 30, 1921, for which Fall is said to have given him a note.

Northwest Loggers Face Starvation As Camps Close Down

EVERETT, Wash., May 7.—All logging camps in this section have closed for an indefinite period due to an oversupply of logs. Mills here have been running only four days a week for over a month. Propaganda by insurance companies and makers of other roofings has hit the shingle industry and there is a falling off in both Japanese and domestic demand.

Forest fires are starting unusually early this year and have closed several camps in the Centralia and Portland regions. Camps remained idle most of the winter. Loggers have usually made a stake during the summer and while discontented have pulled thru the winter. This spring the slave markets of Portland, Seattle and other northwestern cities are crowded with angry idle men and jobs grow scarcer and scarcer. Thousands of acres of farmland in Eastern Washington have not been planted this year and the wheat harvest will find an oversupply instead of the usual shortage of labor. Unable to accumulate a stake during the summer, thousands will face starvation this winter. There is little organization among these men, but the revolutionary spirit of the I. W. W. is by no means dead among them.

FARMER-LABOR DRIVE IN N. Y. GETS MOMENTUM

Many Organizations Are Electing Delegates

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., May 7.—The move for the formation of a State Farmer-Labor Party in New York, which has been called jointly by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York and the Buffalo Labor Party is rapidly gaining momentum.

Many organizations have already elected their delegates to the state convention and the outlook is very promising for a successful convention at Schenectady on May 18th.

There are, however, many sympathetic organizations which have not as yet acted on this call and they are urged to immediately elect delegates at their next meeting in order that their organization will be represented at Schenectady on May 18th.

The expenses for a delegate are exceedingly small and every organization ought to be there.

As soon as you have elected your delegate, send your delegate's name to the state secretary, Mr. Frank Herzog, 63 Leroy Ave., Buffalo, N. Y. It is of the utmost importance that all organizations in addition to electing their delegates, also make a donation to carry on the work and help defray the expenses of the convention. All contributions should be sent to Mr. W. J. Kelly, local secretary at 81 East 10th Street, N. Y. C.

Eight Killed When "Twentieth Century" Strikes Automobile

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., May 7.—The Twentieth Century limited of the New York Central struck a motor car here last night, killing eight persons.

John M. S. Acee, Amsterdam clothing merchant, his wife, three children, Mrs. John Karan and daughter and David S. Pirano were killed.

The train was headed for Chicago and was delayed 30 minutes by the accident.

LABOR FAKER ADMITS GUILT IN BOMB CASE

Senator Lacey, of N. Y., Admits Perjury

By H. M. WICKS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 7.—State Senator Robert C. Lacey, arraigned before Federal Judge Hazel on a charge of perjury in connection with the dynamiting of the Niagara Falls high speed line of the International Railway Company during the street car strike of 1922, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a fine of $500 and one day in jail.

According to competent legal authorities, Lacey loses his citizenship, and thereby his right to sit in the State Senate, tho this is denied at Albany.

The charge against Lacey grew out of the dynamiting of the high speed line during the car strike which started July 1, 1922. The bombing of the line occurred in August, and militant members of the labor movement in Buffalo openly charged that the labor fakirs in charge of the strike had conspired with the company to discredit the strikers, who were supported overwhelmingly by the population of this city.

Conroy Implicated.

Clarence Conroy, notorious reactionary, who was the business agent of the street car men's union, was soon implicated in the affair. So widespread was the rumor implicating Conroy that a United States grand jury was forced to return an indictment against him. This indictment was quickly followed by charges against Senator Lacey and various officials of the car men's union, charging conspiracy to transport dynamite. Four of those indicted on conspiracy charges have already pleaded guilty, and twelve more face trial.

To Testify for Government.

Lacey was permitted to plead guilty to the charge of perjury and received a light sentence. It is quite likely, in view of his record as a Tammanyite flunkey of capitalism, that the $500 was paid by his political masters, so his only inconvenience was his one-day jail sentence which he has received. Colonel William B. Donovan, United States attorney, said that Lacey had made a full confession to him. It is believed that Lacey will be used as a government witness against the other twelve still under charges of conspiracy.

Judge Praises Lacey.

Judge Hazel, in sentencing Lacey, praised him for his "manly" attitude in "making a clean breast of it." Altho his offense was a serious one, still there were extenuating circumstances that made it possible to let the culprit off easily.

There are rumors that Conroy is to go on trial for conspiracy. The street railway company used this traitor to labor as long as they could, and now that the strike is smashed and the union completely destroyed, they leave the miserable creatures they used against the workers to face the music.

"A Labor Senator."

When the Buffalo Labor Party was in the process of organization its bitterest opponents were Lacey and Conroy. Lacey at that time was senator, having been elected by the Democratic machine as a "friend of labor." Municipal elections were approaching and Lacey became a candidate for the City Council against the Labor Party candidates. An attempt of his supporters to secure his indorsement by the Central Labor Council failed to gain the needed support, so they refrained from presenting his name to the body.

Ignorant and vicious, Lacey typifies that gangster element of organized labor that is always ready to sell a strike to the employers or play the contemptible game of the bosses by indulging in dynamiting of struck property.

The significant thing about the August, 1922, dynamiting of the Niagara Falls line was the fact that a representative of the company had his car parked within a short distance of the scene. Dynamite was found in Senator Lacey's car, and after a few weeks indictments were returned against a number of active strikers.

Honest labor leaders in Buffalo claim that Lacey and Conroy are the real culprits, and that they will probably both be released and permitted to turn state's witnesses, while some of the workers implicated will be made the goats.

Now that the object for which the International Railway Company has long fought—destruction of the union—has been achieved, nothing remains but to dispose of the mess in the easiest way, with the least inconvenience to those involved.

Lacey was one of Gompers' local apostles, and his election was hailed by the Old Man of the Sea as a great victory for labor. Gompers has thus far been silent on the Lacey confession, but the Buffalo trade union movement and the Buffalo Labor Party has gained thereby.

FARMERS WILL STARVE FOR TEN MORE YEARS SAYS SEARS' REPORT, BRIGHTER PROSPECTS AFTER DECADE

Danger that the sacrifice of the American farmer to commercial profit will go too far is seen in the announcement of the department of agriculture that the net loss of farm population to the cities since 1920 has amounted to between 1,700,000 and 2,000,000. Experts fear that the agricultural system will be unduly run down and that land will go out of cultivation which will later have to be reclaimed at heavy expense.

The drift to the cities since 1920, the department says, has been at the annual rate of about 1,000,000, partly offset by a movement the other way and by the excess of human births over deaths on the farm. From 1900 to 1910 this excess was 16.96 for rural territory compared with 8.8 for the cities.

Sooner or later this drift will reduce the percapita production of food below the danger line or to a point where a bad season would result in serious food shortage approaching famine conditions.

The opening of the century marked a turning point at which population in this country began to increase more rapidly than farm production. Since that time the exportable surplus of grain and meat products has steadily declined. Crop area per person in the United States dropped in the first two decades of the 20th century from 3.50 acres to 3.18 acres, more than 9 per cent. It is dropping now at a more rapid rate.

This tendency will eventfully force a backward flow to the farms which can hardly be accomplished without some violent social convulsion at great economic waste.

The supply of farm labor on April 1, according to the department of agriculture, was estimated at 92 per cent of the demand. The shortage was less than a year ago when the supply was 88 per cent of the demand. The improvement this year is probably due in part to the economic pressure forcing farmers to reduce their demand and in part to demand unemployment in the industrial centers.

The steady migration of Negro labor from the south appears in the fact that south Atlantic states report the greatest shortage of farm labor with supply equal to only 84 per cent of the demand. In the west, northwest and Pacific states the supply exceeds the demand by from 2 per cent to 10 per cent.

Farmers were forced to pay higher wages for farm labor in 1923 than in 1922 but at that the wages were only 57 per cent above the 1914 average. The average rate with board for male farm labor in 1923, according to the department of agriculture, was $33.18 a month compared with $29.17 in 1922 and $21.05 in 1914. Day wages for harvest labor with board averaged $2.45 in 1923, $2.20 in 1922 and $1.55 in 1914. The increases from 1922 to 1923 are attributed to the industrial competition for labor especially in the northern states.

The average value of plow land decreased from $90 an acre in 1920 to $65 in 1923, according to the Sears, Roebuck Agricultural foundation. Crop values an acre fell from $36 in 1919 to $15 in 1921. Farm bankruptcy proceedings in the federal courts jumped from 1000 in 1920 to 6000 in 1923. The foundation expects farm values to continue downward for about ten years. Then when the demand for farm production exceeds the supply, prices will rise and with them the price of farm land.

This is a beautiful prospect for the farmer who borrowed money to put land under cultivation when the world needed more food, only to lose both land and investment when farm values collapsed. He will live to see a new farm boom, but not as an independent farmer. He will be a tenant or wage earner without interest in the land. His farm along with others will have been consolidated into some great capitalist enterprise farmed by an expert manager and the profits of the recovery will go to the capitalist lending-institutions which secured the land cheap under foreclosure proceedings.

EXPECT ROOFERS TO JOIN WAR ON ST. LOUIS BOSSES

Painters Battling With Associated Builders

By MARTIN A. DILLMON
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

ST. LOUIS, May 7.—The painters are still on strike for an increase of wages and improvements in working conditions, and a strike of composition roofers and pile drivers is an immediate prospect.

The painters voted a few days ago to reduce their $12 demand to $11 a day. While many contractors were willing to settle, the compromise offer of the strikers was turned down. The painters' present scale is $1.12 1-2 an hour.

Ask $1.37 An Hour.

Composition roofers demand 1.37 1-2 an hour instead of the present $1.25. Originally the union asked for $1.50. The roofers demand $1.37 1-2 an hour. Pile drivers want $1.50 an hour, at present receiving $1.25 an hour. The pile drivers are affiliated with the carpenters' district council.

The local building industry has been in a turmoil of industrial war since the inception of the Associated Building Interests. This group is made up of employers of every trade in construction. An employer who is a member of the A. B. I. is not permitted to sign an agreement with his employes without the approval and consent of the one big union of contractors.

Builders-Bankers-Real Estate.

"Fraternal membership" in the A. B. I. is allowed the bankers association, the architects' organization and the real estate board. According to the striking painters, the real estate board has sent circular letters to its members, warning that any member having painting done on the basis of $12 a day, the new union rate, will be penalized.

The striking painters have been contracting work direct and a large number have been kept busy in that way.

Small Ousts Park President; Puts In Lundin's Man

John C. Kruse enjoyed his job as president of the Chicago West Park Board for just about eight hours. He was sworn in yesterday afternoon and last night Governor Len Small displaced him, selecting Dr. Kohn Dill Robertson to the presidency.

The governor's action is regarded as a slap at William Hale Thompson, former mayor. Thompson's success in having Kruse and others placed on the board was haled as a victory over Fred Lundin. Small's action, in ousting Kruse and the other Thompson selections, is held as evidence that Lundin now is to be Small's chief lieutenant in Cook county.

Japanese And U. S. Labor Fakers Support Their Own Masters

(By The Federated Press)

SEATTLE, Wash., May 7.—Labor in America and Japan could settle the Japanese immigration problem in the United States without the friction and sensationalism which carry the threat of war, Bunzi Suzuki, president of the Japanese Federation of Labor declares in interviews published by the local Japanese language press.

Passing exclusion laws aimed at the Japanese laborers is an insult to the Oriental nation, he believes. Suzuki, who has visited America three times to study labor problems on the Pacific coast, declares the problem to Pacific coast, declares the problem to be purely economic. "If workers from our country really are undermining the position of organized labor in America, the Japanese Federation of Labor is perfectly willing to take measures to fix the matter up," Suzuki asserts. "We feel that there is good ground for complaint from the American side."

The Japanese government has prohibited the immigration of Chinese laborers into Japan to improve labor conditions in the island empire. The action has the support of the Federation of Labor.

Hoover's Fish Packers Threaten To Lock Out Union Members

SAN FRANCISCO. — Negotiations between the Alaska Fishermen's Union and the Alaska Packers' Association are still deadlocked. The packers want the men to accept a decrease of 1 cent, and the men are asking for the same amount increase. The union claims that the packers are preparing to lock them out, and certainly the employers are advertising for non-union help. If matters cannot be settled soon, a strike may be called.

COAL OPERATORS' GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY LETS BOSSES BREAK LAWS, SENDS TROOPS TO MINES

To THE DAILY WORKER: While the socalled "mine war" in eastern Kentucky is attracting so much attention will you allow me speak a few words in the columns of the DAILY WORKER, by way of pointing out a few conditions which I know to exist in the eastern Kentucky coal fields—conditions which I am thoroly familiar with, as one who lived in that region from babyhood until only a few months ago.

Governor Fields is very responsive to the call of the coal operators. He is right on the job with troops galore to send into the mining zone, with instructions to work in conjunction with the two-legged degenerates, somewhat resembling human beings, otherwise known as "mine guards," whenever the coal companies see fit to call for them. Like all other political watch-dogs of privilege (with apologies, of course, to all decent dogs) he stands just outside his kennel, with both ears stuck up, listening for his master's whistle.

Blind to Miners.

But what about the miners? What is the attitude of Governor Felds toward them? What is the attitude of Kentucky's governor toward the working class of that state— toward the people without whose votes it would have been impossible for him to pile up that tremendous majority of more than 50,000 votes last November? Does he show the same tender and watchful regard for the welfare and safety of them and their families in times of peace that he does for the coal mine owners in times of war? Does he still remember the people whose votes made him governor of Kentucky, or has he entirely forgotten them in his zeal to repay his debt of gratitude to the interests that put up his campaign funds? Let us see.

There are mines in eastern Kentucky that have never been visited by a state mine inspector. In those mines accidents of the most shocking and fatal character are occurring almost constantly. The miner who goes into one of them is simply gambling with fate that he will live to see the light of day again at quitting time. Governor Fields has been in office several months now, yet he has made no move which indicates that any intention on his part to see that the laws relating to safety in the mining industry of Kentucky are enforced.

The camps in which the miners and their families live are in the most unsanitary condition imaginable. The odor coming from filthy outhouses and huge piles of garbage in hot weather is almost stifling. Typhoid and other diseases whose germs flourish only in filth are common epidemics every year in that region. Is it any wonder? I have not yet heard that Governor Fields has ever called the attention of the State Board of Health to these sickening conditions.

Operators Control Elections.

The coal barons of eastern Kentucky dominate politics to such a degree that a candidate for political office, no matter how worthy he may be, has no chance of election if his candidacy is not approved and endorsed by the coal operators. Not only do they own the buildings in which the elections are held; they pick the men who sit on the election boards, thus being in a position which enables them to stuff ballot boxes and put over all the other many stunts known to political thieves. In a speech at Barboursville, Ky., last summer, Congressman Barkely made the charge—and no attempt has yet been made by any one to deny or refute it—that the number of election ballots sent to Lynch, Ky., a mining camp on the Cumberland river, in the Harlan coal fields, exceeded, by nearly two thousand, the voting population of that precinct. Enough ballots, he humorously explained, to give the coal company a vote for every one of their employees and every one of their mules. And he added the following comment: "So far as I have been able to learn, Lynch, Kentucky, is the only place in the world where mules enjoy the right of suffrage.

"I don't know whether Governor Fields and the other officials of Kentucky's law-enforcing department have heard of these things or not. Maybe they don't know that there is a Corrupt Practices Act on the statute books of that state".

Operators Own Schools.

The public schools in eastern Kentucky mining camps are taught in buildings that belong to the coal operators, and it is no secret, but an openly admitted fact that a teacher receives, in addition to the regular salary paid him by the state, a regular stated compensation from the mining company in whose camp he happens to be teaching. In some camps this additional compensation is raised by deducting a "school tax" each month from the pay of the miners.

You will note that I have not mentioned any of the economic conditions of the miners in that section, nor have I mentioned any of the harsh, humiliating and outrageous treatment to which they are subjected at the hands of the coal hogs. I could fill a large volume with stories of unspeakable cruelty and crime, indescribable misery and squalor, unparallelled autocratic insolence and oppression, unequalled in hellishness—stories of the heartless eviction of women and little children in the dead of winter, of brutal assaults and blood-curdling murders committed by so-called "peace officers" at the command of eastern Kentucky autocracy—stories, some of which might sound unbelievable, but all of which would nevertheless, be true. I could cite numerous instances of the kind I have just mentioned, but such is not the purpose of this article. My purpose in writing this, is to point out, as briefly as possible, some of the wonderful things which Governor Fields could be doing which would be of immeasurable benefit to Kentucky's toiling masses, were it not for the fact that to do such things would be adverse to the interests and wishes of the pampered classes; and the governor, judging by his conduct, evidently knows which side of his bread is buttered.

One thing more. If the DAILY WORKER doubts the veracity or accuracy of any of the statements which I have made in the foregoing paragraphs, I shall be glad to furnish the names of scores of people in various parts of the eastern Kentucky coal fields who will verify every assertion I have made.

Farker Urges Berry Or Davis To "Non-Partisan" Labor

HOAQIUM, Wash., May 7.—Support of George L. Berry, breaker of the New York pressmen's strike, on the Democratic ticket, and of James Davis Secretary of Labor, on the Republican ticket,—both for the office of Vice-president—was called for by William Short, President of the State Federation of Labor, at the annual dinner of the Carpenters' Union held here recently.

Short predicted that next fall's election would bring a more "liberal" administration than the country has had for years. Short repeated that organized labor had best remain "non-partisan" and work for the grafters and fakers he named.

This is the notorious yellow labor "leader" whose efforts to smash the Seattle Central Labor Council because he could not dominate it are notorious. His policy is that of Gompers, "the bi-partisan machine" as the Chicago Tribune used to call it in the Lorimer affair. His efforts to wreck the Tacoma Central Labor Council, which is mildly progressive, are less widely known, because more underhanded and sneaky. In neither case has he succeeded.

Short Would Be Gompers' Shadow.

Short's policy is that of Gompers. He, and his tools, have condemned the Central Labor Councils of Seattle and Tacoma for refusing to co-operate with the State Federation, in which his reactionary machine, backed by Spokane, Yakima, and Bellingham, and other less important locals, control. His idea of co-operation is for him to be boss and the others to do as he says.

Short recently praised the Spokane Central Labor Council as ideal. It is affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce, and some of its members are directors of that organization. According to Ryan's Weekly of Tacoma, C. Coates, president of the Spokane Central Labor Council, was selected as a delegate to the Republican National Convention by the state convention which recently met in Wenatchee.

The control of the Republican party in the state of Washington by the Power Trust is notorious. In Seattle and Tacoma there is municipal ownership of powerplants. The falls of the Spokane River have been given to a private corporation which is also back of the Columbia Basin Irrigation plan by which it expects to grab still more water power. In Bellingham, the labor paper fought municipal ownership and stood by the power trust. Doubtless Mr. Coates will help the interest of the workers by endorsing Hon. James Davis, Secretary of Labor in the Teapot Cabinet, for the vice-presidency.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Building operations exceeding the prewar period will continue for five years with an increase in wages and price of construction materials, according to a report by the Copper and Brass Research Association, New York. On the basis of a nation wide survey the association predicts that 1924 will be the banner year, with a gradual decrease thereafter.

SALMON TRUS ADMITS VICIOUS LABOR CONDITIONS

Companies Promise T Bring Reforms

SEATTLE, May 7. — Grand jur exposes at Ketchikan and Valde Alaska, of horrible labor conditions i the Alaska canneries have brought promise of reform by the big com panies. The fact that it was gettin harder to procure labor for th Alaska Summer hells was anothe factor in this promise to be good.

The Salmon Trust's statement i signed by George Warren of the Alas ka-Portland Packers' Associatio David Branch of Libby, McNeill Libby and A. K. Tichner of the Ala ka Packers' Association, and thre representing a committee on Orienta labor conditions appointed by the A sociation of Pacific Fisheries.

Admit Abuses Existed.

The committee's recommendation urge among other things that:

Sub-contractors be abolished; tha at least three meals a day be give all employees; that each employee b guaranteed a minimum amount o $75 in cash over any deductions upo his return to port; liberal supply o drinking water to each labor passen ger on the vessels to and from th canneries and payment of wages un der contract in the presence of th labor commissioner.

This is an admission of the gran jury findings that labor passenger were denied sufficient drinking wate were beaten out of their wages, we underfed and speeded up under a sy tem of sun-contracting.

French Flight From Europe to India Makes New Distance Record

PARIS, May 7.—Lieutenant Pelletier D'Oisy, French aviator who is attempting to establish a new long distance flight record, has arrived in Karachi, from Bender Abbas and is preparing to take off on the next leg of his long trip to Japan.

D'Oisy already has established a distance record for a flight from Europe to India, covering the long distance in an actual flying time of 38 and one-half hours.

D'Oisy flew from Bender Abbas to Karachi, 1,250 kilometers, in seven hours and 15 minutes. The landing at Karachi was made with some danger, as a tire on the landing wheel was blown out. The greatest difficulty on the trip was in crossing the Beluchistan Mountainous deserts. The aviator is resting today.

Standard Reaches Into Russian Oil Thru Germans

BERLIN, May 7. — Standard Oil is putting its finger into the Russian pie indirectly by verbal agreements with the German Erdoel Company and the German Petroleum Company. These firms have just concluded arrangements with Russia which bring them $10,000,000 worth of lubricating oil and benzine from the Russian resources. Standard has whispered to these concerns its willingness to take most of this imported oil from their hands.

Pennsy Lays Off More Men As Gompers Warbles At Plute Meet

PHILADELPHIA.—The Pennsylvania railroad is again laying off men. During the week ending April 15, the number on the payroll was reduced by 1,271 making the total now employed 211,782. This is 6,765 ahead of the low mark in January when only 205,017 were employed. But it is 20,936 less than during the week ending April 15, 1923. Maintenance employes are chiefly involved.

While the great railroad corporation was throwing some thousands of workers out of employment, Samuel Gompers was telling the National Civic Federation that the relations between employers and employes were never better.

Scab Road Swings Ax.

DANVILLE, Ill., May 7.—Shakeups among the higher-ups in the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad shops here continue as the motive power and condition of rolling stock grows worse. The road still refuses to settle with its union shopmen, who went on strike in 1922, together with the rest of the shopmen in the country. The local shop superintendent is the latest official to get the ax from the company.

SCOTLAND YARD DICKS NABBED BY COMMUNISTS

Caught Hiding Under Theatre Stage

LONDON, (By Mail).—The growing dissatisfaction of the left wing of the British Labor Party with the policy and actions of the MacDonald-Henderson leadership was aggravated when the Home Secretary, Mr. Henderson, defended the House of Commons, the spying activities of two members of the secret police, who were caught hiding under the stage of a theatre where the Communist Party of Great Britain wah holding a conference.

Much laughter was indulged in when George Lansbury asked in the House under whose orders the dicks were sent to spy on the Communist meeting or if the Communist Party is an illegal organization.

Mr. Henderson replied that the police received no specific order from him but that they were there in the course of their duty. In answer to the second question he stated that the Communist Party was not illegal but the declared policy of certain of its leaders, if carried out by the methods proposed, would involve breaches of the ordinary law of this country. This statement was greeted by the Tories with cheers and by the left wing laborites with boos.

It appears that when the Communist conference opened its session in the Rehearsal Theatre, one of the comrades heard what he thought sounded like a muffled sneeze under the stage. He went to investigate and found the two stool pigeons hiding. They tried to escape before being identified but failed. They were dragged forth and ignominiously booted out the door. In their hurry to avoid detection, the representatives of Scotland Yard so far lost their Sherlock Holmes' nerve that they left note books behind them.

A Tory member asked why any political party should object to having police present at its meetings. To this George Lansbury retorted that application was not made to those holding the meeting to allow the presence of police officers. He also inquired of the Tory member if Scotland Yard detectives are in the habit of hiding under the platform when the Tory Party holds its session. Loud Labor cheers, not from Henderson and the ministers, but from the left wing.

Mr. Jack Jones who sings the "Red Flag" occasionally and sometimes presents King George's daughter with a bouquet of pink roses, drew cheers when he asked if Communists were going to be allowed to interfere with industrial disputes.

Com. Kenworthy asked if the police were going to spend their time spying while there was so much crime going on. This aroused the wrath of Mr. Ormsby-Gore who assailed Kenworthy for branding the activities of the police as spying and praised Mr. Henderson, socialist, for his patriotic attitude. Lansbury upheld Kenworthy's position and the discussion ended.

LEONARD WOOD'S PRIVATE SECRETARY MUST HAVE READ "WHEN GOD LAUGHS"

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 7.—Another government crook, former private secretary to Leonard Wood, Governor General of the Philippines, caused Federal Judge Kerrigan to act the part of a doubting Thomas when MacDonald Burleigh, charged with transporting Freda Baldwin to the Philippines on an army transport as his wife, declared that tho they occupied the same stateroom on army transports their relations were purely platonic.

Burleigh might still be skating on the thin ice of platonicism, but for the discovery of Mrs. Burleigh the first, that her husband was playing a leading role in a bedroom farce not staged on the legitimate.

The government is trying to recover from Burleigh, the sum of $600 which they claim the luxury of being accompanied by Miss Baldwin on his platonic journeys was worth. The former army field clerk admitted having taken liberties with the government but not with Miss Baldwin.

Judge Kerrigan does not know whether to brand Burleigh a fool or a fraud. But as a liar he is running a close second to W. J. Burns.

Let May Day Be Annual "Labor Day" Say Australians

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 7.—A move is now under way to secure in Australia a universal Labor day. The general opinion is that this holiday should be May 1, in order that Australian workers may be in line with the workers of other countries. Under the present system, Labor day falls on various days, according to the particular state in which it is celebrated.

KANSAS TO HOLD FARMER-LABOR CONVENTION

Will Name Delegates For St. Paul

SALINA, Kans., May 7.—A convention of all workers and farmers of the state of Kansas who are ready to support the June 17th Farmer-Labor Convention in St. Paul will be held here beginning Saturday, May 17th.

The call for this convention, which is signed by some 75 leaders in the Farmer-Labor movement of the state, was issued on May 1st. The call reads as follows:

"In view of the fact that there are thousands of voters, who feel they can no longer follow in the steps of either of the old parties nationally, that many of the national leaders of the two dominant parties have been proven unworthy of the support of the forward-looking and progressive voters of the state, and that many men who, when asked to serve their constituents in an official capacity are reluctant to do so, knowing that by receiving the support of the party machine they are expected to support its wishes:

"Therefore, in order to give the voters of Kansas an opportunity to vote for a candidate for President and Vice-President whose principles coincide with the great majority of the voters of Kansas, also elect delegates to the St. Paul Farmer-Labor Convention June 17, 1924, and to take such action in regard to naming state officers as the convention sees fit; the undersigned independent citizens and members of Labor and Farm organizations hereby resolve to call a state convention of all progressive and independent voters of the state of Kansas. This convention to be held in Salina, Kansas, on Saturday, May 17, 1924, 10 a. m.

"Call the attention of your progressive neighbors to this convention. Come and bring some of them with you, not just to protest against political corruption, but because you advocate a constructive political program that will give us "A government of the people, for the people, and by the people."

Cleveland Workers Hear Ruthenberg Speak At May Day Celebration

CLEVELAND, May 7.—The workers of Cleveland celebrated the 1st of May at the New Slovenian Hall, which was packed to capacity.

C. E. Ruthenberg was given a rising ovation when he was introduced by the Chairman of the meeting and the audience gave three cheers for the Workers Party and the Communist International, which shows that the workers of Cleveland are ready to accept and follow Communist leadership. Comrade Ruthenberg dwelt at length on the achievements of the revolutionary movement since the workers took power in Russia and concluded by pointing out the present awakening of class consciousness of the American workers and farmers not due to propaganda, but the economic developments. Mr. Daugherty and Company tried to destroy the Communist movement, but now the thieves and crooks have had a disagreement and are proving to the masses that the present government is an instrument for the capitalist class for the suppression of the workers.

A collection of $165.00 was taken and a great amount of literature sold.

And a celebration followed by entertainment and dance was held by the W. P. local in Akron. The meeting was addressed by Comrades Biedenkamp and Overgaard.

Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Noted Fighter, Will Speak In Cleveland

CLEVELAND, May 7.— A public mass meeting has been arranged by the Cleveland Labor Defense Council in behalf of the steel workers now on trial for violation of the criminal syndicalist law in Farrell, Pa.

The six workers on trial are members of the South Slavic Federation of the Workers Party, and all foreign born workers, as well as American workers, are urged to attend this meeting to protest against one of the most outstanding violations of civil rights by the authorities in the state of Pennsylvania.

Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, who is well known to the labor movement for her fearless fights in the past in behalf of the workers, will speak on "The Great Anti-Labor Frameups."

Meeting takes place at the Royal Hall, 5217 Woodland avenue, Friday, May 9, 8 p. m.

OBITUARY.

Comrade Ragnar Carlson, eldest son of E. Conrad Carlson, veteran Communist now residing at Riverside, Ill., died as result of nervous breakdown brought on by over-study. Young Carlson, like his brothers, was active in the one-time Cicero Y. P. S. L., and carried on active agitation for the Cause in school. Funeral 3 p. m., Thursday, May 8th, from his home, 237 Olmstead Road, Riverside.

Police Raid Plan Foiled By Workers In Party Office

ROCHESTER, Minn., May 7.—The police of this town had planned to raid the Workers Party headquarters here Sunday and capture all the active workers, but the news got ahead of them and they found only three people in the office. Three hardly makes a disturbing crowd and the police couldn't be bothered with so small a haul, especially when they knew these three workers as active party members.

The creamery concern from which the workers have been buying their cream, has acquired control of the building in which the party office is located and has deprived the local branch of their meeting hall.

Mayor Tries to Start Riot.

At a recent meeting where Norman Tallentire, district organizer for the Workers Party, spoke, the Mayor, Julius Reiter, attempted to create sufficient disturbance to warrant his sending out a riot call for police. The audience got wise to his plan and protected themselves by guarding the doors and refusing to be stirred up by the Mayor's annoying remarks. The Mayor and his lone escorting policeman were nearly beaten up by irate farmers and workers who attended the meeting, but wiser members made the more impetuous hearers restrain themselves.

Reiter was elected by labor but has done the usual thing and turned against his supporters. He is now bidding for a job in Congress.

Centralia Defender, Sends Greetings To Daily Worker

To The DAILY WORKER:—I hope you will pardon my delay in acknowledging receipt of your publication. It is a very good paper and I want to thank the person who put me on your mailing list. You are doing real service for the workers' cause by helping to break down the barriers of patriotism and religion. As long as the workers have those two blindfolds over their eyes, they will not organize. Every slave you disillusion in those two respects is a potential I. W. W., for a delegate has a chance to line up a man who doesn't think that the capitalist system (?) is the acme of perfection and who is not waiting for his reward in "heaven."

I am not kidding myself that the workers are going to get anything by political action. Experience has proved over and over that such a thought is a delusion. But I grant you and all others who have faith in that method, the right to try it. I am also willing to admit that there may be one or two things I don't know. Anyway, I'm willing to learn, even if it is heresy to read your paper. Wishing you a full measure of success, I remain as ever yours for the workers, EUGENE BARNETT.

Louisiana Co-op Colony Had Big May Celebration

By MILT WHITTINGTON

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

NEW LLANO, Louisiana, May 7.—Celebrating its 10th anniversary with an all-day program attended by 300 colonists and many outsiders, Llano Co-operative colony presented a pageant, "Beyond the Gates," depicting the value of work as opposed to idleness. Following this came symbolic folk dancing and a Maypole dance. In the school buildings diversified exhibits of Colony-made products, such as furniture, baskets, printing, bookbinding, were arranged.

Founded May 1, 1914, Llano Co-operative colony has increased its material assets until it now owns 7000 acres of land and operates 35 industries, including a sawmill, bakery, brick mill, laundry and a publishing plant equipped to do everything from job printing to newspaper publishing and bookbinding.

DRUMHELLER'S MAY DAY MERRY TOWN HOLIDAY

Canadians Celebrate All Day Long

DRUMHELLER, Alberta, May 7.—The Drumheller Valley on the morning of the first of May was as quiet as the burial of Sir John Moore at the battle of Corrunna. Not a sound was heard. The town council granted a civic holiday. Every man, woman, and child took part in the May Day festivities.

The celebration commenced in the morning at 10 o'clock, all taking part in the days' proceedings, gathering at the Miners' hall, where the parade was formed, with the band at the head. With banners flying, the marchers went thru the town, and then proceeded to the Elgin field. After a long program of different events, the gathering was addressed by four speakers: A. B. Claypool, Alderman Parkyn of Calgary, Alderman East of Edmonton, and A. G. Boulter of Calgary.

All stressed the need of cooperation of the worker on the farms and his brother in the city, their interests being identical, and both being exploited by the same force. The addresses of the various speakers were heard by an attentive and appreciative audience. When the last speaker was finished, the crowd responded with cheers and applause. Altogether the celebration was a great success. It was the first held in the Drumheller valley and will be the forerunner of more affairs of this kind in the district. After the sports were finished, the day was concluded with a dance in the Miners' hall.

Trachtenberg Tells Denver About Rise Of Soviet Power

DENVER, Col., May 7.—In spite of the fact that several other affairs had been arranged the evening of the Trachtenberg meeting which detracted some of the crowd, several hundred showed up. Comrade Trachtenberg held the attention of the audience close to two hours and another hour was consumed in answering questions. This was in spite of the fact that Russia has been discussed so often by various speakers.

Trachtenberg laid great stress on the gradual improvement in the economic life in Russia and compared it with the gradual decline in the economic life of the German Workers.

No admission was charged to the meeting on account of the fact that tickets were circulating for several other affairs. There was a deficit and although Local Denver, had no contract to fulfil on account of circumstances, they made good the full amount to the national office in order to encourage the N. O. sending out such speakers.

May Day Special of the DAILY WORKER was sold and also distributed at the meeting. Several subs were also taken.

Harmony Concert Staged By Belgians; MacDonald Conductor

LONDON, May 7.—Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Hymans of Belgium were here today to confer with Prime Minister MacDonald at the Prime Minister's country home, Chequers, in an effort to harmonize the British and French views on reparations so that the Dawes-Young reports will be approached in the same spirit by each nation. The Belgium statesmen were guests of honor today at a luncheon in the Belgian embassy, which was attended by Frank Kellogg, ambassador of the United States.

PHILADELPHIA Party Activities

An important party membership meeting is called for Monday, May 12, at 8 p. m., in the main auditorium at 521 York avenue.

Robert Minor, the famous labor cartoonist and speaker, editor of Liberator, is coming to Philadelphia to address a mass meeting at the Machinist Temple, at 13th and Spring Garden streets, Wednesday, May 14, at 8 p. m. "Do We Need a Labor Party in America?" a subject of supreme importance in the labor movement, will be the subject of Minor's lecture. Comrade Minor is a rare visitor to our city, and we are sure that the workers will take full advantage of this opportunity to hear him. The trade unionists, who have been discussing the Labor Party at their local meetings during the last few months, are expected to be there in full force.

The Freiheit Singing Society of Philadelphia has consented to sing for the spring concert and dance given by the City Central Committee of Philadelphia, at the beautiful Eagles' Temple, corner of Broad and Spring Garden streets, on Saturday, May 17, at 8 p. m.

The Freiheit Singing Society is the rare product of its talented and able director, Mr. Zalman Haber of this city.

Oscar Lyman, a promising young violinist, who has charmed the Philadelphia music lovers on many occasions, will play several numbers at the concert.

Miss L. Erbe, the well-known soprano, whose splendid voice has won the praise and admiration of our concert goers, has agreed to appear on the program.

The International Concert Orchestra, that has won its laurels at our famous Lenin Memorial, wil also take part in this remarkable program, with its capable and well-known director, Comrade John Lyman. The orchestra further assures us of first-class dancing music for the latter part of the evening.

Meeting in Warren, Ohio.

WARREN, Ohio, May 7.—Elizabeth Gurley Flynn of New York City, of the American Civil Liberties Union, will address a mass meeting in Warren, Ohio, on Saturday night at the Hippodrome Hall, and another meeting in Youngstown on Sunday night, at the Athletic Hall, 3381½ West Federal street.

Both meetings are under the auspices of the Labor Defense and Free Speech Council.

Society for Technical Aid

CHICAGO, May.—The Society for Technical Aid to U. S. S. R. is conducting an educational campaign among the Russian speaking population of this city arranging lectures, presenting plays, etc.

TOLEDO WORKERS HOLD SUCCESSFUL MAY DAY MEET

Black Faces Brighten Red Celebration

By JOSEPH MANLEY.

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 7.—The feature that kept a large audience at the May Day celebration of the Workers Party in an almost continual gale of laughter was an old time blackface minstrel show. The minstrels were all members of the party; their darkie stories, songs and jokes while being interspersed with propaganda were real humorous in their flings at the system. The show was called, "Way Down Yonder in the Oilfield." The male and female quartettes that composed it in a short while could with advantage add to the good spirits of the party membership generally by going on tour if the respective wives and husbands did not object.

The audience was quite indulgent toward my speech which dealt with: May 1st, the Communists and the Farmer-Labor Movement. In the midst of this speech a bevy of good looking girls paraded across the stage and I was quick to inform the audience that: "Competition of that kind was too much for a mere man."

The Toledo Workers Party can be congratulated on the many live comrades of both sexes within its ranks. It was refreshing to have them say to me, "You can tell them at the DAILY WORKER office to wrap up that Pennant and address it to Toledo; we are going over our quota to get that Pennant."

Urge United Front June 17th--May Day Resolve Of Workers

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 7.—Strong resolutions supporting the Farmer-Labor movement thruout the country and condemning the discriminatory bills against the foreign born were unanimously passed yesterday at the May Day mass celebrations of workers and farmers of this vicinity.

The assembled crowd urged the various Farmer-Labor groups, third party groups and independents to get together at the June 17 convention in St. Paul, "so that we may in a unified and effective manner fight against the exploitation of the workers and farmers."

"The peoples of the Philippines, Haiti, India, China, Japan, Mexico, and of all other lands who are fighting for freedom," were greeted and commended by the meeting, and whole-hearted support was pledged to the foreign born in their fight against the passage of the enslaving bills now before Congress.

RETURNS ARE GOING UP

The returns on the Farmer-Labor Fund, which are reaching the National Office of the party, show that the party organization is at last alive to the importance of the campaign fund.

During the past week the largest number of branches thus far have sent in their contribution.

Branches reporting during the week were the following:

Monessen Finnish Branch	$30.00
Hewitt, Ill., So. Slavic	3.00

All branches of the party during the next few days will receive a letter from the National Office in regard to the Farmer-Labor Party campaign fund and the June 17th convention, which will give them additional incentive to work to build up the campaign fund so that our party can do its full duty in relation to the Farmer-Labor United front.

Every party branch secretary should watch for this letter and bring it before the branch meeting immediately.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA PAINTERS ENDORSE ST. PAUL, JUNE 17TH, MEET

BETHELHEM, Pa.—A conference of Eastern Pennsylvania of Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators, representing the unions of that organization in the eastern part of the state, went on record as endorsing the June 17th convention and sent greetings to the convention, pledging their support.

The delegates were of the opinion that the June 17th convention represented the developing movement for independent political action and was the only hope of the workers and farmers being represented in the political struggle on a national scale this year.

T. U. E. L. PICNIC COMMITTEE NOTICE.

An Ill-Timed Raid

The old saying of being hoist with their own petard is distinctly applicable to what happened to the reactionary government of Germany when it raided the offices of the trade mission from Soviet Russia in Berlin the other day—just previous to the election that returned 62 Communists to the reichstag with a total of over 4,000,000 working class votes behind them.

The raid was made ostensibly as part of a search for a Communist who was evading the police, but the breaking open of desks and the rifling of files, in accordance with the best American police procedure, indicates that it was intended as a deliberate provocation as well as an attempt to intimidate the Communist supporters in the reichstag elections.

The Soviet government has protested and that protest will be voiced by the Communist delegation in the reichstag—a delegation that has surprised even the most sanguine Communists by its size and which includes many of the acknowledged leaders of the German Communist party.

More significant than the enormous vote polled by the Communists or the fighting ability of those elected is the fact that all the industrial centers of Germany—the heart, nerves and arteries of the whole nation—lined up solidly for the Communist program. In other words, the Communist strength is in places where it counts the most, particularly in a great industrial nation like Germany.

Faced with this condition of affairs the German tools of international capitalism who are now at the head of the German government are welcome to all the consolation they can derive from the raiding of the Soviet trade bureaus.

It might be well to say in passing that the House of Morgan whose plans for the enslavement of the German workers and peasants have received a severe setback by the election results, are also welcome to all the satisfaction they can secure from the insult to the workers' and peasants' government of Soviet Russia which they doubtless inspired by methods with which recent revelations in Washington are making the working class of this nation quite familiar.

It begins to look like the Dawes plan of subjugation by gold will fail so far as the German working class is concerned, just as disastrously as did the Hoover plan for the subjugation of Soviet Russia by steel and poison gas.

The Latest Confession

In an interview with one of the correspondents of a big capitalist daily recently, L. E. Sheppard, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, expresses perfectly the attitude of the standpat officialdom of the American labor movement towards independent political action.

"Our attitude," says President Sheppard, "will depend on what the two great parties do as to platform and candidates. The hope is that both parties will present liberal candidates and platforms that would make a third party unnecessary."

No fuller confession of bankruptcy has ever been made by any official of a labor organization. It is a plain statement of the fact that labor officialdom in America does not want to break with the bosses but will accept a few miserable concessions to unions—not the working class—rather than recognize the class differences that make a working class political party inevitable.

It will not take much "liberalism" expressed in words or candidates to satisfy the union bureaucrats. Anything appears better to them than surrendering the pleasant and profitable association with the capitalists in the parties of capitalism.

Expressions of this kind indicate that the Communists and the left wing of the labor and farmer movements made no mistake when they called the June 17th convention with the belief that any steps made toward a class party must be made by the workers and farmers themselves.

It is becoming more and more doubtful if the union officialdom which dominates the Conference for Progressive Political Action will even participate in the launching of a middle class third party at Cleveland and it is certain that if such a move is made it will result in the Conference splitting three ways—for LaFollette, for the democrats and for the republicans.

On to June 17th.

The DAILY WORKER goes with the workers into the thick of every fight.

A subscription secured for the DAILY WORKER is another smashing blow at the open shop bosses.

Berry Turns Prophet

Major-General George L. Berry, most often notorious for his strike-breaking activities, and sometimes known as the President of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, has just completed a democratic campaign tour across the continent.

"General" Berry stopped in Chicago long enough to let loose a flood of words over the bankruptcy that has hit hundreds of thousands of farmers and proclaimed that "This great element is demanding satisfaction. And that they are going to get it."

Pity the poor farmers! The lord and his almighty hosts deliver the rural masses from such deliverers and saviors. Strikebreaker Berry, who wants to be vice-president, has turned prophet; a false prophet to be sure. But why.

The reactionary democratic machine is planning to pull the wool over the eyes of the working and farming masses in the coming elections and snatch the control of the governmental administrative machinery away from their republican competitors now getting most of the pelf. In order to assure the success of this plan the big business interests that will invest their funds in the democratic party in this presidential election are planning to get some fake progressive or so-called friend of labor to have a prominent place on the national ticket and thus draw a huge labor and farm vote. Mr. Berry has been prominently mentioned as a probable vice-presidential nominee on the democratic ticket with this objective in view.

Strikebreaker Berry will not fool the workers or farmers by his crocodile tears over the economic depression in the rural areas. Berry, before he found the camp of the enemies of the working class more comfortable, advocated the formation of a national farmer-labor party. He cannot today halt the organization of such a powerful party on a country-wide scale. The laboring masses thruout the land know of the inestimable services "General" Berry has time and again rendered the bosses. The way in which Berry broke the last strike of pressmen in New York is still fresh in their memories. And the farming masses who have in recent days shown signs of great advance towards independent class political action will surely not be fooled. The rising tide of farmer-labor sentiment now sweeping the country will dispose of such "friends" of the discontented masses as their enemy "General" Berry.

They Still Break

Banks in the agricultural districts of the country have been failing with such rapidity and frequency in recent months that their collapse is being accepted as a matter of course.

Most of the banks that have failed in the rural areas are small banks; financial institutions carrying the accounts of the poorest farmers. The latter were the hardest hit by the severe agricultural depression. It was thus inevitable that the banks where they had their meagre deposits would be the first ones to go under the avalanche of economic hardships that has overwhelmed the farming masses.

But the failure of the Capital Trust and Savings Bank, of St. Paul, with deposits of more than $5,000,000, should tend to wake up even the most self-satisfied to the fact that agricultural conditions are growing worse. The failure of so big a bank at this time is indicative of the fact that the breakdown of agriculture is deep-going and fundamental. It belies decisively the fraudulent notions being peddled by the Coolidge clique that the farmers' lot is improving.

Particularly at this time it is significant that so strong a bank should shut down. This institution had been in business 25 years. Its connections with the sundry lowest and highest layers of big Eastern financial circles were manifold. An agricultural credit corporation dominated by the leading New York and Chicago bankers and organized to relieve the distress of the hard-hit bankers in the Northwest could not help it. The basic cause for the failure of the bank, the hopeless state of affairs that has overcome the farmer-depositors in Montana and North Dakota, was once more beyond the control of the financial manipulators of the New York Stock Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade.

This failure should focus rather painfully in the minds of the farmers the unrestrained fraud of all the agricultural remedies being advertised by Coolidge and his agents. In the fiscal year 1922, the farmers of Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota Montana, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, furnished from 32 to 78 per cent of all the bankrupts in this territory. The average mortgage debt of the country has doubled in the last year.

Evidently the condition of the rural masses has reached a stage far beyond the control and manipulation of the capitalist financiers and government lackeys. The farm crisis can be alleviated today solely by the dispossessed farmers and exploited workers taking political and economic matters fully into their own hands.

The republican party machine, in primaries just held in Indiana and California, has shown that it doesn't want Hiram Johnson. Perhaps the senator needs a few more kicks to become aware of the fact.

The German Communists did well in last Sunday's elections. Let the French Communists follow their excellent example in the approaching poll in that country.

A May-Day In Prison

JOSEPH M. COLDWELL.

Once more we celebrate the International Labor Day, May 1st, called May-Day by many. In some places we have parades, picnics, dances and almost in every town and hamlet where there are a group of radicals a meeting of some kind will be held. This is done to show our international solidarity, to show that labor of every land and language has agreed that May 1st shall be known as Labor Day, not by the grace of God, or by act of parliament, but by the power of class solidarity.

To the class conscious worker, whereever he may be, on land or on the seas, sick or well, imprisoned or at liberty, May 1st calls to him the memories of the struggles of the past and the hopes of the future, as does no other day of the year. The master class have tried in vain to stop this expression of international solidarity, but the more they oppress us the greater is our determination to celebrate, to show in some way that this day is different from other days.

In some countries public demonstrations are forbidden, but you may rest assured that the comrades will have some kind of a demonstration that will put their hearts in tune with the workers of the world. Even in prison they cannot stop this spirit from expressing itself. I have spent three May Days in prison and I know whereof I speak. One of those May Days I was alone, the only radical in that prison, but I put on a little bow of red ribbon and wore it proudly and explained to my fellow prisoners who asked me why I was wearing it, the meaning of May Day. The two other May Days I spent in prison was in the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., and I was not alone. There were many of us, paying the penalty of the law, prisoners of war, held by the enemy, in that bastile of American capitalism.

One year May Day happened to come on one of the days that we were allowed the privilege of going in the yard for the afternoon. We passed the word to the radicals to meet at a certain place, which was at the T. B. Camp, where the consumptives lived behind a barbed wire stockade. One of the group was a consumptive and was confined there. The three Russian boys, Abrams, Lippma and Litchoffsky, Spike Moore and Jack Randolph of the I. W. W., Gene Debs, Nick Zogg and several others whose names I cannot recall just now were there. Litchofisky brought his violin and furnished the music. We sang the International and the Red Flag.

Spike Moore, who was artistic, drew the words of a revolutionary motto in the sandy soil and that was our banner. Many prisoners passing by stopped to look at the words that were printed in the sand and then they would look at us and smile. That was our May Day celebration and we enjoyed it, perhaps more than you will enjoy your celebration in gaily decorated halls. It may seem simple to you who know nothing about life in a prison, but to us it meant much. For one thing, it meant going to "the Hole" if one of the 110 percent patriotic guards should feel like reporting us. You may be able to imagine how "terrible" our simple little celebration would sound when a 110 percenter reported that we were singing the Red Flag.

But we were not reported and we felt that we were one with our comrades outside who were celebrating International Labor Day. The group that sang the Red Flag that day are at liberty now, except Nick Zogg: he is still there doing a ten-year "bit."

I think of the other class war prisoners who are spending May Day behind the bars, Mooney and Billings, Sacco and Vanzetti, and the many victims of the "criminal syndicalism" laws. They are prisoners of war, held by the enemy. We must do something to get them out. Think of them when you sing

"With heads uncovered swear we all
To bear it onward till we fall.
Come dungeons dark or gallows
grim,
This song shall be our parting hymn."

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

To the DAILY WORKER:—I worked about 16 years in the factories of Anderson, Ind. I have a family of six children and a wife. I never lost a day when I could be on the job. I never spent any money for booze, or picture-shows or any amusements. I spent about 25 cents for street car fare during the ten years. We bought the cheapest second-hand furniture and clothes we could find; we had only one fire in the house during the winter, had only 2 pairs of blankets, no sheets and such decencies as every citizen should have. I never rode in automobiles or taxi cabs.

Well, well, if I were to tell youu all the particulars of a struggle for existence, often going in rags. You may believe me when I say, I consider if I had been a criminal and in one of our jails that I should have today more money if I had just been released than I have now got.

Thank God I am out of it a while, but for how long I do not know. I am on a farm now; a friend of mine had 65 acres, but it's like a white elephant to me, for when I tell you I landed here on the farm with just 60 cents in my pocket, you may readily see the predicament I am in. I have to do all that is done on the farm by hand, as there is no team or one-horse wagon even.

It's a pretty industrial system that leaves a man with 60 cents in his pocket, with a $50 grocery bill owing after doing 10 years' hard labor. This is the reason I say if I had been in jail I now would be better off, for I shouldn't owe a grocery bill, and perhaps the prison authorities would have given me a decent suit of clothes, with at least $10 in my pocket, but I'm afraid I'll have to go back even though my health is bad, and I'm getting old, to end my days in some other sweat shop, where I shall be skinned a little more till I die.

It's a great wonder to me why so many workers are satisfied to work for some other guy, who rides around in his fine car and lives sumptuously every day.

So many workers buy a little home or shack at a fictitious price, and spend practically a life-time in paying for it. Perhaps when he thinks he is well off and accomplished a big thing, that I am mistaken when I say he or she is a fool. They think little of what they have produced and its equivalent in money, and how many thousands of dollars they have been fleeced of by the inhuman cruelty and injustice of the industrial system under the capitalist administration of affairs as represented by the man whom they worked for.

Well, I thought even with only 60 cents I'd take a shot at getting out of this kind of hell and I hope I shall be able to stay out.

Comrade, if you like being skinned all the days of your life, vote the Democratic or Republican ticket.—Percy Waterer, Box 86, R. R. No. 9, Kalamazoo, Mich.

May Day in Gary.

To the DAILY WORKER: International Labor Day celebration at the steel city of Gary was a fine success, with several hundred workers crowded into Croatian Hall. There were 35 uniformed policemen — uninvited — ready to act for the steel lords, but the meeting was a success in spite of attempted police intimidation. It was a United Front meeting. There were speeches in Spanish by Comrade Lopez, in Russian by Swetlon. Giencolo, a member of the I. W. W., spoke, and E. Ettlinger of the Workers Party Branch in Chicago.

To the workers in Gary, the steel city, the message of the struggles of the workers of the world against capitalist dictatorship carried great significance, for they realized that, in spite of the dictatorship prevailing in Gary, that they are part of the great mass stream which all over the world is organizing and uniting for the final struggle. E. ETTLINGER.

"A Long Journey"

To THE DAILY WORKER: In the vernacular of the criminal world, "Send him on a long journey" means to murder him—"put him out of the way."

In the senate expose of the oil mess, there appeared in several telegrams something in regard to sending some one "away on a long journey." Whether these code telegrams had reference to sending Mannington away to Europe or sending Jess Smith to hell and out of the way has not as yet been disclosed by the evidence.

However, there has leaked out occasionally a little information to prove that Jess Smith was doubled-crossed in a stock market deal, failing to get his cut out of the transaction. In fact the former wife of Smith testified under oath that he had told her of a deal—a dirty deal—in which he and Daugherty were left out in the rain on a three million dollar winnings on the stock market.

But it is claimed by the wise ones down at Washington that Daugherty did get his cut and only Smith was left out in the rain; that Smith threatened to peach in an effort to get his cut; that as a result of this threat he, Smith, came in contact with the wrong end of a loaded revolver—really it is suicide for a poor devil to threaten to peach on a band of criminals so hardened as the Daugherty gang.

Why People Visit Me

("When people come to stay with me, they are much more interested in my dogs than in me."—Lord Knutsford.)

When people come to visit me,
And stay a fortnight, or to tea,
I always tremble at the test
Of my own powers to interest,
But haven't got a dog, not one,
To fall securely back upon.

So I am careful to provide
Various interests (outside):
For instance, coffee in a tin,
Or saucepan to make coffee in,
With butter and a lot of nuts;
And colored paper that one cuts
Figures and mats out of; and books
With moving pictures that one looks
And laughs at; other books as well,
With songs to sing and tales to tell;
Big beads to thread on colored strings,
Paints, crayons, and all sorts of things.

Then when the People go away,
Asking to come another day,
I wander round the room and pick
Up here a doll, and there a brick,
Relieved that it has come about
Those people haven't yet found out
What an unintersting sham,
What a dull dolt I really am.

But when I find that book and bail
And bricks, and even coffee, pail,
And, all these interests on the shelf,
I've nothing left except Myself—
Before the people come, I'll jog
To Bethnal Green and buy a Dog!

MENTIONING THE MOVIES

"Drums of Jeopardy."

Some occasional flashes of good acting are utterly wasted in this unbelievably impossible strung-together movie hoakum. It has only one redeeming feature, a negative one, but the only one—it deals with a Russian episode without throwing mud at the Bolsheviks.

The fateful "jools" are stolen from the Russian Grand Duke, recovered by his handsome American secretary, carried across the ocean by his Italian court violinist and turned over to the American banker, who represents "His Highness" in Wall Street. The villain pursues the gems, kills the banker, casts suspicion on the handsome hero, which is dispelled only in a sensational raid on the "Little Russia Cafe," just in time for the final clinch.

If the picture were shown in Russia, especially the episodes purporting to deal with that country, they would cause no end of fun. The Czar's jewel chambers are represented as a cellar easily entered from a transome opening on an unguarded street. All the handsome American has to do is to ride up on horseback, dive thru the transome, overpower the single bewhiskered guard, grab the jewels, and ride off and out of Russia just like that. The Grand Duke is also very careless; all a gang of roughnecks have to do is to walk right in, wallop His Highness with a dog whip, whereupon the jewels are turned over to them. Any suburbanite would take more precautions in guarding his home brew than do these screen nobles in matters of crown jewels.

The least plausible combination of misinformation ever assembled, not even rotten enough to be good. Decidedly not worth wasting any time on.

Accumulations of Capital.

Development of industry thru reduction of surtaxes on the rich, the steel trust and how Henry Ford gets his money are some of the subjects discussed in George Soule's new pamphlet, "The Accumulation of Capital," published by the League for Industrial Democracy, 70 Fifth avenue, New York. The pamphlet sells for 10 cents, twelve for $1.

"The Denial of Civil Liberties in the Coal Fields," by Winthrop Lane, has been published by George H. Doran for the L. I. D., the American Civil Liberties Union and other organizations. It pictures the czarist rule of company managers and gunmen in company-owned towns. Besides the results of Lane's investigations for the Chafee committee, reports of other investigations are given, including the official report of the Federal Coal Commission.

Die For Profit.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Menacing increases in industrial accidents in New York state is revealed in official statistics which show 166 deaths from such causes in March. This is a new high record. More deaths resulted in that month in the metal industry and public utilities than in six preceding months.

MOSCOW.—At the meeting of the Moscow Committee of the Russian Communist Party the following scale of party dues was adopted: Those receiving up to 75 rubles per month, pay ½ per cent; receiving from 75 to 120 rubles, pay 1 per cent; receiving over 120 rubles, pay 2 per cent. Fifty per cent of all dues goes to the mutual aid fund.

Judge Gary said that "public op ion" in abolishing the 12-hour day steel shops, is costing the Steel Tru $35,000,000 a year and is adding per cent to the cost of operatio However, the Judge is happy th they accomplished two things. Th satisfied President Harding and m public sentiment. This satisfacti does not seem to have a very ben ficial effect on the late presiden Gompers agrees with Gary that pu lic sentiment abolished the twelv hour day in steel, but the Steel Tru continues to steal the greater part the product of their labor from t steel slaves while Gompers gorge himself at Steel Trust banquets i stead of organizing the steel wor ers.

CARBUILDERS SPURN PHONY SETTLEMENT OFFER

BOSTON, Mass., May 8.—Rosa Wortis, delegate of Local 25, of the Dressmakers of New York City, was unseated here today by a vote of 185 to 40, after the Sigman administration steam roller had crushed all efforts to debate the program and principles of the Trade Union Educational League, and meet the charge that it is a dual organization.

Delegate Wortis has been prominent in the activities of the left wing of the trade union movement in New York City. She has been especially active in the Needle Trades' Section of the Trade Union Educational League.

Her seat was contested by the credentials committee in its report to the 17th convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

T. U. E. L. Not Dual.

The objection was raised by the credentials' committee that she had not obeyed the order of the General Executive Board requiring that she state her decision to withdraw from the Trade Union Educational League.

Delegate Wortis declared that she had never belonged to a dual union, as the T. U. E. L. is not, and cannot be considered a dual organization to the I. L. G. W. U.

Steam Roller Busy.

When she began to explain the principles of the T. U. E. L., the administration steam roller got down to work, and Vice-president Jacob Heller raised the point of order that the T. U. E. L. principles were not under discussion, but the delegate's failure to obey the decisions of the General Executive Board.

Heller's point of order was upheld by International Vice-president Meyer Perlstein, in the chair, in spite of protests from all sections of the convention hall.

An appeal was taken from Chairman Perlstein's decision on the ground that in the case of Local No. One, New York City, yesterday, and the unseating of its four delegates, International Vice-president Israel Feinberg, had attacked the T. U. E. L. as a dual union and the discussion had been allowed. It was contended that the delegates have the same rights in the convention as the union officials.

Discussion Choked Off.

Chairman Perlstein was sustained and Delegate Wortis was forced to take her seat. This would indicate that the Sigman administration machine is determined to choke off any discussion of the principle and program of the Trade Union Educational League, especially in the discussion of the Wortis case. Points of order were repeatedly raised when delegates defending the seating of Rose Wortis discussed "The League."

The demand of Delegate Wortis that the delegates objected to have the right to a defense of their position was not recognized. A motion calling for the previous question was entertained and the debate was closed in spite of the protest of the delegates and a general uproar thruout the convention hall.

Only four speakers had been allowed the privilege of the floor in the discussion of the Wortis case, with a large number of others on the list. Delegate Wortis was thereupon un-

COURT HEARS INJUNCTIONS CANNOT SEW

Bosses' Lawyer Knows It and Raves

"Injunctions can't sew dresses!" and the bosses' lawyer, Attorney Charles Hyde, of Cohn and Hyde, admitted it yesterday in Judge Charles M. Foell's court, at the end of the hearing of eight cases of striking dressmakers.

"Unless this picketing is stopped, the injunction might better never have been issued," Mr. Hyde announced when he was attempting to persuade Judge Foell to make his sentences more severe.

The eight cases which were heard yesterday were so weak that even "his honor" wouldn't believe the testimony of one of the heretofore "star" witnesses for the dress manfacturers. The cases came under the injunction issued to the Francine Frock Company, of 206 West Adams street.

Two of the striking dressmakers involved, Sarah Zoll and Carrie Peck, were discharged, "not guilty" of contempt of court under the injunction. Five of the men were given $25 fines: John Gladys, Anthony Tropschul, David Rosenthal, W. C. Jannette and Stanley Jellenawicz. Anton Kropashko was fined $50, and Mattie Altmeyer $10.

Officer Repeats Catechism.

Police Officer J. D. Greer was the chief witness against the pickets in yesterday's cases. He took the stand too eagerly and recited his little catechism answers, rattling them off by note. That is, until he got to Carrie Peck. He had to confess that he had never seen her before that he could remember.

Greer said for each one of the other strikers that he had seen them from about March and thru April and he attempted to show that he had seen all of them picketing after the injunction writ had been served them by Paul Tiffey.

Judge Foell himself took an active part in the proceedings, cross-examining almost every witness to his own satisfaction. In replying to Attorney Hyde's demands for greater punishment, Foell stated his conception of the purpose of the proceedings:

"The object is to give the complainants the full advantage of the court order restraining picketing, not punishment as such. These are cases of

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE STOOL—LOANED TO STEEL TRUST—CHIEF WITNESS AGAINST FARRELL REBEL

By WALLACE T. METCALFE

MERCER, Pa., May 8.—The prosecution rested its case against Tony Kovacovich, first of the six Farrell defendants to be put on trial under the sedition and criminal syndicalism law for organization activities in behalf of the steel workers.

The third day of the Steel Trust's prosecution found Department of Justice agent Lennon of Pittsburgh on the stand as an expert witness on radicalism. He recited how he attended a convention of the Communist Party in Chicago in 1919 and in childish glee informed the jury of his spying activities on radicals since 1917. Previous to this Lennon worked as a railroader and mill worker, but since being elevated to the rank of "radical expert" he has parted company with those that toil.

TEACHERS GRAB 1ST ROUND FROM SUPT. M'ANDREW

Group Councils Meet Today After Fight

The elementary grade teachers of the Chicago Teachers' Federation won their fight with Superintendent William McAndrew, and the group Councils will meet this afternoon. Late yesterday Miss Margaret Haley, business agent of the Teachers' Federation, was busy issuing bulletins and counter-bulletins to keep up with the changing plans for today's meetings.

No one knew whether it would be the local Coucils, Group Councils, or General Councils which would meet today, but the teachers were sure that one of the Councils would meet. It was finally determined that the group Councils would meet.

Mass Meeting Held

Miss Haley did not call off her mass meeting of teachers in the Studebaker Theatre yesterday afternoon. She and other leaders of the Teachers' Federation were intent upon presenting the latest facts of the controversy with the school superintendent to the teachers.

The newly published pamphlet on the Junior High Schools was distributed yesterday and the one giving the details of the investigation of the Platoon system will be out soon. The teachers want to discuss these issues themselves before the Board of Education acts and the Board refused or neglected to print the reports so that it could act unembarassed by teach suggestions.

City Council Helps.

Late Wednesday afternoon the city council decided to stand by the elementary school teachers and urged McAndrew to grant them their request and allow them to hold their regularly provided for Teachers' Councils this week.

McAndrew took a hard-boiled attitude, just as he did to Mayor Dever's request, but later weakened and said that he would permit the meetings which are specifically provided for in laws approved by the Board of Education and the superintendent who preceded McAndrew.

The charges preferred by the Teachers' Federation, demanding McAndrews' resignation still lie before the Board of Education.

LODGE WANTS WORLD COURT SANS LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, May 8.—A substitute for the Harding world court plan was introduced in the senate today, by Senator Lodge, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

It authorizes President Coolidge to call a world conference at the Hague to organize an international court of justice entirely divorced from the league of nations.

The resolution provides that a judge be elected by the electoral commission of each power, that each power shall have one vote and one judge and that the personnel of the court be limited to sixteen members representative of the 16 leading powers. The 16 members would be 12 judges and four deputy judges.

G. O. P. Chiefs Did Not Expect Charges Against Wheeler Would Stick

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The Republican national committee wanted to "smear" Senator Burton K. Wheeler and Senator Thomas F. Walsh, and discredit the investigations they were conducting, A. A. Grorud, former assistant attorney general of Montana, testified today before the Senate Daugherty investigating committee.

Grorud said Blair Coan, who investigated Senator Wheeler in Montana, admitted this, adding that Coan never expected the indictment of Wheeler to "stick."

STRIKE WAVE IS SWEEPING ALL GERMANY

Silesia and Saxony Follow the Ruhr

BERLIN, May 8.—German workers have quickly followed their recent triumph at the polls, by a tremendous show of strength, especially in the Ruhr against the effort to lengthen the work day. The number of strikers in the Ruhr coal fields, that yesterday reached 300,000, is continually growing.

The Upper Silesian miners have declared a sympathy strike, while the mine owners of Saxony have declared a lockout in an effort to put the eight-hour day in force.

All efforts of the "Socialist" officials to keep the non-Communist workers in the Ruhr from going on strike proved unavailing.

The developing situation that started with the Communist showing at the Reichstag elections, followed by the strike and lockouts in the Ruhr, Saxony and Silesia, is still further complicated by the departure of the Soviet Ambassador Krestinsky, chief of the Russian trade mission to Berlin, as a result of the recent raid. It is declared that Krestinsky will not return until Germany has apologized for the raid.

Trade relations between Germany and Soviet Russia are now at a complete standstill.

FOOD WORKERS STRIKE MORE GREEK PLACES

Organization Spreads Thru Mass Meeting

Four more Greek restaurants were being pulled on strike by the Amalgamated Food Workers as the DAILY WORKER was going to press last night, making twelve since the movement against the 84-hour week which began May Day.

Amalgamated headquarters at 214 N. State St. was packed to the doors late Wednesday night at an organization mass meeting at which representatives of scores of Greek restaurants were present. Speakers from the audience promised that the turning of the week would see their shops in line with the rest. A hundred copies of the DAILY WORKER were sold.

Secretary Albert E. Stewart of Chicago hammered their wretched conditions under which the unorganized Greek restaurant employes were working and declared that the strike weapon must be used to convince the bosses that the 12-14 hour day and the seven-day week can no longer be made to pay.

James Manus, lately of New York, gave an earnest organization speech showing the great advantages of organization for the food workers and Athen Daniels, Greek organizer for the Amalgamated gave an effective talk.

The Amalgamated Food Workers organizes cooks, waiters, dishwashers and all restaurant employes into one union in its restaurant branch.

Argentine Labor Kills Government Pensions; General Strike Is Off

BUENOS AIRES, Argentine, May 8.—The Argentine Federation of Labor instructed its members who were on strike against the Pension law to return to work. The decision to call off the strike was reached after the labor leaders came to the conclusion that the objects of the strike were attained and that the law was as dead as the dodo. The first collection was to be made on May 10th, but it was a total failure.

The workers will refuse to pay 5 per cent of their wages into the government fund. The employers are not over anxious to accept the job of collecting for the government. They fear antagonizing the workers every pay day.

The strike is expected to result in a stronger representation of workers in the congress. The Argentine workers do not depend very much on parliamentary action.

GUN DRAWN IN RESISTANCE TO CENTRALIA MOB

Speaker At Bay Against Lumber Gangsters

William Dunne, care the DAILY WORKER:

James Rowan and fellow-worker Brown, speaking under Centralia publicity committee, were denied the right to hold meeting at Montesano last night, were pursued by a mob, and Rowan defended himself with drawn revolver. Was arrested for carrying concealed weapons. Attorney Elmer Smith has gone to defense of Rowan.

ALEX MACKEL.

By Defense News Service.

ABERDEEN, Wash., May 8.—Once more the mob spirit has asserted itself in this region, to block dissemination of the facts about the conviction of the Centralia I. W. W. members who defended themselves against an Armistice Day mob in 1919. James Rowan and F. W. Brown, who are touring the state in behalf of these defendants, were prevented from holding a protest meeting at Montesano on the night of May 7, and were pursued out of town by a hooting crowd, in automobiles and on foot.

Mob Pursues in Cars.

Montesano is sixteen miles east of here. Rowan and Brown headed for Aberdeen in an automobile driven by the latter. They were followed by several cars containing men who were on the side of the lumber trust when the Centralia defendants were tried in Montesano in 1920. About a mile west of town, the pursuers caught up with the I. W. W. speakers. Brown ran his automobile into a farmer's yard.

The mob seized Rowan as he was reaching for a revolver which he had in the automobile and took the weapon from him. Threats were voiced, and Rowan's captors warned him that I. W. W. "agitators" were not wanted in Montesano. Then a deputy sheriff who was a member of the mob stepped forward and placed Rowan under arrest, charging him with carrying concealed weapons. The deputy took his prisoner back to town, and locked him up.

Brown telephoned to Centralia, and Attorney Elmer Smith hastened to Montesano to arrange bail for Rowan. Smith, who was tried with the Centralia defendants and acquitted, has given up his law practice and is devoting all his energies to campaigning for the liberation of the eight loggers now in prison at Walla Walla.

Business men in Montesano have lately exhibited keen sensitiveness to the activities of the Centralia Publicity Committee in Grays Harbor county, of which Montesano is the seat. Rowan and Brown have been touring under the auspices of that committee, of which Attorney Smith is secretary. Leaflets being broadcasted throughout the county have aroused considerable ire among employing lumbermen; they contain copies of affidavits by six jurors who have admitted that they were terrorized into convicting the eight imprisoned unionists.

Rowan was released from Leavenworth penitentiary last Christmas after serving five years for anti-war opinions. Long an organizer for the I. W. W. Lumber Workers' Union, he was active in the 1916 free speech fight Everett, and was beaten near there by thugs serving the lumber interests.

Hosiery Workers In Newark, New Jersey, Resist Wage Slash

By CARL ROEDERMAN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEWARK, N. J., May 8.—The Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, members of the United Textile Workers, are on strike here against the Mutual Hosiery Company of Patterson. The company sought to cut their wages 20 per cent. They have been striking nine weeks.

Out of the 160 workers that went out on strike 100 are striking and doing strike duty and the others found employment in other places and are paying the strike assessments.

The Paterson police are maintaining neutrality as they are seeking higher wages themselves and appreciate the struggles of the mill workers to preserve their present standard of living.

The Chamber of Commerce instructed the capitalist papers not to run any union advertisements or give the union side of the strike. The strikers are ready to fight it out to the bitter end. Carl Holderman, organizer for the United Textile Workers, is in charge of the strike.

Pullman Strikers Reject Bosses' Efforts to Settle Thru the Company's Union

One Day's Development in Pullman Strike.

1. Picket captain and two other pickets herded to jail.
2. Sam Green, DAILY WORKER agent, found not guilty in jury trial, charged with disorderly conduct.
3. Strikers write President Carry refusing to negotiate with stoolpigeons, who ask conference in name of the Pullman Company union.
4. Strike Lawyer Bentall forces promise from Pullman officials that out of town men hired under false pretenses will be repaid transportation expense on Monday.
5. Labor speakers urge 100 per cent organization into Brotherhood of Railway Carmen at strike meeting.
6. Chicago, Burlington and Qunicy Railroad suspends contracts for cars until strike ends.

The Pullman Company admitted yesterday that it is licked to a standstill by the striking carbuilders, when it tried to effect a settlement thru the "Company Union."

The strikers instructed John Holmgren, leader of the strike, to notify President Carry that no conference will be held until accredited representatives of the Pullman Company negotiate with the strike committee directly, at Stancik's Hall, 205 East 115th Street.

In the face of the suspension of their outside contracts, the restlessness of the 15,000 employes of the plant, and the complete stoppage of production, the Pullman Company has sent out word that it is willing to confer with the men.

But the strikers yesterday declared that negotiations must be carried on, not with the old "Company Union Committee," but with the present strike committee.

Yesterday morning the riveters received typewritten letters from company stoolpigeons which stated, "Dear Sir: Please attend meeting at nine o'clock Thursday morning in Committee Room, eighth floor, water tower, Pullman Car Works, to discuss proposition of returning to work. Present this card at the gate. Employes' Committee."

Strikers Hear Offer

A few of the riveters attended this meeting and reported to the strikers at Stancik's Hall. They declared that the Pullman Company officials did not have any one at the meeting who was authorized to sign an agreement with the men. The minor hirelings of the Pullman Company, who were present, merely suggested that the men return to work and submit their grievances to the old "company union."

In answer to this proposition the men declared their intention of forcing President E. F. Carry to sign a written agreement directly with the strikers. They refuse to go back under the mercy of the Company union, where most of the representatives of the employes are in reality nothing but stool pigeons getting a rake-off from the Pullman Company for keeping the men in line.

"We are fighting for the establishment of a real union of our own," Holmgren told the strikers. "And now that we have the Pullman Company licked we are not going to throw our victory away by dickering with Company stool pigeons who did not have the nerve to strike with the men."

No Faith In Company's Union

Holmgren was instructed to write president Carry that:

"The employes of the Pullman Company have lost faith in the employes' committee affiliated with the company union. They do not believe this committee has enough influence with the men to bring to the management the point of view of the Pullman employes. The men want the Pullman president to deal directly with the original strikers committee, and invite the Pullman officials to visit them at Stancik's Hall and confer with them."

Strikers were indignant yesterday at the employes' committee, which has made fruitless efforts to divide the strikers and urge them to return to work. The strikers were also

GERMAN HEAD MAY RESIGN PRESIDENCY

Socialist Defeat Is Talk Of Berlin

BERLIN, May 8.—Friederick Ebert, the renegade Socialist president of the German Republic, may resign before his term has expired, as a result of the Social Democrat debacle in the recent general elections. The heavy Communist votes, drove fear into the hearts of the bourgeoisie, but none fear its meaning more than the yellow Socialist hangmen of the German working class. The murderers of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg and the tens of thousands who were either killed or jailed for fighting for a Workers' Republic since the end of the world war, see the masses turning their backs to them and accepting the leadership of the Communists, who offer them the Proletarian Dictatorship as the only form of government that will enable them to begin the task of abolishing the evil conditions from which they now suffer, and emancipating themselves from all masters.

The Social Democrats have not the courage to form a government tho they polled the highest number of votes. Next come the Nationalists who are not so weak-kneed. They know what they want. By forming a coalition with other small reactionary groups, they would be the strongest single party and thus have the right to form a government. The reactionaries will not reject the Dawes plan, but after they get thru with it, even General Dawes may not be able to recognize it. It will probably resemble the original Dawes plan as closely as Woodrow Wilson's League of Nations after Senator Lodge got thru adding "reservations" to it.

SILENCE ON TEAPOT AND THIRD PARTY ISSUES MARKS GOMPERS' POLITICAL DECLARATION FOR 1924

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Extreme caution on the part of the officials of the American Federation of Labor in the presidential campaign, and willingness on the part of these officials to be content with a declaration for old-fashioned honesty, plus the familiar legislative demands of the federation officials for many years past, is seen in the declaration and program issued by Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and James O'Connell, constituting the so-called non-partisan political committee of the A. F. of L.

"The American labor movement asks no favors from the government" is the keynote of this declaration. And after commenting upon the "astounding revelations of the past few

FREE STATE MAY FREE ALL IRISH REPUBLICANS

Frontier Dispute Brings Acute Crisis

DUBLIN, Ireland, May 8.—The eight hundred Republican political prisoners still in Free State jails may be released shortly, according to reports emanating from government quarters. The Farmers Party had a bill ready for introduction, demanding the release of all political prisoners, but withdrew it on learning that a general jail delivery was planned by the government. It is not known whether Eamon DeValera and Austin Stack will be released with the others, tho nobody here sees any reason why a moderate with a genius for compromise like DeValera should be kept in confinement.

The prestige of the Free State government has been considerably strengthened among the nationalistic elements by the sanction of a Free State diplomatic representative in Washington by the British government. This takes the wind out of the sails of the bourgeois Republicans whose criticism of the treaty was, not because it did not tend to alleviate the conditons under which the workers labor, but for the reason that Ireland was not given a greater degree of independence. Those Irish Republicans who are serious about a republic must now turn to the labor movement for a realization of their aims.

The intransigeancy of Premier James Craig of Ulster on the boundary dispute may have the effect of bringing that emasculated province into the Free State, is the opinion in some quarters here. The treaty provides for a commission to delimit the boundaries of Ulster in the event of Ulster taking advantage of its right to vote itself out of the Free State and remain part of the United Kingdom. Ulster decided to drop out of the Free State, but it is held that it has not complied with the other provisions to appoint a member to the boundary commission of three.

The reactionaries of Belfast, who own the linen mills, distilleries and shipyards are not in favor of their slaves joining in with the rest of Ireland, so they fan the flames of religious bigotry and keep the workers divided.

The Loyalists of Ulster have been the pampered pets of the British Tory Party. Now that the latter are on the decline, it is thought that the MacDonald government may side in with the Free State and secure the allegiance of the big Irish vote in England, Scotland and Wales, but the Orangemen have an army of 45,000 men, while the Free State has only 20,000 soldiers. Britain usually is on the side of the heaviest artillery in cases like this.

Labor has made gains in Belfast recently. Unemployment is prevalent thruout the country, and the employers are carrying on a vicious wage cutting campaign. The powerful Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, with over 100,000 members, is prepared to contest every inch of the way with the employers. Not alone does this union fight for higher wages and better working conditions, but it organizes the workers politically and tells them that only when the wages system is abolished and the workers' republic established can labor begin to find a real and lasting solution of the pressing questions now confronting it, the most important of which is the means wherewith to live.

months," and asserting the need for a "revival of honesty, integrity and high-mindedness in public office," it outlines a legislative program which begins with a permanent policy of restriction of immigration and takes up, in order, child labor, soldier bonus, the right to organize, abuse of labor injunctions, the Barkley railroad labor bill, repeal of the Sherman anti-trust law, curbing of powers of the Supreme Court, aid for agriculture, taxation, light wines and beer, and international harmony thru the League of Nations.

On immigration the Gompers' committe says: "A policy of strict exclusion is imperative for many years to come. The more nearly the United States can come to absolute exclusion, the better shall we be able to maintain and improve American standards of living and of citizenship. * * * * America cannot remain the dwelling place of many races and many nationalisms and at the same time perpet-ate those ideals and institutions for hich America stands. Neither can merica develop a racial unity and a thoroughly American psychology if it is compelled to accept into its midst a constant stream of dilution, a constant stream of thought and purpose coming from all corners of the world, bearing down upon us with its babel of languages, customs, thoughts, idealism and lack of idealism, and with all its diversity of temperament, standards and modes of life."

Of the railroad situation the only statement of consequence is that the Barkley bill "is intended to supplant coercion and restriction with cooperation and encouragement in the development of better relations and consequent better railroad service for the whole country."

Against Anti-Trust Law.

Repeal of the Sherman act is asked, because anti-trust laws are used only to injure trade unions. Control of the judicial autocrats is proposed through the adoption of a constitutional amendment, approved by the convention of 1922, giving congress power of a two-thirds vote to override the veto of the Supreme Court on any law held unconstitutional.

The only possible hint that the committe may desert the democrats for the LaFollette ticket this year is contained in the final statement: "By these demands, platforms, parties and candidates, for whatever office they may seek, will be measured by American Labor."

PULLMAN CONSPIACY AGAINST YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE PICKET SHATTERED BY JURY VERDICT

A jury of twelve drawn from Pullman and South Chicago shattered the steel car company's conspiracy against Sam Green, of the Young Workers League and a DAILY WORKER agent, by an emphatic verdict of not guilty in the Municipal Court at 8875 Exchange avenue.

Green was arrested on the dawn of May Day as he was aiding the strike of car builders at the Pullman gates and asked for a jury trial at once.

Jury Fools Prosecutors.

Judge Edgar Jones denied him a continuance this morning and the case was rushed to trial before jurors hurriedly drawn. Prosecutor O'Malley smiled when he saw that there was only one union man in the box and that another juror belonged to the Industrial Relations' Committee or company union of the Armour Packing company but the prosecutor didn't know how much sympathy has arisen in unexpected places for the gallant fight against the big scab concern.

Detectives Mertz and O'Keefe, who slugged and arrested Sam Green just after the latter had finished selling his bundle of DAILY WORKERS, swore on the stand that Green had been telling strike-breakers not to scab.

A second offense was charged against the Y. W. L. man. He was charged with "snickering" at the detectives. Mertz admitted that he had replied to Green's demand to know why he was being arrested with the assertion, "We'll see if we can't dig up some charge against you."

DAILY WORKER the Issue.

Prosecutor O'Malley, a Pullman tool, ignored the legal aspects of the case and frothed about "foreigners," "disrupters," "radicals," and so forth. He tried to picture Green's efforts to assist the Pullman employes fight against the wage cut as an attempt to disturb the happy family relations that he asserted existed in Pullman. O'Malley laid special emphasis on the DAILY WORKER, whose influence he fears and insisted that no one had a right to sell it to Pullman employes.

Attorney David Benthal, for the defense, showed how absurd and irrelevant O'Malley's stuff was. The issue was simply whether Green's peaceful work in behalf of the strikers was within the law.

The jury stayed out 40 minutes. One of the jurors argued for the company standpoint but the majority overbore him and the verdict settled the issue. Peaceful persuasion and the sale of the DAILY WORKER is within the law.

Spynow-Lescher Cases Put Off.

Cases of Nick Spynow and Nick Lescher were put off until May 16. Officer Minton who fired two shots at Spynow when he arrested him selling the DAILY WORKER two weeks ago, begged Spynow not to demand a jury trial. Minton did not conceal the fact that he fears he will lose his job.

Lescher, arrested night before last, and taken to the downtown detective bureau, was gotten out on $400 bail thru the activities of Alderman Govier of his home ward. Lescher, a strike picket, was arrested as he was sitting out of the rain in an auto owned by a strike sympathizer. The auto was parked on 119th street across from the Pullman plant.

Plan To Force Bible On School Children As Part Of Mental Diet

ST. PAUL, May 8.—An appeal to make Bible reading a part of the daily program in public schools thruout the United States was made today to the National Congress om Mothers' and Parent Teachers' Associations. circulating many rumors, about "Seven Eights" so-called because he drives nothing but seven-eight rivets, and "John Pullman," so-called because he is such a willing slave of the Pullman Company. These men, some of the strikers inform the DAILY WORKER, have been congregating around the gates, bunching the strikers and pickets up, and trying to get them to listen to the bosses when they ask the men to return to work. There are a few others that the men are watching carefully.

Will Pay Transportation

David Bentall, attorney for the strikers, scored another victory against the Pullman Company, when assistant superintendent Munson, of the employing department of the Pullman Company after being threatened with a suit, finally agreed to pay the men their money. Bentall is to produce these men Monday morning and Munson has agreed to produce their money.

Strikers who went yesterday to the paymaster department to collect several days back pay that was due them, found the door shut against them. "You don't work here," said the doorkeeper, "Get to hell out." The men are considering taking the case to the strike lawyer.

Join Union, Say Speaker

Ida McCarthy, Barney Mass and Karl Reeve spoke to the strikers yesterday in addition to John Holmgren. Each speaker urged the strikers to make the organization in the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen complete. Most of those who had not previously joined handed in their applications.

Stops 2 More R. R. Contracts

Word was received last night from men inside the shops of the Pullman plant that the Chicago Burlington and Quincy railroad, in addition to the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago and Alton have suspended their contracts with the Pullman plant until the present strike is over. The yards and shops are cluttered with the work meant for these three railroads, but none of the little work that has been accomplished by scabs has passed railroad inspection.

PENNSY LAYING OFF WORKERS IN PITTSBURGH DIST.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 8.—Work in the Pittsburgh district is slowly, but surely, slowing up and the railroads in this district are commencing to feel the effects of it, especially the Pennsylvania system. On the Eastern Division, Pennsylvania Lines west, alone they have laid off their 250 men in train service, and that many more are on the extra list, making part time.

While the other divisions are even harder hit than this one, and they are making one man do the work of two on many jobs. On one job alone they only have two men, where in 1921, four or five men did this same work.

Texas Labor Badly Hit By Defeat Of Shopmen's Strike

By CARL BRANNIN

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, May 8.—Loss of 18,000 members as a result of the shopmen's strike of 1922 was the outstanding report at the convention of the Texas State Federation of Labor, just closed at Port Arthur. With the exception of a few scattered locals, the shop crafts organization is disrupted, according to Robert McKinley, secretary-treasurer of the federation.

On account of retrenchment due to decreased revenues, the convention decided to have an executive secretary, who will perform the duties formerly carried on by the president and secretary-treasurer. George Slater, president of the federation, was elected to this position.

Resolutions were adopted favoring repeal of the "open port" law, which has been used to send troops into strike areas; for printing of free textbooks by the state, and for establishment of a state industrial accident insurance fund.

The Texas Allied Printing Trades Council, at its recent convention at Port Arthur, passed a resolution for a constitutional amendment that all taxes be levied on land values only. This convention also opposed sending an uninstructed delegation to the national Democratic convention at New York.

Women Win Equal Pay

ALBANY, N. Y., May 9.—Women teachers in the public schools of New York state will receive equal pay with men teachers as a result of a bill signed by Gov. Smith, which becomes effective September 1.

EXPELLED UNION MEMBER WINNING WAUKEGAN STRIKE

Injunction Denied Big Eisenberg Company

WAUKEGAN, Ill., May 8.—Injunction plans of the Eisenberg Manufacturing Company at Waukegan were balked here when Judge Edwards refused to grant a writ against the International Ladies' Garment Workers.

Nathan Bosen, one of the union members expelled for his connection with the Trade Union Educational League, has been conducting an effective strike against this big dressmaking concern, which has been trying to get its scab work done in Waukegan when the big Chicago walkout foiled its plans there. Bosen was entrusted with the responsible Waukegan post by Vice President Perlstein.

The Eisenberg firm begged hard for the injunction, telling Judge Edwards that they would be ruined by the strike unless picketing was stopped. The legal firm of Dean & Field, selected by Bosen, met their arguments, and the motion for an injunction was quashed.

It is expected that the Eisenberg firm will be forced to settle now. They have only two scabs working in place of the 35 garment workers there before the strike.

publication, it was learned by delegates to the union's convention in session in Boston. The book, which covers the 25 years of the organization's life, has been written by Louis Levine, former professor of economics University of Montana. The volume will be used entensively in the workers' education classes conducted by the union.

Il Veltro, the new bi-weekly publication of Italian Chamber of Labor (New York) and the Anti-Fascist alliance, has been voted a weekly $100 contribution by the I. L. G. W. executive board, it was also announced.

In explaining the failure of The New York Leader, successor to The Call, to which the union contributed $27,000, the board assigns "lack of a big reserve fund" and "lack of response from the English-speaking trade unionists," as the chief causes.

Besides its three weekly publications—Gerechtig keit, Justice and Giustizia—the board reports that it has given assistance to The Messenger, a Negro monthly, and Labor Age, a monthly.

Various books are being published by the union in connection with its workers' education classes. Among these are: Social and Political History of the United States by Carman; Outlines on Trade Union Policies by David Saposs; Economics and Labor by Sylvia Kopald, Social Institutions by Arthur Calhoun.

For Real Labor Party.

"We want an out-and-out Labor party, not a bourgeois third party," Secretary Abraham Baroff, says in explaining the position of the organization. "No," was his reply when asked by The Federated Press whether he favored a so-called independent third party led by Robert M. LaFollette. He opposes McAdoo as a would-be labor candidate on the Democratic ticket.

"We propose to fight for a straight Labor party open to all workers' organizations" said Baroff in reference to the Cleveland convention July 4 of the conference for progressive political action. The I. L. G. W. meeting is asked by the executive board report to give friendly consideration to the invitation to participate in the July 4 convention.

"The success scored by the workers and farmers in the northwest and the election of a group of congressmen and senators who are looked upon as a nucleus for the formation of a strong labor-farmer group in congress, has stimulated interest in independent political action in this country," the report says.

No McAdoo Flag On Engineers' Staff, Declares Stone

CLEVELAND, May 8.—"All kinds of rumors are afloat and all kinds of statements are being given out by the different press syndicates to the effect that the organization has indorsed this, that, and the other candidate for the presidency," declares Grand Chief Warren S. Stone, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. "In fact it has been broadcasted on several occasions that the B. of L. E. as an organization has indorsed Mr. McAdoo, the Democratic candidate for the presidency. This statement is absolutely untrue.

"The B. of L. E. consistently refused to indorse anyone, and our reply has been to all such inquiries that we would await action of the two party conventions and see whom they nominate and what platforms they adopt, before even indicating any preference. We also want to await the action of the conference for progressive political action, which meets in the B. of L. E. Auditorium on July 4."

BELLEVILLE TRADES COUNCIL ENDORSES CALL FOR FARMER-LABOR CONVENTION IN PEORIA; VOTED TO SEND DELEGATE

BELLEVILLE, Ill., May 8.—The Belleville Trades Council has endorsed the call for a State Farmer Labor Party convention sent out by the Provisional Committee of which Duncan MacDonald, former Secretary-Treasurer of the Illinois Miners Union is secretary. The convention will be held in Peoria, on May 19 and its object is to elect delegates to the National Farmer Labor Party convention which will be held in St. Paul on June 17.

The Belleville Trades Council elected a delegate to the Peoria convention but refuesd to act on the St. Paul, Cleveland or Ernest-Rodrigues conventions. Sentiment for a mass Farmer Labor party is growing tremendously thruout Illinois, particularly in the mining sections.

COURT HEARS WRIT ISSUED AGAINST GARMENT STRIKE

civil contempt, not criminal contempt." And Judge Charles M. Foell remained firm that he would not submit to the bosses' dictation thru their lawyer and give penal sentences where they were not warranted.

Three of the dress manufacturers, Kovler, Reinhardt, and Nat Ribback, all of whom have their business in the building at 307 S. Market Street, were present at the afternoon court session. Ribback attempted to come to the aid of prosecutor Hyde, by offering him suggestions from time to time.

Bosses' Witnesses Weak.

Officer Patrick Moran played chief assistant to Att'y. Hyde and coached up the prosecution's witnesses. He didn't do a thoro job because their testimony varied widely. In the failure of the regular witnesses to identify Carrie Peck, Moran called on his unfailing henchman, Michael Collins, to help him out. And then Foell wouldn't believe the "honorable" policeman from the states attorney's office.

Attorney Peter Sissman for the striking ladies' garment workers, made plainclothes Sergeant Kelly look so foolish by showing up the contradictions in his testimony that prosecuting attorney Hyde had to console Kelly in the corridor at recess.

Jonas S. Isenberg, who has a dress manufacturing business at the same address the Francine Frock has, beamed with self-importance as he testified. His chief statement was in regard to Anton Kropashko, who was formerly employed by him. Isenberg said that Kropashko on one occasion was seen to raise his hand and cry, "We'll get you" to one of the scabs. On this testimony, Judge Foell gave Kropashko a sentence twice as severe as he gave the other men involved, altho the evidence was exceedingly flimsy and Kropashko denied the charge completely.

Foell Takes a Hand.

Foell in cross-examining the officers who testified, questioned the accuracy of their memory for certain dates and faces when they admitted to seeing so many people on the streets, almost since the first day of the strike. Judge Foell does hold the injunction as law and therefore, to be enforced by the court without question. But unlike his fellow benchman, Judge "Dennie" Sullivan, Foell does not hold picketing a criminal offense. He hasn't been so easily bought out by the bosses led by lawyer Dudley Taylor of the Employers' Association and Attorney Hyde.

The bosses don't feel nearly so cocky as they did earlier in the strike. The long fight against the union has cut their bank accounts considerably. The cases they are bringing into court now are extremely weak and even the presiding Judge has to grant that the greatest charge against the pickets is "technical violation" in spite of all attorney Hyde's efforts to convince him of the contrary. Hyde argued for severe enough sentences to scare other strikers off the picket line, but Foell maintained that that was beyond the purpose of the injunction and that the cases must be tried on the evidence only.

More Cases Today.

About twenty-four more cases are due to come up before Judge Foell this morning. The strikers involved in these cases have been waiting with wearying patience as their cases have been put off from day to day. Judge Foell must think that part of their punishment should consist of their constant attendance in his court. He may want to help the detectives stationed about to get something out of the girls by mingling with them socially. But the striking garment workers have learned long before this that attaches of the courts and police are generally not to be trusted as far as they, the workers, are concerned.

Weavers Strike Against Speed-Up System In Maine

SENATOR NORRIS ANNOUNCES BOLT FROM G. O' PARTY

Could Not Stomach Calvin Coolidge

LINCOLN, Neb., May 8.—Senator George W. Morris practically cut loose from the Republican party today when he announced in a letter released here that he would not attempt to get friends to vote a straight ticket and wished to "abolish party responsibility and in its stead establish personal responsibility."

Morris' letter climaxed the two day fight in the Republican State Convention last week that closed with a hedged endorsement of Morris on the same platform on which President Calvin Coolidge was praised.

The letter, written to C. A. Sorensen, his primary campaign manager here, announced Morris' intention to cut loose from the regular ranks and refuse to campaign the state in favor of a straight ticket.

MELLON'S FRIEND THROWS HIM TO INVESTIGATORS

Watson Deserts Sinking Administration

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Sen. Jim Watson of Indiana, who some weeks ago sought to have the Senate abolish his own committee which had been selected to investigate the Bureau of Internal Revenue—because Sen. Couzens proposed the employment of Francis J. Heney to look into the whisky frauds and other corruptions in the prohibition unit of that bureau—suddenly announced, that he would no longer oppose the employing of a lawyer. He repeated his earlier attack on the oil investigation and the disclosures of the corruption of Daugherty's control of the department of justice, but he backed out of the position he had taken that Secretary Mellon must not be investigated.

Watson's retreat and flight came on the morning after the day—fatal to the Coolidge crowd—when the Senate adopted the Simmons' rates of income taxes after defeating the Mellon rates, and the Democrats and progressives in the House, on six roll-calls, had smashed the railroad lobby's hopes of preventing consideration of the Barkley railroad labor bill. The administration was "on the rocks;" Watson jumped and swam for shore.

But Watson charged in the senate that most of the investigation had been devoted to politics—to trying to get something to embarrass Coolidge. He shouted that the people today held the Senate in lower esteem than at any time in the past, while "that of the presidency has gone up higher than ever before."

"Did the senator say 'blown up?' asked Ashurst, and the crowd in the galleries laughed.

Tenants Petitioning Court For Protection Instead Of Striking

Two requests were made in Renters' Court to Judge Samuel Trude by J. Ritchie Patterson and Mrs. Mary Holland representing the Chicago Tenants' Protective league.

The first request was that ouster proceedings preferred by landlords against the tenants should take their regular place on the court docket and not be treated as "emergency" cases. The other request was that full benefit of the "six months' stay" law be given the tenant victims. This law gives the judge absolute power for up to six months to determine tenants' tenure after the expiration of the lease.

Judge Trude has over 1000 eviction cases to be cleared in his court within the next few weeks. Just what his stand on the petition of the Tenants' Protective Leaue will be is uncertain yet

SAMMY SMEARED WITH SCARLET BY MORRIS HILLQUIT

But Russell Puts Him In Rotarian Class

By LUDWELL DENNY
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

NEW YORK, May 8.—You may not think that Samuel Gompers is a revolutionist. Gompers does not think so. But he is a revolutionist, tho he does not know it, according to Morris Hillquit in his New York debate with Bertrand Russell, British scientist and Socialist. The debate was supposed to be on the question: Is the British Labor Government Revolutionary? with Hillquit for the affirmative. But the argument was over, "What is a Revolutionist?" Russell applied the test of immediate action and method, Hillquit was interested in ultimate aims.

"Trade unionists and socialists are both essentially revolutionary. Even our own American Federation of Labor is inherently revolutionary much as its leadership would deny it. The trade union fight leads ultimately to the abolition of the whole profit system."

Sam Once Talked Red.

This was Hillquit's argument. He spoke of Gomper's testimony under cross-examination by himself before President Wilson's commission on industrial relations, in which Gompers said unionists would not stop until they got the full products of their labor.

If wanting more is the test, replied Russell, then not only the A. F. of L. but the Rotary Club and Chamber of Commerce are revolutionary.

"The aim of the British Labor government is thoroughly revolutionary and its method potentially so," Hillquit contented. Use of force, he said, was not the test, but the B. L. P. would, if necessary, use force to protect it lawful rights—stressing lawful.

Russell Points to British Fakers.

Both in its makeup and action the B. L. P. is non-revolutionary, argued Russell. He listed the five Lords in the cabinet and spoke of Halding as an imperialist. He showed that Thomas had prevented revolutionary action by the workers on Black Friday.

Recognition of Russia, the one big achievement was taken in the interest of British capitalism and trade and not out of sympathy with the Russian regime. Russell maintained. The general foreign policy of the B. L. P. so far is only a continuation of the preceding government's, conditioned by business interests. The British colonies have received no more freedom. The standard of living of British workers has not been improved.

A split in the B. L. P. after which the majority group would take the place of the present Liberal party, was predicted by Russell.

Solons Changed Minds To Save "Cal's" Face Says Angry Patriot

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Charging that President Coolidge used the immigration bill as "a political foot-ball," representative Sabath, Illinois Democrat, today announced his determination to fight adoption of the conference report on the bill in the house tomorrow.

Sabath declared "politics was played all thru the conference on the bill. He refused to sign the conference report. He will demand in the house the reason for the sudden change of front of house conferees, some of whom announced on Tuesday that they had no intention of granting the postponement of Japanese exclusion asked by President Coolidge and on Wednesday agreed to the postponement after talking with the President.

Heard About Town.

"I see where that God Damn wop went and committed suicide," remarked a burly citizen, who was purchasing some groceries in a neighborhod store. "That fellow that killed his wife," he explained to the Jewish lady who waited on him.

"You're going to kill your wife," she gasped failing to understand the American language.

"Hell no" he replied quite civilly, "I haven't got any. But the whole trouble today is that confounded prohibition. No booze. How can the people be good without liquor? Another thing is they don't hang enough people around here. California. Ha! That's the state. They have the best laws in the world there."

"Were you ever in California?" inquired the store lady. "Was I," he grunted, "I sure was. I was a cop out there. I was the law and I tell you they hanged more people there than any other state in the union."

"Perhaps that is why they have the foot and mouth disease there" remarked an ascetic looking man who came and ordered a string of frankfurters and a piece of cheese.

The California hangman was dumbfounded into silence.

BESSARABIA IS SHOWING SIGNS OF GOING SOVIET

Roumania Seeking To Hold Versailles Loot

VIENNA, May 8.—Reports from along the Dniester River would indicate that the workers and farmers of Bessarabia may break with Roumania and declare for a workers' and farmers' government under the Union of Soviet Republics.

That the Russians will not permit the Roumanian tools of the Versailles Peace to drown this aspiration in blood is seen from the fact that considerable sections of the Russian Red Army are concentarting on the affected borders.

Communists Outlawed.

The Communist movement has been outlawed in Roumania and Bessarabia. But the sentiment of the workers and farmers was seen in the recent elections, when large numbers of ballots were turned in simply marked, "For a Workers' and Farmers' Government."

The Roumanian political police raided the underground Communist headquarters recently and confiscated the official party organ, "Lupta Communista.". The printers of the country have been warned not to get out any Communist literature under threat of court martial.

It is declared that the Roumanian dictatorship is denuding the Bulgarian, Jugo-Slav and Hungarian frontiers of troops, in order to mass them for the holding of Bessarabia, turned over to her by the French under the Versailles peace. There is a strict censorship imposed on all news coming out of Bucharest, the Roumanian capital.

Conflict Would Spread.

Under Roumania's treaties with France and the Little Entente, it might bring these nations into the conflict, if it is started.

The city population of Bessarabia is exclusively Russian, while the Moldovanian rural population considers itself as having no interests to identify it with Roumania. There has been a migration out of Bessarabia and Roumania into Soviet Russia, but none in the opposite direction as in the days of the czar.

ODESSA.— Refugees who escaped from Bessarabia, tell of the great unrest and fear among the rich landowners of Bessarabia. Many are selling out their properties and are moving into the interior of Roumania. There is a general belief among the population of Bessarabia that the territory will soon be liberated.

PROBE COOLIDGE SALE OF MUSCLE SHOALS TO FORD

Famous Telegram Will Be Unearthed

WASHINGTON, May 8. — Senator Norris will complete his fight this week before the Senate Agriculture Committee against the Ford offer for Muscle Shoals.

The Norris fight now revolves mainly around two witnesses—James Martin Miller, former employe of Ford's "Dearborn Independent" and W. G. Waldo, engineer and Secretary of the Tennessee Improvement Association.

Supplied with what he claims to be "documentary evidence" Miller will appear early this week, and "give facts of interest to all parties concerned," regarding the telegram in which he quoted President Coolidge as saying he was trying to deliver Muscle Shoals to Ford. Miller also expects to refute testimony by E. G. Liebold, Ford's secretary, that little attention was paid to information he sent to O. Liebold and W. G. Cameron, another employee of the Independent.

Meanwhile the Union Carbide Company, New York, submitted another bid to the Secretary of War for Muscle Shoals, offering to take over the entire properties for fifty years with a return to the government of $120,000,000.

them were put on the witness stand by the prosecution to recite their little sing-song about the alleged seditious activity of the defendant. These nationalists have been willing stool pigeons for the prosecution, showing how the agents of the commonwealth have appealed to the stupid, ignorant, and prejudiced factions to come to their rescue. Its the old capitalist game of playing one section of the working class against the other section.

The prosecution used Mrs. Matuscak, an alleged Y. M. C. A. "social worker" from Pittsburgh, to act as court translator. It seems to the audience that the prosecution has plenty of experts coming from Pittsburgh.

Burns Dick The Big Noise.

But the Big Noise of the prosecution was Department of Justice Agent Lennon, obligingly loaned by William J. Burns to the Steel Trust.

The main point in the direct testimony of the dick was his statement that the Workers Party was the direct descendant of the Communist parties from 1919 to 1923. Lennon, however, confessed under cross examination, that the conventions and mass meetings of the party were open to the public and that the Workers Party had made no effort to conceal its activities. The defense also established the fact that the Workers Party is officially recognized as legal.

It seemed to the listeners that Lenin or the Soviet government of Russia never dotted an i or crossed a t unless some of his informants were there to see it. This wonderful expert represents the government of the United States.

The minutes of the Croation branch of the Workers Party in Farrell was read to the jury by prosecutor Myers. The county prosecutor L. A. Rickard has been compelled to remain in bed due to a high temperature; the presence of so many reds in the court room, no doubt, caused this.

"Reds" Were Steel Workers.

The Farrell branch certainly has a fine record of party activity—it would make most of our party branches sit up and take notice. The organization of study classes for citizenship, mobilization of the branch for Russian and German relief work. The jury discovered that these so-called dangerous reds, charged with sedition, were hard working makers of steel ever ready to take part towards the relief of other workers and to provide bread for the little ones across the sea. The jury also discovered that the Farrell branch rejected the application of one man because he was charged with being a trafficer in bootleg. How different was this from the Teapot Dome expose where it was discovered that the trafficer in bootleg rose to powerful positions in the two old parties.

Attorney Ferguson for the defense made Lennon admit under cross examination that the department of justice, with its system of espionage, has no evidence to show that the Workers Party of America advocates anything other than what is found in its publications and printed program. That its leaders are all well known thruout the United States, that its publications can be purchased openly, that its national and district headquarters are open and that the organization made no attempt to conceal its identity, or its aims and purposes. This admission came after three hours of trying cross examination with Lennon trying hard to prevent asserted admission of these facts.

Lennon Was Palmer Raider.

Reciting what he believed to be the tactics and program of the various radical organizations, Lennon caused a ripple of laughter to be heard in the court room when he laughingly admitted that the Socialist Labor Party "exists," but "doesn't amount to anything." He cheerfully admitted that he took part in the Palmer raids and that he has studied the Commnnist movement for the past five years. Lennon availed himself of every opportunity to bring in that Communists advocate a "bloody" revolution, civil war and various other things that he had in his trick bag to influence the jury.

Upon cross examination by the defense, Lennon was compelled again to admit that the Workers Party of America has at no time advocated these things and that he had no evidence to back up his statements.

Sharon Herald—Steel Trust Sheet.

The Sharon Herald, mouthpiece of the steel barons, today carried scare headlines on the trial, and also an editorial demanding the deportation of the defendants for the welfare of the community. This yellow journal sheet demonstrates the necessity of the workers having a stanuch defender like the DAILY WORKER.

Expert Lennon alleged that the Labor Defense Council is another Communist organization organized to defend workers arrested by the state or government. It seemed to grieve this expert to find that workers resent the iron heel of the coal and steel barons and band themselves together to defend their right to organize.

Says "Reds" Only Mourned Lenin.

The Lenin memorial meetings, held under the auspices of the Workers Party thruout the United States, came in for severe denunciation, and the expert for the prosecution asserted that 50 or more large mass meetings were held by the party in honor of Lenin. Upon cross-examination, Lennon admitted that he had no way of knowing whether or not other than "Reds" mourned the death of Lenin, but he was "positive" that no Methodists or Catholics held memorial meetings. His "expert" mind could not conceive of any one outside of the Workers Party honoring the memory of N. Lenin.

Masses of alleged Communist literature confiscated by the police during the raids in Farrell, and literature possessed by Lennon, was piled up on the prosecutor's desk. The "expert" stumbled around this mass of literature and fondled it as a mother cat would her kittens.

Judge McLaughry, by request of the defense, ruled that the Blankenstein case has nothing to do with the case now before the court. Time and time again Captain Myers, prosecutor for the commonwealth, attempted to use the rulings made by the court in the Blankenstein case to build up the prosecution in this case, and the defense scored a victory by the court's ruling.

Farmers Hear Party Program.

The defense opened its case Tuesday afternoon by reading to the court and jury the program of the Workers Party—the program that the prosecution would not produce. The jury paid rapt attention to every word uttered, and some of the exploited farmers on the jury looked hard and long at the programs furnished them by the defense to be read.

Character witnesses for the defense testified that they have known Tony Kovacovich, steel worker, for the past five or ten years, and that they have found him to be an honest, hard-working young man of excellent character.

As the trial progresses it becomes more apparent that the Workers Party of America is the defendant, and that the steel and coal barons are determined to drive the party out of existence and jail its leaders. Petty flunkies of the coal and steel barons flock in and out of the courtroom.

Judge McLaughry excused the jurors until Thursday on account of the necessity of holding naturalization court. The defense expects that the first case will be completed by Friday.

G. O. P. FILIBUSTER MAY SAVE RAIL LABOR BOARD

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Republican obstruction of the Barkley bill abolishing the railroad labor board which kept the house in session by filibustering until last midnight, has threatened to reopen the rules revision fight.

When Representative Barkley attempted to bring up the bill again today, points of order were raised that it could not again be considered until Monday, May 19, the next day for considering bills under suspension of the rules.

May Change Rules.

In the argument over the rules, Representative Nelson, Wisconsin progressive republican leader and Representative Moore, Virginia, democrat, served notice that if the new supposedly liberal discharge rule became a vehicle for unexpected postponement of the very bills it was drafted to assist, the rules should again be revised.

Further consideration by the house of the bill was finally postponed for two weeks by a ruling of Speaker Gillett who sustained those who contended that it could not be considered again until Monday, May 19. Its defeat, therefore, in spite of the majority in its favor, was seen today as a probable result of the filibuster and the speaker's ruling.

The Relay.

WELLESLEY, Mass., May 8.—The first number of The Relay, a monthly edited by Professor Ellen Hayes, appears as a small four-page gathering of "news from far neighbors, occasional science items, editorial comments, reviews and educational doctrine." "Its attitude on education may be rated as revolutionary or reactionary—according to the reader's point of view," Miss Hayes announces. The Relay is published at Wellesley, Mass., at 50 cents a year.

SOVIET HITS GERMAN TRADE HEAVY WALLOP

Teutonic Business Knees Are Wobbling

MOSCOW, May 8.—The Soviet Government in reprisal for the illegal raiding of its Berlin embassy by the German political police, slammed the trade door in the face of that nation and closed its commercial office in Berlin until ample satisfaction is given the Russian government.

Branches of the Soviet commercial office all over Germany have been closed and the one planned for Koenigsburg is indefinitely postponed. German trade is heavily hit and already business men are bringing pressure to bear on the Prussian Minister of the Interior responsible for the outrage.

The Teutonic pocket is not so well filled these days that it can afford to be too cocky and Soviet Russia knows quite well how sensitive a nerve runs from the bourgeois' pocket to his brain. The tramp of the Red Army on its way to Berlin does not hold any more terror for German business than does the prospect of a slump in profits.

Despite the extreme provocation, Soviet Russia is not inclined to take extreme measures. Tho in the opinion of students of international law, the breaking into an embassy by armed forces and the arrest of its staff together with the rifling of its desks and the seizure of documents, is considered grounds for breaking off of diplomatic relations, the desire of the Soviet government for peace outweighs its resentment. It is rather more than a coincidence that the raid took place simultaneously with the German elections and with a new wave of anti-Soviet propaganda, which is flooding European capitals.

Soviet officials claim the incident was timed to kill the Anglo-Russian conference and to convince Poincare that he had no reason to fear a Russian-German agreement. The success of the Communists in the German elections, however, somewhat dampened the spirits of the bourgeoisie of that country and the tremendous gains made by that party, has caused consternation, in financial circles from Berlin to New York.

The editor of the Soviet Organ Izvestia, declares that the raid was not alone a breach of the laws of neutrality, but an insult to the Soviet government. "The great mass of our workers and peasants who are attentively following our foreign policy," says Litvinov, "will certainly ask themselves what is the meaning of this unexpected provocative act by the German authorities. They will ask if it means that the German government is changing its line of conduct or desires to end the friendship begun by the signing of the treaty of Rapallo.

"Without doubt, such a question can be answered in the negative. The community of political and economic interests which called the treaty of Rapallo into being remains and will continue for a long time. Not for a moment will I entertain the thought that Germany has any intention of changing its relations with this country."

Litvinov suspects a Franco-German conspiracy to upset the London conference to be back of the raid. Germans fear that the peak of Russian trade will be shifted to England and Poincare does not want either British or Russian influence strengthened in Europe.

Soviet Russia is by no means satisfied with its dealings with German capitalists. The latter have failed to live up to their promises. They have not granted the necessary credits, During this year the Soviet government has not granted any concessions to German business men, even the Wolff concession being cancelled.

Meanwhile, N. Krestinsky, Soviet ambassador to Berlin, has postponed his departure for Moscow pending the arrival of M. Stomaniakow, chief of the Russian commercial delegation to London.

Mal Daughterty.

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., May 8.—Attorney for Mal Daugherty, president of the Midland National Bank and brother of the former attorney general, indicated that they will institute proceedings to prevent Daugherty from being taken to Washington.

The time set for Daugherty's arrest, ordered by the United States Senate because he refused to testify before the committee investigating the department of justice, was fixed for noon but in the meantime John McGrain, deputy sergeant-at-arms, sent here to arrest him, wired Washington for further instructions.

WIFE DEFEATS NAVAL COMMANDER IN TWO HOTLY-CONTESTED ENCOUNTERS

NEW YORK.—"To hell with the United States flag: I would not have it in my house," said Mrs. Roland M. Comfort. "To hell you won't, we'll see," replied hubbie, who happens to be lieutenant commander at the Brooklyn navy yard, and who is accustomed to being obeyed.

But Supreme Court Justice Carswell decided against the lieutenant commander's petition for annulment of marriage on the ground of his wife's disloyalty. The court dismissed this charge, tho divorce may be granted on other grounds.

THE POWER COLUMN

First City Reaches Its Quota

AMBRIDGE, a small mining town in Pennsylvania, is the first to reach the quota assigned to it in the great drive for 10,000 new readers. It is the first to achieve in a true Communist fashion the task assigned to it. A small branch of nine members, all of them foreign-speaking, it has, practically before half of the drive was over, reached the goal set before it early in March. Nor will it stop here. Before the drive is over, this militant body of red-blooded workers will have doubled its quota!

Hats off to Ambridge!

The first town to reach 100 per cent of its quota in the great drive for 10,000 new readers by June 15th!

The town to set the fine example for others to follow!

The town to throw a challenge to the big cities with their thousands of militants to fullfil their task!

Come on Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, St. Louis, St. Paul, the most talked of town in the country? It's Ambridge now. WHO WILL BE NEXT????

• • • •

JUST as Power Column goes to press, a Special Delivery comes from Toledo with five more new subs, raising their quota to 88 per cent and here's what they say:

Here's to Toledo Daily Worker Booster Club
Now I'll tell you that they're no dubs
The Toledo bunch have got the pep
And this club has made a rep.
They jumped from the bottom to—almost the top
The locals they passed in this handicap race,
Threw up their hands and went down with a flop,
They had to make way—Toledo couldn't stop
So on goes this fightin' militant bunch.
And now if you listen I'll give you a hunch
Better move mighty fast or get out of the way,
'Cause we'll be at the top of the column next Friday.

FEWER JOBS IN N.Y. LAST MONTH, FIGURES SHOW

Metal Industries In A Marked Decline

NEW YORK, May 8.—April reports from the manufacturers in New York State show a drop in factory employment. This statement was made by Industrial Commissioner Bernard L. Shientag of the State Department of Labor. There has been very little spring rise this year, the Commissioner said, so that the present movement indicates a real decline in the demand for factory labor. The reductions at this time extended to most of the industries and to all of the important manufacturing districts in the state.

The important group of metal industries almost without exception, showed a decline in employment in April. Brick yards took on a good many workers this month and production in these plants is almost in full swing. An increase is also evident in the production of interior woodwork, but the cement mills, altho still active, curtailed production somewhat at this time.

Glassware production fell off sharply in April and up-State plants making silk gloves and other textile products dropped a number of operatives. Some of the rug manufacturers also reported reduced working forces. Dullness is the rule in the leather industry. Among the paper manufacturers, altho most of the mills are taking advantage of favorable water conditions, a few of the plants reported sharp reductions and a net decline in the index resulted.

Reports from New York City in April indicate that nearly 55,000 factory employes have been released there since last year.

Strangling Of 48 Hour Law Told By Consumers' League

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 8.—"The evils of our present legislative system are strikingly illustrated in this defeat," says the annual report, Consumers' League of New York, in discussing the defeat by the New York Legislature of the 48-hour week for women bill. "A measure which would have received more than enough votes to insure its passage if brought out on the floor of the House, was stifled in committee by the action of a few men, who were, undoubtedly, influenced by Mark Daly and the Associated Industries." The last phrase refers to the chief lobbying organization of the anti-labor employers of the state.

Four Hours Enough, Bertrand Russell Tells New Yorkers

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 8.—A four-hour day for workers is sufficient to support the world with the present labor-saving machines and electrification of industry, Bertrand Russell told a Rand School audience in New York. But the machine age has forced people to do more work rather than less, he pointed out in his address on "Mechanism and Life."

"The whole white civilization will perish from the earth, unless capitalism can be prevented from plunging the nations into recurrent capitalist wars," said Russell.

Farmers and Congress.

WASHINGTON.—Jackson H. Ralston, veteran counsel for the American Federation of Labor and member of the joint amnesty committee which secured the release of the political prisoners, has been retained by the Farmers' National Council and the People's Reconstruction League, to prevent the meat packing combine from repudiating the terms of its compromise with the anti-trust prosecution begun by the government four years ago.

Scab Music for Workers.

MINNEAPOLIS.—Only the rich district of Minneapolis will have first-class union music at the park concerts this summer. A three-to-one decision of the anti-labor park board has so ordered. Non-union music is good enough for the working class wards, the board decided. Pleas by labor members, in a minority on the board, were unsuccessful even when Commissioner Youngdahl presented a bid for union music at a lower rate than the non-union band.

NEW YORK.—"The greatest need of the navy is a large number of sailors," says Curtis D. Wilbur, Denby's successor as secretary of the navy, confessing that the navy, despite fewer ships and renewed recruiting drives, is unable to lure enough young men to "see the world from a porthole." "Our battleships are undermanned," he lamented to the Young Women's Christian Association convention, New York.

Mooney And Billings Freedom Demanded By Idaho Workers

POCATELLO, Idaho, May 8.—Keeping the issue of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings alive, the Pocatello workers have sent similar letters to this one to Senator Borah and to all other Idaho representatives in Congress:

"The Pocatello Building Trades Council of this city protests in the holding of Mooney and Billings, when it is a known fact the press has stated that the evidence that convicted these men was perjury, and also the judge that sentenced Mooney has recommended that he be given a new trial, and the attorney general has concurred in his recommendation.

"We kindly request you to do all in your power in getting these men granted a new trial or a pardon.

"Yours very truly,
"HUGO JAMES,
"Secretary."

LUMBER COMPANY UNION PUTS O. K. ON WAGE SLASH

"Four Ls" Say Amen To Bosses' Greed

By W. R. CLARK.

TACOMA, Wash., May 8.—Logging camps and sawmills are running on short time this year. Forest fires are starting unusually early and closing some camps. Few camps have run during the winter. Loggers can get out enough timber in eight months to run the mills a year, and mills are not running full time. All lumber camps in Snohomish County (the Everett-Monroe region) closed indefinitely. All mills in Everett are running only four days a week and have an overstock of raw material. British Columbia faces the same condition. Tacoma mills have cut wages forty cents a day and altho the minimum wage of $3.40 a day still stands it is hinted that it may soon be dropped. The cut is by permission of the "Four L" wage board which says that it is necessary because of the decline in the demand for lumber and the fall in the price of lumber. Profits can not be kept up if wages are not cut. Propaganda against shingle roofs by fire insurance companies and by makers of composition roofings have cut heavily into the shingle trade in the northwest.

There is no real organization among the workers. The A. F. of L. Timber Workers Union has passed out of existence. The I. W. W. never did organize the mills and with the camps closed down it is helpless. The "Four Ls" (Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen) is a patriotic union organized by the Spruce Production Division during the war with the idea of making the loggers and workers more patriotic, attacking the I. W. W., drawing members from the Timber Workers, and holding the workers in subjection. Its main function is reducing wages and giving dances.

Cal Wants Little Brown Brothers Barred From U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—President Coolidge today authorized an explanation of his recent statement on Japanese exclusion which was interpreted in some quarters to mean that he had come out for exclusion by law of all Japanese immigration to the United States.

It should be kept in mind, it was emphasized on behalf of the president, that there has been exclusion of Japanese for years under the gentleman's agreement. So far as the president knows there has been no suggestion that this should be changed, it was added.

Sacco And Vanzetti Starring In Film, "The New Calvary"

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 8.—Four years of imprisonment and other events in the lives of the frameup victims, Sacco and Vanizetti, are shown in the film, "The New Calvary," released by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee. The film is being shown in New York city.

Lead Poisoning Among Miners.

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—After study of the silver-lead mining industry at Broken Hill, New South Wales, medical men state that every man working in the mines shows traces of lead poisoning. Traces of poisoning are alleged to be found in the children of the lead mine workers. Of 6,921 babies born at Broken Hill during the last seven years, 736 died before they were 12 months old, which was an infant mortality rate of 106.34 per 1,000 born. The rate in Sydney, the capital city of New South Wales, was 68 per 1,000.

IMMIGRATION BILL ASSAILED TONIGHT BY CHICAGO LABOR

Mass Meeting Will Flay 'Selective' Scab Plan

In an effort to bring the true character of the Johnson Bill to the attention of the workers of Chicago, both native and foreign-born, the Local Council for Protection of Foreign-born Workers has arranged for a mass protest meeting to be held Friday, May 9th, 8 p. m., at the Douglas Park Auditorium, Ogden and Kedzie Avenues. Speakers for this meeting have been invited from the Chicago Federation of Labor, The Socialist Party and the Workers Party.

The Conference Committee of the United States Congress has reached an agreement on the Johnson Immigration Bill as passed by both branches of the Legislative Department. It has thus put its stamp of approval of the efforts of the employers to enslave labor and lower the standard of life of the American workers.

In a circular issued by the local council, the following points contained in the Johnson Immigration Bill are particularly emphasized:

Registered Like Criminals.

The Johnson bill varries the stipulation that immigrants coming into this country shall furnish all military records and prison records if any. It seeks to obtain information as to the public records kept by the government to which the immigrant owes allegiance, and demands a photograph of the immigrant, to be permanently attached to the Immigration Certificate.

In practice this means to consult the various lists of the European capitalists, before the immigrant is granted admission to this country. It aims to establish a system of selective immigration, threatening the prospective immigrant to accept a status of submission so they may be used by the employers as strikebreakers in their efforts to smash the existing labor organizations and lower the conditions of life of the workers in this country both native and foreign.

Many other bills of more vicious character were introduced, but owing to the impending presidential election, they were sidetracked for the while, but any time in the future they will again be brought forward, with the danger that they will become laws, unless the workers voice a most determined opposition.

Serf Labor Plan.

Some of these bills carry the slogan "America for the Americans" and "Keep out Cheap Foreign Labor" but on the contrary they are constructed to better let in cheap foreign labor on a contract basis under compulsion to remain in a certain locality and in certain industries, particularly at a time when the American workers will be on strike.

Both the Johnson bill and the other bills proposed show most clearly the class character of the present system of government. The government is constantly being used by the capitalist class as an instrument to defeat the aims of labor.

The Johnson bill is a dagger blow at the heart of unionism in this country. The workers must be alert to this danger. The workers must unite politically and industrially to defeat any such bills in the future.

Build Farmer-Labor Party.

With the exploited farmers, the workers in the industries must march forward together to build up a great Farmer-Labor Party which will be able to settle accounts with the politicians who serve the employers.

The farmers and industrial workers must use their instrument: a class Farmer-Labor Party, to put their own representatives into power and take control of their own affairs.

Come to the Mass Meeting and hear these bills discussed. Come and add your protest to that of the many hundreds of thousands of workers against these blacklist laws!

Frisco Garment Workers Fight Prison Products

SAN FRANCISCO, May 8.— Garment Workers' Local 131 is leading a drive against prison made goods, especially clothing, made in connection with free workers and sold in the open market. Shirts made by prison contract labor are said to be flooding the market here at prices with which union labor cannot complete.

The laws of California forbid contract labor in prisons, but the sacks made in the jute mill at San Quentin, largely by criminal syndicalism victims, are sold to farmers throughout the country. These sacks, piled for weeks in bales in the open air, are said to accumulate the germs of hoof and mouth disease, carried in the air, which is unusually dry because of the long drought in California this winter.

LEON TROTZKY, SOVIET MINISTER OF WAR, SPEAKS TO GREAT THRONG; SOVIET WILL NOT PAY CZAR'S DEBTS

MOSCOW, April 30.—Leon Trotsky, Soviet Minister of War, has returned to his official duties and is in excellent health after his stay in the Caucausus for the benefit of his health. He addressed a monster mass meeting of Communist Party members and officials of the Soviet government and his appearance on the platform was greeted with tumultuous applause.

The recent controversy in the party over the question of party policies and form of organization is settled and both sides have settled down to the task of putting into effect the organizational reforms decided on and vigorously pushing forward the task of Soviet reconstruction and bringing nearer the day when Communism will completely supplant the capitalist system.

Flays MacDonald.

Trotsky was in excellent speaking form. For over two hours he spoke on world affairs. He attacked Premier Ramsay MacDonald and the conservative leadership of the British Labor Party for their subserviency to the bankers and capitalists of that country. He attacked Poincare for his plots against Soviet Russia, charging the French premier with setting Poland, Turkey and Roumania against the Soviet Republic, and while doing this, send an impudent telegram to Moscow appealing for clemency for the assassins on trial at Kiev.

"Russia is charged with being crafty," declared Trotsky, "but our craftiness consists in freeing nations, while the policy of our opponents is just the reverse. We want to remake the map of Europe and it will be remade as a result of the victorious revolution of the European and world proletariat. We shall not go into lesser ventures for the enlargement of our boundaries. Our policy strikes deeper and goes further."

Freeing Small Nations.

Russia would never pay the Czarist debts, he declared amidst deafening applause and had no intention of attacking Poland. Soviet Russia would help the eastern peoples to throw off the yoke of foreign domination. He said Japan was on the eve of a revolution similar to the one Russia went thru in 1905 and it was quite possible that in order to create a diversion the Japanese militarists would rush into a war against Russia. In that event the War Minister said, the Red Army would have something to say.

Applying the rod of castigation to the political exterior of Ramsay MacDonald, the eloquent Soviet chief figuratively tore the hide of the yellow socialist who is now running the British Empire for the pirate crew that owns that big piece of stolen real estate. "Prime Minister MacDonald's government is full of fear before its master, the bourgeoisie," he said. "If the British government were braver it would sign a treaty with us and that treaty might change the course of history. Our country is rich in natural resources and that appeals to the technical skill of the British workers. Their working classes would have food supplies and raw materials and Great Britain would become wealthier. The union of working Britain with Soviet Russia would create a great world power and we should be able to dictate to Europe. We tell the British working class, 'You have not a government worthy of you.'"

Marx and Lenin.

Platforms are being erected all over Moscow for Communist orators and photographers of Lenin and Karl Marx can be seen everywhere.

Speaking of the May Day celebration, Trotsky said: "The principal purpose of May Day should be an unremitting struggle against militarism but the question of safeguarding the Soviet republic is the vital one of the hour. We must therefore regard this day as the great holiday for the army and navy."

The Franco-Roumanian agreement is considered here as another link in the bloc against Russia which France is trying to create in Southeastern Europe. While the Soviet government has no intention of going to war over Bessarabia, it nevertheless considers recognition of that territory as part of Roumania by other foreign powers as an unfriendly act. Russia offers as a solution of the Bessarabian question a free plebiscite, giving the population the right to decide which country, Russia or Roumania, they should affiliate with.

There Is No Peace.

A state of war exists between Poland and Lithuania over Vilna but hostilities are not likely to break out for an indefinite period. The League of Nations granted Vilna to Poland, but that decision only satisfied Poland. Rumors that there is a secret agreement between Lithuania, Russia and Germany, are denied in Lithuania but given considerable credence in Warsaw.

Radio dispatches from the Orient tell of preparations for monster May Day parades in China and Japan. In the latter country a mammoth parade is planned in Tokyo and Osaka. Koreans are to take part in the parades and the police are planning arrests on the slightest excuse. A ban has been placed on radical songs and the display of red flag.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Support for the equal rights for women amendment to the federal constitution has been turned down by the executive council, National League of Women Voters, at its first session following the annual convention of the league in Buffalo

KANSAS CALLS FARMER-LABOR CONVENTION, TOO

Delegates For June 17 To Be Chosen May 17

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SALINA, Kans., May 8.—Farmers and labor leaders from all over the state have sent out a call for a state convention of independent political groups. The meeting is scheduled for May 17 in this town, and at it delegates to the June 17 St. Paul convention will be elected. Sixty prominent men have signed the call, which reads as follows:

Text of Call.

"In view of the fact that there are thousands of voters who feel they can no longer follow in the steps of either of the old parties nationally, that many of the national leaders of the two dominant parties have been proven unworthy of the support of the forward looking and progressive voters of the state, and that many men who, when asked to serve their constituents in an official capacity are reluctant to do so, knowing that by receiving the support of the party machine they are expected to support its wishes:

"Therefore, in order to give the voters of Kansas an opportunity to vote for a candidate for president and vice president whose principles coincide with the great majority of the voters of Kansas, also elect delegates to the St. Paul Farmer-Labor convention, June 17, 1924, and to take such action in regard to naming state officers as the convention sees fit, the undersigned independent citizens and members of labor and farm organizations hereby resolves to call a state convention of all progressive and independent voters of the state of Kansas. This convention to be held in Salina, Kans., on Saturday, May 17, 1924, at 10 a. m."

Bosses Wage War On New Theater Treasurers' Union

NEW YORK, May 8.—The newly formed Theater Treasurers' union, American Federation of Labor, has been challenged by the New York theater managers in the second month of its existence. Six box-office employes have been discharged for union membership by the B. F. Keith Company and the Shuberts.

No demands had been made by the union, but Hugh Frayne, local A. F. of L. organizer, threatens reprisals against the theater managers. The new local is the only one of its kind in the country, and is not affiliated with any of the other theatrical labor organizations.

Famous Chorus At Service Of German Famine Relief Work

NEW YORK, May 8.—The Uthmann Singing Chorus, well-known among the German organizations, and which has whole heartedly placed itself at the service of the International Workers' Aid in its campagn for the relief of the German working class, will participate in the film showing of "Russia-Germany" which will be held May 9th, Friday evening, at the Central Opera House, 305 E. 67th street.

The Uthmann Singing Chorus was formed in 1922 and is composed of progressive minded workers who recognize the class struggle and the need of building up a powerful labor movement in this country. Through their songs, they aim to bring greater class consciousness and greater revolutionary spirit among the workers.

Membership in this organization is open to all workers recognizing these aims. They meet every Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Labor Temple, 243 E. 34th street, room 18. Their secretary is Paul Riehn.

New Tacoma Labor Headquarters.

TACOMA, Wash., May 8.—The Central Labor Council has moved into larger quarters in the City Hall Annex, the old N. P. Ry. office building. The main assembly hall is larger, better arranged, not bothered by the constant clangor of cable car bells, which were a constant nuisance to speakers, and equally well located.

Short Items From Russia

MOSCOW.—The workers all over Russia are arranging "farewell parties" for the demobilized soldiers of the Red Army. Books and presents are being distributed to the soldiers by the nearby factories and shops. In many cases agricultural implements, such as ploughs, etc., are being donated to the soldiers, who are returning to the village.

KIEFF, Ukraina.—The trial of the counter-revolutionary organization, "The Kieff District Center of Action" came to a close. Four of the accused received death sentences, the others—jail sentences ranging from one to ten years. All of the accused admitted participation in the organization. The organization attempted to start a new counter revolution against the Soviet Government. The central committee had its headquarters in Kieff, and its spies in the Kieff district.

The convicted have been permitted to appeal.

MOSCOW.—Up to March 31, the C. E. C. of the Russian Communist Party received 245,874 applications for membership in the party. 89,705 have already been accepted by the party. Applications are still coming in.

Soviet Helping Farmers

UFA, May—Agricultural machinery for the sum of 91,889 gold rubles is being distributed by the committee for the liquidation of the results of the hunger to the peasants of the district. Only 10 per cent of the cost is paid by the peasants at the time when they get the mashinery. The rest is paid in a period of from 2 to 5 years. Instead of cash, grain is accepted to cover the easy payments.

MOSCOW, May.—The main office of the metal industry reports the following production program of agricultural machinery for the year 1923-24:

"It is expected to produce 267,000 agricultural machines of different kinds, against the 120,000 produced last year. The plain calls for 3,440,000 puds of machinery, which is 35 per cent of the pre-war production and double the amount produced last year. 19,000 workers are now busy in this industry against the 8,872 of last year."

CHARKOFF, May.—Collective farming in Ukraina is growing continually. According to official reports in 1920 the Ukraina had only 700 peasants' collective farms, communes and artels. In 1921 the amount has grown to 1,200, in 1922 to 3,100 and in 1923 to 5,100.

VLADIVOSTOK.— Pavel Shipicyn, the leader of a band of white guard bandits, was turned over by the Chinese to the Soviet authorities, together with twenty of his followers. They have been arrested by the Chinese for robbing villages on Chinese territory.

Soviets Please Vienna

MOSCOW, May 8. — The Vienna correspondent of the Rosta News Agency reports that the official inauguration of the Soviet pavilion at the Vienna Fair was the occasion of a big demonstration friendly to the Union of Soviet Republics. Among those present were representatives of the Austrian Government, leading businessmen and numerous press correspondents. The visitors greatly admired the Soviet pavilion and exhibits.

The Russo-Austrian mixed company "Ratao" has become a shareholder of the "Kojsyrie," which is the Soviet trust engaged in the purchases in Russia of raw hide materials.

3 Workers Killed When Shoddy Brick Wall Crashes Down

WORCESTER, Mass.—Three young Scandinavian workmen, Nils Johnson, Carl Hjulstrom and Thure Nordberg, were crushed to death here when a 20-foot brick wall of the old Casino Building in Burnside court suddenly crashed to the ground. Johnson and Hjulstrom died immediately, while Nordberg died on the way to the hospital in a police ambulance.

All three workers were young men—Johnson 20, Nordberg 23 and Hjulstrom about 30 years old.

The wall, which crashed to the ground, killing these workers, was about 30 feet long, 20 feet high and 12 inches thick. All the men were employed by S. I. Howard Co., building wreckers. The workers killed were employed picking up bricks.

William Boberg, foreman of the gang of men, in charge of the work, said that the wall was not properly erected when the building was originally built, and that moreover it was "rotten."

The wall was the last which the workmen had to take down before the entire building would have been razed.

Johnson had been out of work for some time and had just got the job on which he was killed.

BRITISH LABOR ANSWERS BIG BANKERS' THREAT

Say Soviet Claims Are Very Moderate

(Special Correspondence.)

LONDON.—When the Soviet envoys arrived in London to open the Anglo-Russian conference now on, British financiers issued a statement calculated to produce a hostile atmosphere on the opening of negotiations. In reply five labor leaders charged the British capitalist class with responsibility for famine and suffering in Russia and stated that the Soviet claims were just. The statement is as follows:

"We observe the London bankers' memorandum on the question of the establishment of peace with Russia, and are of the opinion this is a deliberate attempt to influence the attitude of His Majesty's Government in the negotiations now taking place.

"The London bankers are trying to bring about by economic intervention what has proved to be impossible by military intervention, namely, to dictate to the Russian people what form of government and what form of economic administration the Russian people and their leaders should adopt.

Bankers' Demands.

"The London bankers' memorandum states:

"'(1) That a recognition of debts, public and private, should be agreed upon, acceptable to both countries;

"'(5) That bankers, industrialists, and traders of this country should be able to deal freely, without interference by Government authorities, with similar private institutions in Russia controlled by men of whom they have personal knowledge, and in whose character, word, and resources they have confidence.'"

"It may be well to advise the Association of London Bankers, who are responsible for this unwarrantable intrusion into high diplomatic matters, that the bankers of this country, thru their monopoly of finance and their withholding of credit, are responsible in no small degree for the industrial stagnation which has confronted us since 1920, and is with us to such a marked degree today.

Just Russian Claim.

"We, the undersigned, were present with the first authoritative and official delegation which went to Russia in 1920, and we can testify that Russia's counter-claims upon the British Government are as justifiable as the claims made by British and other investors against the Soviet Government.

"We have seen for ourselves how railways, bridges, mines, factories and agricultural areas have been laid waste in consequence of the marauding expeditions of Tcheko-Slovaks, and the counter-revolutionary forces of Koltchak, Wrangel, Denikin and Yudenitch in various parts of Russia. We have seen how the means of transport have been destroyed by these counter-revolutionary forces, which his Britannic Majesty's Government in 1919 and the early part of 1920 maintained in existence.

"In fact, much of the death and devastation which was the outcome of the famine in 1921 may be directly attributed to the action of the British Government in its support of the counter-revolutionaries because of the destruction of the means of transport. Had transport been uninterrupted, food could have been brought from the regions unaffected by the drought to the regions so adversely affected.

British Responsible.

"Added to this aggravation of the famine, a serious effect of the blockade of the British Navy was the cutting off of the supplies of medical requirements, antiseptics, soap, etc., etc., which, had they been available in sufficient quatities, would have prevented the epidemics of typhus and other fevers which swept the country at recurring periods.

"We are prepared to declare unhesitatingly that millons of men in 1920 and 1921 were recruited into the Red Armies whose services could have been more fittingly employed in restoring Russia's economic integrity than in fighting, on the various fronts, the mercaneries instigated by British financiers, militarists, and reactionaries who were in charge of our country's affairs from the Coalition onwords.

Labor's Park Prospers.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 8.—Established for six years, the People's Park, co-operatively owned by Seattle unionists, is entering its biggest year with every Sunday booked for picnics by workers' organizations. The park, outside the city limits, was established during Ole Hanson's reactionary reign to protect free speech and assemblage rights for the workers.

BARKLEY-HOWELL BILL DEFEATING OLD GUARD FOES

Railroad Corporation Lobby Loses Round

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Progressive forces won a victory here when the house tried out for the first time the use of the new rule won last January by the progressives' battle against the old guard—the rule under which a majority of the membership of the house can take a bill from committee and proceed to legislate. The Barkley-Howell railroad labor bill was taken from the custody of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, by a rollcall, 194 to 181, when every corporation lobby in the capital was working tooth and nail to prevent that action.

Minority leader Garrett, with Blanton, Bland, Black of Texas, Browne of New Jersey and other Democrats, lined up with Longworth and the railroad lobby, but still the progressives carried the day.

Longworth, the old guard floor leader, confessed the issue when he said that Huddleston of Alabama, in a speech in the house, had "offered you peace on the one hand and war on the other." He insisted, however, that there was no need for the legislation now, and that the salary list in the various proposed boards was too high, and that a million railroad workers "who are opposed to this bill" should be heard.

Barkley of Kentucky, replied in a fiery speech that not even 100,000 railroad employes in the entire nation are honestly opposed to the bill; that it represents the wishes, carefully worked out, of millions of railway wage earners, and that it has been deliberately and systematically pigeonholed by Chairman Winslow and the majority of the house committee on interstate commerce.

LITTLE CALVIN COOLIDGE SEEMS TO BE LIKE A GULLIVER AMONG GIANTS

WASHINGTON, May 8.—President Coolidge today called congressional leaders into conference with him at the White House, in an effort to assert administration control of the situation in Congress.

Following a breakfast attended by Speaker Gillett, Republican Leader Longworth and Chairman Snell of the rules committee, Mr. Coolidge called in Senator Lodge, floor leader in the Senate, and Senator Smoot, chairman of the finance committee in charge of the tax bill. While this conference was in progress, the president telephoned Senator Borah to hurry to the White House to join the parley.

Mr. Coolidge was understood to be preparing to take command in an effort to prevent a jam at the Capitol over immigration, tax and farm relief legislation, which now threatens to prevent congressional adjournment. In addition, he discussed efforts to save the Mellon tax plan.

Tacoma Building Tradesmen Strike On Laborers' Behalf

TACOMA, Wash., May 8.—A strike against work by Bonnell & Co., contractors, has been called by the Building Trades Council. No question of wages or hours is involved. The demand is for recognition of all unions including the building laborers, which the contractors have refused to recognize. Other unions have had their scale demands met and most of the workers employed were union altho Bonnell's were all open shop jobs. Threats are made of importing scabs from Los Angeles but are not taken seriously. Jobs tied up are an apartment house, a hotel remodeling, and the new college buildings of Wright Seminary (Episcopal).

The new million and a half dollar community hotel, The Winthrop, is a union job thruout so far. It will be run by the Linnard interests.

Young Workers League of Chicago Holds Second Anniversary Dance Saturday

The Young Workers League of America was organized at its first national convention which was held in New York on May 13th, 1923.

At this convention the Chicago League sent four delegates who were very instrumental in having the Young Workers League affiliate to the Workers Party.

A dance will be given in the honor of the League which is the only organization that the youth of America can ever look forward to for its emancipation.

The dance which is called a YOUTH SPRING DANCE will take place in Roosevelt Hall, 3437 West Roosevelt Road, Saturday evening, May 10th, at 8 p. m. The admission, fifty cents, includes wardrobe.

FAR SOUTH WILL SEND DELEGATES TO ST. PAUL MEET

Louisiana And Texas Get In Credentials

ST. PAUL, May 8.—Louisiana and Texas are the first of the Southern states to send in credentials for the national nominating convention of the Farmer-Labor movement, which meets in St. Paul June 17 at the call of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party and almost a score of other state and national third party organizations.

In addition to Louisiana and Texas, credentials are in from New York, Rhode Island, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska and Montana. Other states are awaiting the results of their convention before nominating delegations. Additional delegates are also expected from the states named. While the voting strength of each state at the convention is fixed by its progressive vote in 1922, the number of delegates among whom the quota is to be divided is not limited except by the number and strength of local unions, central bodies, groups of farmers and progressives, etc., that subscribe to the St. Paul platform and wish to send delegates.

The platform, on which LaFollette is expected to be nominated for president June 17, demands public ownership, government banking, public control of natural resources, restoration of civil liberties, abolition of government by injunction.

"LaFollette," Says Mahoney.

Regarding doubts by enemies of the June 17 gathering as to whether LaFollette will head the ticket, William Mahoney of the committee on arrangements says: "Everything indicates conclusively that LaFollette will be nominated without a question and will accept the leadership of the third party 1924 campaign. He will be the unanimous choice of all the conventions, and he will have electors in every state. It is probable he will run on Farmer-Labor tickets where such have official standing, and in states where no progressive group has attained official standing, petitions will have to be used."

Comrade J. Schaefer will speak on the Anti-Alien Laws, the menace of a super-blacklist. Comrade Schaefer is well-equipped to handle the subject and a most interesting talk can be expected. Meetings are open to the general public.

Hungarian Branch, at 1500 North Sedgewick St., second floor.

Tuesday, May 13.

Ukranian Branch No. 1, at Ukranian Club, 1532 W. Chicago, third floor.

Irving Park English, at 4021 N. Drake Ave.

Comrade Ernest Ettlinger will speak at the open meeting that night on the subject: "The Need of a Farmer-Labor Party."

Northwest English Branch, at 2733 Hirsh Blvd., Workers' Lyceum. All meetings start at 8 p. m., unless specified otherwise. (Note: Please keep all dates set up until expired.)

Meetings.

On Saturday evening, May 10, the Y. W. L. of Chicago will give its first dance and entertainment at Roosevelt Hall, 3437 West Roosevelt Road. Excellent music, novelties and refreshments have been provided. Admission is 50 cents, including wardrobe.

On Friday evening, May 9, there will be a meeting of the Branch Industrial Organizers of the party at the Amalgamated Food Workers' Hall, 214 N. State St. Our industrial work must be increased greatly, and meetings of the branch industrial organizers will be held regularly hereafter in order to co-ordinate and increase our work in the unions.

On Friday, May 9, the Council for the Protection of Foreign-Born Workers will hold a monster mass meeting at Douglas Auditorium, Ogden and Kedzie Aves. Speakers have been invited from the Chicago Federation of Labor, Workers Party and Socialist Party. The purpose of the meeting is to protest and demonstrate against the recently-passed Johnson Immigration Bill, which is nothing more than a super-blacklist against the class-conscious immigrant workers. On Tuesday, May 13, there will be a meeting of the Enlarged City Executive Committee at 166 West Washington St., room 303. Federation problems among other important business, will be taken up. Language C. C. C.'s shall make certain to send a representative.

On Saturday, May 10, at 2 p. m., there will be a meeting of the District Executive Committee at 166 West Washington St., room 303.

There will be a membership meeting of Pullman Party members on Monday, May 12. The purpose of the meeting will be to get the party members more active in the Pullman strike and to find ways and means for the Pullman Section of the W. P. to utilize more advantageously the opportunities afforded the Workers Party thru the strike.

The Third Annual Picnic of the Workers Party, Local Chicago, will be held on Friday, July 4, at Stickney's Grove. Speakers, dancing, games, refreshments, etc., are being provided. Sympathetic organizations are requested not to arrange any other affair, but to give all possible support to the July 4th picnic.

All local members should watch this column for news of all routine and special Party meetings.—Martin Abern, City Secretary.

Propose Cabinet Education Office.

(By The Federated Press)

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 8.—Establishment of a new federal department of education with a secretary of education in the president's cabinet was proposed by Miss Olive M. Jones, president National Education Assn., at the annual convention of Winchester County Teachers' Assn., White Plains. She replied to the attack made on the proposal by Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president, Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

MIKE PETCOFF DIES; FOUL PLAY IS SUSPECTED

Toledo Comrade Aided Soviet Russia

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 8.—We buried Comrade Mike Petcoff Monday at 1:30 p. m. The funeral services were held at 1517 Albert street.

As this was a Red funeral, no preacher was present. Comrade William Patterson officiated. He spoke of the comrade's noble deeds in the class struggle, helping to bring light to the masses and liberate them from wage slavery, and of the intense interest and activity shown by Comrade Petcoff when Soviet Russia was in the midst of the terrible famine.

Comrade Petcoff donated the use of his shoe repair shop and his own services in repairing and half-soleing all shoes the Toledo comrades collected in a house-to-house canvass. We collected and repaired several cases of shoes in this campaign.

Peculiar circumstances surrounded the death of Comrade Petcoff. He was found dead in his shoe shop, which is located at 1357 East Broadway. He lived in the rear of the shop.

When found he had a wound in the back of his head, which the coroner claimed was caused from falling when he had a heat attack. Comrade Petcoff was not subject to heat attacks.

Comrade Petcoff was known to have many enemies in the neighborhood because of advocating his theories, and distributing Communist propaganda from his shop to customers who called there.

There is a strong doubt in the minds of his comrades and close friends that he died a natural death, as threats were made many times against him, and that he would be roughly handled if he continued to disseminate his ideas and theories in the shop. Toledo comrades will not forget Comrade Petcoff.—A. W. Harvitt.

Meeting in Douglas Park.

After a short discussion by the members of Douglas Park English Branch, meeting at 3322 Douglas boulevard, on the formation of the Illinois Farmer-Labor Party, a conference for which will be held in Peoria, May 18, Harrison George gave a very interesting lecture on "Communists in the Labor Unions." He made a clear analysis of the tendencies of the trade union movements in the world, pointing out the differences between the pure and simple trade unionist movement, as in England, with the anarcho-syndicalist trade union movement, as in France, Italy and Spain, and the Socialist unionism in Germany, and the growing out of these three divergencies of the Communist trade unionism, taking with them the best, the most militant and the best fitted elements for the class struggle.

Long discussion followed his lecture on the tactics pursued by expelled Communists in trade unions.

A number of non-party members interested in the subject were present at the meeting and stayed until the discussion was over late at night.

Douglas Park English Branch holds its educational meetings every first Monday of the month at the address given above, on various phases of the revolutionary movement. Visitors are always invited for these lectures. On May 18 a business meeting will be held at which plans for work during the coming month will be laid down.

PAID PARTY WORKERS MUST DONATE ALL MAY DAY WAGES

By decision of the Central Executive Committee, all paid workers in Party institutions including subsidiary and fraternal institutions of the Party are to donate the wages paid to them for May Day, to the DAILY WORKER. This decision was made by the Central Executive Committee as an extension of the previous decision to the effect that all Party members who worked on May Day donate their day's wages to the DAILY WORKER.

Manley Talks On F-L Movement To Toledo Workers

TOLEDO, O., May 8.—The Toledo Local Workers Party had a very successful entertainment with a large attendance.

Everybody enjoyed the minstrel show, which was put on by local talent from the Workers Party.

We know those who missed this will not miss another minstrel show that the Toledo Comrades put on, when they hear about this one from the ones who attended.

Comrade Manley was with us, and gave us a very interesting lecture on the work and tactics of the Communist Party, which was enjoyed by all present.

Comrade Manley did much to clarify the issue of the Farmer-Labor Party and the tactics pursued by the Workers Party.

Cuban Revolt More Serious Than Coolidge Cabinet Will Admit

WASHINGTON, May 8.—War department approval of the request of the Cuban government for arms and war supplies was expected today.

The communication from President Zayas has been in the hands of Secretary of War Weeks, since Saturday. It was transmitted to him thru the State Department. No special legislation will be required for sale of munitions to Cuba. General provision for such emergencies was made in a law passed in 1916.

The embryo revolt in Cuba, in the meantime, continued to monopolize attention in diplomatic circles here. Many observers believe the state department is entirely too optimistic of speedy settlement by the Yayas forces.

BIG DONATIONS FROM MAY DAY PARADE'S DANCE

Dillonvale Raises $210 Celebrating

DILLONVILLE, Ohio, May 8.—Over $210 was cleared at the May Day festivities in this town and distributed in various donations. The Young Workers' League co-operated with locals of the United Mine Workers in making the day one of the most successful ever celebrated.

A parade of 3,000 men, women, and children of the Junior group, marched thru the town. They passed the school just as the older children were out at recess.

At noon the assemblage lunched in the Bohemian Hall and then listened to speakers in various languages. Fred Merrick, district organizer for the Workers Party in Pittsburgh, spoke in English and others spoke in Italian, Slavic and Hungarian.

Generous Donations.

The evening was given over to an international dance, for which the girls of the Young Workers' League served. The town baker made a fancy cake with the Y. W. L. initials sugared on it. This and an embroidered dresser scarf, donated by Antonia Hauner, were raffled off.

Sixty-five dollars was cleared from the parade alone and this sum, it was agreed, should be sent to the starving children of Germany. The other money raised was distributed as follows: Young Workers' League office, $20; DAILY WORKER, $20; Sub-district organization, $20; Labor Defense Council, for Ruthenberg appeal, $20; California Defense, $20. The rest of the money was put into the local Y. W. L. treasury, to help carry on the work.

At 11 p. m. the Ku Klux Klan came out and fired three loud shots and then burned the cross, but the merrymakers paid no attention to them, according to Joe Kobylak, junior, who reported the May Day events to the DAILY WORKER.

Peace in the Schools.

NEW YORK.—Can public school teachers directly combat war by developing methods and materials "for the effective teaching of peace"? The New York High School Teachers' Association has voted to try the experiment. President William Asher of the association is to get together a general conference of teachers and interest them in the peace plan of the high school teachers.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

Organize New Y. W. L. at May Day Meet.

A splendid May Day celebration, the proceeds of which are to be donated to the German Workers Relief, was held at Springfield, Ill., last Sunday afternoon and evening. The program began with a speech by Barney Mass, organizer for the Young Workers League, in which he outlined the problems confronting the American youth under capitalism and the remedies offered thru organization in the Y. W. L. After his speech an organization meeting was held in an ante-room, during which the work of the new organization and the duties of members and officers were fully outlined. The officers chosen have almost all had some experience in trade union or political organization work, so the new league's prospects of success are of the brightest.

The foundation was also laid for the speedy formation of a Y. W. L. Junior group. About a dozen Lithuanian girls of school age contributed songs and recitations to the program, and these splendid youngsters will serve as the backbone of the Junior group when it is organized. The older comrade in charge of this little group is also a charter member of the new Y. W. L., and she was instructed to complete the Junior organization just as soon as the Seniors are well started and the Organization Manual is mastered.

William F. Kruse spoke in the evening on the history and significance of May Day. Freeman Thompson, president of the miners' union sub-district, was chairman. Dancing concluded the program. An Italian organizer was present and raised a handsome sum toward the starting of the Italian workers' daily, "Il Lavaratori."

Ex-Yipsels in Reunion.

A group of one-time prominents of the one-time Young People's Socialist League has sent out a call for a social get-together at Workers' Lyceum, 2733 West Hirsch boulevard, on Saturday night, May 17. There is no thought of reorganizing the Y. P. S. L. Many of the members are now active in the Workers Party, Trade Union Educational League and other phases of the labor movement; many others are satisfied to rest on their laurels won in days of youth. But this call for an old-fashioned reunion, with cabaret dances, a mock trial and other stunts to enliven the proceedings will certainly win a large turnout. Sarah Smith, Harry Willson, Bill Kruse, Al Rofsky and other old-timers are on the arrangements committee. A special checkroom has been provided for hitherto unlisted members of Yipsel families.

The members of the Young Workers League will be out in full force to meet those who were the youth movement of older days, while many active Workers Party members, especially of the Northwest Side, will come out to meet friends long since dropped out of sight. Emma Blechsmith, Elsie Newman and other Y. W. L. dancers will entertain.

Then and Now.

Ten years ago, in the days of "peace time" Socialism, before the great war swept over the world, an election in Germany received only passing notice abroad. Not even when the German Socialists reached their pre-war strength of 110 reichstag members, did the foreign press show any signs of getting excited.

But times have changed. Now Communism is making over the map of the world. And the election of 62 Communists to the German reichstag forces the elections in Germany onto the first pages of the daily press for many days in succession. "The terrifying growth of the Communists" becomes a subject of immediate concern in all imperialist capitals. Shudderings are felt in Paris, London, Rome, Tokio, as well as in Washington.

Thus the German elections contrast the respective dangers to capitalism of "peace time" Socialism and the struggle of Communism in the present days of the developing class war. It was not for nothing that four million workers voted for Communist candidates in Germany, while millions deserted the standards of the German Socialism of Ebert, Noske and Scheidemann.

Just as the Russian workers and farmers flocked to the Bolshevik standards and pressed on to victory, just so the German masses are rallying under the banners of the German Communist Party, Section of the Communist International. And to the increasing extent that the Germans turn to Communism, just so rapidly will they approach the victory for their own class.

World capitalism fears the growth of Communism, because it recognizes in Communist leadership the conquering power that will envelop it in defeat. That world capitalism, in "peace time," correctly estimated the role of the "Socialists" is shown by the fact that the German social-democracy is now seeking to impose the slavery chains of the House of Morgan upon the limbs of German labor thru the so-called Dawes plan. But the German workers have spoken. They are turning to Communism in Germany as everywhere. They are turning against capitalism and all its lackeys. The seed of the martyrs, Liebknecht, Luxembourg and thousands of others, is beginning to bear fruit. New millions in Germany rally to the Red Flag of the workers' and farmers' victory and the thunder of their marching footsteps is heard around the world.

The Teachers' Councils

Chicago's school teachers have always fought for an increasing say in the conduct of the city's public school system. They have waged a tireless war for the right of organization. They have exposed tax dodging that robbed the children of school taxes that ought to be paid by the rich. They have carried on the best struggle they knew how to build for better public education for the children, which means the boys and girls of the working class.

The present struggle between the school teachers and Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew, therefore, is more than a battle over the right of the Teachers' Councils to take 45 minutes each month of their teaching time to discuss, among themselves, the various problems that arise.

It is inevitable that the discussions in the Teachers' Councils should be for the welfare of the children. They certainly take up vital problems of education, on which the big business appointees on the school board hold views vitally different than those of the teachers.

Superintendent McAndrew isn't so much worried about the 45 minutes. But if he can wipe out this right, he can proceed to eliminate the Teachers' Councils, and all other forms of organization that the teachers have built up. Instead of developing ideas of their own, Superintendent McAndrew would like the teachers to get all their ideas from him, to accept his dictatorship from the top. This is an intolerable situation. It is one that must be fought by all workers. We join the school teachers of Chicago in demanding that Superintendent McAndrew "Get Out!"

The New Age, of Buffalo, N. Y., one of the few surviving weekly publications drawing inspiration from the Socialist Party, breathed its last on May Day, May 1st. Its last days were occupied, as is usual with Socialist publications, in attacking the Russian Soviet Republic. Patrick Quinlan, one of its recent editors, showed himself a master hand at this form of billingsgate. Well, let them pass.

From 400,000 to 4,000,000 is a big leap, but the German Communists made it, from one reichstag election to the next, in counting their votes.

Plute Class Piffle

Policemen and firemen of Cleveland, Ohio, are being told what valuable members they are to modern capitalist society. The occasion is the effort of the yellow press and the open shop employers to smash all semblance of organization among these municipal workers.

These workers are told that they have the privilege, just like a soldier, to "face death on occasion," that their work is similar to that of soldiers, that they are the "first line of defense against destruction by criminal violence and fire."

In Cleveland, the head of the Firemen's Union has been expelled by Director of Public Safety Barry. This union official was driven out of the fire department for the sole reason that he sought to protect the human rights of the workers.

There is no reason why there should not be three eight-hour shifts in the police and fire departments of any city, except the one that big employers are opposed on principle to an eight-hour day. And that is about the only issue raised by a Firemen's Union, where it is not compelled to fight for the double-platoon, or 12-hour day, as against the 24-hour shift.

Only the big property holders oppose the three-shift, or even the two-shift system for firemen, altho it is their property that the fireman must protect, that the fireman must risk his life to save. The fireman needs a union to put up a fight for him. If he is good enough to sacrifice comfort, health and life itself, to safeguard property, he is good enough to have a union to see that he gets the right hours and wages. All the plute press piffle, about the dangers of unionism, is on a par with all promises made to the conscripted soldiers sent across the Atlantic to fight the battles of J. Pierpont Morgan in Europe. The returned soldiers are now making a fight for a bonus from congress in spite of all the "pay-triotism" and flag-waving of the American Bankers' Association and the Wall Street Journal.

Let the firemen of Cleveland stand by their expelled comrade against the attack of the Employers' Association and the Chamber of Commerce. Let the firemen in all cities organize their unions. Only thru their unions will they be able to win living conditions for themselves and their families.

God and Cahan

The convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, at Boston, Mass., did not open with prayer. But President Morris Sigman took the first opportunity that presented itself to thank God for the intelligence given the General Executive Board of the Union in fighting the militants in the union.

At about the same time we can imagine Abraham Cahan, editor of the Jewish Daily (Socialist) Forward, throwing out his chest and accepting Sigman's thanks, with his usual gusto.

For Sigman's Jehovah is a living god, with offices at 175 E. Broadway, New York City, whose sole purpose in seeking domination over the Jewish unions, is to use them as a weapon in making war upon the Communists. Cahan's stronghold is in "The International," and his main policy is that put into effect by the Sigman administration, "expel the members of the Trade Union Educational League."

The hand of this God got in its work in the effort to unseat the four regularly elected delegates of Local One, New York City. Sigman tried to railroad the unseating thru without debate, but the delegates forced the discussion. They have shown that they have something to say. This will become more apparent as the convention proceeds. If the delegates take control of the convention away from the officials, then there is hope for the immediate future of the union. If the dead hand of "God" Cahan continues to have its withering effect upon the organization, then there are dark days indeed ahead. The control of "The International" must be taken out of the hands of God and placed in the hands of the whole membership of the union, embracing all needle workers who seek their rightful place in the organization.

Under the Fascisti Thumb

Three delegates to the convention of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, will not be received by Mrs. "Cal" Coolidge at the White House, in Washington, today. Why these women should wish to go to the White House, we do not know, but the reason that three of them are denied admission is interesting.

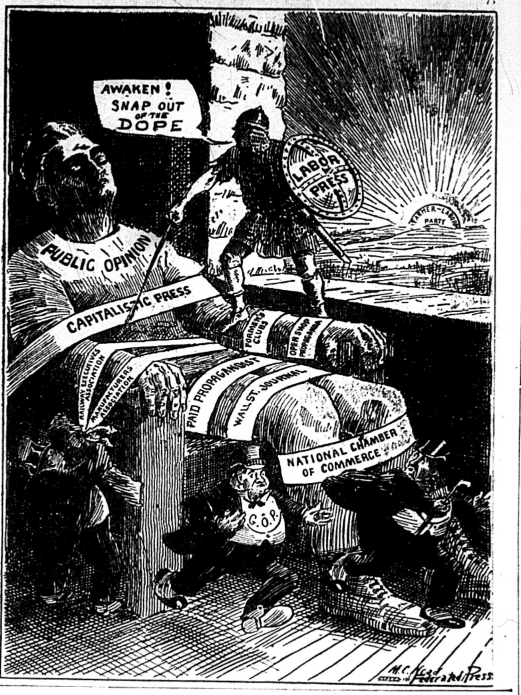
When the peace delegates drop around to the White House, the undesirable ones will be Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, Miss Wilma Gluchlich and Mrs. Meller, all of Hungary. The excuse is offered that they have not received the "O. K." of the Hungarian ambassador, Count Laszio Szechenyi.

Hungary today is under the Fascisti rule of the Dictator Horthy. The Communist movement and all radical sections of the political and industrial movement of labor are outlawed. Even all forms of liberalism are frowned upon. It is the bloody thumb of this Hungarian Fascisti dictatorship that brought pressure upon the White House at Washington, D. C., so that the three peace delegates from Hungary had the doors closed in their faces. It is well that all the workers and farmers should know where "Cautious Cal" gets his inspiration; from among the most reactionary of capitalist rulers.

Morris Hillquit, Abe Cahan and Sam Gompers are no doubt now convinced that there is a Communist movement in Germany.

Communism goes marching on. Read the election returns from Germany and be convinced.

It Needs More Support.



ORGANIZATIONAL SUPPORT OF NATIONAL FARMER-LABOR PARTY GROWING

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

Reports from St. Paul indicate a nation-wide interest on the part of the workers and farmers of this country in the June 17th Farmer-Labor Party Convention. Unquestionably several thousand delegates representing at least a million organized workers and farmers will gather in the convention June 17th.

What is more important than this, however, is the fact that the work of building a solid organizational structure for the national organization which will be formed as a result of the June 17th Convention is under way in many states.

A great national convention at St. Paul would be a splendid thing from an agitational standpoint, but unless this convention was supported by state and local organizations thruout the whole United States, it would not be able to accomplish a great deal in carrying on the fight of the workers and farmers politically. The effect of such a convention, if not followed by concrete organizational work, would soon disappear. The significance about the June 17th Convention is not only that it is arousing a nation-wide interest and delegates are being selected to attend this convention from all parts of the country, but that in many states organizations are being built to serve as the permanent foundation for the national organization which will be formed at St. Paul.

Six State Parties Behind St. Paul.

The St. Paul Convention was called in the name of six existing state Farmer-Labor parties. These are the state Farmer-labor parties in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana and Washington. All of these parties have been in existence for some considerable time. They are not entirely new growths. In Minnesota, Washington, Nebraska and South Dakota, the Farmer-Labor Party, or in Nebraska, the Progressive Party, have been in existence thru several political campaigns and have polled large votes in these campaigns. The parties in North Dakota and Montana are of later oirgin but they have a substantial backing and are firmly rooted in the political life of those states. The St. Paul Convention and the national organization which will grow out of it, therefore, begins with these six strong organizations as the basis for a nation-wide organization.

New State Parties Building.

The six state parties referred to above were in existence at the time the St. Paul Convention was called. Since the call for the convention was issued, movements have begun in a dozen other states to build state organizations all of which are pledged to the St. Paul Convention.

In Massachusetts, a call for a state convention is being issued by a group of local trade unions in that state and an organization will be created the latter part of the month of May which will be pledged to the June 17th Convention. In New York State, the Buffalo Labor Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York City have joined hands to call a state convention at Schenectady for May 18th, at which a state organization will be formed to send delegates to the June 17th Convention. A state convention is being held in Ohio on June 7th and 8th for the purpose of creating the state Farmer-Labor Party pledged to St. Paul. In Michigan a movement is under foot in Detroit for the formation of the first unit of what will be the state Farmer-Labor Party of Michigan. In Illinois, a large group of progressive trade unionists have issued a call for a convention on May 18th which will affiliate with the June 17th St. Paul Convention. Oklahoma will hold its state convention on May 9th and 10th. The Oklahoma call specifically pledges the party to be formed to June 17th. In Kansas a group of some 75 individuals well known in the farmer and labor movements have called a state convention for Salina, Kans., on May 17th in order to organize the state party in support of the June 17th Convention. In California a state convention will be held on May 31st and June 1st for the purpose of organizing the state Farmer-labor Party and sending delegates to the June 17th Convention.

In these seven states, state Farmer-Labor parties, all of them supporting the June 17th Convention, will be in existence before the date of the National Convention.

Other Parties Building.

While in the states mentioned above the movement for state organizations has taken concrete form, there are many other states in which the work to form state organizations supporting the National Farmer-Labor Convention has not advanced to this stage, but in which efforts are under These states are: Missouri, Iowa, way to create state organizations. Oregon and Wisconsin. The fact that there is a movement developing in the State of Wisconsin, the home of Republican LaFollette progressivism, is most significant. Evidently the workers and farmers of Wisconsin are not satisfied with the band of political action that they are getting from the LaFollette Republican Party in Wisconsin and are ready for the formation of a Farmer-Labor Party to fight their political battles.

In the State of Colorado, the Farmer-Labor Party formerly affiliated with the Farmer-Labor Party of Fitzpatrick and Brown, has broken away from the parent organization and pledged itself to send delegates to the June 17th Convention. A similar movement exists within the Farmer-Labor Party of Indiana which is still functioning as a part of the old Farmer-Labor Party. In West Virginia there is a strong group in the Farmer-Labor Party which is urging affiliation with the National Farmer-Labor Party St. Paul group.

Permanent Crystallization.

The fact that in some twenty states Farmer-Labor parties are already in existence or in the process of building, indicates the sweep of the movement for independent political action, and gives promise of permanent crystallization of the Farmer-Labor movement in a strongly knit, well organized Farmer-Labor Party.

It is not sufficient that there should be a loose coalition of all kinds of groups who are opposed to the old political parties in the St. Paul Convention. What is needed in the United States today is a political party representing the class interests of the farmers and industrial workers which shall not only fight their battles in the election campaign but which will function all the year 'round as a political organization carrying on a continuous struggle in the interests of the exploited farmers and the industrial workers.

The organizations already built and those in the process of building give promise of the formation of such a party at the St. Paul Convention. Such a closely knit fighting organization of workers and farmers will be a real achievement for the American labor movement.

The Poor Fish says that the Japs are probably disgusted with Congress, but that they have nothing on the American people in that respect.

Suggestion for Serial.

Youngstown, Ohio.

To the DAILY WORKER: I consider "The Ragged Trousered Philanthropist," by Robert Tressall, one of the best stories the DAILY WORKER could publish. It contains a wealth of humor, while at the same time portraying the darker side of the worker's life; its simple lessons in economics are so easily understood and at the same time amusing.

I am sure it would gain many friends for the paper, and it will appeal to all workers whether they are class conscious or not, and may bring many young workers into closer relations with the party or young league.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

During the course of a strike in a Donegal, Ireland asylum, a Miss Hegarty, one of the female attendants, refused to walk out with her comrades. She stayed and scabbed. The committee in charge of the institution recruited help to take the place of those who struck. While Miss Hegarty was sitting in a chair in front of a stove, four of these "strikebreakers" seized and gagged her and gave her the "bum's rush" to the sidewalk, giving her a good trouncing, at the same time, impressing on her mind and on her body their conviction that a "scab" was hardly fit to touch except with a very long pole. The "strikebreakers" did not return to the asylum, neither did Miss Hegarty. She was taken to a hospital.

The Chicago Tribune combining business with patriotism, has ventured into the weekly magazine field. The first issue of the new periodical is now on the stands and one would never think that the Tribune would pay $20,000 to the person who discovered the most appropriate title for a publication issued by the most notorious reactionary outfit in America. "Liberty" it is, and the Chicago Tribune, with thrills of pride running up and down its spinal column says, "and we are proud of the title."

The winner of the prize is from Youngstown, Ohio, a favorite haunt of the Ku Klux Klan. It is true, he made over three thousand attempts before it occurred to him that the Medill Patterson-McCormack imperialists would give a nickel for such a title. No doubt "Liberty" will soon be in a United Front with its daily step-mother carrying on a campaign for intervention in Mexico. "Oh, Liberty, how many crimes are committed in they name?"

Morris Hillquit delivered a series of lectures recently to select audiences of East Side pawn brokers, shopkeepers, and a few labor leaders. His object was to prove that the policy of the Socialist Party was correct and that the tactics of the Communists were dead wrong and that Communism was on the downgrade in Europe. After the great German landside for Communism in the recent elections, Morris will have to revise his estimates even tho he is not likely to change his opinions. Communists activities do not begin and end with elections. That is only a small part of the business. Since the elections the Ruhr workers have indulged in a very effective form of political action. A general strike is much more political than the mere dropping of a ballot in a box. Dropping ballots is merely a counting of noses. Unfortunately many radicals do not differentiate between political action and parliamentary action. The latter is included in the former. The greater contains the less. Anyhow, there is very little consolation in the German elections for Morris Hillquit.

A writer in the New York Nation compains that Calvin Coolidge proved himself incapable of effective indignation over the disclosures of thievery on the part of his cabinet. Speaking at an Associated Press dinner, the president glossed over the Teapot Dome and other scandals by blaming the world war for the slight crack in the liberty bell of official morality. However, the Nation is grateful for one silver lining in the black cloud of threatened war that hangs over the world—the Dawes plan. Poor liberals are always bound to be disillusioned. We more than imagine that 4,000,000 Communist votes backed by perhaps 15,000,000 German workers will drive a long spike in the coffin of the Dawes plan for keeping the German workers in a state of industrial feudalism.

"Back to honesty" is the slogan of the Gompers part of the election machinery of the American Federation of Labor. Of course, Samuel is non-partisan, that is, he will consistently vote the democrat ticket. Non-partisanship means that the workers must not have a political party of their own. Gompers allows them the privilege of voting for either of the two capitalist parties reserving for himself the right to inveigle as many as he can to the democrat side. One set of labor fakers are rooting for LaFollette, another for McAdoo, still another for Coolidge and the so-called radicals, the Socialist Party, or what is left of it don't know the devil where they are at. They are just like Mr. Micawber in the Dicken's novel, waiting for something to turn up.

It is rumored that "Hell-and-Maria" Dawes is Coolidge's choice for a running mate in the presidential marathon. This is even a better combination than Coolidge and John L. Lewis. It is true that the Coolidge-Lewis duo have a common bond; they are both strikebreakers. But Dawes is a banker and a military man even tho most of his military exploits were executed in the swivel chair. He is also a good strikebreaker. Calvin Coolidge, strikebreaker president, and General Dawes, Commander in Chief of the Strikebreaking Minute Men of the Constitution would give the next election the proper capitalist flavor. Any worker who would cast a ballot for either of these gentlemen would thank a highwayman for robbing him of his last nickel.

BURNS, HEAD LABOR SPY, FORCED TO QUIT IN DISGRACE

Germany Trembles to the Tramp of Revolting Workingclass

GOMPERS AIDS SIGMAN WAR ON LEFT WING IN BOSTON MEETING OF INTERNATIONAL

By REBECCA GRECHT.

BOSTON, Mass., May 9.—Another "red raid" against all things Communist was carried out here by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, with the usual accompaniments, when he addressed the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union.

Morris Sigman, president of "The International," whose steam roller had been busy for days eliminating left wingers from the convention, presented Gompers to the convention as "Our Chief."

Applause Carefully Staged.

Carefully staged applause had greeted the Anti-Sovietist upon his entrance to the convention hall. He came in while the delegates were discussing the unseating of four delegates of Local No. 1, of New York City. The same claquers who had upheld the vindictive attacks of Vice-Presidents Israel Feinberg, Meyer Perlstein and the rest of the official crew, against the militants, again exerted themselves for "Sammy."

But the militants had been busy, and when Gompers entered all delegates had in their hands leaflets stating Gompers' opposition to immigration and in favor of the notorious anti-labor Johnson bill.

Take Up Case of Local 9.

The climax in the contest growing out of the report of the credentials committee was reached with the case of Local No. 9, of New York city. In this case charges were made against both the local and its delegates.

The credentials committee recommended the unseating of eight of the 11 delegates, charging that a secret meeting, held with outsiders, nominated the elected delegates.

The committee also recommended that Local No. 9 be placed under the dictatorship of the General Executive Board for some time, because it had disobeyed the decision of the G. E. B., in that it had taken no action against the league members, and because, as it was alleged, it had received orders from outsiders.

Progressives Control Local.

Local No. 9 is now under the control of progressives and is opposing certain policies of the Sigman officialdom. The administration forces aim to seize control of the local and to destroy every vestige of opposition.

Delegate Louis Hyman, manager of Local No. 9, defended the seating of the delegates, charging that the case was a frameup, based on the flimsy evidence offered by one indvidual. There was no corroborative evidence offered and no investigation. Hyman charged that the objections against the delegates border on the tactics familiar to martial and lynch law. He charged that the officialdom holds caucuses and uses its power to prevent the election to the convention of well-known union members disagreeing with the international policies of the regime in power. Instead they secure the election of unknown members in order to solidify the control of the machine.

Other delegates, defending the accused, charged that the Sigman administration seeks to destroy the local. They stated that preparations had been made three weeks ago to unseat the delegates.

Thru the unseating of these delegates the Sigman administration directed its aim, not only against the Workers party, the Trade Union Educational league, but against the program and principles of the entire left wing.

The secretary of the credentials committee bitterly attacked the Freiheit, the Jewish Communist daily. The eight delegates whose seats were contested were unseated on a roll call by a vote of 225 to 47. The local was placed under the supervision of the General Executive Board by a vote of 214 to 33.

New Yorkers Unseated.

It was after the Sigman machine had rolled out a vote of 207 to 51 in favor of the unseating of the New York delegates that Gompers was given the floor and, with his usual bitter invective, launched into an attack on the Workers Party, the Trade Union Educational League and all things and persons Communist.

STRIKERS DRAW PENALTIES FROM BIASED JUDGE

Foell Frees One; Fines Four $25 Each

A change has come over the court of equity where Judge Charles M. Foell is hearing injunction cases against garment strikers.

The judge yesterday discharged Mrs. Caroline Heim, one of the strikers whom two bosses had just been testifying against and fined four others $25 each, in place of the $50 fines he had given before and in contrast to the big fines and long prison sentences to which "Dennie" Sullivan is addicted.

Furthermore, Foell refrained from caustic comments against foreign born workers which he indulged in several days ago. And even Prosecutor Coleman, who is substituting for Hyde, of the Chicago Association of Dress Manufacturers, went thru the form of addressing the strik-

Foell still insists, however, that the strikers have no right to walk the public streets. The persons he fined yesterday, according to the admission of Henry Reinhart, a dress manufacturer, were "well behaved" and "peaceful" as they walked the streets. The

FARMER-LABOR SEC'Y ROUSES OMAHA WORKERS

OMAHA, Neb., May 9.— Joseph Manley, national secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, spoke to a highly enthusiastic and attentive crowd at the Omaha May Day meeting, held under the auspices of the local Workers Party organization.

Manley said in part:

"As we meet on this May Day we revolutionists have much to be thankful for. We have a right to feel sincerely proud of the movement which we have built.

"Our Workers Party is only a young organization, yet today we are publishing our own daily paper and entering upon undertakings which we could not have dreamed of a few years ago. Our party is practically solely responsible, in an organizational way, for the existence of the great Farmer-Labor movement which is firing the imagination of the workers and farmers in these Northwestern states.

"We also have reason to be thankful that Soviet Russia, after years of war and famine, is today teaching the capitalist nations lessons in the building of industry and agriculture. Russia is today a united nation under Communist leadership, a stronghold for the workers and farmers thruout the world.

"It is our duty to the farmers and workers thruout the country, our duty to the party, our duty to the valiant pioneers who are carrying the revolution thru to success in Russia, it is our duty between now and the next May Day to build an even more powerful movement in America."

David Coutts presided as chairman, and a program of music and dancing entertained the audience.

PULLMAN PACT IS REFUSED BY ANGRY STRIKERS

Will Not Buy Jobs By Blacklist

The striking carbuilders of the Pullman Company shop again unanimously decided to strike until their strike committee is recognized, instead of the "company union" stool pigeons appointed by the Pullman officials to represent them, and decided not to go back to work until their demands are met.

At a conference earlier in the day with Francis Gunn, and other Company officials, some of the strikers found that the only offer made thru the employes' committee of the Company union was no offer at all. The Pullman Company tried to trick the men into returning to work and settling the wage differences afterwards. They had the insolence to make the proposal that the strikers desert their leaders like a pack of whipped curs. In return for allowing the Pullman Company to fire and blacklist the ten men who have successfully guided their strike this far, the Company made hazy and definite promises of "later on adjusting the wage scale."

FIVE RESTAURANT BOSSES GRANTED HOT INJUNCTION

But Strike Goes Merrily On Nevertheless

Rushing to the aid of the Greek restaurant bosses and their 12-14-hour day, Judge Hugo Freund of Circuit Court issued an injunction forbidding picketing in front of five of the dozen restaurants affected by the strike of the Amalgamated Food Workers.

At a late hour last night, strikers were keeping the scabs away in good shape and the only effect of Freund's unfriendliness was to put more pep into the fight for civilized conditions.

The two restaurants just struck, are the La Salle, 4957 Sheridan Road, and the Peterson, 1107 Lawrence Ave.

The enjoined shops are the Pomeroy, 1120 Argyle Ave.; the Elroy, Lawrence Ave. and the "L" station; Carvell's, 1149 Wilson Ave.; the Presto, 4774 Lincoln Ave., and the Elite, at 1037 Wilson Ave.

Gillett Is Out For Walsh's Senate Seat From Massachusetts

WASHINGTON, May 9.—In a brief statement, Speaker Frederick H. Gillett of the House of Representatives today announced himself a candidate for the senatorial seat now held by Senator Walsh, a democrat.

Gillett's statement revealed that he agreed to run for the senate only after Governor Channing Cox, of Massachusetts, had declined to become a candidate.

President Coolidge personally urged Gillett to run and the speaker will have the administration's warmest support.

Jugo-Slavs Active.

ATHENS, May 9.—Jugo-Slavia is secretly concentrating troops in readiness to invade Albania and take advantage of the chaotic internal situation in that country, according to reports from Tirana, which are quite unconfirmed and taken with considerable reserve.

Greek reports also tell of two rival columns of revolutionists, 1,000 strong each, moving on Tirana. One of these armies is Serbophil, the other Italophil, it is claimed.

MUSCLE POWER, NOT BRAIN POWER, IS POPULAR AT YALE UNIVERSITY

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 9.—Yale prefers brawn to brain. In the annual college balloting, 127 voted their preference for an athletic "Y" against 95 voting for a phi betta kappa key. Bill Mallory, football captain, was voted the school's best man.

Ruhr Strike and Threatened Extention To Saxony Bring Grave Political Crisis

BERLIN, May 9.—The strikes and lockouts continue in the Ruhr with increasing prospects of a sympathy strike in Saxony. The German government is willing to try to settle the Ruhr economic questions but shies at intervention, due to the political aspects of the lockouts. The strikes are now under Communist direction.

A separatist plot was unearthed today which provided for formation of the "Ruhr Economic State."

Documents revealing the plot showed that the separatist plan embodied occupation of the mines, the products of which could then be devoted to reparations.

It was proposed to start negotations with France, Belgium and Great Britain in the name of the Ruhr state once the occupation was effected.

The workers would also have the eight hour day upon which they have insisted.

RECHT FINDS SOVIET FORGING RAPIDLY AHEAD

Moscow Interested In Washington Scandals

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 9.—Conditions in Russia are rapidly improving, is the report brought back from Moscow by Charles Recht, legal adviser of the Russian government in New York. Recht, who has returned from a three months' trip to various European countries, found the progress in Russia in strange contrast to the disintegration and economic chaos in the other countries, he said.

An invitation to Dr. John Dewey, formerly of Columbia university, from Lenin's widow, inviting him to come to Russia as educational adviser to the government, was brought by Recht. Mme. Lenin, who is a teacher by profession and now in charge of extending Russia's educational system, told Recht that she considers Dewey the world's greatest educator. For two years Dewey has been advising with her by letter, and she now hopes that he will come in person.

"All you read in the papers about a reversal of the Nep (new economic policy) is bunk," Recht told the Federated Press in describing Russian conditons. He went on to say that there had been popular protest against the high life of certain nepmen, or profiteers, and as a result the government has sent many of them to Siberia. The cabarets are closed and Moscow is as tight as a drum after 10 o'clock at night. Moscow is still the safest capital in Europe and has little crime, he said.

"Moscow is much interested in the revelations of wholesale graft in the Washington government which is going unpunished. They point out that there are fewer grafters in Russia, but these are immediately punished, even tho they are officials or Communists," Recht explained. Speaking of the recent breakdown of Bessarabian negotiations, he said he did not anticipate war between Russia and Roumania, as Russia is very anxious for peace.

Rykov, Lenin's successor, is described by Recht as an able organizer, who has won the confidence of the people and of his fellow party members. Without wishing to initiate policies of his own, he is determined to lead Russia along the lines laid down by Lenin.

Wheeler Denies Charge That He Promised To Get Oil Permits

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana took the stand in his own defense before the senate committee investigating his indictment today and declared he had never negotiated for oil land permits with the interior department on behalf of Gordon Campbell, Montana oil man, as charged in his indictment.

"I never promised to get permits, I never got permits, I never discussed permits," he said.

BURNS GIVES FINAL WHINE AGAINST REDS AND "SOVIET GROUP"

WASHINGTON, May 9.— Burns' resignation had been expected since former attorney general Daugherty retired from the cabinet, because of his close association with Daugherty.

"I have been planning to resign for some time," Burns said, "even before Mr. Daugherty left the department, but Daugherty would not let me.

"I shall continue to take the same interest in good government that I have always taken and I shall oppose, as I have always opposed, this Soviet and radical group."

In severing his connections with the department, Burns terminates an intermittent service with the government begun 25 years ago.

DETROIT CARMEN IN FIGHT TO SAVE UNION

Capitalist City Solons Fire Union Officers

By SHERMAN BOWMAN.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

DETROIT.—The street railway commission and the managers of the city owned and operated street railway system have at last committed themselves to a wide-open effort to smash the carmen's union in Detroit.

The union led off with a demand for a 14 per cent wage increase and improved working conditions, calling attention to the fact that in spite of promises a large proportion of the platform men have to put in from 12 to 15 hours a day to get eight hours' pay owing to split runs.

The street railway commission refused to deal with the union. Instead it attempted to arbitrate with a large commitee of platform men selected by itself on a seniority basis. The commission then announced that it was prepared to offer death, sickness and benefit insurance to the 3,500 platform workers at a low rate, dues to be taken from the weekly pay envelopes. It was believed this offer would be a wedge in the men's solidarity.

Next, the department of street railways, thru the general manager, ordered the business agent and the secretary of the local to go back to work on the street cars, at one day's notice. At a workers' mass meeting, attended by a third of the platform men, all who were not at work, a resolution was unanimously passed authorizing the two officers and the president to remain on their jobs as officials of the union. The managers of the system struck the names of the secretary and business agent from the payroll when they did not report for work at the barns the following day. The president was not on the payroll.

The private company from which the city bought the lines had recognized the union and paid the wages of the two officials. The street railway commission has paid them since the purchase two years ago.

The next step of the union will be to go over the heads of the commission and managers and see the mayor and council. Recognition of the union, increased wages and better conditions will be demanded.

Hitch It To Tax Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Plunging along toward an almost certain vote on the tax bill today, the senate struck a snag when Senator Norbeck, South Dakota, announced he would offer the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill as an amendment to the measure.

BURNS LOSES JOB AS CHIEF U. S. SLEUTH

Crook Follows Denby And Daugherty

WASHINGTON, May 9.—William J. Burns has joined the noble army of Has Beens with Denby and Daugherty. The chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice turned in his resignation yesterday afternoon to President Coolidge and will now devote his entire time to his discredited private detective agency.

Burns' resignation under fire was announced after he had spent all morning in denouncing reports that he was quitting. The chief of the federal stool pigeon service kept insisting that he still had the confidence of the president.

Too Heavy A Load.

It became known in white house circles earlier in the day that the resignation was coming. Mr. Coolidge felt that the odium attached to Burns was becoming too heavy for a campaign horse to carry.

The last straw that broke the camel's back, was the information that the senate investigating committee was preparing to open up the darkest chapter in the Burns' cabinet. The probing solons were about to turn the light on Burns' activities as a director of labor spying.

It became known that the committee had indisputable evidence showing that Burns was using his official position as head of the Bureau of Investigation to assist his private enterprise, the William J. Burns International Detective Agency in industrial espionage, for which the agency was being paid by private interests.

Follows I. W. W. Expose.

The committee's evidence includes 200 letters from the files of the Los Angeles branch of the Burns agency. Some of them over Burns' own signature, showing how Department of Justice operatives were dispatched to Arizona to assist his agency operatives in espionage work for the copper interests. The espionage was directed against the Industrial Workers of the World and the American Federation of Labor and the original evidence was obtained by the I. W. W.

Further evidence relates to Burns' illegal use of Department of Justice men in breaking the shopmen's strike.

His resignation follows close on the heels of his failure to get a huge special appropriation for his labor spy bureau.

Jailed in Hunger Strike

PARIS, May 9.—A protest against the white terror in Poland has been published here under the signatures of many well known writers and eminent citizens. The protest states that there are over three thousand political prisoners in the jails of Poland, and that the regime in the jails is so terrible that hundreds of the prisoners are at present protesting with hunger strikes.

GOVERNMENT FEARS LABOR WILL RULE

500,000 Idle As Strike Strike Ranks Grow

BERLIN, May 9.—Every hour registers new additions to the spreading Communist strikes in the Ruhr, Saxony and Silesia. It is estimated that 500,000 men are now idle, mostly coal miners.

Government officials express the fear that the Communists will take over the reins of government in the localities where the strikes prevail.

Rote Fahne, "The Red Flag," official organ of the German Communist Party, calls the strike the "beginning of a new struggle in Germany."

Ninety-two per cent of the Ruhr coal mines are idle.

Moscow Holds Firm.

MOSCOW, May 9.—German Foreign Secretary Stresemann's note explaining the police raid upon Russian trade hearquarters in Berlin is not satisfactory, the soviet press declared today.

Official newspapers make the following demands upon Germany:

An apology, punishment of police who conducted the raid, compensation for workers.

47,000 GERMAN SHIPBUILDERS IN HARD STRIKE

Workers Undaunted After 10 Weeks

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER,
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

HAMBURG, Germany, May 9.—Over 47,000 German workers engaged in the shipbuilding industry are making a heroic fight for the maintenance of the eight-hour day, for recognition of their union (they are almost all members of the Metal Workers' union of Germany), and for better wages. Tho the fight has lasted now for 10 weeks, and the men must live on strike benefits of only $1.25 to $1.50 per week, their spirit is undaunted.

The Hamburg workers number 18,000 with 9,000 at Kiel, 7,000 at Bremen, 5,000 at Stettin, 3,000 at Rostock, 2,000 at Bremerhaven.

The National Association of German Metal Industrials is throwing its organization into this fight, because if they can win over the radical workers on the water front, they will have an easier time in the interior.

On the other hand, the local population in every place affected is solidly behind the strikers. This extends so far that certain directors of the shipbuilding concerns have taken children of the strikers to their tables to atone in a measure for the sins of the stockholders. The small business men are freely advancing credit to the strikers.

In January the employers, in the face of an arbitration award which had been declared binding upon both parties, made arbitrary regulations regarding hours. The unions instructed their men to work eight hours and drop tools. The ship owners then declared a lockout.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE CELEBRATES ITS SECOND ANNIVERSARY TONIGHT

Tonight at the Roosevelt Hall, 3437 West Roosevelt road, the Young Workers League of Chicago will hold a Youth Spring Dance which will also be an anniversary dance celebrating the entrance of the third year of the Young Workers League in the struggles for the young working masses.

This spring dance will be given in the honor of Spring, that most charming Goddess of the Seasons, on May 10th, the official date set by the Young Workers' League of Chicago.

Music for this breezy and balmy evening will be poured forth by Mitchell's Pan Pipers, who have won fame by their enticing recitations of symphonic jazz poems, via the saxophone, trombone, blue bells, etc.

There will be no occasion for food riots. However, should there be any manifestations of this, refreshments as only the delicate hands of youth can prepare, will be served in a way which will murder all ravishing appetites and renew any losses for those who come without them.

Preparations for this ball have shown promises to make this event the best the youth of Chicago have ever undertaken. The admission, fifty cents, includes wardrobe. The affair will be held tonight.

A separatist plot was unearthed today which provided for formation of the "Ruhr Economic State."

Documents revealing the plot showed that the separatist plan embodied occupation of the mines, the products of which could then be devoted to reparations.

It was proposed to start negotations with France, Belgium and Great Britain in the name of the Ruhr state once the occupation was effected.

The workers would also have the eight hour day upon which they have insisted.

RECHT FINDS SOVIET FORGING [illegible]LY AHEAD

[illegible]ted In [illegible]dals

[illegible]as in [illegible]s the [illegible]scow by [illegible]adviser of the [illegible]nt in New York. Recht, w[illegible]as returned from a three months' trip to various European countries, found the progress in Russia in strange contrast to the disintegration and economic chaos in the other countries, he said.

An invitation to Dr. John Dewey, formerly of Columbia university, from Lenin's widow, inviting him to come to Russia as educational adviser to the government, was brought by Recht. Mme. Lenin, who is a teacher by profession and now in charge of extending Russia's educational system, told Recht that she considers Dewey the world's greatest educator. For two years Dewey has been advising with her by letter, and she now hopes that he will come in person.

"All you read in the papers about a reversal of the Nep (new economic policy) is bunk," Recht told the Federated Press in describing Russian conditons. He went on to say that there had been popular protest against the high life of certain nepmen, or profiteers, and as a result the government has sent many of them to Siberia. The cabarets are closed and Moscow is as tight as a drum after 10 o'clock at night. Moscow is still the safest capital in Europe and has little crime, he said.

"Moscow is much interested in the revelations of wholesale graft in the Washington government which is going unpunished. They point out that there are fewer grafters in Russia, but these are immediately punished, even tho they are officials or Communists," Recht explained. Speaking of the recent breakdown of Bessarabian negotiations, he said he did not anticipate war between Russia and Roumania, as Russia is very anxious for peace.

Rykov, Lenin's successor, is described by Recht as an able organizer, who has won the confidence of the people and of his fellow party members. Without wishing to initiate policies of his own, he is determined to lead Russia along the lines laid down by Lenin.

Wheeler Denies Charge That He Promised To Get Oil Permits

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana took the stand in his own defense before the senate committee investigating his indictment today and declared he had never negotiated for oil land permits with the interior department on behalf of Gordon Campbell, Montana oil man, as charged in his indictment.

"I never promised to get permits, I never got permits, I never discussed permits," he said.

MUSCLE POWER, NOT BRAIN POWER, IS POPULAR AT YALE UNIVERSITY

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 9.—Yale prefers brawn to brain. In the annual college balloting, 127 voted their preference for an athletic "Y" against 95 voting for a phi betta kappa key. Bill Mallory, football captain, was voted the school's best man.

BURNS GIVES FINAL WHINE AGAINST REDS AND "SOVIET GROUP"

WASHINGTON, May 9.— Burns' resignation had been expected since former attorney general Daugherty retired from the cabinet, because of his close association with Daugherty.

"I have been planning to resign for some time," Burns said, "even before Mr. Daugherty left the department, but Daugherty would not let me.

"I shall continue to take the same interest in good government that I have always taken and I shall oppose, as I have always opposed, this Soviet and radical groups."

In severing his connections with the department, Burns terminates an intermittent service with the government begun 25 years ago.

DETROIT CARMEN IN FIGHT TO SAVE UNION

Capitalist City Solons Fire Union Officers

By SHERMAN BOWMAN.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

DETROIT.—The street railway commission and the managers of the city owned and operated street railway system have at last committed themselves to a wide-open effort to smash the carmen's union in Detroit.

The union led off with a demand for a 14 per cent wage increase and improved working conditions, calling attention to the fact that in spite of promises a large proportion of the platform men have to put in from 12 to 15 hours a day to get eight hours' pay owing to split runs.

The street railway commission refused to deal with the union. Instead it attempted to arbitrate with a large commitee of platform men selected by itself on a seniority basis. The commission then announced that it was prepared to offer death, sickness and benefit insurance to the 3,500 platform workers at a low rate, dues to be taken from the weekly pay envelopes. It was believed this offer would be a wedge in the men's solidarity.

Next, the department of street railways, thru the general manager, ordered the business agent and the secretary of the local to go back to work on the street cars, at one day's notice. At a workers' mass meeting, attended by a third of the platform men, all who were not at work, a resolution was unanimously passed authorizing the two officers and the president to remain on their jobs as officials of the union. The managers of the system struck the names of the secretary and business agent from the payroll when they did not report for work at the barns the following day. The president was not on the payroll.

The private company from which the city bought the lines had recognized the union and paid the wages of the two officials. The street railway commission has paid them since the purchase two years ago.

The next step of the union will be to go over the heads of the commission and managers and see the mayor and council. Recognition of the union, increased wages and better conditions will be demanded.

Hitch It To Tax Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Plunging along toward an almost certain vote on the tax bill today, the senate struck a snag when Senator Norbeck, South Dakota, announced he would offer the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill as an amendment to the measure.

BURNS LOSES JOB AS CHIEF U. S. SLEUTH

Crook Follows Denby And Daugherty

WASHINGTON, May 9.—William J. Burns has joined the noble army of Has Beens with Denby and Daugherty. The chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice turned in his resignation yesterday afternoon to President Coolidge and will now devote his entire time to his discredited private detective agency.

Burns' resignation under fire was announced after he had spent all morning in denouncing reports that he was quitting. The chief of the federal stool pigeon service kept insisting that he still had the confidence of the president.

Too Heavy A Load.

It became known in white house circles earlier in the day that the resignation was coming. Mr. Coolidge felt that the odium attached to Burns was becoming too heavy for a campaign horse to carry.

The last straw that broke the camel's back, was the information that the senate investigating committee was preparing to open up the darkest chapter in the Burns' cabinet. The probing solons were about to turn the light on Burns' activities as a director of labor spying.

It became known that the committee had indisputable evidence showing that Burns was using his official position as head of the Bureau of Investigation to assist his private enterprise, the William J. Burns International Detective Agency in industrial espionage, for which the agency was being paid by private interests.

Follows I. W. W. Expose.

The committee's evidence includes 200 letters from the files of the Los Angeles branch of the Burns agency. Some of them over Burns' own signature, showing how Department of Justice operatives were dispatched to Arizona to assist his agency operatives in espionage work for the copper interests. The espionage was directed against the Industrial Workers of the World and the American Federation of Labor and the original evidence was obtained by the I. W. W.

Further evidence relates to Burns' illegal use of Department of Justice men in breaking the shopmen's strike.

His resignation follows close on the heels of his failure to get a huge special appropriation for his labor spy bureau.

Jailed in Hunger Strike

PARIS, May 9.—A protest against the white terror in Poland has been published here under the signatures of many well known writers and eminent citizens. The protest states that there are over three thousand political prisoners in the jails of Poland, and that the regime in the jails is so terrible that hundreds of the prisoners are at present protesting with hunger strikes.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE CELEBRATES ITS SECOND ANNIVERSARY TONIGHT

Tonight at the Roosevelt Hall, 3437 West Roosevelt road, the Young Workers League of Chicago will hold a Youth Spring Dance which will also be an anniversary dance celebrating the entrance of the third year of the Young Workers League in the struggles for the young working masses.

This spring dance will be given in the honor of Spring, that most charming Goddess of the Seasons, on May 10th, the official date set by the Young Workers' League of Chicago.

Music for this breezy and balmy evening will be poured forth by Mitchell's Pan Pipers, who have won fame by their enticing recitations of symphonic jazz poems, via the saxophone, trombone, blue bells, etc.

There will be no occasion for food riots. However, should there be any manifestations of this, refreshments as only the delicate hands of youth can prepare, will be served in a way which will murder all ravishing appetites and renew any losses for those who come without them.

Preparations for this ball have shown promises to make this event the best the youth of Chicago have ever undertaken. The admission, fifty cents, includes wardrobe. The affair will be held tonight.

GOVERNMENT FEARS LABOR WILL RULE

500,000 Idle As Strike Strike Ranks Grow

BERLIN, May 9.—Every hour registers new additions to the spreading Communist strikes in the Ruhr, Saxony and Silesia. It is estimated that 500,000 men are now idle, mostly coal miners.

Government officials express the fear that the Communists will take over the reins of government in the localities where the strikes prevail.

Rote Fahne, "The Red Flag," official organ of the German Communist Party, calls the strike the "beginning of a new struggle in Germany."

Ninety-two per cent of the Ruhr coal mines are idle.

Moscow Holds Firm.

MOSCOW, May 9.—German Foreign Secretary Stresemann's note explaining the police raid upon Russian trade hearquarters in Berlin is not satisfactory, the soviet press declared today.

Official newspapers make the following demands upon Germany:

47,000 GERMAN SHIPBUILDERS IN HARD STRIKE

Workers Undaunted After 10 Weeks

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER,
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

HAMBURG, Germany, May 9.—Over 47,000 German workers engaged in the shipbuilding industry are making a heroic fight for the maintenance of the eight-hour day, for recognition of their union (they are almost all members of the Metal Workers' union of Germany), and for better wages. Tho the fight has lasted now for 10 weeks, and the men must live on strike benefits of only $1.25 to $1.50 per week, their spirit is undaunted.

The Hamburg workers number 18,000 with 9,000 at Kiel, 7,000 at Bremen, 5,000 at Stettin, 3,000 at Rostock, 2,000 at Bremerhaven.

The National Association of German Metal Industrials is throwing its organization into this fight, because if they can win over the radical workers on the water front, they will have an easier time in the interior.

On the other hand, the local population in every place affected is solidly behind the strikers. This extends so far that certain directors of the shipbuilding concerns have taken children of the strikers to their tables to atone in a measure for the sins of the stockholders. The small business men are freely advancing credit to the strikers.

In January the employers, in the face of an arbitration award which had been declared binding upon both parties, made arbitrary regulations regarding hours. The unions instructed their men to work eight hours and drop tools. The ship owners then declared a lockout.

PULLMAN PACT IS REJECTED BY ANGRY STRIKERS

for settlement to be obtained thru the company union stool pigeons is the promise of plenty of work, BUT AT THE REDUCED PIECE WORK SCALE. The company union "employes' representatives," who are generally understood to get a rakeoff from the Pullman company for their dirty work, are trying to get the men back to work on the company's terms by offering to supply plenty of work, and nice, new stop watches to make the men work faster.

A Company Trick.

In answer to this proposal that the men return to work on the company's terms, after tying up the plant completely for four weeks and having victory within their grasp, the strikers held an enthusiastic mass meeting early yesterday afternoon at Stancik's hall. The strikers who had gone into conference with the officials to find out what was going on, reported. After finding that the conference was just a trick of the company to get the men to accept the wage reduction, the strikers unanimously passed the following resolution and sent it to President Carry:

Denounces Company Union.

In addressing the afternoon strike meeting John Holmgren, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carbuilders, declared that if the men go back to work under the domination of the company union, the Employe Plan of Representation of E. F. Carry would be their bible. "Christ was a working man," Holmgren told the strikers, "and because he said, 'the poor shall inherit the earth,' he was nailed to a cross. Christ was trying to do what the organized workers are trying to do today. He fought the rich just as you strikers are fighting the Pullman Company. Of course, not all ministers preach the word of God. Some of them in times like this betray the workers by advising them to scab.

Tells Vileness of Scabs.

"A man who returns to work and lets his leaders be blacklisted and fired when he could save them by sticking to the strike, is not fit to worship a man who went to his death fighting against the rich in the interests of the workers."

Holmgren declared that no matter what the outcome of the present strike, he hopes the strikers will always fight against a system which is run by rich capitalists entirely for profit. He declared the Pullman Company among the worst capitalistic corporations in the country, because it grinds down the workers and prevents them from earning a decent wage.

Holmgren characterized the Company Union plan, which, if the strikers lose, they will be forced to live under, as an added yoke to the men and their families. He showed how in the present strike the Pullman Company is using the employe representatives who didn't have the guts to strike with the employes they are supposed to represent, to try to divide the strikers. He showed how they are continually conferring with the Pullman officials.

Pete Herd Addresses Strikers.

Pete Herd, of the Machinists' Union and the Young Workers League, complimented the men on the fact that they had not been fooled by the efforts of the company union men to break the strike. "You men have tied up the railroad contracts of the Pullman Company; you have completely stopped production, and your decision not to basely betray your leaders by allowing them to be fired is fine. If the men had decided to go back to work Monday morning, as the stool pigeons in the company union wanted them to do, they would have been the disgrace of the entire working class of this country. There is only one thing that is more bitterly disliked by the workers than a scab, and that is a traitor who allows his leaders to be fired. The strike leaders have been battling for you men, and I am glad you are standing by them."

Francis Gunn, the "efficiency expert" of the Pullman Company who instituted the drastic and unfair wage cut which brought on the strike, has been buying the DAILY WORKER regularly from Nick Spynow, it was learned yesterday.

Hired Under False Pretenses.

Men from Oklahoma, California and Indiana turned up at the strike meeting yesterday. They were hired under false pretenses, the representatives of the Pullman telling them there was no strike on at Pullman. An Indianapolis riveter, who was turned away from the employment gate by the DAILY WORKER reporters, said he had been hired by a Mr. Starr, who said he came to Pullman from Indianapolis to hire riveters.

The cases of the pickets arrested Wednesday were put off until May 16. No further arrests have been made.

LOS ANGELES PAINTERS SEE VICTORY NEAR

New Shops Are Daily Lined Up

LOS ANGELES, May 9.—The striking painters and paperhangers of Los Angeles are making great headway in their struggle against their employers. Day by day new shops are being unionized, and more and more men are going back to work. The strike situation is rapidly improving and the outlook is encouraging.

Even the most notorious pessimists have to concede now that the original demand, the $9 day, is already won; that the new wage scale is established already. Even the employers themselves are not fighting the new wage scale now.

Union or Non-Union.

The center of the struggle as it stands now is the open-shop question or the so-called, American plan. It is the same unlawful method of open slavery that proved to be disastrous even to the big interests and especially to the smaller builder and contractor. It is the greedy attempt of the bigger contractor to enlist the cooperation of their smaller competitors to ruin themselves by a prolonged struggle with organized labor.

Billionaire Auto King Defies Senate Order To Tell Of Shoals

DETROIT, Mich., May 9.—Henry Ford has defied the foes of his Muscle Shoals offer.

Again refusing to appear before a congressional committee or to send a representative, the automobile manufacturer sharply rebuked Senator George W. Norris, chairman of the Senate agriculture committee, for attempting to reflect on President Coolidge's integrity in connection with the Ford offer for the Alabama power and nitrate project.

Ford sent a letter to Norris last night, declining the Nebraska senator's invitation to come to Washington.

WIFE OF JACOB DOLLA, STEEL TRUST VICTIM, THANKS DAILY WORKER

To the DAILY WORKER: Just a few lines to let you know that I received your welcome letter and a check for $63 and I wish to thank you and all the workers who help. It sure is a big help to me. I thank you again.

I was to see my husband last week. I guess by this time you have heard about my husband's case. He was turned down but they are not giving up. The ladies from the Pittsburgh Welfare Workers helped me and sent me the fare both ways. My husband is in the best of health.

Now I must come to a close and thank you again. I remain Mrs. BARBARA DOLLA, 332 E. Weidman Street, Lebanon, Pa.

Jacob Dolla, veteran of the great steel strike, is lying in Easton Penitentiary on a framed-up dynamiting charge. Support for him is solicited from all class-conscious workers.—Editor's Note.

crime they committed, in the eyes of Foell, was simply that they walked the streets after his colleague, "Dennie" Sullivan, told them not to in response to an appeal from the manufacturers.

The usual array of strike-breaking stools was in evidence. Patrick Moran and Patrick Collins, the first that loathsome species known as the industrial detective, in the pay of the association, and the second the leading actor in State's Attorney Crowe's strike-breaking cast. These two creatures were the star performers for the prosecution on the witness stand.

Injunction in Gutter.

Moran complained that one of the girls threw "Dennie's" injunction in the gutter, and both he and Collins insisted that they continued to picket after seeing the writ. Moran told of seeing thirty girls out "last night," and Collins asserted that he had seen as many as 150 out at one time earlier in the strike. During the busy season, when the manufacturers needed scabs, arrests of pickets were more frequent.

Lied About Mrs. Heim.

The two stool pigeons and two manufacturers—Reinhart and Nat Ribback—failed to convince Judge Foell that they were telling the truth in regard to Mrs. Heim. All four insisted that Mrs. Heim had been on the picket line right along since February 28. But when the striker testified that she had been sick and under a doctor's care from March 5 to May 2, the day she was served with an injunction notice, Foell threw the case out.

An amusing moment came in her examination when Prosecutor Coleman said:

"You admit you were walking up and down May 2. Why did you walk back and forth?"

"Because the police told us to keep moving," retorted Mrs. Heim.

Prosecutor Talks "Anarchy."

Prosecutor Coleman begged Judge Foell not to let the strikers off easily, and urged, like a Gilbert and Sullivan character, that the punishment fit the crime. His appeal for heavy sentences was brimful of phrases like "anarchy" and "disrespect for law."

The four strikers sentenced to $25 payments are Dora Samuelson, Esther Pogroff, Anna Sachs and Bessie Bellefield.

Unions Contributing.

Anton Johannsen, chairman of the "committee of 15," said Chicago unions were responding well to the appeals for funds, and he was hopeful of a total contribution that could be measured in five figures.

Some more unions are considering laying an assessment on every member for their fellow-workers in the garment industry similar to the 25-cent assessment recently voted by the iron workers and the $1.25 gift from each of the hoisting engineers, in response to John Fitzpatrick's appeal.

No Sound Basis For Coolidge Victories Says LaFollette

RUSSIAN TRADE WITH U. S. MAKES RAPID PROGRESS

Banking Credits Show Confidence

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 9.—Increasing trade between Russia and the United States is revealed by recent reports of Russian companies doing business in this country. Not only is the volume of trade growing, but the Russian concerns indicate that the best credit facilities are extended to them by the New York banks. Arcos, Ltd., for instance, says that it "is obtaining credits from the banks not only on security, but also straight, unsecured credits."

Not only the customary 50 to 65 per cent advance on merchandise shipped, but credit up to the full 100 per cent is being obtained by the All-Russian Central Union of Consumers' societies (Centrosoyus), it reports. Interest rates are "very reasonable," it says. In the first few months of this year Centrosoyus has shipped about $600,000 worth of agricultural implements to Russia. This compares with its total of purchases of $400,000 for the year 1923. Last year it sold about $5,000,000 worth of furs, bristles, hides, feathers, fibres, fish products, drugs and dried vegetables on the American market.

Arcos in January and February bought $650,000 worth of machinery, cotton, chemicals, etc., and sold $850,000 worth of furs, carbonate of potash and caviar.

Furs and bristles amounting to $1,800,000 were sold by the Products Exchange company in the first three months and a half of this year. In the same time it bought machinery and chemicals costing $200,000.

A $10,000,000 turnover by July, the end of its first year, is the expectation of the Allied American corporation on the basis of present business.

The All-Russian Textile syndicate, formed by Nogin on his recent trip, is already reported to be the largest foreign buyer on the American cotton market. It has a paid up capital of $1,000,000.

RUTHENBERG'S CASE WILL BE HEARD MAY 10

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., May 9.—Assuring both sides that this will be the final postponement in the Ruthenberg case, Judge Charles E. White has just granted a delay until May 10 for the filing of briefs in Ruthenberg's appeal before the Michigan Supreme Court. The attorneys for the defense, as well as those of the prosecution, announce that they will be ready on that date.

It appears certain now that the Ruthenberg appeal will be heard by the Michigan high tribunal during the present term. Previous extensions have been granted for two months, in order that the prosecutors might have plenty of time to prepare the record for presentation to the court. Judge White began some weeks ago to insist that the lawyers speed up action in the case. On the decision of the Supreme Court will determine whether any of the 31 other indicted Communists will be tried, including W. Z. Foster, in whose initial trial the jury disagreed.

Berrien county attorneys appear to consider it essential that the case be heard by the Supreme Court before Sheriff G. C. Brigman, who acted as aide-de-camp to the Burns-Daugherty stool pigeons in the raid on the Communist Party convention, retires from office at the close of the year.

GOVERNMENT MUST TAKE BACK ITS LICE OR ELSE PAY GEO. SHANKS $6,999

CHICAGO, May 9.—George H. Shanks, owner of two warehouses here, went into the courts today to compel the government to take back its cooties or pay $6,999 damages.

In June of 1919, Shanks leased his warehouses to the government, the agreement calling on the government to keep the property in good repair. The lease expired in 1921 and since then Shanks charges he has been fighting a losing battle against cooties.

Said cooties, Shanks charges, were planted when the government stored cootie-infested clothing from France in the buildings.

Lumber-Camp Tie-Up In Pacific West Is Worrying the Bosses

By ROBERT L. MORRISON.
(Defense News Service.)

SEATTLE, Wash., May 9.—Possible tieup of the lumber camps of the Northwest by the I. W. W. this summer is worrying John H. McIntosh, manager for the Federated Industries of Washington and for the Northwest Logging Operators' Association. His anxiety is expressed in two confidential bulletins recently sent from his office to employing lumbermen in Washington and Oregon.

Bulletin No. 692 says: "Watch closely the I. W. W. situation in and around your camps during the next ten days. Despite the fact that there is considerable unemployment, the Industrial Workers of the World are quite active. The largest meeting of I. W. W.'s held in the Puget Sound region for years took place in Seattle recently, and more than 3,000 radicals cheered the address made by one Thompson, recently released from Leavenworth penitentiary.

"The lumber workers' union has added ten organizers to its staff in the past two weeks. The I. W. W.'s are boasting that they will pull a successful strike this summer. This strike may not materialize, but it is well worth while to scrutinize closely those coming and going about the camps, and particularly to guard against incendiary fires and other forms of sabotage."

McIntosh's Bulletin No. 695 says: "More than 7,000 I. W. W.'s and I. W. W. sympathizers met at the I. W. W. picnic grounds near Renton, King county, on May 1, and heard radical speeches by the ex-convict, Thompson, and other radical speakers. . . . It was common talk in the crowd, and even urged by the leaders, that the annual strike this year would be pulled on July 1, 1924. The organizers made a report showing considerable progress in recruiting new members, and it was determined to make every possible effort to call an effective strike against the logging and lumber industry on the West Coast on July 1."

There has been no official announcement of any intention of the I. W. W. to effect a general strike in the lumber woods this year, but there is widespread discontent among the loggers and sawmill workers because of the continued imprisonment of the eight Centralia industrialists who defended their lives against an Armistice Day mob in 1919.

James P. Thompson, who served five years in Leavenworth prison for opposition to the war, was an outstanding organizer in the Northwest woods during the 1917 strike, which compelled the employers to institute the eight-hour day. Since leaving prison, Thompson has been touring Washington for the Centralia defense.

Sawmill Workers Strike.

By Defense News Service.

RAYMOND, Wash., May 9.—Seven hundred sawmill workers are on strike here. They are largely I. W. W. members, and walked out in protest against a cut of 60 cents from their daily wage. Five mills are affected, and 90 per cent of the employes in those plants are out. Strong picket lines are being maintained.

Raymond is on Willapa Bay, and is an important center for the making of lumber, shingles, laths, and fruit and berry boxes and shipbuilding. Sympathies of the townspeople are obviously with the strikers.

PATIENCE AND FIRMNESS WINS FOR-ENGLEWOOD YOUNG WORKER

Over one hundred young American workers came to t meeting held by the Englewood Branch of the Young Worke League Thursday evening. This is one of a series of meetin being held every two weeks. At the previous meeting attemp had been made to disrupt the meeting. Eggs had been fired speakers and the meeting was interfered with in many oth ways.

When Thursday's meeting was called to order, the hall was crowded with young people, all of whom came more out of curiosity than because of their interest in the organizati Here, too, an attempt was first ma to disrupt the meeting by a few of t gangsters. However, they were ge ly but firmly informed that they h to keep order or they would be p out. Comrade Mass spoke to the young workers and pointed out them the conditions under which you labor was compelled to work in t United States, and told of the millio of children who were employed in t industries of the United States a asked the audience if they thoug this was the much boasted America democracy that they believed in.

Thruout the talk attempts we made to disturb the meeting, but to n avail. After Comrade Mass ha spoken, Comrade William F. Dunn editor of the DAILY WORKER, to the floor and told these young peop of the victims of the war who nev saw the battle front. The miners wh lost their lives in mining explosion young children who wore their finge to the bone working in the cott mills of the United States. Despite the many attempts to di rupt the meeting, this was the be of all the meetings that the Engl wood branch has held so far. Mo of the young people present listene very attentively while they were to of the conditons of youth and chi labor in the United States.

These meetings are held every tw weeks. The next one will be hel Thursday, May 22, at 6357 Ashlan avenue. All young workers are invi ed to attend.

SOUTHWESTERN COAL DIGGERS SETTLE STRIKE

Jacksonville Pact Is Settlement Basis

KANSAS CITY.—Coal miners in the southwestern field have won their strike for a three-year contract continuing the 1922 wage scale. The basis of settlement is said to depart from the Jacksonville agreement only by providing for arbitration to settle disputes.

The demand of the Southwestern Interstate Coal Operators' Association had involved a reduction from $7.50 to $6 in the daily pay. They urged the necessity of reducing costs in order to compete with mines in other fields. Their surrender appears due in part to the Interstate Commerce Commission's order reducing the majority of foreign rates on shipments out of Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Arkansas. These reductions range as high as $1.72 a ton.

Central Illinois operators expect the settlement to have an adverse effect upon their market. During the shutdown in the southwest field, central Illinois coal has been shipped to consumers normally buying from that field. The return of southwest coal to the market, aided in some instances by more favorable freight rates, will probably result in curtailment in Illinois.

Nebraska Workers And Farmers Vote Thumbs Down On Capitalists

OMAHA.—No old party candidates are wanted on the Progressive party ticket of Nebraska. At the state convention in Omaha of the Progressives, who constitute the chief organized Farmer-Labor movement in Nebraska, the executive committee was authorized to remove all professed democrats and "fusionists" from the party ballot and replace them with known farmer and worker third party believers. The convention indorsed the St. Paul June 17th national Farmer-Labor nominating convention. The name of the state party will be changed, if necessary to conform with the name for the national movement to be adopted at St. Paul.

With his usual gusto he claimed the American labor movement to be the foremost in all the world, probably remembering that ex-President Benjamin Schlesinger had hailed him as the "greatest labor leader in the world." When the back rubbers get busy in conventions, the sky is the limit.

Gompers added his eulogy and approval of the unseating of the New York delegates. He painted the black horrors that menace the labor movement because, as he said, the Workers party controls "the league" and the general activities of all militants.

The leaflet on "Gompers' Stand on Immigration" was very disturbing to the Sigman reactionaries. One of the girls was thrown out of the hall for distributing it. The leaflet stated:

Gompers for Johnson Bill.

"Our membership is vitally interested in unrestricted immigration. What does Gompers say about it?

"In the American Federationist for April Gompers says:

"'If it were possible to replace the 3 per cent quota law with a law absolutely forbidding immigration into the United States for the next five years, that would be the most advantageous thing that could be done.

"'A great many employers, formerly hostile to restrictive legislation, see the error of their way and have changed their position entirely as a result of the war.

"'The Johnson bill is by no means all that could be desired, but it is obviously all that can be had.

"'It appears to be the assumption of the foreign-born groups in the United States that the people of the world have the right to come to the Unted States at will.'

"This is where Gompers stands on immigration. What do YOU think about it?"

A bitter battle over the recommendation of the credentials committee that four members of Local 1, New York City, be not seated as delegates and that four substitutes be called to take their place was the outstanding feature of the third day of the convention of the international session here. This marked the first round in a fight over contested delegates which is expected to bring to a head in the convention the conflict between the militant elements in the union and the officialdom, with their reactionary supporters, that resulted in the expulsion of active members of the international.

The report of the credentials committee had been awaited with much impatience. The expulsion issue, of which the contesting of duly elected delegates is a part, is the foremost question before the convention. When the delegates assembled this morning the atmosphere was charged with tenseness and expectancy.

The chairman of the credentials committee reported that 95 local unions joint boards and district councils were represented by 297 delegates. Its report that these be seated was accepted. Before beginning the report on the objected delegates, an effort was made to create an atmosphere conducive to acceptance of all recommendations. After dwelling on the achievements of the international, the chairman of the credentials committee made a heated appeal to the loyalty of delegates, calling upon them to place the welfare of the union above all else, and to take disciplinary action against all disrupters of the union.

Action Against Four.

The chairman then recommended that four members of Local 1, New York City, should not be seated, as they had been illegally placed on the ballot by their union. By refusing to sign a statement submitted to them by an investigating committee of the General Executive Board of the international, which demanded that they discontinue all relationship with the Trade Union Educational League and agree not to attend any meetings called by it, they had automatically disqualified themselves as candidates for election to the convention. They therefore could not be recognized as duly elected delegates, he said.

An amendment was made by a delegate from the floor that action on these four members be deferred until the appeal of Local 1 from the decision of the General Executive Board be taken up by the convention. This appeal is directly bound up with the case of the four members in question, but Morris Sigman, as chairman, refused to entertain the amendment on the ground that the two questions were entirely unrelated.

Militants Fight Well.

A splendid fight was put up by the challenged delegates. They claimed that two months before the investigating committee of the General Executive Board had been appointed they had signed a statement accepted by the grievance committee of Local 1 agreeing to withdraw from the league. They were no longer members of the league and could not be challenged on grounds of their membership. They called upon the convention to maintain the unity of the organization at a time when the international is faced with pressing problems and stands before a general strike in the industry. They pointed to their long years of service in the movement, and urged that differences in points of view must be tolerated within the organization. The keynote of their appeal was that under no circumstances would they cease their trade union activities; that unseating them as delegates or other action taken against them could not destroy their determination to work for a strong and effective union, and to participate in the struggles of all other members of the international side by side with them.

Support Challenged Delegates.

The appeal of the challenged delegates was taken up by many other militant representatives. It was pointed out that these delegates had been guilty of no destructive action against the union. They had been guilty only of holding different views on the labor movement and the tactics and policies of the international. Of the challenged delegates, one had been an organizer of the local for 15 months, another was vice chairman of the executive board of the local. All could be counted amongst the most active and sincere members of the international. Speakers appealed for harmony in the organization and a cessation of the persecution by the General Executive Board of militants in the union.

Israel Feinberg then launched into a bitter attack upon the challenged delegates, William Z. Foster, the Trade Union Educational League and the Workers Party. The Trade Union Educational League was charged with being a dual union, which sought to undermine the international. The question of differences of opinion, he declared, was not involved, as this had always been permitted. The question at issue was one of discipline. These four delegates had refused to obey the decision of the General Executive Board, had refused to accept the discipline of the international, and as such were not qualified to run as delegates to the convention.

Perlstein Raves.

How true these allegations of Feinberg were could be seen from the speech of Meyer Perlstein, vice president of the international, and one of the investigating committee of the challenged members of Local 1. Perlstein repeated Feinberg's charges that the Trade Union Educational League was a dual union. That, he insisted, was the reason why members of the union had been asked to withdraw. Only the failure to do so, which was a breach of discipline, and not any difference in belief, motivated them in challenging the members in question.

Immediately after that Perlstein launched a scurrilous attack upon the Trade Union Educational League and the Workers Party, denouncing bitterly the policy of amalgamation, which he termed the greatest fake, and sneering at the policy of independent political action. He roundly denounced the activities of the militants in the international in having influenced local unions in Chicago to send observers to the July 3rd conference called last year to organize a Labor Party, and which resulted in the forming of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

While he insisted that freedom of opinion was allowed, his entire speech was an attack upon the principles advocated by members of the league. While in one breath he declared that the breaking of discipline caused them to challenge the four delegates of Local 1, in the other he attacked the political and economic views of these delegates and all associated with them.

TASMANIA JUDGE DECLARES HUMAN RIGHTS SUPREME

Propertarians Call Him Red Judge

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

HOBART, Tasmania.—Judge Ewing, lieutenant-governor of the Labor state of Tasmania, has thrown a bombshell into the judicial world in Australia by publishing a volume in which criminal law is based on "the rights of the person and not rights of property."

Recently he put his theory into practice by sentencing a policeman to three years in jail for making a widow by recklessly shooting a man who was illegally fishing. Private property rights were horrified and launched a campaign against the judge.

Judge Ewing, who is also head of the Supreme Court of Tasmania, is known as the Red judge because he appears in court in vivid scarlet robes. Property rights coined the phrase, hoping to make him appear as a radical in the eyes of the people. The workers also call him the Red judge on the grounds that he is broadminded enough to see the workers' side of justice.

He is best known for his action in New South Wales in 1919 in ordering the release of 12 I. W. W. who had been sent to jail during the war for terms ranging up to 15 years. Naturally, this decision staggered the upholders of private property rights.

Judge Ewing is able and courageous, a good orator, a skilled tactician and respected. His law is sound.

McLean's Teapot Dome Policy Probed By Newspaper Editors

(By The Federated Press)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 9.—Investigation of unethical conduct of certain editors in connection with the Senate Teapot Dome inquiry has been ordered by the annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, in session at Atlantic City. Tho the mover of the resolution refused to mention names, it was assumed that, among others, the person aimed at was ex-Secretary Fall's fellow-conspirator and intimate friend of Daugherty, Harding and Coolidge, Ned McLean, proprietor-editor of the Washington Post. Action yas taken after heated debate and over the protest of the chairman of the committee on ethical standards, P. B. Williams, Utica.

UNEMPLOYMENT WIDESPREAD IN CENTRAL N. Y.

Thousands Idle; Others On Part Time

By H. M. WICKS.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 9.—Unemployment is ravaging the entire Capitol District of New York. Thousands upon thousands of workers have been forced from their homes to tramp the highways of the country, looking for an oportunity to sell their labor power. But the wave of unemployment that holds the country in its grip is still rising, and labor power is the most plentiful commodity on the market.

This district, comprising the central part of New York state, owes its existence to miscellaneous industries. There are a number of railroad centers here, but aside from this the General Electric Company of Schenectady is the largest industry. Here workers are on part time, with a reduced force.

In Albany, the state capital, there is a pronounced decline in building, with the result that all building trades workers are forced to seek other fields. Being also a railroad center, there are thousands of railroad workers idle as the result of the nationwide unemployment on the transportation systems.

Small Localities Hard Hit.

It is the smaller localities that are hardest hit thus far. In Amsterdam, center of carpet manufacturing, the large Sanford carpet works has closed down, throwing 3,000 workers onto the streets. Those few mills that are running are on half time, affecting approximately 10,000 more workers.

In Johnstown and Gloversville, centers of the glove industry, part time work is the rule, with vicious wage slashes reducing the workers' standard of living to an appalling degree. The piece work scale has also been cut in this district, so that workers getting an average of $6 per day before Christmas now get an average of $3.38.

As the glove industry in this section is one of the few survivals of the handicraft period, and much of the work is done in individual homes of workers under sweatshop conditions, a survey of the industry is next to impossible. Thruout all the hills and valleys within a radius of 25 miles women and children toil long hours at glove making for a pittance, just as their ancestors for four generations toiled before them. With the decline in industry here the misery and poverty is past description.

May Have Political Effect.

The wave of industrial depression is still rising and will soon reach the boiling point; that is, the point where the economic chaos will register definite political upheavals.

It is fortunate that this district has been chosen as the place to hold a state Labor Party convention, as the vigorous launching of a state party at this time would have a favorable effect upon the development of the class consciousness of the unemployed and underpaid masses of the Capitol District.

Not so long ago this section was one of the most favorable spots in the nation for independent political action, but the maladministration of the yellow Socialist tribe that one time ruled Schenectady destroyed the movement until today there is not a remnant anywhere of class action on the political field.

While the task of reaching the industrial workers in the larger centers will be an ordinary one, the task of reaching the handicraft workers in the glove making industry will be difficult and will require careful and intensive organization work.

The economic situation of the home workers in this industry renders their organization into labor unions impossible, and also makes difficult their awakening to political consciousness. Economically they belong to the slum proletariat. They are so low in the scale of human existence that most of them haven't sufficient vitality to defend their class interests in any sort of struggle.

With the factory workers it is different. Tho miserably underpaid, they can be impelled into action by intelligent organization in the larger centers, which will aid its extension to the smaller places.

The unemployment in the Capitol District furnishes the basis for an effective campaign this year.

Wives Of Soldiers Who Saw Service In France Carry Anti-War Banners

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Women with peace banners are not wanted when war memorials are unveiled in Vancouver. The wife of a soldier who had seen service in France was standing silently with three other women near the world war monument during the dedication. Each woman had had a man in service during the conflict. Each woman held a banner.

One banner had a quotation from Robert Burns reading:

Ye hypocrites; are these your pranks,
To murder men and give God thanks,
Desist for shame; proceed no further,
God won't accept your thanks for murder.

A female war shouter strode up to the women and ordered them to cut it out. When they continued to stand in silence she called a policeman who put the pickets out of business.

Elevated Death Traps

An investigation was ordered by the board following a wreck on the line last June when many persons were killed.

BERRY CANDIDACY A HUGE JOKE TO OKLAHOMA LABOR

Ambitious Labor Faker Gets The Laugh

(From the Unionist Journal, Tulsa, Oklahoma.)

TULSA, Okla., May 9.—George L. Berry's candidacy for vice-president gets a loud He! Ha! from the Unionist-Journal, organ of the Tulsa Trades and Labor Council. Here is what they say about the strike-breaking czar of the pressmen's union.

George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistant's Union, of North America, on February 29, filed his application with Secretary of State Brown of Ohio as a candidate for the office of vice-president of the United States on the democratic ticket. Berry's declaration of candidacy was filed by William Green, secretary of the United Mine Workers of America, and was signed by George H. H. Pratt and M. G. Berry.

The above appeared in the country's newspapers and was given general publicity. Berry's middle name is publicity—or should be.

Candidacy a Joke.

But his announcement for the vice-presidency of the United States brought only derisive smiles and sarcastic remarks. And, in truth, it is a joke. But it may prove a sorry joke for the pressmen's executive before the campaign even gets on its running legs.

In the opinion of nine-tenths of the membership of the Allied Printing Trades Council, Berry's reputation is well known. The only reason he is president of the pressmen's union is because of the fact that he has formed an organization to perpetuate himself in office. And it is some organization. In fact, so strong is it that while the majority of the pressmen do not want him, he has engineered laws by which a handful can keep him in office.

Embezzling Union Funds.

Berry has been accused by the pressmen of embezzling a quarter of a million dollars from their treasury and using the pressmen's home at Pressmen's Home, Tenn., as a vehicle to further his selfish interests and wants. The case was called before a Chicago court about a year ago and Berry was ordered by the court to pay to the organization of which he was head the sum of something like $62,000. Whether he has maneuvered out of the payment of this sum is unknown.

And for a man with a past of this caliber to seek second highest office in the United States shows just how much nerve he has. Of course, he will not get to first base. It would be a calamity if the people of the country would elect a man of this caliber.

Even the pressmen will not vote for him.

AUSTRALIA PLANS BIG BATTLESHIPS IN SPITE OF PACT

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 9.—The Australian federal government apparently does not intend to respect the provisions of the Washington arms conference any more than the other powers.

It is true that the battle-cruiser Australia of 18,000 tons, is being sunk. But this can hardly be called a sacrifice. The Australia would have passed into the hands of the wreckers even if the Washington conference had not been held.

Concurrent with the decision to sink the Australia, the following semi-official statement has been issued:

"In view of the large number of 10,000 ton cruisers, with relatively heavy armaments and an extensive radius of action, that are now under construction by two of the powers that participated in the Washington conference, it is probable that vessels of the same class will be recommended to the Australian parliament as the most suitable for construction to replace existing cruisers of the Melbourne, Sydney and Adelaide class as they become obsolete."

This means that four old cruisers of this class, vessels of 5400 tons each are to be replaced by vessels of 10,000 tons each. That is to say, the Australian government is going to replace 21,600 tons of junk by an up-to-date naval construction of 40,000.

Why Not Organize Asiatics Into Unions Mr. Andy Furuseth?

WASHINGTON:—Water-tight exclusion of Asiatics pretending to be seamen, from immigration into this country, without impairing the seamen's act, has been proposed in an amendment offered the immigration bill conferees by Andrew Furuseth. He proposes that each ship be compelled to carry seamen of its own national citizenship only, and that it be forced to carry away as many men as it brings to our ports.

Real Fighters

What can be done by determined workers and fighting leadership in defense of living standards against the attacks of even such a powerful organization of capital as the Pullman company is shown by the brilliant strike now in progress in the little empire owned by that corporation.

The workers engaged in the struggle were unorganized previous to the walkout; those who came out at first were small in numbers, but were not discouraged because of that fact, and have extended the strike and strike activities until the giant industrial concern whose heads at first denied even knowledge of the strike is now seriously hampered and in a mood to negotiate with its former employes.

The spirit of the strikers is such as to shame the timid and reactionary officials of the American trade union movement who always raise the cry that they can do nothing because workers will not fight. This spirit is an infallible refutation of that statement and proof that the Communist left wing is right when it says that, given encouragement and inspiration by the officials instead of defeatism, the American labor movement can be built into a powerful unit by the same millions who are now unorganized.

The DAILY WORKER takes credit for a good deal of the activity displayed by the strikers and it knows that without the publicity it has furnished the strike would have been a purely local issue. As it is, it is of national importance when the capitalists are about to launch another wage-cutting campaign showing that in one huge industry the workers are not going to take reductions lying down.

Another feature of the strike is the refreshing militancy of John Holmgren, one of the vice-presidents of the Railway Carmen. This official seems to be one of the few who are not afraid of what the standpat element might think of his accepting support from the left wing and his attitude in this strike is one of uncompromising hostility towards the company as long as it refuses to meet the demands of the men as well as a disposition to fight it out in a militant manner. A trade union movement with a few officials as close to the actual struggle as Holmgren is would amount to something. We do not wish to be understood as sponsoring his political beliefs—as a matter of fact we do not know what they are—but certainly if one labor official in this decadent period of the trade union movement has the courage to challenge the might of a corporation like the Pullman company and the ability to build an organization in the face of its bitter opposition, he deserves some credit if only for the sake of contrast with the great majority of officialdom.

If the whole labor movement would rally to the support of the Pullman strikers—raise the slogan of 100 per cent organization in that plant—such an organization could be built.

Unfortunately the American labor movement has not yet reached that state of development and until it does the Communist left wing and DAILY WORKER will give the best it has in it to labor organizers and those unions who show that they know how to fight and will fight.

The Pullman strikers and John Holmgren, isolated from the rest of the American labor movement, waging a singlehanded struggle against a gigantic industrial monopoly, present a picture that is food for thought for those who realise the necessity, if further progress is to be made, of a labor movement that is something more than a name.

Bessarabia Is Russian

It did not matter to the framers of the Versailles peace that Bessarabia was Russian. The rights of self-determination were ground underfoot here, as everywhere else, by the Paris treaty makers.

Nearly six years after the war ended, however, the rumblings of a new war are heard along the Dniester River. At least Russia stands ready to defend the rights of the Bessarabian population against the Roumanian oppressors.

The city workers and farmers of Bessarabia have shown, in many ways, that it is their desire to become a part of the Union of Soviet Republics. Against them, however, is raised the bloody fist of Roumanian fascisti rule, backed by France and the Little Entente. The flames of war again threaten the Balkans. But not in local, nationalistic wars. It is a test of strength between the Soviet Rule of Moscow, the friend of oppressed peoples everywhere, and World Imperialism, that seeks to enslave all nations under its profit rule.

Let the workers of all nations, the United States in particular, watch the developments around Bessarabia. They may closely affect them in the very near future.

A Startling Contrast

In the same day's news came the stories of the unseating of Rose Wortis, left winger, at the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Convention, in Boston, and of the successful efforts of another left winger, Nathan Rosen, in waging an organization drive for the same union at Waukegan, Illinois.

This must appear as a startling contrast to the members of "The International." A left winger is good enough to face injunction writs, get beaten up on the picket line, thrown into foul police station cells, to do all the important and necessary work of a strike. Rosen's efforts have prevented scab work being done in that city against the Chicago strike, just as the Chicago left wingers have shouldered the burden of the Chicago struggle.

But a left winger is not good enough, in the eyes of the Sigman dictatorship in the union, to sit on joint boards, executive councils, and act as delegates in international conventions, where the work of the organization is done, where policies are determined and provisions made for carrying them out.

There is only one conclusion that can be drawn. It isn't the loyalty to the union, the ability, the union activities that the Sigman reaction fears. It is the ideas of the left wingers, to which the Sigman officialdom is opposed. Amalagamation, shop councils, the all-inclusive class Farmer-Labor Party,—these ideas challenge the rule of reaction thruout the entire labor movement. They paralyze Sigman as well as Gompers. It is because they are faithful to these ideas that the left wingers feel the heel of persecution and ostracism.

Rose Wortis was unseated at the Boston convention because her voice and vote would strengthen the support of these vital issues. The immediate excuse for robbing her of her convention privileges was that she had refused to file a declaration with the General Executive Board that she was not a member of the Trade Union Educational League. But the Sigman dictatorship was so fearful of its rule that it gagged all discussion of the real isses at stake. The verdict was born of hysteria and prejudice.

In the meantime, the left wingers continue their work on the organization's frontiers. The membership will, in time, learn the important lesson of this startling contrast of Rose Wortis, at Boston, and Nathan Rosen, at Waukegan. And they will throw their full weight on the side of progress, supporting the ideas that their present dictators fear.

The Fear of Communism

The German Fascisti parties, that made their campaigns on an anti-Dawes plan platform, have suddenly changed their minds since the votes were counted, and it became known that more than four million ballots were cast for Communism.

The Nationalist Party, especially, that captured the largest number of reichstag seats, and will be called on to form the new cabinet, toppled over in surrender to the Dawes-Morgan plan, in order to win the necessary support of the Center (Catholic) and the People's (Stinnes) parties.

This means that the Communists stand alone in opposition to the plan to bring the German workers under the lash of the House of Morgan. The German Fascisti have shown, like their counterparts in other countries, that they love Morgan-Wall Street rule most when the danger of Communist supremacy threatens. Stinnes made his deals with the French industrialist, Loucheur, to keep the workers in the Ruhr in submission. But Ruhr labor showed its stand Sunday by voting Communist almost unanimously. Since all the anti-Communist parties in Germany are now showing such affection for the American billionaire, it is taken for granted that the tremendous Communist showing last Sunday is only the beginning; that new masses will continually rally to the leadership of the German Communist Party.

German capitalism, as well as the money power that sits enthroned in Paris, London and Wall Street, is the enemy of the German workers and farmers. German capitalism, in fear of Communism, will betray the German masses into the grip of foreign reaction. This is daily becoming clearer to all German labor. Hence the rapidly approaching and complete triumph of Communism in Germany.

Australia's Real Problem

The combined war and domestic debt of the commonwealth of Australia amounts to over $900 per capita. This means that every man, woman and child in Australia in addition to subsistence must be exploited for at least enough to pay interest on a debt that has been saddled upon the masses by the British and Australian capitalists. The workingclass of Australia works for the finance-capitalists and compared with this problem that of keeping Australia white, sinks into significance.

The bugaboo of the "yellow peril" is doubtless of great assistance to the imperialists in keeping the more important matter of who owns Australia from becoming of too much interest to the Australian workingclass. It works rather well in California at any rate.

"The European Commercial," that announces itself as "an organ of world-wide commerce," with its home in Washington, D. C., calls for the organization of a "Capitalist International" to offset international organization of the workers and farmers. Can it be that this sheet has never heard of the House of Morgan, just about all the international organization that world capitalism needs. Someone had better call up "J. P." and put him wise to this heresy.

Senator Wheeler—The Montana Meteor

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE speed with which Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana has flashed across the political firmament has been equaled only once in American history—by William Jennings Bryan.

Like Wheeler, Bryan's meteoric rise was the result of a political crisis affecting millions of the workers and farmers of the United States; he was the personification of the resentment and revolt caused by an industrial and financial crisis and like Wheeler, Bryan was and is middle class in thought and action.

This is not to say that Wheeler does not speak for thousands of exploited farmers and workers in Montana, but it does mean that he does so because of their political backwardness and for lack of more revolutionary leadership.

To understand the social forces that have brought this wealthy young lawyer into the public eye with a rapidity that is almost without parallel in American politics, to understand why he is able to throw so much discredit upon the governmental machinery and still retain his respectability, to understand why he and Walsh, both from Montana—the private property of Anaconda Mining Company—have led investigations into corruption without raising any other than conventional issues of "good government" and "honesty in office," is to understand the cause and mechanism of the widespread revolt that is gaining headway in America.

The Background.

In Montana, one of the richest states in the union, where the Standard Oil Company thru its subsidiaries, the Montana Power Company and the Anaconda Mining Company, has had a free hand for years, people fall into two classifications—those who are "for" and those who are "against" the "company"—the company being the A. C. M., owning mines, railways, banks, forests, water-power and newspapers.

Until the farmers' revolt which began in 1918, the power of the company had never been seriously challenged. After the defeat of Augustus Heinze in 1907 and the rise of the Amalgamated—later the Anaconda Copper Mining Company—competition in the copper industry was practically wiped out in Montana with the Clark properties remaining the only independent producers—independent in the sense that Clark had to depend for his power transportation and water upon the A. C. M.

The entire Montana labor movement up until 1917 was controlled by the company with the labor officials openly and shamelessly supporting the company's political and industrial program. If the middle class elements which supported the company were corrupt, the labor officialdom was a thousand times more so and it was natural that the leadership of the scattered insurgent movement should fall into the hands of lawyers whose personal injury practice brought them into conflict with the company.

Air-Tight Company Control.

There was, however, a revolt in Butte in 1911 and a socialist administration was elected in that city only to be thrown out of office in 1914, when the militia was brought in during a strike and general upheaval in the miners' union caused largely by the corruption of the union officialdom. From then until 1917—up to the time of the great strike of the miners and metal tradesmen—the company had its own way in the mines, in the legislature and in the courts.

Wheeler is a personal injury lawyer and a very successful one. He was also counsel for a number of the more progressive unions and inevitably incurred the enmity, if not of the company itself, at least of the legal and political staff which handled its affairs.

Some idea of the power of the Anaconda Mining Company in Butte, and thruout the state can be gained from a consideration of the fact that in Silver Bow county—where Butte, the largest metal mining camp in the world, is located—not one single decision has ever been rendered against the company in a personal injury case—no court has ever decided against the company in all of the thousands of cases of loss of life and limb that have occurred in the mines. It was the custom of the company up to a few years to pay a monthly retainer to every lawyer in Silver Bow county the moment he passed the bar examination—if he would accept it and most of them did. Those who did not and who ventured to oppose the company in the courts acquired a reputation for radicalism automatically and without any inquiry being made into their political and economic beliefs.

The War Period.

Wheeler was one of this small group and it was with the reputation of being "against the company" that he entered the war period as United States District Attorney. War was declared in April and early in June, following the smothering to death of 164 men in the Speculation disaster, the general strike began that tied up copper production for six months when it was selling at the highest price in the history of the industry.

The company officials immediately demanded that Wheeler turn his office over to them. The demand was not couched in diplomatic terms, but was a command such as the copper monarchs were accustomed to delivering and having obeyed without question. It was really not an unusual demand because with one other exception—the office of the federal Judge for the Montana district—every other office in the state was theirs.

Wheeler refused. He likewise refused to prosecute the strikers and the strike leaders unless actual law violation could be shown and the federal Judge—George Boruquin—stood behind him.

Judge Bourquin is a character that deserves more than passing mention if the environment that produced Wheeler is to be understood. Bourquin is a lineal descendant of the French Hugeonots; he is an aristocrat in the full meaning of the term and altho I have never spoken to him I have the impression that he has a good deal of contempt for the working class. He also hates the coarse and uncultivated millionaire class and in particular he hates the tactics and policies of the Anaconda Mining Company.

His attitude all thru the war can be explained only on this basis for he was appointed to the position he now holds because he was thought to be a "company" man and while a district judge he gave plenty of grounds for that belief if the stories of the oldtimers are to be believed.

Since his appointment as federal Judge, however, he has invariably—always within the law because he has never been reversed by a higher court—given the company the worst of it. He fined one of the chief attorneys of the Anaconda $500 after Wheeler had prosecuted him for tampering with a federal jury and in Montana at that time this was nothing less than blasphemy and sacrilege combined.

Two Incidents.

When a deportation case growing out of an illegal raid on the I. W. W. hall was brought before Bourquin he dismissed it and in his written decision included the following obvious and sound advice to the defendants:

> "The evidence shows that no resistance, oral or otherwise, was offered by the defendants altho the provocation justified resistance to the last dread extremity."

When by some process or other, another member of the Industrial Workers of the World was brought before him for evading the "work or fight" law after he had been farmed out by the sheriff of Cascade county, the judge dismissed the case, told the defendant that it was his duty as an American citizen to sue the sheriff for damages and further advised him as to the approximate amount of damages he could collect.

The copper press conducted a campaign against Wheeler and Bourquin that is without parallel in American life unless it is equalled by the bitterness of the abolitionist period. Wheeler was thought to be more vulnerable than Bourquin and the attack was concentrated upon him. It was not confined to attacks upon his personal integrity but took every conceivable form until it became an open demand for his life appearing simultaneously in every daily in the state—in editorials and news stories—until the Butte Daily Bulletin was established.

Added Frenzy.

This served to increase the fury of the local capitalists and their tools in and out of the labor movement. All of this time the strike was going on. Butte was filled with gunmen and militiamen who knew that a quick rise to fame and a surfeit of gratitude from the patriots could be had by murdering Wheeler and a few individuals like myself. Emergency measures taken following the murder of Frank Little were all that prevented an extension of the terror.

The Bulletin staff and Wheeler were haled before the state council of defense composed of the governor—a copper tool—and 10 other copper lackeys. Wheeler was censored and the basis laid for the prosecution of myself and other members of the Bulletin staff. I was arrested and then kidnapped from Butte, finally brought to trial in a hostile county for sedition and Wheeler defended me. I was convicted and he was then forced to resign.

The Political Struggle.

After the war he ran for governor and was defeated following a campaign marked by such incidents as his being besieged in a small railway depot by American legionaires and rescued by armed members of the World War Veterans. Two years later he was elected to the United States senate and has attained the highest pinnacle of fame measured by newspaper standards—his name is published without explanation as to who or what he is.

Wheeler was elected by the workers and farmers of Montana and I have not the slightest doubt but that the majority are pleased with their choice and that if he had to run for election this year he would be returned by a larger majority than he received a year and a half ago. Yet Wheeler has nothing in common with the workers and farmers of Montana except his hatred of the Anaconda Mining Company and it is not hard to understand how the keen edge of his enmity has been blunted by political expediency, association and class interest, for after all Wheeler is middle class thru and thru. He has no confidence in the working class—the typical middle-class attitude.

His Class Interests.

His interests are those of the property-owning class; he is worth at least $100,000 and probably $200,000. He was raised in poverty but his early hardships have not made him hate the capitalist system; they have only made him fear poverty and created in him a passion for wealth and the security that wealth gives.

That he is honest—outside of his profession—I have no reason to doubt any more than I have reason to doubt that in a struggle where the issue was capitalism or communism, Wheeler would be with the capitalists. He pledged himself to discredit individuals like Palmer and Daugherty who, by their raids on the halls and homes of workingmen, violated the constitution and he has done so to the best of his ability; he has not brought forward the class issues which were and are the basis of all the campaigns of governmental terrorisation and I do not believe that he could if he wanted to; he looks upon such measures as unconstitutional and is against them for that reason. He is a Jeffersonian democrat and sees as the cause for the evils of which the masses complain the abrogation by unscrupulous individuals of the principles embodied in the declaration of independence. His rebellion against the big Montana capitalist interests has no theoretical foundation beyond those I have cited because Wheeler is not a student; if I remember correctly, Alf Budden and I introduced him to The Nation and the New Republic, and he was much surprised to discover that such "radical" journals were published in the effete east.

Wheeler's Viewpoint.

In talking over Wheeler's qualifications and limitations with others I have said many times that his best asset from the workingclass point of view was his hatred of the practices of the Anaconda Mining Company and reviewing, as I write, his activities in Washington, I see no reason to revise this statement.

Wheeler does not dislike the A. C. M. because it is a capitalist institution and part of American capitalism. If it adopted a welfare system or allowed its employes to organize and dealt with the committees of the union—"recognized the union" in labor parlance—if it discontinued its policy of freezing out small mining operators and bribing legislators—in other words, if it made concessions to the idea of competitive capitalism that Wheeler holds in common with other Jeffersonian democrats and LaFollette progressives, he would have no quarrel with the company any more than he has a quarrel with the Kevin-Campbell oil concern, for which he is counsel.

In a recent number of the Labor Age—the official organ of the League for Indusrial Democracy—Wheeler has set forth his views of workingclass parliamentary tactics; very frankly he states his belief that better results can be obtained by non-partisan political action—supporting "friends of labor" on the two capitalist party tickets. I said he spoke frankly but I think that this is not quite correct; actually he prefers that the "friends of labor" should be members of the democrat party for the very obvious reason that victory for the democrat party opens out a political vista for Wheeler that he could never have visualized when he was being hounded like a common criminal by the press of a section of the most powerful group of industrial capitalists in the world. Wheeler is ambitious and from the pinnacle to which he has been raised by force of circumstances—circumstances which are the result of the clash of social forces that he will be one of the last to understand—he has seen the very beautiful world that belongs to those who enjoy great political power in the republic. He will stay with his class and with the party of his class and he will be wrecked with that party and that class by the same forces that, vaguely understood by the workers and farmers of Montana in blind revolt against intolerable oppression, when they made him their spokesman, are now clearer to them and are driving them first to class political organization and then onward to a goal far beyond that to which the Wheelers, Brookharts, LaFollettes and other middle class elements are willing to travel.

In a word, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, the Montana meteor, is a product of the instability of American capitalism, a period marked by the dissolution of the American capitalist two-party system of parliamentary government, consequent upon the widening breach between the interests of the working class and the capitalists.

He is the product of a transition period in which the workers and farmers have rallied to middle-class progressives because they were unready as yet to accept a revolutionary program and leadership.

The Poor Fish says: That it is a sad day for America when the forced resignation of William J. Burns allows the radicals to have the laugh on all his patriotic boosters.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

We are informed by the business leaders of America that 1924 will be a year of unexampled prosperity for American business. These predictions are indulged in at the twelfth annual convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce. It would be a Chamber of Labor. However, that is scanty consolation for the millions of "dirt farmers" who are bankrupt under capitalist rule in the great Northwest. It would be a funny thing if the farmers got a little sense all of a sudden and vented it on the plutocracy.

Another banker said that the growth of bank deposits was golden testimony to the prosperity under which the capitalists are enjoying happiness and the workers poverty. A Chicago statistician blamed the farmer for most of our cares. "When the farmer stops producing the flapper on Broadway stops eating." The capitalists don't stop eating so soon tho. Another banker said the Dawes plan would bring the United States more foreign trade than it had in years and that would in turn stimulate domestic exchange. Thus we can feel the hairy hand of Esau despite the altruistic voice of the liberal Jacob. If the capitalist class could turn the workers and farmers of America into Robots, physically as well as mentally, a heavy load would be taken off their chests. Instead, the "dirt farmers" and the industrial workers are getting ready to pile dirt on the coffin of capitalism.

Hiram Johnson is not howling as loudly as he used to over the danger threatening this blessed nation, the danger of getting mixed up in the internal affairs of the God-darned bankrupt, imperialistic, Godless, moneyless, old nations of Europe. The Dawes plan, which normally could be counted on to produce at least half a dozen Johnsonian fits, on the contrary did not bring forth a squawk from the political "Wild Bull of the Californian Pampas." Johnson started out to lick Coolidge. He posed as a progressive. Unfortunately he was not able to prove that he was sufficiently different from Coolidge to warrant anybody getting excited over it. Wrigley, of chewing gum fame, was his original backer. The DAILY WORKER labelled Johnson the "Chewing Gum candidate" and his bandwagon got stuck. In other words, the works got gummed up. Wrigley withdrew his dough and from then on Johnson's oratory did not seem to avail him any. Money is more eloquent than speech. He was badly beaten by Coolidge in the California primaries. A silent man with dough can beat the most eloquent but penniless orator that ever lived, in a primary election. I should be remembered that Johnson is mainly responsible for keeping Tom Mooney in jail.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, one of the wealthiest men in the United States asks a veto on the soldiers' bonus bill which was passed by the Senate. He claims the measure would be a menace to American industry. The president is expected to veto the bill, but it may be passed over his veto. And it may not. Capitalist politicians like to please the "common people" who like bonuses. They also like to please the money classes who can afford to give them the luxuries of life. Retaining the confidence of the voters and the dough of the employers is the aim of Democrat and Republican politicians.

American workers went to France and braved German bullets, trench lice, and the Y. M. C. A. for $30 a month to save the investments of the American bankers. Since the end of the war they have been rewarded with eulogies and decorations, but no cash. While they were at the front the millionaires were some three thosand miles in the rear making new fortunes. Yet we find many of the returned soldiers aiding these same capitalists that sent them to stop German bullets, and making war on radical organizations that would prevent another capitalist war. It is safe to say however, that the great majority of the ex-soldiers are thoroly disillusioned and are not in sympathy with the strike-breaking American Legion.

The Polish cabinet may pass a law limiting the freedom of speech of the President of Poland. President Wojciechowski recently made two speeches which could be interpreted as recommending an imperialistic policy. We suggest that the cabinet follow the traditional policy of the British cabinet in handling the utterances of the king. One of the prime minister's office boys writes the speech, and the king obediently delivers it. To a certain extent, the same is true of some American presidents. In lieu of that we suggest that Poland exchange presidents with the United States. Calvin would not cause the Polish cabinet any trouble and we would have a lot of fun trying to get our tongue around the new president's name.

SOCIALIST LOVE FEAST BEGINS FURRIERS' MEET

Left Wing Will Press Amalgamation

Opening session of the Furriers' convention at the Morrison hotel in Chicago, yesterday, turned out to be more of a socialist party picnic than anything else.

This opening session which consisted of a program of speaking under the direction of President Morris Kaufman, opened with Morris himself and followed with Mayor Daniel Hoan of Milwaukee, John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor and George Kirkpatrick.

Kaufman declared that the union, which had suffered in the post-war period, had recovered its original strength; Hoan praised himself and the socialist government of his city, which he said, never cracked strikers on the heads as did other administrations; Fitzpatrick welcomed the delegates in the name of Chicago labor and Kirkpatrick talked of the solidarity of labor.

Following this love feast, the real business of the convention will come, —probably beginning today.

The left wing, which represents the vast majority of the strikers, is represented in the convention in spite of the strong-arm election methods of the administration. It will work at the convention for its program.

Amalgamation is vitally needed by the furriers. Their membership of only 10,000 needs the support of the hundreds of thousands of workers in the other needle trades.

The class Farmer-Labor Party is vital to its well being also. Its members have been beaten and slugged during strikes.

Recognition of Soviet Russia and other left wing issues will also be pressed.

Count Sore Because He Missed Balance Of Millicent's Cash

VIENNA, May 12.—Count Ludwig Salm, husband of Millicent Rogers, sulked here today and refused to talk about his separation from his heiress bride.

"I've been talking to reporters ever since we arrived in Europe," the count shouted angrily as he alighted from the Orient express and was met by no one save a delegation of newspapermen who wanted to hear what he had to say about the action of Col. H. M. Rogers in taking Millicent home on the liner France Saturday.

Reverend Gent Plays Stool-Pigeon Role In Longshore Strike

By Defense News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 12.—Fred R. Wedge, clergyman, prize fighter and member of the University of California's department of education, entered the ranks of the I. W. W. in 1922 as a spy, according to his own admissions. In an address recently to the Berkeley Rotary club, he said: "I wanted to know the causes which lead men into this revolutionary organization. So I joined the I. W. W., with the knowledge and consent of the federal authorities."

Wedge interpolated himself into the free speech fight on the San Pedro docks last year, making emotional speeches, and finally getting into jail for a few hours. He is writing a book about it all.

PICKETING LEGAL, SAYS WAUKEGAN JUDGE TO BOSS

Dress Manufacturer Is Denied Injunction

WAUKEGAN, Ill., May 12.—Peaceful picketing is within the law, declared Judge Edwards of the circuit court at Waukegan yesterday, refusing to grant an injunction to Julius Eisenberg, Chicago dress manufacturer, who is trying to run a scab factory in Waukegan during the present strike.

Boss Weeps.

Eisenberg broke down in court and cried like a baby, saying that as a free born American citizen he had a right to run his business "open shop."

Judge Edwards replied that the union had a right to peacefully picket his shop. This was Eisenberg's third attempt to get an injunction from Edwards during the present strike.

Police Tell the Truth.

Policeman Gillis testified and declared their business was to enforce order and tell the truth. Eisenberg was greatly nettled at his stand.

Nathan Bosen, Waukegan organizer, selected for the post from the ranks of the members expelled from the I. L. G. W. U. for their affiliation with the Trade Union Educational league, is in charge of the strike and of the fight against the injunction conspiracy.

Sawmills Tied Up by Strike.

By Defense News Service.

RAYMOND, Wash., May 12.—Seven hundred sawmill workers are on strike here. They are largely I. W. W. members, and walked out in protest against a cut of 60 cents from their daily wage. Five mills are affected, and 90 per cent of the employes in those mills are out. Strong picket lines are being maintained.

PEORIA CONVENTION OF UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA WILL DISCUSS LIVE PROBLEMS

under fire from the headquarters of their international union in Indianapolis with John L. Lewis acting the role of a Benedict Arnold.

In those days Frank Farrington, president of District 12, was lined up with Howat against Lewis. There was no name in his, the most up-to-date dictionary of Billingsgate, that Farrington did not hurl at his foe. In speeches bristling with charges, any one of which, if proven, were enough, not alone to have Lewis expelled from the union, but to send him to the penitentiary, Farrington ripped Lewis to tatters. He pledged his devotion to the cause of Alexander Howat and promised to carry on the fight until he was reinstated.

Then something happened. There was a closer bond between Farrington and Lewis than between Howat and Farrington. Howat is an honest, conscientious rebel, while both Farrington and Lewis are crooks—on their own admission. Both had good reasons to bury the hatchet, not in each other's necks, but in the necks of the progressives in the union. So they joined forces shortly before the Indianapolis convention, where the Howat case was to come up.

There Farrington showed himself in his true colors as a traitor and renegade.

The backbone of the fight for every progressive measure brought up at that convention was the Illinois delegation. There were about three hundred delegates there representing nearly 100,000 miners—a mighty force, and led by Freeman Thompson, John Watt, Joseph Tumulty, John Hindmarsh and others, they put up a splendid fight. With the exception of the Farrington payrollers, the entire delegation voted against Lewis on every issue. Once or twice they almost tipped over his machine. Farrington stood by his bargain with Lewis, and received the honor of being appointed chairman of the Scale Committee.

Farrington Against Six Hours.

In making his report, Farrington attacked those who favored the six-hour work day in the mines, regardless of the fact that he circularized the district in favor of the same measure several years ago. This was brought to his attention by members of his own delegation, but the taunt did not pierce his thick political hide. Farrington was the only president at the convention who could not control his own delegation. In electing representatives on the Scale Committee, the Illinois delegation took the meeting entirely out of the hands of Farrington's henchmen, elected their own tellers and ran things pretty much as if Mr. Farrington were not in existence.

When the Lewis gunmen refused Howat to speak after getting to the platform and over 1,100 delegates voted for a roll call vote on the question of his reinstatement, it was the Illinois delegation that gave the leadership and the greatest numerical strength to the meeting held after Lewis walked away without adjourning the convention. The meeting made plans to carry on the fight for the reinstatement of Howat and for progressivism rather than reaction in the United Mine Workers of America.

Thus the convention that opens today in Peoria, is of particular interest, not alone to the miners thruout the country, but to every class-conscious worker in the United States. The miners' union, once the shock troops of the army of labor in America, has lost much of its effectiveness thru the treachery of Lewis and his lieutenants in the district offices. Of these lieutenants, none is more despised than Farrington. A reactionary of the worst type, he shamelessly sold himself to his arch foe and swallowed his hate for John L. Lewis when confronted with the still greater danger to himself and his capitalist masters, the coming to power in the union of the progressive elements.

The delegates of the miners of Illinois at the Peoria convention are expected to follow the lead given by the veterans of Kansas and deal another blow to reaction and autocracy in the United Mine Workers of America by taking the appointive power away from the president, voting to back up the reinstatement of Howat and the calling of a special international convention to try John L. Lewis for his many crimes against the miners in particular and the American labor movement in general.

GENERAL STRIKE GREEK'S THREAT TO GOVERNMENT

Demand Release Of 250 Communists

ATHENS, Greece, May 12.—The Greek Federation of Labor has demanded that the government release unconditionally the 250 Communists and unionists who were arrested in the May day celebrations. The federation threatens that a general strike will be proclaimed thruout Greece if the "democratic" government does not let the workers out of prison.

The military clique which controls the government forbade the workers' May day meetings and broke them up by force when the workers disregarded their orders. A company of "engineers" first turned a fire hose stream of water on the various workers' assemblages, and when that tactic failed to intimidate the workers, a company of militia fired. Seventeen caspalties were the result, besides the 250 arrests.

Communist ideas are spreading rapidly in Greece. The party blames the government for the May day disturbances and calls upon the workers and farmers to close their ranks and march together toward their own class government.

PULLMAN BOSSES AGREE TO MEET WITH STRIKERS

consent to take all the strikers back but one. Further backdown of the company to avert continuation of the walkout is expected.

The men have again and again signified their loyalty to these strike leaders who are their fellow Pullman workers. One of them, Louis Nelson, has worked 14 years for the company.

Marshman Urges "Conservatives."

Marshman, who represents James A. Davis, secretary of labor under the Coolidge administration, advised the strikers to choose "conservatives" to the strike committee and to elect no radicals. Strikers decided that the issues of "conservative" and "radical" were not involved. The thing was to choose men they could trust.

Day of Best Solidarity.

The best mass picketing and the best mass meetings in the history of the strike was the answer of Pullman strikers yesterday morning to the stool pigeon propaganda that the "strike is over" and that the "company has settled it."

Strikers and Workers Party members were selling the DAILY WORKER at every entrance of the great Pullman plant, which stretches along Michigan avenue for half a mile.

Meeting a Big Victory.

Holding such a big mass meeting—the biggest yet held by the strikers—was in itself a victory. Company stool pigeons had visited every striker's home, telling each striker that all the others had gone back and that the company was settling the issues involved thru the company union.

The strikers showed an understanding and class consciousness that they did not possess before the experience and education of the last four weeks of struggle together.

Conciliator Amazed.

"Manager McLaren of the Pullman company telephoned me this morning that the strike had been settled," said Marshman after he was introduced. "This doesn't look like it. When I see 350 men in this hall so early in the morning it looks as tho there still were a strike in Pullman."

Marshman went on to say that he was satisfied the men had something to strike about or they would not be there.

Did Pullman Manager Lie?

As to the big issue of discrimination against strike leaders, Marshman said McLaren promised him that there would be no discrimination except of men who had "committed acts of violence."

Since no one has been convicted for any act of violence, it was apparent to the strikers that McLaren was simply seeking an excuse for blacklisting active strikers.

"Fixing Up."

McLaren promised Marshman that the wage grievances would be "fixed up." But the mediator advised the men that they knew best just what this "fixing up" meant.

Marshman said he waited until Monday to see whether the men really were standing pat. Finding that they were, he was going ahead in the effort to settle the strike.

He promised to see the company officials at once and would report again to the strikers.

Houses to Cure Slaves.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12.—Solution of the farm labor problem in Massachusetts lies in providing better housing conditions for farm hands and their families, steady employment, and wages on the basis of skill, declares the United States Department of Agriculture.

New York Stationary Engineers May Offer Battle To Bosses

NEW YORK, May 12.—Unless the New York refrigeration plant owners come to terms by May 15, their 3000 engineers may strike for a $9 day. Eight dollars a day for a 48-hour week is the present wage of the men who are members of locals 20, 56, and 670, International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, American Federation of Labor.

The contract expired May 1. Employers are negotiating but refuse to meet the demands.

A. C. W. MEET FACES MANY BIG LABOR QUESTIONS

PHILADELPHIA, May 12.—The Russian American Industrial corporation, R. A. I. C. formed by the A. C. W., now in convention here, is a distinct achievement in the field of international solidarity. Facts showing the improvement in the Russian textile industry which has come with the aid of the class conscious workers in the American needle trades industry will be presented to the convention and there is no doubt that the convention will unanimously continue to support this big international industrial concern.

Amalgamation will continue to be a big issue. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers has already gone on record in favor of concentrating the great needle trades industry both in the men's and women's branches and others into one union which can more effectively organize the entire industry.

Big men's clothing firms, such as Hart, Schaffner & Marx, are now turning out hundreds of ladies' garments a day. The absurdity of making union divisions where industrial divisions are ceasing will give impetus to the demand for one big union in the clothing industry.

Endorsement of the great Farmer-Labor convention coming at St. Paul on June 17th is one of the big issues before the conventions. Thousands of delegates from trade unions and farmers organizations will be present at this convention.

In New York in Local 2, while the administration looked the other way, the right wingers stole the election and in New York a reactionary, David Wolf, was appointed manager of the Joint Board.

SOLONS SEEK TO AVOID AN EXTRA SESSION

Statesmen Flopping In Legislative Puddle

WASHINGTON, May 12.—With adjournment of congress arranged for four weeks from today, capital leaders are groping for a way out of their legislative dilemma in the hope of avoiding an extra session of congress.

Talk of coming back after the convention has again been revived, but party leaders still hold hopes of cleaning the legislative slate. This week will decide. If President Coolidge vetoes the bonus, immigration or tax bills, which are not to the liking of his masters, then an extra session is considered inevitable.

Here are how the prospects shape up now:

Tax Reduction.

House and senate bills got action today with prospects that the bill finally decided upon cannot be placed before the president for two weeks. The plan is to pass a flat 25 per cent tax reduction all along the line for this year and go to the country in the next campaign if Coolidge vetoes the bill.

Farm Relief.

The McNary-Haugen and Sinclair-Norris price stabilization bills to be taken up by both senate and house this week with a spirited and perhaps lengthy fight in prospect.

Railroads.

Senate interstate commerce committee is preparing to report out the Smith resolution declaring agriculture a basic industry and instructing the government rate-making commission to lower freight rates on farm products. May be put thru both houses at last minute but final outcome is still in doubt.

World Court.

Seems lodged between the legislative jam in the foreign relations committee. Democratic leaders, however, are planning to bring it arbitrarily to the floor and some kind of a vote on the issue will be forced before adjournment.

Immigration.

Conferees report will be passed on by both houses this week and the bill sent to the president.

Bonus.

Leaders making arrangements to adopt the bill speedily if Coolidge vetoes it today or tomorrow.

This member had himself viciously slandered the highest officials of the union and had urged members of the league to take out an injunction restraining the union from taking action against them, showing himself to be entirely opposed to the interests of the international.

Official Secrets.

Hyman accused the officials themselves of participating in secret conferences, citing several instances. One of the vice-presidents of the international, he claimed, had organized a caucus in Toronto whereby he had been elected as delegate to the convention. This statement aroused heated protest from officials, but it quickly subsided when a delegate cried out that he had written proof of the fact. Eva Pasha, a very active member of the union and one of the challenged delegates, took the floor after Sigman. The case against the local was a frame-up intended to cover the present policy of the international of suppressing by any and all means differences of opinion on the labor movement.

Eva Pascha typifies the worker who has given the best of her energy and enthusiasm to the labor organization to which she belongs; she is a personification of the fearless militant who has that indomitable courage that comes from faith and determination. Her plea carried with the weight of earnest conviction and sincerity.

"You want to throw dust in our eyes by the charges of secret meetings," she said to the officials. "But you know and we know that you are after us because of principles in which we believe, but you do not. I have never been a member of the Workers Party or the Trade Union Educational league, but after seeing your tactics, I can promise you that I will be in the future."

The previous question was called for. Points of order were raised from all sides. Demands rang out that the challenged delegates be all given an opportunity of self-defense. President Sigman, following out the policy of cutting off discussion begun the day before by Perlstein, ruled the previous question in order. It was put to a vote and carried.

The case of Local No. 9 marked the climax in the contesting of delegates, which was part of the expulsion policy adopted by the Sigman administration against league members or sympathizers.

A significant fact revealed in the discussion was that the accused delegates from Local No. 9 had never been tried, nor had the charge of a caucus ever been investigated.

For almost three years Local No. 9 has been controlled by the progressives, who oppose certain policies of the administration, and for almost three years the officials of the international have striven their utmost to bring the local under their own domination. Threats of reorganization have been repeatedly made in an effort to intimidate the local, but these could never be carried out. The present convention gave the administration the opportunity it had long sought. The convention, it was alleged by many delegates, was packed with representatives from small town locals which had been artificially created prior to the convention, only for the purpose of getting more votes for the official machine.

Freiheit Is Target.

A vicious attack upon the Freiheit, official organ of the Jewish federation of the Workers party, was made by leaders of the international. The Freiheit, which exerts a tremendous influence in the Jewish labor movement, advocates and agitates for amalgamation, an all-inclusive labor party, recognition of Soviet Russia, and a trade union policy based upon the class struggle.

For this reason one of the strongest counts in the indictments against Local No. 9 was the fact that it advertised in the Freiheit and in other ways gave it financial and moral assistance.

It was furthermore charged that the local showed its disloyalty to the organization by inviting as speaker to its May day celebration a well-known, active Communist—Juliet Stuart Poyntz.

Miss Poyntz was at one time educational director of the international, and very popular amongst the membership. It was noticed that the reporter for the credentials committee avoided using her name because of this popularity.

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, was present at the convention to extend the greeting of his organization to the international. He made a mild plea for unity in the union, stating that the present differences were merely an incident in the labor movement. In conclusion he pledged the fullest support of the Amalgamated to the workers of the international.

Milwaukee Railway Lays Off Many Of Its Workers in Miles City

MILES CITY, Mont., May 12.— A large number of employes have been laid off by the Milwaukee Railroad, especially in the store department, where 17 men were dropped.

Little Banks Close; Big German Banks Grab Morgan Coin

BERLIN, May 12.—While the Social-Democratic reichstag is selling Germany out to Morgan, a slower but more bitter process is going on, ruining the small industrialists and consequently bleeding the German workers.

One after another small banks, speculating in francs, close their doors, at the rate of about one a day.

In April alone twenty-eight banks failed, and of them eight "broke" in the last week of the month. In the train of these failures over 125 industrial failures followed in the same month, as compared with only twenty-five in February.

charge that the left wing movement in this country started in Local 66, after Halperin's return to this country from Soviet Russia.

The credentials committee also recommended the unseating of Mary Rodowell, of Local 100, Chicago. Vice-president Meyer Perlstein stated that Delegate Rodowell had been active in the Chicago dressmakers' strike, proving her devotion to the union, and should be seated. President Morris Sigman came to the front with a denial that "The International" was seeking to suppress difference of opinion in "The International." He charged that all the trouble began with the agitation for amalgamation and the united front. He claimed that the unions are economic and not political organizations. He claimed that the left wingers want to make the unions an industrial arm of a political party; but in the unions there is no place for politics.

The convention sent a cablegram of congratulation to J. Ramsay MacDonald, premier of the British labor government.

Pankin Praises C. P. P. A.

In the effort to head off the class Farmer-Labor Party, which the labor fakers fear, the convention leaders introduced Judge Jacob Pankan of New York.

This loyal member of the right wing machine sounds a patriotic call for July 4, day of the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the conference for progressive political action.

Panken, the socialist, spoke with feeling of the great day on which we were supposed to have gotten our liberties and begged the delegates to endorse the C. P. P. A. that would meet on that sacred day.

Hillquit on Discipline.

Morris Hillquit, another C. P. P. A. bellwether, followed Panken.

Hillquit lauded the labor fakers who are running the convention, and advised the delegates to submit to their discipline. All this in the name of "unity."

The convention committees—all of them—are appointed. Even the appeals committee is appointed, not elected. This means that the committee which hears the cases of the expelled members from Chicago, Philadelphia and the 19 members of Local 22, New York, who were removed by official orders, is a Sigman committee.

Three members from Local 22 have come to plead their comrades' cause.

Producing Theatre Managers Break Up Their Scab Union

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 12.—The minority group of theatrical managers who planned to break the Actors' Equity Association, American Federation of Labor, by a June 1 lockout are out of luck. When the managers who control over 70 per cent of the productions, broke away from the antiunion crowd planning to sign with the union, the diehards marched out their company union, Actors' Fidelity League. Now even the company union is breaking up.

William Faversham was so indignant at the unauthorized use of his signature to a statement by Fidelity members attacking the A. F. of L. that he immediately joined Equity in protest. The statement attacked the union for "affiliating with men guilty of the butcheries of Los Angeles and Herrin."

David Warfield and Margaret Anglin have also notified Equity that their names were put on the statement without their knowledge. As Fidelity only has 30 or 40 members, against 10,000 Equity members, the action of Faversham, Warfield and Anglin is a serious blow to the company union. It was formed by the managers to break the 1924 strike.

MUNDELEIN IS GREETED BY BIG BUSINESS MEN

Papal Titles Given To Corporation Heads

The exploiters of the American working class and their lackeys are vieing with each other to honor Bishop Mundelein of Chicago, now a Prince of the Church. His return from Rome where he received the Red Hat from the Pope was made the occasion for receptions and fetes equalling in display and pomp the pageantry attendant on the return of a proud monarch. Rodman Wanamaker, owner of a chain of department stores, fitted out a royal room on the pier at which the prelate landed. The Cardinal had his picture taken in the throne chair, which dates back to the sixteenth century and came from Florence, Italy.

Big business without regard for creed or race joined in welcoming the new Prince of the Catholic church. James Farrell, president of the Steel Trust, gave a dinner "in honor of the services rendered by Bishop Mundelein in the Chicago steel district."

Among the Chicago laymen to be given a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory, are E. F. Carry, president of the Pullman company; F. J. Lewis, Chicago manufacturer; Robert M. Sweitzer, Democrat politician and County Clerk; Joseph W. McCarthy, architect of the Area, Ill., project, and Anthony Czarnecki, member of the board of election commissioners.

The elevation of Bishop Mundelein will be the signal for a great fund raising campaign among the Catholics under his jurisdiction. The Vatican needs money badly and the United States is the only country that can supply the Papal needs.

While passing thru Cowentown, Md., on a fast B. & O. express, the Cardinal's train killed a horse at a crossing, causing a jolt that sent his Eminence sprawling into a couch with the committee that was presenting him with a $25,000 check on top of him. Nothing daunted, he accepted the check and thanked the donors.

It is reoprted that several Klokards and Goblins of the Ku Klux Klan have died of Dementia Catholix as a result of the number of Nordic protestants who have kissed the Cardinal's Catholic toe since his return from Rome.

Howat Prosecutor Knocked To Kansas Governor In Letter

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 12.—Protest has just been sent to Governor Davis of Kansas by T. L. O'Neil, president of the O'Neil Implement Manufacturing company, for the "personal aggrandizement" of Attorney General Charles B. Griffith. Griffith has succeeded in adding another "victory" where no one thought he could. He has had Ellison White convicted for wife murder by the flimsiest of circumstantial evidence.

Griffith is the same man who is responsible for the unwarranted conviction of Alexander Howat, former president of the miners' union, for violation of the Kansas industrial court law.

O'Neil writes to the Kansas governor:

"I don't know Scott or any of his friends. I never met Howat. . . . I have had experience with unjust injunctions, given and used for unjust causes. . . .

"The original intent of justice, as I see it, is: That it would be better for 99 criminals to escape justice than to convict and persecute one innocent man. On any other base life and liberty of the poor and the average man has become a cheap commodity."

COMMUNISTS ARE CHASING POINCARE IN PARIS POLL

The avalanche of votes that swept into office a majority from the left, seems to have given the greatest strength to the so-called radical socialists, making this party the strongest in the forthcoming parliament.

The radical socialists have never been considered a part even of the socialist movement. One of its leading members is Edouard Herriott, leader of the opposition in the French chamber of deputies, who recently made a trip to Soviet Russia, and upon his return urged recognition by France of the Workers' Republic. It is purely a middle class party, also being known as the democratic party.

The socialists of the unified socialist party are more or less in league with the radical socialists, its middle class elements drifting in that direction, while the workers and farmers in ranks are going over to the Communist Party.

DENY HALPERIN SEAT IN MEET OF THE I. L. G. W.

Hits Expulsions As Repetitions of 1919

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., May 12.—The ax of the Sigman administration in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union fell again in the convention here when George Halperin, delegate of Local 66, of New York, was unseated by a vote of 192 to 35, with 15 unseated delegates not voting. The charges against Halperin were the usual ones of membership in the Trade Union Educational league, to which was added that of slandering the officials of the Sigman regime.

He was also attacked as a member of the Workers party, and for not protesting against the criticism of the Freiheit, the Jewish Communist daily, leveled against Sigman rule.

Halperin Replies.

In his reply to the attacks made upon him, Halperin charged that the Sigman dictatorship considered it criminal if a union member urged his local to pass resolutions requesting the general executive board to rescind the decree outlawing the T. U. E. L. and instructing its convention delegate to vote against the Sigman expulsion policy, tho the constitution of the union declares the convention to which all matters of disagreement may be brought.

Halperin charged that the whole crusade growing out of the expulsion policy was a campaign against the political movement of the workers, represented by the Workers party. He therefore charged it was an attack on the union's members because of their political views.

Halperin charged that the officialdom of the international were following the same tactics pursued by the Socialist party, in 1919, when the reaction within the party expelled more than half the membership in order to maintain its leadership. He charged that the 1919 expulsions in the Socialist Party was the first shot fired against the left wing movement in this country.

One delegate had the temerity to

POINCARE RETURNS TO PARIS, COUNTS VOTES, DECIDES TO RESIGN

PARIS, May 12.—Premier Poincare has decided that he must resign as a result of the defeat of the national bloc in the parliamentary elections.

The premier returned hurriedly to Paris this afternoon from a week-end in the country, and consulted with some of his ministers, at which time his decision to resign was reached.

Edouard Herriot, leader of the Radical Socialists, is believed likely to succeed Poincare, and Aristide Briand, former premier, may become foreign minister.

Practically complete returns from Sunday's elections showed that the national bloc, which has been in power in France since 1919, has lost its majority in the chamber of deputies.

Millerand himself may resign the presidency, but cannot do so until the chamber meets.

PITTSBURGH'S CAR STRIKE IS STILL SCABLESS

Workers' Power Brings Arbitration Talk

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 12.—Pittsburgh's street car strike ended this afternoon. By a vote of 1,073 to 920, the striking motormen and conductors voted to return to work once. The carmen accepted a proposal presented by mediators which provided that the present wage scale, which carries a maximum of 67 cents an hour, be continued for the next two years; that there shall be no change in working conditions and that the company pay one-half the cost of one uniform for each employe every year.

PITTSBURGH, May 12.—The Pittsburgh Railways company's announcement that it would run cars Monday morning with strikebreakers turned out to be a monster bluff.

STRIKE STRONG WHILE PERLSTEIN STAYS IN BOSTON

"Dennie" And Taylor Whet Teeth For 52

The lull in the garment strike here does not require that vice-president Meyer Perlstein leave the exhilirating scene of the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in Boston, according to Miss Romer, Perlstein's secretary. The vice-president had expected to come back about the middle of this week if the situation here demanded, but his plan now is to return at the end of the following week.

No court cases come up today, but tomorrow will find Judge Charles M. Foell running a hot race with Judge "Dennie" Sullivan in adjoining court rooms. Some fifty-two cases are slated for Sullivan's annoyance and about twenty for Judge Foell.

Taylor Keeps Dennie in Trim.

"Dennie" will undoubtedly win for the amount of fines imposed, even if the sum is averaged by the number of pickets tried. Sullivan was in a mean mood when he last sentenced the garment strikers and dosed them out jail sentences as well as fines of $250 or more apiece. He may be in better humor tomorrow and satisfy the bosses a little less, tho Dudley Taylor, attorney for the dress manufacturers, keep Sullivan toeing the mark of severe sentences pretty closely.

One of the cases to come before Sullivan is that of Meyer Barkan, who spent another night in the lousy county jail when he was arrested for contempt. This is the second time Barkan has been treated to the inhospitable quarters of the jail.

Fifty Cases Up.

The other cases coming before Sullivan tomorrow are those of: Gertrude Hansen, Mary Shinska, Dora Rubin, Ida Borkan, Sarah Orlove, Rebecca Shore, Rose Pester, Ida Kaufmann, Pauline Bernhardt, Martha Rybicka, Anna Doleschek, Ada Abrams, Tillie Green, Ida Geffin, Rose Katz, Josephine Leone, Martha Wenfor, Frieda Forbahn, Lena Stanish, Yettie Katz, Clara Krasnowsky, Fanny Batt, Sara Shapiro, Leah Katofsky, Libby Shenkman, Ester Gittelman, Haddie Grenberg, Frieda Nitchberg, Fanny Jacoby, Rose Cohen, Sofia Rosen, Sara Wood, Mary Armoto, Angel Matusisiak, Rose Weiner, Gussie Abramowitz, Nanna Peterson, Fannie Kramer, Sylvia Krause, Dora Hoffman, Marian Brosteck, Etella Spaczeck, Jacob Hoffman, Bessie Beffield, Dora Samuelson, Caroline Heiner, Anna Sax, Esther Pegnoff and Saddie Beikoff.

Bosses Dicker.

Several bosses are negotiating with the union for terms but they are unwilling to accept the demands made by the garment workers when they went out on strike, February 27th. It is possible when vice-president Perlstein returns that the bosses and the union officials may reach some settlement, but the commitee in charge of the strike in Perlstein's absence have no authority to compromise the strike demands to gain a settlement with any boss.

The summer dress season should be well on in the shops by now but this season has been slack and to some extent the dullness of trade worked against the striking dressmakers. The regular work should pick up within a few weeks and make the bosses more eager to come to terms.

The strikers are determined to hold their lines intact until they can go back to work on the conditions they themselves have set. If they can survive this critical short period as well as they have the long weeks past of the strike, they surely should gain the victory they are hoping for.

Pullman Bosses Agree To Meet With Strikers

Brave Carmen's Fight Forces Conference

For the first time in its 59 years of labor fighting the Pullman company yesterday agreed to meet with a duly elected strikers committee.

First refusing to recognize that a strike existed, next refusing to deal with a strikers' committee, the steel car company was finally forced by the loss of valuable contracts to get down to realities.

Twelve Strikers Elected.

The strikers chose a body of twelve men to represent them before the conference in the Palace Building late that afternoon. The committee was instructed to give its report to the strikers that same evening so that action could be taken.

Full reports of the workers' decisions will be given in the next issue of the DAILY WORKER.

The conference was arranged by Ben Marshman, official mediator of the department of labor who has been drawn into the strike, which is proving so costly for the rich steel car company.

Three Parties At Conference.

But the conference which the company consented to, is not a pure and simple conference of workers and employers. There is a third element present: the so-called "conciliating committees" from the departments of the plant not on strike. Most of the members of these departmental committees are company men. Their jobs depend on acquiesence in the company's decisions.

Three parties are represented at this conference: the twelve elected strikers, twelve company men not on strike and McLaren, general manager of the Pullman plant.

Company Wants Pullman Terms.

Marshman admitted that Manager McLaren was eager to settle the strike and was willing to make some concessions, but he said the Pullman boss asserted the reduced wage would stand.

"Doesn't that mean that he wants to settle the strike on the Pullman company's own terms?" asked a reporter for the DAILY WORKER.

"Yes, that's about it," said the department of labor conciliator.

Conference Result Reported.

In his speech to the strikers at the noon meeting, the second big mass meeting of the day in Stancik's hall, Marshman reported the result of his confab with the Pullman boss that morning, McLaren's final decision to meet with the union committee.

Company Wants to Blacklist.

He said that McLaren tried to insist on blacklisting six leading spirits among the strikers and would not sit on a committee with these men. Finally McLaren and "efficiency expert" Francis Gunn said they might

FRENCH COMMUNISTS ARE CLOSE BEHIND POINCARE'S NATIONAL BLOC IN PARIS AS ELECTIONS SHOW BIG LABOR PROGRESS

PARIS, May 12.—Communists scored heavily in Sunday's elections. Altho no figures have been received, of the total vote, or the number of party members elected to the chamber of deputies, it is reported that the Communist Party ran second only to the Poincare National Bloc in Paris, that carried the metropolis by only a slight majority.

The Communists swept Bourges, an industrial and railway center in Central France. In fact, labor everywhere thruout the big French industrial centers showed a big revolutionary drift, just as in the recent German elections.

The latest returns indicated that the anti-Poincare parties, including the Communists, secured 229 seats, as against 153 for the National Bloc, with 202 results yet to be announced. The extent to which the voters were aroused by the issues at stake is shown by the fact that 80 per cent of the voters, an unusually high number for France, with strong syndicalist tendencies among her workers, went to the polls on Sunday.

Victory for the lefts was achieved by overwhelming majorities in the provinces. When Poincare piled up a small majority in Paris, the residents of the capital went to their beds believing him to have won.

Leaders of the left claim the result is an overwhelming repudiation of Poincare's foreign policies, including occupation of the Ruhr and insistence upon reservations to the experts' report.

The premier's supporters, however, claim the overthrow was due to dissatisfaction with the cost of living, recent raising of the tax rate and other domestic matters.

The new chamber, despite what Poincare's followers say, will undoubtedly affect modification of France's foreign policies.

The group which will control the chamber of deputies, favors moderation towards Germany. Many of Poincare's foreign policies are certain to be replaced by others of a conciliatory nature.

The premier may resign at once and it is possible that President Millerand, who created the national bloc, which has met its first defeat, may resign as well.

Premier Poincare and the national bloc have been in power in France for five years, and the overwhelming na-

HEAVY DECREASE IN STEEL ORDERS ANNOUNCED BY TRUST

NEW YORK, May 12.—The U. S. Steel corporation figures announced at noon yesterday show a decrease in the unfilled tonnage of 574,360 tons during April. On April 30 the unfilled tonnage stood 4,208,447 tons against 4,728,807 on March 31, 4,912,901 on February 29, 1924, and 7,288,509 on April 30, 1923.

WALL STREET JOURNAL "BLACKSHIRT" EDITORIAL READ IN THE SENATE

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Sen. Shipstead, during debate on the Lockwood matter, in a ringing voice, read to the Senate the "Blackshirts, On To Washington," article published by the Wall Street Journal of March 17th, and the later editorial in the paper declaring that 48 Mussolinis are needed —one in each state—as a sample of reactionary lawlessness in America.

GERMAN WORKERS MURDERED BY FASCISTI ARMY

Kaiserists Reviewed By Ludendorff

HALLE, Germany, May 12.—Without a murmur of protest from the Socialist president of Germany, 70,000 Fascisti followers of the kaiser and bitter foes of the German republic, helmeted and armed to the teeth, marched in parade past Generals Ludendorff, Hindenburg and other monarchists, who were gathered here to unveil a statute to General Moltke, to replace one destroyed by the Communists after the Hohenzollern head fled into Holland.

The Fascisti came from all parts of Germany in special trains. They were out for the blood of the workers, and wherever they saw a group of workers gathered they fired upon them. It is estimated that ten workers were killed, hundreds injured and over 500 jailed. Workers marching along the highways were fired upon from behind fences by Fascisti assassins. Armored cars were used by the monarchists to storm a brewery in which the workers sought protection.

Monarchist speakers, advocating the overthrow of the republic, shouted for the kaiser's return. "We will never rest until we have a kaiser again," was a usual phrase. The reactionary mob in arms was called "the Defensive Alliance of Overland Young German Order." Ludendorff reviewed the Fascisti, dressed in his gold braid, red trousers and spiked helmet. He did not look like the same general who threw himself in the gutter when the barroom Fascisti rebellion in Munich fizzled.

While this monarchist carnival was going on in Halle, the Ruhr miners were on strike and had succeeded in paralyzing industry completely.

FRENCH FRANC DROPS AS POINCARE'S BLOC GOES DOWN TO DEFEAT

PARIS, May 12.—The French franc dropped sharply today to 17.40 to the dollar when it became apparent the government had been defeated in the national elections. Saturday's closing was at 16.75. The victory of the parties of the left over Poincare is considered as making certain a settlement of the reparations problem on the basis of the experts' report.

PEORIA CONVENTION OF UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA WILL DISCUSS LIVE PROBLEMS

The convention of the United Mine Workers of Illinois which opens today in Peoria promises to be the hottest of the many hot conventions held by the miners of District 12.

The issues before the convention that will be most hotly contested and bitterly fought are the appointive power of the president and the reinstatement of Alexander Howat, former president of the Kansas miners. Approximately 800 delegates will be present.

Other questions to be taken up will be a demand for a special convention to consider charges against John L. Lewis, action against the Ku Klux Klan, which is attempting to gain control of the miners' union in the interests of the coal barons; the abolition of eleven sub-districts; inauguration of an old age pension fund; and demands that employes on miners' union payrolls now appointed shall in the future be elected.

There is no doubt where the Illinois miners stand on the question of the reinstatement of Alexander Howat. During the early days of the successful effort on the part of the bully Lewis to drive his rival out of the organization, District 12 poured their money like water into Kansas to support the miners who were on strike there against the Kansas Industrial Slave Law. Not alone were the miners assailed by the entire power of the state, but they were treacherously

Modern Industry Cause Of Divorce, Drives Women From Home

JACKSON, Mich., May 12.—Divorces are increasing because the American woman "has been driven out of the home" by economic and social forces, Miss Marion Leonard, dean of women at the University of Illinois, told the Michigan Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs here.

Dean Leonard pointed out that women are becoming socially and economically independent. Over 8,500 American women are employed in gainful occupations, she told her hearers.

The American woman, she said, "has been driven out of the home by the high cost of living, by the invention of labor-saving devices which give her more leisure; by the public schools, where her children are taken off her hands during the day, and by motor cars, country clubs and other outside entertainments."

BOSTON, May 12.—Charges that the case against Local No. 9, New York, was a deliberate frame-up by the International officialdom, and that lynch law was replacing justice in the organization were made to-day at the convention of the International. The question at issue was the recommendation of the Credentials Committee to unseat 8 out of the 10 delegates from Local No. 9, and to place the local under the direct supervision of the General Executive Board of the union.

Louis Hyman, manager of Local No. 9, stated in a bitter and eloquent attack upon the International administration, that flimsy evidence from an unreliable source was being used by the officials to blackmail regularly elected delegates in a determined effort to wrest control of the local out of the hands of the progressive elements and place it under the dictatorship of the official machine.

He accused the officials of having used their power to prevent the election to the convention of well-known, active trade unionists who disagreed with the policies of the administration in order to pack the convention with representatives of their own choosing who would assure them a majority.

This attack came after the report of Dubinsky, secretary of the credentials committee. Dubinsky charged eight of the delegates with having attended a meeting where delegates to the convention were nominated.

Delegate Hyman then took the floor and in a scathing denunciation of the international policy of suppression and coercion pointed out that no evidence of the secret nominating caucus existed other than the word of an irresponsible member of the local

Iron Workers Force New York Bosses To Sign New Contract

NEW YORK, May 12.—Despite the powerful openshop combine in the steel and iron trade, the Architectural Iron, Bronze and Structural Workers' union, has signed new contracts protecting 1500 of the 2600 inside or shop iron workers in Greater New York. The Allied Metal Building Industries, branch of the Iron league openshop organization, still controls a group of small employers by threatening to shut off raw materials if they sign with the union.

To strike these small shops one at a time is now the policy of the union, which has called out the men at the Stolz Iron Works. The Mercury Iron Works has just signed without a strike, and negotiations are in process with the Prudential shop.

BURNS CHASED RADICALS WHILE U. S. KILLERS HUNG UP RECORD THAT WILL MAKE BRITONS STEP LIVELY

(By the Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 12.—While the U. S. department of justice and its detectives under William Burns were chasing red bomb throwers which did not exist, 10,000 murders were committed in the United States in 1923 and many went unpunished. These figures are given out by Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, crime expert for the Prudential Insurance Co. The increase he says is from 9 per 100,000 in 1922 to 10.2 in 1923.

Fifty times as many persons were murdered in this country as in England and Wales, and twenty-five times as many on the basis of comparative population.

Champion Military Glutton Assails The Women Peace Workers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 12.—General Barnett, former head of the Marine corps, has told the Republican Women's Campaign Training school, in session here, that the recent congress of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, headed by Jane Addams, was a "treasonable society," made up chiefly of foreigners who came here to "corrupt our people with false ideas of national peace."

Barnett is one of the capital's ablest diners, dancers and medal carriers, and for years has appeared weekly in the society columns.

PULLMAN STRIKE HEAD TELLS WORKERS ABOUT BASIS OF STRUGGLE

John Holmgren, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, told the workers at the mass meeting that they had struck a blow at the wage cutting policy of the Pullman company that would be long remembered; he urged them whatever else they did, to unite in the labor organization that would make their next battle still more effective.

He painted an inspiring picture of the class struggle and the world labor movement, which is fighting in Germany against the Morgan plan to enslave the workers of Europe.

Asking for support of the DAILY WORKER, he showed how this newspaper, which gave the strikers their only publicity support, would keep them informed on the great world issues of labor.

As a climax to his speech, he pointed out the necessity of class conscious political action. He showed how United States senators and congressmen cared nothing for the workers and bound the chains around the necks of the child slaves of this country. He urged the workers to fill the posts of government with the members of their own class.

War Mad Senator Now Shows Concern For Poor Farmers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Senator Norbeck of South Dakota, who was made governor of his state, during the war hysteria, on the issue of jailing or otherwise suppressing the Nonpartisan League organizers, has changed his mind. The man who saw only pro-Germanism, bolshevism and red ruin in the Nonpartisan League doctrine that the farmer must be given the aid of the government in his struggle to get a free market for his products, told the Senate, in A. C. Townley's own words, that "the farmer must buy in a controlled market and sell in a competitive one, and then you tell him to solve all his own troubles by organizing co-operative stores when what he wants is a day's wage by which he can live."

STEEL COMPANIES PLANNING TO BESTOW WAGE SLASH ON SLAVES; WILL PAY FOR MUNDELEIN FEED

(By the Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 12.—Wall Street is full of reports received from Pennsylvania that the independent steel companies are on the point of cutting the already low wages. Some of the companies are now working only 50 per cent capacity due to the recent slump in orders. Judge Gary denies knowledge of the proposed cut but has stated that the policy of the U. S. Steel Corporation, would be to follow the independents in the matter of wage reductions. Republic Iron and Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube are among the big independents said to be planning a cu

Aid For the German Seamen

By GEORGE HARDY.

The recent strike of German seamen in the British Isles was a new attempt at striking. Its importance was the international aspect. But the end was a tragedy. The determination of the strikers was the only bright spot in the strike itself. And after the ships had got away with skeleton crews we got the announcement of 600 strikers being shipped to home ports, only to be arrested and severe sentences inflicted upon many of them.

We search for the causes of defeat, which are many. The treachery of the Deutsche Vohrkesbund (German Transport Union) was unsurpassed. Their members were about two-fifths of the organized strikers. The other three-fifths belong to the Deutsche Shiffarhtsbund (German Seamen's Union), affiliated to the R. I. L. U. Many were unorganized. The D. S. B. showed a willingness to fight on and would have co-operated whole heartedly, but the executives of the D. V. B. refused to endorse the strike, and as usual did what their Social-Democratic compatriots have been doing the world over, and particularly in Germany.

No United Action.

It mattered not that the struggle had a partial backing in Britain, and that the strike must be won to save the seamen from prison under the nautical law in Germany, or that the strikers chose Britain to escape the bullets of "Comrade" Hense, the Social-Democratic chief of police at Hamburg, and his colleagues at other German ports. They refused to aid in any way to achieve victory. They only discouraged and divided.

The division of the German seamen into two unions again helped to defeat them. Confusion thru lack of preparation was also a contributing cause. And even the lack of policy of the D. S. B. was to be regretted. Also arising out of the strike amalgamation of the two unions and the negotiations had progressed far, have received a severe setback due to the spineless conduct of the D. V. B. officials.

Notwithstanding the support of the Transport Workers at the Surrey and Commercial Docks, at London, the strikers were sent home defeated largely because the dockers discharged, loaded and bunkered ships. Thus allowing the skippers to ship and get away. It is said there was an arrangement that upon the call for assistance from Havelock Wilson the Transport Workers' Union officials would take strike action against the ships involved. Did Wilson call for help or was he more concerned with ulterior motives, both of aiding British shipping and making international publicity for himself with a view to resurrecting the defunct "International Seafarers' Federation"? He certainly did not encourage any outside help, nor was the necessary international publicity to the strike given publicly, which was calculated to win the strike by extending it to other countries.

Political Ambitions.

Failure to set up a joint strike committee composed of representatives of the two German unions involved, the Seamen's Union of Britain and the Transport Workers' Union, together with full co-operation of the seamen's section of the Revolutionary Transport Workers of the R. I. L. U. and the seamen's section of the International Transport Workers' Federation, led to defeat. The money of the N. S. and F. U. was not enough. The whole weight of the British unions should have been behind the strike. A call for international action going out with the signatures of the R. I. L. U. and the I. T. F. attached would have proved "international" was not a mere word nor pretense. It would have stirred all port labor and seafarers' unions to declare themselves, and a victory might have been the result instead of defeat.

Now we must prepare. The German seamen will continue to strike in other countries. The enormous amount of seamen unorganized and unemployed adds to the difficulties to seamen striking successfully at home. Besides the ruthless suppression of a dictator, the D. S. B. is an illegal organization by the decrees of Von Seeckt. These features make it very hard for the German seamen to win at home.

If German seamen's wages are not to remain an influence for low wages in British ships then we must be up and doing. There is no question of the German seamen repudiating the officials who really betrayed them, and determining their own policy. Already last week at Barrow-in-Furness another crew struck. But the N. S. and F. U. refused aid.

As there is no common understanding as to what we will do if such trade unionists and transport workers strikes continue we propose to all in particular, both ashore and afloat, that we discuss helping the German seamen and declaring an international boycott against all German ships which do not pay the full demands of the German seamen. The German wage of £2 18s 0d is slavery and threatens every seaman's home with starvation. Compared with world prices, Germany is as high as any, and the shipowners can pay equally as well as all other countries.

Action!—More Action!

If the German seamen can get the General Council of the Trade Union Congress and the Transport Union of Britain to agree to support them financially and declare a boycott against German ships, then the German seamen will make a definitely organized fight.

And with such machinery created as indicated above we could surely win. Between the two internationals over three million transport workers could be effectively used to support the German seamen. And by creating machinery as indicated above we could show for once what real international action means to the workers. Get your branches to demand action and remove the danger of low wages and destitution.

The following telegram was received from the German Seamen's Union by the secretary of the International Seamen's Section of the Red International Transport Workers:

"Wire at once Australian union to hold German ships until all claims granted by owners. Severe punishments inflicted on German seamen owing to strike in England. Wire answer whether this received. Letter follows."

We appeal to the General Council of the British Trade Union Congress to take this question up, and in conjunction with the Transport Workers, and in accordance with resolutions passed at the I. S. F. Congress, make a fight for international wage standards and conditions.

To send money to help the German trade union bureaucracy is impotent. Support the Germans who are struggling for their very existence.

Let's have international action!

Foes of Conscription.

Federated Press Review.

While most people were opposed to conscription before the big business interests threw the shadow of world war across America, only 500 men of draft age carried the opposition to the extreme limit in the brave days when every bayonet dripped with gory democracy.

These 500 war objectors and the 4,500 who went part of the way with them in defying the Wilson war machine, get their day in the court of the reading public thru Norman Thomas' book, "The Conscientious Objector in America."

The American is not a bad kicker, and he will therefore find much to interest him in the account of the government's troubles with these rebels against military authority. He will pass over the accounts of inhuman torture in American camps of some of the objectors, knowing that soldiers in battle suffered just as much and more, tho not perhaps in the name of liberty and justice, coldly administered by safety-first captains and colonels. He will linger a bit over the 57 varieties of religious objection and then will come down to the honest-to-god objector that every doughboy could understand.

This was the objector who handed it out to the officers as his view that it was a rich man's war and a poor man's fight. This objector had no objection to the army and to the fighting men as such. In fact, he rather favored a good scrap like the Russian revolution or the American revolution, and wouldn't mind putting on a uniform and shouldering a gun to fight against the Wall Street war profiteers and the bosses generally. The dollar-a-day Yank who has now been refused his cash bonus will appreciate such fighting doctrine.

Right here the more belligerent reader will conclude that the book falls down a bit. The author is evidently allied with the groups opposed to all war and develops a comprehensive anarchist theory of the state. The good point about this is that he knocks those easy-going objectors who were willing to take noncombatant service. They were unwilling to feed the gun, but jumped at the chance to feed the gunner. Thomas shows them up.

The book has a foreword by LaFollette, who picturesquely points out that "a conscience against war brought objectors to prison! A lack of conscience against stealing brought profiteers to palaces."—C. H.

The Fifth Congress of the C. I.

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV,
Chairman, Communist International.

The opening of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International has been fixed for the 5th of June, 1924. More than 18 months have passed since the Fourth Congress, and a number of questions are waiting for settlement.

Program. The Fifth Congress has to finally confirm the program of the Communist International. The first draft of the program was published at the time of the Fourth Congress. During the five years of its existence a number of documents of a fundamental character have accumulated in the archives of the Comintern, such as Lenin's thesis on dictatorship and democracy, the resolutions of the Second Congress and the rôle of the Communist Party in revolution, the resolution on the national and agrarian questions, etc., which represent the chief component parts of the program. We have, as it were, the bricks; the task ahead is to build a symmetrical structure out of these bricks.

To draw up a document like the program of the Comintern, especially now when our chief architect, Lenin, is no more, is a difficult task, but further postponement is impossible. The Fifth Congress must carry it out. The Congress will have to indorse the programs of the largest of the sections of the Comintern, who should hasten to finish their preparatory work.

The Further Tactics of the Comintern. This question will undoubtedly be discussed in close connection with another point on the agenda. The World Economic Situation. The Fifth Congress must sum up the application of the tactics of the United Front during the preceding years. It is quite clear now that these tactics will again be subject to considerable criticism. We must close our eyes to the fact that in the practical application of these tactics they have been more than once distorted in the direction of opportunism. Nevertheless, when the summary is made, the balance will be in our favor. The tactics of the united front remain the correct tactics for the whole epoch. It is necessary only that measures of precaution be taken to prevent their distortion and we must learn to give them the concrete form demanded by the conditions prevailing in any given country. Opportunist dangers to the right, as before, are the chief dangers that threaten the Comintern, but it will be possible to conduct these dangers only if we resolutely repel "Left Wing Infantilism." The Comintern is living and acting in the trough of two waves of world proletarian revolution. One wave has passed; the other wave has not yet arisen. Countries like Germany are living thru a period between two revolutions. In such a period, Communists are inevitably called upon to fight simultaneously against liquidatorism from the right and "left" phrasemongering, which frequently is tantamount to liquidatorism from the "left."

Important Controversial Problems in Various Sections. The most important of the work of the forthcoming Congress will be to investigate controversial questions and fundamental problems which at the present moment are engaging the various sections of the Comintern. In this the chief parties of the Comintern will become closely acquainted with each other, and in this way a single International Communist Party will be forged. There have been many sharp discussions and controversial questions among our principal parties in the interval between the Fourth and Fifth Congresses. Sometimes these questions have been regarded as a "crisis in the Comintern." As a matter of fact there has never been any crisis. Communist parties are built up with tremendous difficulties. One might say that the most powerful section of the Comintern—the Russian Communist Party—in the course of its 25 years of existence, has been in a state of one long continual crisis. As a matter of fact this "crisis" indicates the gradual hammering out of a real steel-like Communist Party. Who imagines that the building up of the Communist Party can proceed as easily as taking a drive along the broad asphalted streets of a European city? Any one who does so shows that he completely fails to understand what a Communist Party is. In the main, during this period the principal sections of the Comintern have become strengthened and now represent a more homogeneous vanguard of the proletariat than was the case at the time of the Fourth Congress. The Executive Committee of the Comintern is now putting forward seven sections to be dealt with: Russia, Germany, Italy, Bulgaria, England, United States and Japan.

Russia. The Congress will here report on the present economic position of the Soviet Union and will again summarize the experiences of NEP. The Congress wil also deal with the results of the discussion within the Russian Communist Party and give its decisive opinion on it.

Germany. The Congress will give its estimation on the controversies within the German Communist Party connected with the October action of the German proletariat. The Congress will undoubtedly estimate the opportunist deviations of the German Communist Party as was given by the Executive Committee of the Comintern, and will also as resolutely oppose the ultra "left" wing in the party which, as a matter of fact, is of a non-Bolshevist tendency, and repel the tactical excesses from which the majority of the German Communist Party are by no means free.

Italy. The Congress will undoubtedly resolve in favor of the immediate fusion of the Communists with the Third Internationalists (Fusionists), and help the Italian Communist Party to commence a more determined fight against Fascism and Social-Democracy.

Bulgaria. The Congress will have to give its estimation of the great events with which the Bulgarian Communist Party has had to deal. The errors committed by the majority of the Bulgarian Communist Party in June, 1923, have now been admitted by that majority. The Congress will have to assist the Bulgarian Communist Party in making good its losses, and carry out the historical mission imposed upon it by the progress of revolutionary events as speedily as possible.

Great Britain. For the first time in the history of the British labor movement the conditions have been created for the establishment of a mass Communist Party in Great Britain. In this sense, what is taking place in the British labor movement at the present time, is of even greater importance than the events in Germany. The Congress will have to do all it can to help to realize the existing possibilities and to convert the present Communist Party of Great Britain into a real mass party.

United States. The American Workers Party is becoming a mass party. The question is confronting it now of its attitude towards the rising petty-bourgeois Third Party and its attitude towards the farmers. The Congress will give full attention to the new problems of the American labor movement, and help the American party to handle the great historical tasks which confront it.

Japan. The Japanese labor movement is only just coming to the front. The cruel persecution to which the Japanese Communists have been subjected hitherto has prevented them from forming a mass Communist Party in Japan. With the participation of the Japanese Communists, a mass workers' and peasants' party is being formed. The Congress will have to deal in detail with the question of the Japanese labor movement.

The question of the Trade Unions once again occupies an important place in the work of the Fifth Congress. The more the influence of the Communists in the trade union movement grows, the more furious do the

Two Women In Delegation

The biggest treaty conference of the year was convened when representatives of Soviet Russia and of the English government met in London to negotiate a trade treaty and in the words of Premier MacDonald of Britain, "to liquidate the past and bring about peaceful relations in the future."

The delegates of Russia were Christian Rakovsky, charge d'affaires in London and chief negotiator; Preobrozhensky, assistant commissar of finance; Tomsky, chairman of the Soviet Trade Union; Khidgr Alieff, the Turkestan delegate and Koutotoff of Textile Workers' Union, and Radchinko.

Women were in the Russian party, and two of them loaned valuable aid to the parley. They were Mlle. Ostronmova and Mme. Malstoff, secretaries to the delegation.

By Earl R. Browder

NOTE—The following article by comrade Browder was originally written and published as a preface to the English edition of a recent book by A. Losovsky.

THIS book is the stenographic report of a series of lectures, delivered by A. Losovsky, General Secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions, before the school of the Russian Communist Party in Moscow, during July and August, 1923. It was published in pamphlet form in the Russian language early this year, and is herewith presented in English.

PROBABLY the most important characteristic of Losovsky's lectures is that, for the first time, there is available a comprehensive picture of the trade union movement from the world viewpoint, which deals not so much with the statics (the unilluminating details of organization and the million variations of program and problems) but rather with the vital living influences at work within the labor movement, the tendencies, the relation of forces and, especially, with the tremendous struggle developing throughout the world since the war by the forces of revolutionary struggle, crystallized in the Red International of Labor Unions, against the class collaboration policies of the old bureaucracy, organized in the Amsterdam International (International Federation of Trade Unions).

It is this world-wide viewpoint upon which the lectures are based that gives the book its greatest value. Such a comprehensive outlook is especially needed in the American labor movement. The trade union movement in this country, originally among the most militant and international in its attitude, has for forty years been stifled by the narrow nationalism, as well as by the jealous craft spirit within the limits of the nation, of the reactionary officialdom headed by Samuel Gompers. To see and to understand that the fundamental problems of the trade unions throughout the world are essentially the same as our own, an understanding which a study of Losovsky's book will certainly give, is to lay the firmest possible foundation—the only possible one—for a broad and powerful revolutionary organization in America.

American Trade Unionism Before The War.

If we were to attempt an adequate review of developments within the American labor movement, as complete and comprehensive as that given by Losovsky for the International, it would require another book of almost equal dimensions. In this brief introduction it is the purpose only to suggest some of the main points of comparison.

In the pre-war period of American trade unionism, three main tendencies may be distinguished; they may be classified as trade unionism, syndicalism, and socialism. Each of these tendencies, although corresponding in a general way to their analogous forces in the European movement, varied in many respects from their counterparts in other countries.

Trade unionism, as a distinct philosophy of the labor movement which concerns itself exclusively with the immediate economic struggle, is adequately characterized by Losovsky in dealing with the world situation. In the International movement this tendency is largely represented by the British and American unions. One important difference in the pre-war development of the two Anglo-Saxon movements, however necessary to an understanding of many present problems, is that while in Britain the trade unions (and trade unionism as a system of ideas) had entered a period of change and development even before the war, in America this process had started much later and under different world conditions. Thus while the British labor movement, reformist to the core though it was, yet was developing independent political action in the British Labor Party and embarked upon projects of amalgamation that broke up the hard and fast concepts of craft unionism, in this same period the American Federation of Labor stood solidly against the slightest deviation from its classical policies—collaboration in the capitalist parties and strict craft autonomy.

The syndicalist tendency in the world movement has its counterpart in America in the Industrial Workers of the World (I. W. W.) Arising as a protest against the antiquated structure and class collaboration policies of the A. F. of L., on the one hand, and against the parliamentary cretinism of the Socialist Party on the other, this organization played a considerable role in the ideological development of American revolutionists, though a much smaller one in the class struggle itself. Dominated at its birth by a leadership imbued with Marxism, yet early it adopted the anti-political theories of syndicalism. Although the form of this syndicalist doctrine was largely molded by the syndicalist schools of Europe, it was actually based in the social and economic conditions of the western migratory worker of America, the only element of labor that has been permanently in the I. W. W. On its positive side the I. W. W. developed a complete theory of industrial unionism, an ideal plan for reorganizing the labor movement from top to bottom. It is this concept of industrial unionism, necessarily applying centralized organization, which is the chief difference between the I. W. W. and European syndicalism. During the pre-war period the I. W. W. undoubtedly represented the most militant and class conscious section of the American proletariat.

PRODUCTIVITY OF LABOR IN RUSSIA DURING THE YEARS 1922-23

During 1922-23 productivity of labor has steadily grown from month to month, and while 1921-22 the growth of labor productivity lagged behind the increase in wages, during this year the situation was reversed.

Taking the daily productivity of one worker, for October 1922 as 100, its growth will be expressed as follows:

October, 1922	100
November, 1922	104.5
December, 1922	113
January, 1923	116.8
February, 1923	118.1
March, 1923	124
April, 1923	122.8
May, 1923	132.3
June, 1923	139.1

Thus during eight months the productivity of labor increased by 39 per cent.

The Socialist Party as a force in the trade union movement, has played no dominating role in America. When it came upon the scene it found the trade unions already established, with a crystallized leadership that was hostile to Socialism. The impatience of the Socialist with this reactionary trade unionism led not only to the dual unionism which culminated in the I. W. W., but also divided the socialists themselves on the trade union field. The split which divided the Socialist Party from the Socialist Labor Party, one of the issues of which was the latter's policy of dual unionism, did not leave the Socialist Party free to develop as a power in the trade union movement. The socialist left-wing became militant advocates of the I. W. W., while the right-wing, which stood for working within the trade unions, was incapable of developing a real opposition to Gomperism. While the Socialist Party remained, "His Majesty's opposition" in the court of Samuel Gompers during the pre-war period, its opposition was at almost all times very ineffective, it had no trade union program, and was entirely incapable, even when its members gained control of large unions, of effecting the general course of American trade unionism.

Effects of the World War.

The entry of America into the world war brought profound changes in all these groups and tendencies in the American labor movement. The trade unions, during the war and the years immediately following, made great strides forward in membership. The officialdom was largely incorporated into the governmental machinery and occupied a semi-privileged status. "War prosperity" delivered an enormous power into their hands. The bureaucracy was able to become an instrument for the conscription of the working class for war and industry, a vehicle for floating war loans among the workers, a machine for delivering rebellious workers to the Department of Justice—in short, to take its place as an open section of the ruling class—without losing its control over the masses, or creating any considerable organized opposition.

Upon the I. W. W., the war had a shattering effect. Permeated by militant rebels who actively fought against participation in the world slaughter, it brought down upon itself all the wrath of American capitalism. But because it was dominated by syndicalist prejudices it was completely unable to form such a well-knit body of men and ideas as could survive such a period of suppression and emerge stronger than ever on account of it. After hundreds of its leading militants had been sent to prison, the I. W. W. rapidly developed into a pacifist, non-resistant organization. It lost not only the bulk of its membership but, more important, it surrendered its position held up until the war, of the most militant section of the American working class.

When America was thrown into the war, the Socialist Party was again torn by its inner contradictions. The St. Louis convention in 1917 was dominated by the anti-war elements. But the right-wing was still in almost complete control of the Party, with the result that its practical activity brought the S. P. few of the benefits of a fighting anti-militarist stand. On the other hand, the St. Louis resolution, after causing the split away of an insignificant group of socialist jingoes, (Spargo, Walling, et al.) brought the S. P. up against the solid wall of Gompers' ironclad control of the trade unions. The socialist leaders in the labor movement quickly made their peace with Gompers. The ideological and organizational struggle within the S. P., between the rank and file militants who stood for active anti-militarism, and the right-wing leadership that wished to accommodate itself to "reality," prepared the ground for the later disintegration of the Socialist Party.

Effects of The Russian Revolution.

The Russian revolution crashed into this situation, upsetting all the old inertias and balances. The masses in the unions responded to it with the most widespread and effective forward movement yet seen. Great strike after strike shook the country. Hitherto-unorganized millions flooded into the unions. For the first time militant leadership upon a large scale was able to appear above the stifling Gompers bureaucracy, as in the steel strike. The masses in the trade unions had been profoundly stirred.

In the I. W. W. the Russian revolution had been greeted with great acclaim. With the development of civil war and the accompanying struggle against anarchist and Menshevik ideology in Russia, a division took place in the I. W. W. The anarcho-syndicalist tendency which, combined with a bastard pacifism, was in control, became definitely antagonistic to the revolution; at the same time a large number of the clearer elements definitely began to shed their anti-political dogmas and to assimilate the lessons of the Russian revolution. The development of this Communist wing in the I. W. W. was retarded by the imprisonment of many of its best leaders. This allowed some misunderstanding to occur, so that the confusionist leadership continued to dominate the organization. The result was that thousands of the best rank and file militants left the I. W. W. in disgust at its propaganda against Soviet Russia. The full effects of the favorable reaction towards the Russia revolution on the part of the I. W. W. membership thus failed to obtain expression in the organization as such.

Most profound was the effect upon the Socialist Party of the Bolshevik upheaval. The split which took place in 1919, the formation of the various Communist Parties and groups, and their later integration under the influence of the Communist International, brought a profound change into the left-wing conception of trade union strategy and tactics. At the same time this split eliminated the Socialist Party as even the shadow of an independent factor. Since 1919 the S. P. has steadily and consistently gone to the right, abandoned all pretense even of opposition to Gompersism, and today suffer silently from the insults which "the Grand Old Man" heaps upon them the while he orders them about.

Within the trade unions there had for years been a small group of revolutionists attempting to develop a revolutionary wing therein. In 1912 this group organized the Syndicalist League of North America, which expressed the general tendency of syndicalism but in flat opposition to dual organization, opposing thereto the idea of revolutionary nuclei in the mass unions. This movement after a short but active life, subsided, to appear again in 1916 as the International Trade Union Educational League, which, however, soon expired in the war atmosphere of the time. In 1920 the Trade Union Educational League was formed, marking time for the most part, while it endeavored to bring about unity of program among all the left-wing elements.

It was at this time that the full effects of the Russian revolution upon the American labor movement generally began to show themselves. Under the leadership of the Communist International and later also of the Red International of Labor Unions, the revolutionists of America were freeing themselves from the peculiarly American dogma of dual unionism which had rendered their efforts sterile for a generation. The result was the coming together in a great campaign of left-wing organization and the clarification of program in the Trade Union Educational League. From the mass trade unions came hundreds of militants hitherto unattached to any revolutionary body on account of the old dual union notions. From the I. W. W. came a group of workers who embodied all the fine traditions of the best revolutionary days of that organization. From the Communist groups that split away from the Socialist Party and were later unified in the Workers Party of America, came the full current of American revolutionary experience and ideology. In the Trade Union Educational League all these elements, comprising every healthy American left-wing tendency, were fused together into the first effective left-wing trade union movement in this country, the American section of the Red International of Labor Unions.

The Red International in America.

In the brief years of its work the Trade Union Educational League has wrought a profound clarification in the entire labor movement. Starting out with a great campaign from coast to coast and in every labor union, for amalgamation and a labor party—slogans expressing the two deepest and most fundamental needs of the American labor movement—the T. U. E. L. has reached the minds of hundreds of thousands of trade unionists and influenced the decisions of at least 2,000,000. From the broad slogans that stir the masses, it has intensively developed the issue of revolutionary unionism until today it represents the

On the Eve of the French Elections

By Charles Rappoport

At present, we are only at the beginning. The electoral exchange of compliments is to be continued in the same tone between the hostile brethren of the bourgeois block, who, at bottom, have the same ideas, the same hate of revolution and of Communism, but who possess divergent electoral appetites and interests.

For the Communist Party the task is not only to take note of these blows and to derive profit from them. It must, in the first place, unmask all the bourgeois parties and their conceptions, setting out with full details a faithful record of their stupidities and of their crimes.

First let us cast a general glance over the political chessboard and the large parties engaged in the fight. For the moment we will pass over the parties "standing outside" and all kinds of malcontents of the latest fashion, seeking for social position and parliamentary seats.

There then remain three large parties, representing three large social classes, striving with their utmost means to attain power.

1. The Party of the Bloc National, representing a nondescript coalition of capitalist greed and interests.

2. The Democratic Party (Radical-Socialists) represents the middle and petty bourgeoisie (non-socialist peasants, small annuitants, small shopkeepers, all kinds of brokers, and those members of the liberal professions who have not abandoned themselves to the reaction.) This middle and petty bourgeoisie is menaced with irreparable ruin. And during critical moments flies to the opposition in the full hope of re-establishing itself with the aid of parliamentary power and of credits.

3. The Party of the Working and Peasant Class. While waiting for the full deevlopment of class consciousness, we are—unfortunately—obliged to consider as one of the parties of the working class, the Socialist "Party" (S. F. I. O.), which still has in its ranks misled proletarians, credulous peasants and exasperated petty bourgeois. Tomorrow it will confound itself with the Radical-Socialist Party, which is neither radical nor Socialist. The day after tomorrow all the elements of the left will assume the Socialist label, omitting the prefix "radical," which, since it extends from Perchot to the editors of the "Lanterne" and of the "Rappel," has lost all serious significance. At such time, the Socialist Party, section of the "International of the Royal Ministers," as stated by the citizen Barthelemy Mayeras, one of the distinguished members of this same quasi-international, will lay all its cards on the table, will throw off its mask and proclaim itself a party of the counter-revolutionary order.

The situation will become clear and definite. The workers and peasants' class will be represented solely by the Communist Party, section of the Communist International.

The three parties (Bloc National, Radical Party, Socialist Party), whatever they may be saying and doing, have common features, common interests and even a common mentality.

First of all, they have a common foe: the Revolution, and its Party, Communism. Beginning with M. Poincare, including M. Herriot, right up to Blum-Paul Faure, they have a horror of the revolution, not of the word, but of the thing itself. For these three parties, the revolution is an accomplished fact, or, according to the classic formula of reformism, is accomplishing itself every day by means of reforms. For these three parties the question is how to seize power by means of the parliamentary, of the legal method.

The Socialist Party, having once attained power in France, will repeat the same acts, the same gestures, as were performed by its "brother parties" of Germany with Ebert-Noske-Scheidemann, of Sweden with Branting, of Belgium with Vandervelde, of England with Ramsay MacDonald. This is not a hypothesis, a supposition, a polemical slogan. These are facts which strike the eye. The Hamburg Socialists have been governing, are governing and will be governing the capitalist society on behalf of and for the profit of the capitalist order.

The bourgeoisie, particularly the stupid, ignorant and terrified French bourgeoisie, will need a bit of time before it can grasp the fact that it is to its interest to clear out the Bloc National, which is ruining and rendering ridiculous the capitalist regime in itself, and that the radical party in itself is without backbone. As instinct of self-preservation opens the eyes of the blindest, so even that great baby, the French bourgeoisie, will realize in time that its best gamekeeper is the party which calls itself Socialist, which at one time played the role of poacher in the struggle between the propertied and non-propertied classes.

There is still another fact welding together these three parties and making of them a block of capitalist conservation, in spite of temporary divisions. This is the so-called national interest, so-called national defense. Any one listening to Paul Boncour or Varenne when speaking on vital questions, would think he was hearing an oration by M. Poincare. One must not give heed to Blum, or to Longuet, because these citizens, being the mouthpieces of another phraseology, will speak of other things, while voting in wartime for war credits.

Organized Communism must therefore fight to the bitter end against these three parties of different origin, but of identical counter-revolutionary import. This is not altered by the fact that each of these three parties has its own particular character, its political apparatus, its own methods. We must thoroly understand their real nature in order the better to fight against them.

leaders of the social-democracy become in their efforts to hasten the split in the trade unions. The provocative tactics of the Social-Democratic leaders in certain places are very successful. Among the German left wing there is developing a wrong and extremely dangerous attitude towards the question of the future work in the reactionary trade unions. The Fifth Congress will have to speak with all its authority and determination against the policy of leaving the Social-Democratic unions, and at the same time it will have to find a practical solution to the problem of how to organize those workers whom the Social-Democratic leaders have succeeded in expelling from the trade unions.

As hitherto, the National Question will be discussed with extreme attention at the forthcoming Congress. The theoretical basis of the solution of this question are contained in the reports and resolutions introduced at previous congresses by Comrade Lenin. The task of the Fifth Congress will consist in working out more concretely the application of the national policy of the Comintern in various countries. And especially in the countries of the East and in the colonies, where the struggle for national independence is developing more and more into a revolutionary movement directed against the domination of international capitalism. The proper solution of the national question will help all parties to win over the masses to their side. It is the national and agrarian questions that most of all distinguish the Comintern from its predecessors, the Second International and even the First International, which, owing to historical conditions, raised these questions only in an abstract manner. Without solving the national and agrarian questions in the spirit of Leninism, the Comintern cannot win over the majority of the toilers and without doing the latter, we cannot enter the decisive battle.

The question of Relation to the Peasantry will be presented to the Fifth Congress in the form of a report from the Peasant International, which is in the process of being organized (conference in Moscow, 1923). The correct solution of the national question to a large extent implies also the correct solution of the peasant problem. The young organization which began to be organized in Moscow under the name of the Peasant International undoubtedly has a great future. The European Communist Parties have not yet done one-hundredth part of what is necessary in order to win over to their side those sections of the peasantry which can be attracted to the working class. The Fifth Congress must exert all effort and determination to deal with this problem.

A new question is placed on the agenda of the Fifth Congress, viz: The Attitude of Communists towards Intelligentzia. The term intelligentzia is used in the broad sense of the word, and includes also the technical intelligentzia. In a number of countries, the intelligentzia as a consequence of the prevailing economic conditions are in more or less sharp opposition to the existing regime. In various parts of the world—Germany, Japan, Bulgaria, France, etc.—considerable sections of the intelligentzia, oppressed by poverty and feeling the effects of predatory imperialist policy, are now at the cross-roads and are not without sympathy towards the revolutionary labor movement. In this sphere the Comintern must take the initiative in its own hands. It must show in which way live, revolutionary Marxism differs from the ancient lifeless presentation of the question of the intelligentzia.

The Question of Organization will be raised at the Fifth Congress more concretely than hitherto, and on the basis of a greater accumulation of experience. The majority of the Communist parties of the West to this very day have failed to organize on the basis of the factory nucleus. To solve this problem, not merely on paper, but in actual practice, will signify a great step forward along the path towards real preparation for the proletarian revolution.

The Fifth Congress will also deal in great detail with questions of propaganda. It will give the required attention to the Youth Movement, which is developing so well and which has so great a future before it in the work of preparing for the world revolution. The Fifth Congress will also give proper attention to the Women's Movement, to the Cooperative Question, to the Red Relief, etc.

The agenda is long and varied. During the two months remaining, the parties must thoroughly prepare themselves for these questions.

The near future will give us the possibility of testing the strength of the Communists at the parliamentary elections in Italy, in Germany, in France. Communists, of course, do not attach vital importance to parliamentary elections, but as a means of testing our influence among the masses, these elections are of no little importance. The recent elections in such a remote corner of Europe as Carpathian Ruthenia have shown that, when Communists take up a proper attitude towards the peasantry, the proletarian party may win over a conerable section of the peasantry to its side.

The events in Germany have acquired tremendous importance for the activities of the Comintern. In the Autumn of 1923, events in that country developed so stormily that everyone expected a stormy revolutionary rise and a decisive rebellion. Instead of that, we suffered defeat. The German working class has been flung back for some little time. However, the question of preparing for the proletarian revolution in Germany remains as hitherto one of the most important problems confronting the Comintern as a whole, and its most important section in Europe in particular.

To win over the Majority among the most important sections of the working class—this is the legacy left to us by the founder of the Comintern, Lenin, as the task of tasks of the present period. That task has not yet been fulfilled. The Fifth Congress will have to devote its greatest attention to its fulfillment.

The slogan of the Fifth Congress will be "without Lenin in the spirit of Leninism." The great leader of the Comintern is dead, but his cause lives, above all in the Comintern. The Fifth Congress will undoubtedly solve all the questions that will confront it in the spirit of genuine Leninism. The teachings of Lenin will remain the guiding star for all the sections of the Comintern.

THE OFFENSIVE IS ON -

By Alexander Bittelman

THE offensive against June 17th, is in full swing. All forces of reaction, every sworn enemy of labor and of the exploited farmers: capitalists, labor fakers and enemies of progress in general—everything is being mobilized and set at work to defeat the convention of June 17th. The reason? Simple enough. To prevent the organization of a class-party of workers and farmers.

THEY hate it. They fear the mere sign of it. They simply refuse to believe that such a "monstrocity" as a class-party of workers and farmers is at all possible. But at the same time, they take no chances. They are hard-boiled and practical. Experience to them is not a dead letter. They have learned from the past six or seven years that things seemingly impossible are of a sudden become a reality. Hence, the redoubled attacks, the enormous denunciations, and the whole renewed offensive against the June 17th convention—the event which promises to open a new chapter in the history of the class-struggle in America.

THE attack comes from three quarters. First, in the line of attack stand the reactionary officials of the trades unions. Secure in its black armor of trickery, wire-pulling and terrorism, Gompersism incarnate is stepping heavily along the warpath of reaction desperately trying to ward off the day of political liberation of the American working class. This gang of betrayers and double-crossers knows too well on which side its bread is buttered. They have realized none too soon what the success of a Farmer-Labor Party will mean for their domination in the American labor movement. Hence, their unbounded hatred, the unscrupulous and treacherous maneuvering of Gompers and his kind against anything and everything that may lead to independent political action by the workers and poor farmers.

NEXT comes the crowd of July 4th. It's a motley crowd, this C. P. P. A. Based upon one of the most powerful sections of the American labor movement, and driven to action by the crying needs of tens of thousands of workers organized in the railroad industry of the country, yet the policies and practices of the C. P. P. A. are being created and shaped by a group of leaders which is as foreign and hostile to the class interests of labor as are the capitalists themselves.

AND really, here is a chance that may not repeat itself in years. The working masses are restless. The poor farmers, large numbers of them, are definitely opposed to the continued domination of capital in the governmental affairs of the country. The political parties controlled by the capitalists are discredited and demoralized to a very large extent. In addition to this, there is already on foot a strong movement to pull out of the two old parties and to make in the direction of a new party. There is also in existence—and this is the most gratifying and promising feature of the whole situation—a movement toward a class-party of workers and poor farmers.

AS if history had predetermined that this be the year of the great event, all objective forces that are operating within the frame-work of our social life at this moment, are bent in the direction of a class party of workers and farmers.

Under these conditions, what other duty have leaders of labor than to take firm hold of the situation and to push developments consciously and persistently in the direction of such a party? Clearly, this is the supreme duty of the hour. But the leaders of the C. P. P. A. think otherwise. Inasmuch as there is any common thought at all between them, they seem to be determined at all costs, to prevent or at least cripple the June 17th convention. Their official organ "Labor" has launched an attack against June 17th, which not even the capitalist press would be able to surpass. The call has been issued to ignore and boycott the June 17th convention. Why?

WELL, this brings us to the mainspring, fountain-head and real spiritual leadership of this renewed offensive against June 17th. We refer to the capitalists and their press. Need we say here again that the capitalists do not want a Farmer-Labor Party? Must we take new pains to prove it? Of course, they don't. Capitalism in America is quite well satisfied with the present two-party system. This show democracy of ours has been functioning pretty effectively as an organ of capitalist class oppression, partly because of this two-party system. If this is so, then why should our masters desire a change? And should a change become inevitable, least of all, will our masters then permit the formation of a class-party of workers and farmers. Not on your life, if they can prevent it.

HENCE, the renewed vigorous offensive against June 17th. And what is the excuse? Well, the old thing, the Communists. At all the cross roads leading to the convention of June 17th, the capitalist press has put up the danger-signal: "Stop! Look! Listen! The Communists are out to dominate the convention of June 17th." The capitalist press knows better, of course. It knows very well that the large mass-movement of workers and farmers which is headed toward a class-party is by far not a Communist proposition. The kept press also knows that if this movement were now ripe for Communist "domination" (read: permeated with Communist spirit and ideology), its immediate aim might have been not a Farmer-Labor Party, but a workers' and farmers' government, or, still better, the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

THE capitalists and their servants know all this very well. But the cry of "Communist domination" is being raised and propagated just the same in the hope that someone might take the thing seriously and keep away from the 17th. However, it does not look as if this trick is going to succeed. The June 17th convention has already captured the imagination of large masses of workers and poor farmers. These masses know that the Communists are in it and yet they don't get nervous over the fact. Most of them accept the Communists into the partnerships of political struggle against capital not because they already accept the Communist program and principles, sorry to say, but because the Communists are the most sincere and determined fighters for independent political action and for a close alliance between the workers and poor farmers, e. i., a Farmer-Labor Party. That's the main reason why the capitalist-Gompers-C. P. P. A. bunk about Communist domination will have no effect upon those whose very existence depends upon the successful consummation of June 17th.

MEANWHILE, the movement is proceeding ahead. Within the last few weeks steps have been taken in a number of states to bring about the formation of state Farmer-Labor parties, which will participate as such in the June 17th convention. Such parties are now in the process of organization in New York, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois. The existing state Farmer-Labor parties in the northwest and in the west have either already become part of the June 17th Convention thru representation on the Arrangements Committee or else have endorsed the call to the convention and will send delegates to it. As far as the organized Farmer-Labor Party movement is concerned, the situation is as bright and hopeful as one could desire.

THE energies of those who favor June 17th, must now be concentrated on local unions; labor fraternal organizations and other organizations of workers and poor farmers. As we see it, the work of securing endorsement of and participation in the June 17th convention is primarily a job of political education, which means that success depends to a large extent, if not wholly, upon the way in which the issue is presented.

How should the issue be presented? Precisely as it has been shaped and presented to us by the actual development of the class-struggle in the United States up-to-date, that is, as June 17th versus July 4th.

JUNE 17th cannot be understood separate and apart from July 4th. Moreover, one's estimation of and attitude toward June 17th is contingent upon a proper analysis and understanding of July 4th. It is therefore, absolutely imperative that the campaign in favor of June 17th be conducted and fought out in this manner.

Independent political action. A working and fighting alliance between the workers and poor farmers. A class political party to fight the battles of the oppressed classes against the domination of capital. That's what June 17th stands for.

ON the other hand, July 4th. What does it stand for?

If the day is won by some of the presidents of the railroad unions, it will be McAdoo on the ticket of the Democratic party. If the decision goes to another section of the C. P. P. A., it may mean LaFollette as an independent or as the head of a middle-class liberal party. There is also the possibility of one part of the C. P. P. A. endorsing a regular republican. If the forces are divided more or less evenly, there may be no decision at all as far as the presidential elections are concerned, and locally the continuation of the old C. P. P. A. policy of supporting "good men" on the tickets of the capitalist parties. That's what the C. P. P. A. and July 4th stand for.

IF you happen to want and strive for a new day in the American labor movement, don't waste your energy on July 4th. You wouldn't get it there. Better turn your eyes, and mind, and devotion to June 17th, and by active participation in the movement help along in the struggle for a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

organized struggle within the unions against every phase of capitalistic influence and bourgeois ideology. While it battles for the formation of an all-embracing farmer-labor party, to express the broad political struggle of the toiling masses at the present moment of development, it is at the same time rallying the smaller groups of conscious revolutionary workers to the more bitter and intense struggle against the subtler forms of class collaboration. It is no accident that the T. U. E. L. is at once a leading factor thruout the labor movement in the struggle for a labor party, in which millions are enlisted, and at the same time is organizing the resistance to the nefarious "B. & O." class collaboration scheme of the railroad union bureaucrats, to the poisonous effects of which the workers are only beginning to be aroused.

Of course the tremendous progress made by the Trade Union Educational League, in establishing the left-wing as a power in the trade unions, has not been unopposed. Long before the bureaucrats generally realized what menace the T. U. E. L. was to their comfortable swivelchair life, the old fox Gompers had sounded the alarm. As the left-wing campaigns shook the labor movement and registered success after success in almost every legislative gathering of the working class, the officialdom took alarm and rallied every force of the union machinery, the capitalist press, and the State. The Federal Government was used in an attempt to railroad Foster to prison, along with 70 other trade union militants and Communists. The capitalist press has teemed with organized and inspired propaganda against the left-wing. The union journals have been full to overflowing with denunciation and provocation against the T. U. E. L. militants. And, direct from the Amsterdam International, headquarters of reaction in the world's labor movement, has been imported the policy of expulsions and splits against the left-wing.

Space will not permit even the briefest review of the development of the American left-wing movement in the trade unions. Those who have missed reading "The Labor Herald," monthly organ of the Trade Union Educational League since March, 1922, can find the rich experiences of these few years embodied therein. Back numbers and bound volumes can be obtained from the League office. Just as this book of Losovsky's is necessary to everyone who would understand the world's labor movement today, so is "The Labor Herald" necessary to every left-wing unionist who wishes to be an effective participant in the great revolutionary struggle now going on for the leadership of the American labor movement.

Altho the American class struggle has so far developed the most primitive trade unionism, in ideology and organizational form, yet the struggle itself, in the direct clashes with the employing class, its private armed forces and the State, has been more bitter and violent than in perhaps any other country previous to the revolutionary period. The reactionary leadership and antiquated program and structure of the American labor movement could not prevent the giant forces generated by American capitalism from coming to expression in great struggles. It is enough to cite Homestead, Pullman, Ludlow, McKees Rocks, Lawrence, Mesaba, the Steel Strike, Herrin, West Virginia, and, the whole history of the coal miners, to understand that the American working class contains within itself the forces of proletarian revolution corresponding to the productive forces of American Capitalism, the greatest in the world. Delayed in coming to expression by the peculiar conditions of American social development, the forces of revolution in the American trade union movement will be all the more sweeping and rapid in their development, all the more decisive and relentless, when the chains of capitalist ideology, of reformism, of Gomperism, are finally broken.

The C. P. P. A.---A Tower of Babel

By Tom O'Flaherty

MR. Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in an interview in the Christian Science Monitor on April 21, denied the authenticity of press reports that the four railroad brotherhoods would throw their support to Robert M. LaFollette, on a third party ticket. Mr. Stone denied giving out any statement on LaFollette and expressed doubts as to the possibility of any third party coalition. The Brotherhood, Mr. Stone declared, will back no candidate for the presidency until after the party nominations have been made.

WHILE Mr. Stone is speaking thusly, officials of the Railway Employes' Department of the American Federation of Labor were more positive in their statements. They chuckled audibly on learning that the Brotherhood chief had disavowed his endorsement of the Wisconsin senator. "We had a disagreement with them inasmuch as they did not get behind Mr. McAdoo. We took the stand that Mr. McAdoo was the man we could all support. Mr. LaFollette appeared to be their choice. They doubted whether Mr. MacAdoo could get the nomination. They had nothing against McAdoo but felt they owed something to Mr. LaFollette.

"THE Railway Employes' Department has felt that McAdoo was the man and as far as any propaganda has gone out from individual unions it has been in support of Mr. McAdoo. None needed any prompting on that. We knew our position a long time ago."

THAT Mr. Stone's disavowal of his LaFollette endorsement cannot be taken any more seriously than the sickness of a diplomat nobody will doubt for a moment. Stone is for LaFollette. Should he get the Republican nomination, the Brotherhoods will support the Republican ticket regardless of what the C. P. P. A. decides on July 4. Should LaFollette head a third party ticket, Stone will also support him. Is LaFollette really willing to leave the pastures where he now browses comfortably to head a primitive expedition into the jungles against standpat Republicanism? That is the question. Stone appears to be in doubt.

THE big chief of the Locomotive Engineers changes his mind, but instead of admitting a change of mind he "disavows" his previous decision. Immediately prior to the St. Louis meeting of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, Mr. Stone had decided that he would have no more to do with it. The DAILY WORKER was informed on excellent authority that the Brotherhood chief delivered himself as follows on the C. P. P. A.: "The C. P. P. A. has shot its bolt. I will have nothing more to do with it. It has reached the limit of its usefulness. One of the causes of its failure is the inability of William H. Johnston to prove himself heavy enough for the position of leader in the movement."

MR. Stone had decided that he would not attend the St. Louis conference and that his organization would not be represented. The DAILY WORKER published a news dispatch to that effect. But the Brotherhood was represented there. Why did Mr. Stone change his mind?

FOR one thing, the Doheny $50,000 oil retainer hit William Gibbs McAdoo, the darling of the Johnston faction, squarely in the eyes immediately before the St. Louis meeting. His supporters in the C. P. P. A. could not very well endorse an oil can, so Stone saw a chance to put LaFollette over. Shortly after the conference however McAdoo suporters gathered from all parts of the country to de-oil Wilson's son-in-law, and among those present were seventeen officials of the 16 standard railroad labor organizations.

HERE is a regular political Tower of Babel. The railroad leaders are divided in their allegiance. They speak in divers' tongues. Two sets of capitalist politicians are bidding for their support. The McAdooites are determined to stand by their friend(?) He allowed them to organize the railroad employes during the war and even tho the unions are now shattered by the government, several labor banks' strong treasuries stand as mute testimony to the value of the McAdoo friendship. To parody the lines of a poem: "The banks are still there, tho the unions are gone."

THE labor fakers who dominate the C. P. P. A. are lined up in different camps. They have used the C. P. P. A. as a club over the heads of the capitalist parties. The club was the threat of a third party. But they have no intention of taking on any more political parties. Their historical mission is to be the labor lieutenants of capitalism for a price. The C. P. P. A. so far has enabled them to haggle successfully for a good bargain price for the labor vote. At this time, however, the masses thruout the country are not satisfied to play the role of voting cattle, for the glory and profit of capitalism as well as the profit of the labor fakers. They want a class party that will stand on its own feet and refuse to dicker with capitalist politicans whether labelled Republican, Democrat or Progressive.

THE July 4th conference of the Conference for Progressive Political Action is doomed beforehand. The strongest elements composing it are the railroad organizations and the United Mine Workers of America. The former are divided in their allegiance between LaFollette and McAdoo. The latter, represented by their officials, are for the Republican Party and John L. Lewis aspires to be a running mate with Strikebreaker Coolidge. He does not care a fig for the C. P. P. A. The American Federation of Labor, officially thru the Gompers machine, will be for the Democratic Party right or wrong. Gompers has an equity in the Democrat Party. George L. Berry is the Gompers candidate for vice-president on the Democrat ticket. The officialdom of the American Federation of Labor is not crazy about a third party. They think as seriously about it as they would of starting a revolution. They are as well satisfied with the present two party system as the capitalists are.

WHEN the C. P. P. A. meets on July 4th, there will be many self-interested groups represented as there are political parties in Germany. Only radicals will be absent. If the dominating groups succeed in getting their demands—or even a small part of them—from the capitalist parties they will probably issue a bulletin on the condition of Mr. LaFollette's political health something like this: "Owing to the condition of Senator LaFollette's health he finds himself unavailable to head a third party movement. His political temperature is around 107. His condition is satisfactory."

THERE will be nothing left for Oswald Garrison Villard to do but go home and suck his pacifist thumb. The Socialist Party may unfurl its yellow flag and go forth to collect all the votes that have not been cornered by the Ku Klux Klan. The Chicago (Loop) Farmer-Labor Party having nothing else to vote for, may vote for the Democratic candidate as, according to editor Buck of the New Majority only a Democrat has the slightest chance of getting elected this year, and good politicians never "throw away their votes." John Fitzpatrick will say: "It's a perfectly logical but unhappy situation."

THE Conference for Progressive Political Action instead of writing a declaration of independence for Labor on July 4, will probably write its own obituary. The workers of America will not weep over its bier. It has been a harlot on the cross-roads, offering its political charms to the capitalist parties since its foundation. The death of another prostitute will not be a Black Friday for American labor.

WHILE bedlam reigns in the ranks of the C. P. P. A., the great mass convention of the rank and file of the American workers and farmers to be held in St. Paul on June 17, assumes added importance every day. While the July 4 conference of the C. P. P. A. is practically ignored by the capitalist press, the St. Paul convention is given columns of space and the journalistic lackeys of Big Business are daily emptying the vials of their wrath on this menace to the "American constution." The more our enemies attack it the better. The timid time servers and political trimmers who attend conferences to threaten the capitalist system with pillows will keep away, fearing their presence might put their names on the index expurgatoris of the American Defense Society. The workers and exploited farmers who are determined that labor shall sever all connections with the political parties of capitalism, will be in St. Paul on June 17th. They are convinced that the organization of a Farmer-Labor Party in the U. S. must be the work of the rank and file. The labor business men who sell the labor vote for a living will be in Cleveland on July 4th to add another chapter to their career of treason against the interests of the American workers. June 17th will prove a red letter day in the history of American labor.

Man Is Going Over the Earth

By OSCAR KANEHL.

Put chains on our hands.
Our mouth will sing.
Imprison us.
We shall be free.
Kill us.
We rise from the death.
Man is going over the Earth.
Before whom kings are fleeing.
Thrones are falling.
Motley uniforms and blank stars are getting bleached in masks.
Burghers are bursting.
Priests are stealing away from the pulpits.
Generals are shooting themselves.
Soldiers are throwing away their arms.
Tattlers become dumb. Boundary-posts fall down.
States are breaking.
Power is budging.
Man is going over the Earth.
Bare. Young.
Good. Loving. Embracing.
Sun rises. Blessing flourishes.
Follow him. Create with him. Joyous like him.
Work begins. Earth becomes fruitful. Sown with love
All is ours. Without possession.
Divide with me,
Brother man.

Scott Nearing on Party Policy

THE article on this page, containing a criticism of the policy and tactics of the Workers' (Communist) Party of America, made by Scott Nearing in a letter to William Z. Foster, is published so that party members and others interested may have a complete knowledge of the viewpoint of the tendency in the revolutionary movement of America represented by the writer of the letter.

IN the next issue of the magazine will be published the reply to Scott Nearing by William Z. Foster in which the arguments of Nearing are refuted and the official position of the party on the questions raised by Nearing set forth in detail.—Editor.

DEAR COMRADE FOSTER: You have asked me to state my position regarding the policies of the Trade Union Educational League, and I am very glad to have an opportunity to do so, because I am convinced that the tactics followed by the left wing of the American labor movement during the next few years will have an important effect on the future of the class struggle in the United States.

YOUR article in the November Liberator, entitled "The A. F. of L. Convention"; your article in the January Labor Herald, called "An Open Letter to John Fitzpatrick," and your "Industrial Report" to the Workers Party convention all are based on certain assumptions, which I would summarize as follows:

1. That the decision of the Portland convention to expel Dunne, and the refusal of the convention to indorse a labor party and to indorse Russian recognition represented the sentiment of the labor autocracy and not the sentiment of the rank and file;

2. That the rank and file would have acted differently had they had an opportunity to register their opinions on these issues;

3. That there is a revolutionary ferment among the masses of American workers.

ON the basis of these assumptions, how would you explain certain outstanding events in the American labor movement during the past few years? Such events as:

1. The presence of Tom Mooney in jail after it has been demonstrated and asserted by representatives of the Federal Government that he was convicted on faked testimony, and after the repeated protests of the more progressive groups in the American labor movement?

2. The presence of Sacco and Vanzetti in a Massachusetts jail under circumstances almost as disgraceful to American labor as those surrounding Mooney's continued imprisonment?

3. The indictment, prosecution and conviction of members of the Workers Party in western Pennsylvania; of members of the I. W. W. in California; of members of the U. M. W. of A. in West Virginia; of the Michigan Communists? The latest reports show 114 political prisoners in state prisons, "serving sentences solely for the expression of opinion or for membership in radical organizations."

4. The discrediting of Alex Howat in the national convention of the United Mine Workers; the overwhelming defeat of the T. U. E. L. policies in the conventions at Scranton and at Decatur, after the questions had been threshed out in the local unions?

5. The ease with which the Pressmen's Union, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and other organizations have been able to throw out the left wing elements without any considerable protests from the membership at large?

6. The very heavy losses in the membership of such unions as the machinists, in which there had been no considerable internal friction?

7. The apathy and indifference with which the rank and file of American workers have regarded the "open shop" drive; their eagerness to be 100 per centers along with Judge Gary and John Rockefeller, and their unwillingness to make a stand against the exploitation and imperialism in which the American rulers are so deeply involved?

WHILE I do not for a moment pretend that I know the answers to all of these questions, I should like to present an explanation which I think fits many of them. My assumptions concerning the present situation in the United States are quite different from yours. Let me begin my answer to these questions by stating the situation in the United States as I see it.

1. There is no parallel anywhere in modern labor history to the present situation in the United States, because in no other country (with the possible exception of Germany during the war) was a large and important labor movement so completely taken into camp by the opposition as the American labor movement has been taken into camp by the chambers of commerce.

a. This has been done, first of all, by getting hold of the labor leaders—giving them tips on the stock market; offering them government jobs; "getting together" with them in various community activities; giving them important posts inside the political organizations of the two old parties.

b. It has been done, in the second place, by lining up the rank and file throughout the most complete system of propaganda, lies, diversions, amusements, excitements and thrills that the world has ever produced. The whole machinery of education is in the hands of the business interests and they do not hesitate to use the newspaper or the movie to put their interpretation on events, to suppress information or to deliberately misrepresent the facts. Take Russia as an instance; or take the I. W. W. They have been shamelessly and deliberately lied about until the rank and file of the American workers and farmers have come to believe what they are told.

c. It is for this reason that the rank and file of the A. F. of L. would have supported their representatives in the Portland convention. In fact, I am of the opinion that if there were any way to measure the situation exactly, Gompers would be found on the left, and not on the right of the A. F. L. rank and file. I am well aware that this is not the accepted opinion of the left, but I am basing the judgment on a very considerable contact with members of the organization.

d. If I am at all correct in this assumption, it will go far toward explaining the apparent apathy in the American labor movement—it is not apathy at all, but tacit consent. Remember that most American workers have gone to the public school; that they read the papers and magazines published almost exclusively by big business interests; that they quite generally belong to the churches, and that they almost universally vote the old party tickets. (In the last presidential election 96 percent of the total vote was cast for Harding and Cox, and 0 percent for Debs and Christianson).

e. According to this interpretation, not only the officials of the unions, but also the rank and file are committed to the present economic order. They believe in it, and in any crisis they will support it.

2. DOES this mean that there is no revolutionary sentiment in the United States? Not at all. It does mean, however, that it is not typically American. The native born American who believes in fundamental change is the exception and not the rule.

a. American opinion is still founded on the life of the village and on the farm. Even those who have moved into the cities have hopes that some day they will be able to own a little place in the country and retire to it.

b. The migratory workers have pretty well given up the idea, and they constitute the largest single revolutionary nucleus in the United States today. Unfortunately, however, the very nature of their work makes it trebly difficult to organize them, and the 40,000 members reported by the I. W. W. probably does not represent more than two or three percent of the total number of migratory workers.

c. The average skilled craftsman still looks forward to home ownship under the present system. He even believes that if he does not succeed in getting out of the ranks of labor, his son may, so he sends him off to college, and trains his daughter to teach school.

d. The revolutionary sentiment in the United States is strong among certain foreign-born workers—particularly among those of Slavic origin, who have been most emotionally aroused by events in Russia. The new immigration laws will be so adjusted, however, that the supply of these North Europeans will be heavily cut down, and those that are admitted will be watched with hawk-like care.

e. Revolutionary sentiment is strong in certain districts, such as Butte, Seattle, and in parts of New York and Chicago. In most of these cases, however, the strength is in the foreign-born districts, and the sons and daughters of such foreign-born revolutionists usually become ultra-respectable American patriots.

f. Revolutionary sentiment is strong in certain needle trades, railroads, machinists and miners' locals. Again, however, it centers in the Slavic and other foreign-born elements.

g. I am assuming, as you see, that there is no considerable revolutionary sentiment among the masses of American born workers and farmers. I realize that they are discontented, but they assume that "times will pick up" under the present system. There are, of course, many exceptions—readers and thinkers who have kept up with the world and who have not been fooled by the propaganda. But they are relatively few. In my judgment, whatever revolutionary sentiment there is in the country today can not be described as in any sense "American mass-sentiment."

3. THOSE of us who believe that there must be radical changes in the economic and social life of the United States therefore find ourselves in a position where the radical sentiment must be created. Hence our task involves first, education and second, organization, third activity. I believe the farmers of the United States are as much in need of economic education as were the workers and farmers of Russia when Lenin began his work with them around 1885.

THIS line of argument, as you see, places us in quite opposite camps when it comes to the tactics that should be pursued. Let us suppose, first of all, that you are right in your assumptions. In that case:

1. The sentiment is here. All that is needed is an organization that will take possession of it. The line of procedure is not from education, thru organization to action; but from organization, direct to action.

2. This organization can be spread very rapidly; can be mobilized quickly; and can strike, almost immediately, for specific results.

3. The American revolutionary movement should therefore extend its front with the idea of gaining immediate and practical successes, among which might be named the splitting of the old parties at the coming election (say by the nomination of LaFollette); the winning of the labor movement to a revolutionary program; and the establishment of a very large and effective political organization representing both the farmers and the workers.

4. It was on that assumption that you proceeded with the organization of the 1919 Steel Strike. What happened? You answer ("Labor Herald," Jan. 1924, Pg. 6) "We lost the big steel fight. This was a tremendous disaster; not only because it wrecked

"THE FLIVVER HAS SAVED THIS COUNTRY REAL TROUBLE."

President Vauclair of the Baldwin Locomotive Works. Reported in The Daily Worker April 21, 1924

By ERNEST BRADY

The humble harmless little Ford,
The poor man's willing hoss
Is now a social favorite
For the service it gives the boss.

When a worker takes the country air
O'er many a road and river,
He's safe and sane as he can be Within his jolly flivver.

Altho he drives with noise and crash
In a way to cause comment,
His trusty Ford portects him
From the sparks of discontent.

At summer picnics prone he lies.
His belly filled with grub,
The bosses watchdog by his side
Shepherding Henry Dubb.

Altho his little engine
Will play him many pranks,
His bumpers they will shield him
From Communstic cranks.

When on the trail he stops to eat
And give his car a drink,
He stops for air, he stops for gas,
But never stops to think.

The boss he hopes with fervour
That's not to be despised
That soon the proletariat
Will all be flivverized.

'Tho Revolution stalks the earth
And rebels agitate,
The worker in his flivver
Is the bulwark of the State.

But when the worker wisdom gets
And seizes all machines,
'Tween you and me, his choice will be
Not Fords, but limousines.

EVERY PARTY MEMBER MUST DO HIS DUTY

By A. BIMBA.

EVERY member of the Workers Party should realize that the Communist movement of the United States is on the eve of great and important developments. We are in the midst of a campaign for a class Farmer-Labor Party. We hope that our energies in this great work will not be wasted and that the great Farmer-Labor convention of June 17th, will be the second great step forward in the formation of a class Farmer-Labor Party, the first step having been made at the convention of last July, at which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was organized.

I met quite a few comrades who seem to be discouraged with the whole Farmer-Labor movement. They say: "Look here, haven't we been told last year that the July convention would create a real mass Labor Party? And now we have to work for another convention and hear the same phrases repeated again. Where will be the end of it? When will your prophesy come true?"

THESE comrades are disillusioned. And the reason is that they had started from an entirely wrong viewpoint; they failed to understand, at the very beginning, the real process of the social revolution in America. They thought that it will come about in a very simple way. This year we have a convention and organize a Labor Party and next year we will be busy setting up the soviets. But instead of that, we have to speak and prepare for another convention with the same view in our minds, that is, with the view of organizing a mass Farmer-Labor Party. Isn't that enough to be disillusioned?

IT is an absolutely mistaken idea to think that the Farmer-Labor Party will be organized in such an easy and simple way. It will be quite a long and painful process. It may take years of gradual development, The last July convention made the first step in this direction. The convention of June 17th, will be another great step toward the same goal. And we may be sure in advance that it will take a third and fourth convention till we will be able to say: "At last the workers and exploited farmers are organized politically as a class and are effectively resisting the onslaught of their masters on the political field."

THE process of the development of a mass Farmer-Labor Party in this country will be protracted also because of the fact that the enemies of this movement are very strong and numerous. The employing class is directly and openly fighting it. It is natural and we cannot expect anything else from them. But this movement is also opposed by the trade union bureaucracy. Mr. Gompers and his gang manage to keep away the industrial workers from independent political action much more effectively than the master class itself. They hold the organized workers in their clutches and are keeping them there very tightly. None of the great international unions of the American Federation of Labor are as yet ready to get rid of Mr. Gompers' political policy and put their faith with the Farmer-Labor management for independent political action on the part of the working masses. The Railroad Brotherhoods are being kept in the tail of the capitalist parties thru the so-called "Conference for Progressive Political Action," just as effectively as the internationals in the A. F. of L.

SO far, the Farmer-Labor Party movement is entirely a rank and file movement. The official leaders of the workers are fighting it tooth and nail. And if for no other reason, this fact alone is sufficient to prove the importance of the Communists in the movement. We are directly connected with the rank and file, nay, we are part and parcel of the rank and file. We are organized on a national scale. We are the most active element in the labor movement. We have certain influence among the masses. Therefore, we are in a good position to render the Farmer-Labor movement great service. Hence we have great responsibilities.

EVERY member of the Workers Party must realize that. He (or she) must understand that the success or failure of the movement will, to a very great extent, depend upon our activities. Therefore, we must spare no energy or time in the campaign for the June 17th Convention, to make it a success.

NO comrade can remain indifferent to this campaign of our party and continue to call himself a Communist. The success of the Farmer-Labor Party movement means so much to the Communist movement and to the labor movement of the United States in general that no class-conscious worker can say that he is sincerely working for the emancipation of the working class if he, in one form or another, does not actively participate in the present campaign of the Workers' Party. Those comrades who are members of the trade unions or other workers' organizations, should energetically work there in order to get them behind the June convention. Even if we do not succeed in obtaining their formal approval of the Farmer-Labor movement, still we will have done our duty because we have raised the question at their meetings and defended the idea of a Farmer-Labor Party. Today we failed, tomorrow we will succeed. The conditions are working for our final success. They are pushing forward the working class.

Only a few weeks are left till June 17th. It will be a historical day for the labor movement of this country. The enemies of the working class are working day and night to make it a failure, we Communists and all class-conscious workers and exploited farmers must work with still greater enthusiasm for its success.

International Acclamation Given Anatole France On 80th Birthday

Public acclaim of proportions rarely accorded a living writer was given Anatole France, critic, novelist and satirist, who is recognized as one of the greatest literati of the age, on his eightieth birthday. Congratulatory messages poured in from all over the world, while in Paris befitting ceremonies in his honor were arranged with representatives of all nations participating. The dean of French writers was born Jacques Anatole Thibault and took the name of Anatole France after he began writing.

Wants Good Articles To Combat Religion

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

To the Daily Worker: Enclosed please find money order for 1 years subscription.

I am glad that the editor of the paper, would like to get views of the readers of this great revolutionary labor paper. I would like to give my view. It seems to me that this paper does not, or fails possibly to expose religion which is the opium of the masses. I would like to read an article once in awhile, showing how religion was shattered by men like Ingersoll, etc.

Long live the First Workers' government.

SCOTT NEARING ON PARTY POLICY

the steel unions, but, what was infinitely more important, it destroyed a much greater plan." That is exactly the point! An organization cannot stand too many defeats. Napoleon marched only once into Russia, but that once was enough to wreck his fortunes. The radical movement in the United States, following your policies, is marching toward its Moscow. When your front is sufficiently extended, and you are well cut off from your reserves, the enemy will annihilate, you, as they annihilated your Steel Strike Organization five years ago.

NOW let us suppose that my assumptions concerning the American situation are correct. Then the revolutionary movement must:

1. Realize that its available clientele together is small, no thought of leadership of masses and highly localized, and rendered in part ineffective by its foreign admixtures.

2. Aim to hold this clientele together at all hazards; to preserve its morale and efficiency; to train it in effective and co-operative activities; to teach it to trust itself; to try it and discipline it until it becomes a really effective working force; and during all of this time to avoid decisive struggle which will almost surely wreck the organization.

3. Husband the resources of the organization carefully; admit members only after long probation and after careful scrutiny; making each move with the idea that the struggle is being waged against immense odds, in a hostile territory, and against skilled generalship.

Take in Worker—Assail

4. Expand the organization and its work slowly; taking no step that will unnecessarily expose it to destruction; making no move that will enable the enemy to deal a crushng blow.

5. It is not "radical" to build rapidly. It is radical to build fundamentally, and it is fundamental building that the movement needs in the United States.

THE most serious blunder of the radical movement in the United States during recent years is that it has assumed a following that does not exist. Consequently, you have tried to do, in a few months, what it will take years, and perhaps decades to accomplish. The radical movement has taken on the nature of a mass meeting, when the times call for a careful course of elementary, high school, and university training. Rome was not built in a night.

JOHN Pepper writes in his labor party pamphlet, as though he had behind him a trained, disciplined body of militants, a hundred thousand strong. At a pinch, he might rally ten thousand, but I doubt whether he has five thousand that he can rely upon.

THE Theses published in the "Worker" of Dec. 1, 1923 would be sound if the Workers Party had 250,000 militant and disciplined English-speaking American citizens upon whom it might depend to carry through the program. But the "Worker" for Jan. 12, 1924 reports the total membership of the Party as 15,233, of whom "at least 50 percent is an English speaking membership." If all of these members could be counted upon—and of course they cannot—the total working strength behind the program would be somewhere between seven and eight thousand. On this basis, if the Workers Party enters the May 30th convention (now set for June 17th—Ed. Note), nominates a man like LaFollette, and campaigns for him, its position will be misunderstood by its own membership; its militance will be dissipated; its members will be discredited with the labor movement; its candidates will be crushingly defeated, and the Party will lose itself in the maze of American politics.

Our difficulty to balance our program so stated, viz., still compliment each other.

EVEN supposing that LaFollette should get a heavy vote, as Roosevelt did in 1912, with the aid of many good Socialists, who were out to split the old parties and to spread the "faith," the same thing would happen in 1928 that happened in 1916. The workers who broke away in 1912 were back voting for the old parties in 1916, because they were not intelligent voters but protest voters, who ceased to protest as soon as their immediate cause of complaint was removed. The same result followed the heavy Hillquit vote of 1917 in New York City.

A HIGHLY intelligent and disciplined body of workers should be able to support a stalwart upholder of the established order like LaFollette and then come back to the Workers Party without having their faith and their enthusiasm shattered. Since you have no such body of workers at your disposal, by such tactics you would be simply squandering and dissipating the small group that you do now control.

WHERE a revolutionary movement faces a vast wall of ignorance and opposition like that which now exists in the United States, it must preserve stern integrity, strict discipline and live revolutionary ideals. Otherwise it will not last for a decade.

Isolation.

LET me sum the matter up in this way:

1. As a matter of economics, I agree with you and with Pepper.

2. I am just as anxious as you are to see a real left-wing movement develop in America.

3. As a matter of tactics, you and he are following a policy based on Russian experience, which is quite unfitted to cope with the situation you confront in the United States, and which will drive your party to ruin if you pursue it.

CAR UNION WALKOUT STOPS ALL PITTSBURGH TRAFFIC

I. L. G. W. U. MACHINE ABANDONS ALL PROGRESSIVE PRETENSES IN ITS WAR ON MILITANTS

By JACK JOHNSTONE.

The Ladies' Garment Workers' convention, entering its fifth day, promises to be the most ruthless, undemocratic and reactionary convention that this once progressive organization has ever had. The yellow Amsterdam disruptive tactics are the rules of order governing the proceedings and the sinister figure of Abe Cahan hovers in the background of the conventiton.

Nothing of a constructive nature has even peeped into the convention hall as yet. Nothing in four days except bitter denunciations of the militants, the T. U. E. L. and the Workers Party.

Speeches, nothing but speeches, everyone of them except Giovinitti's, either of the democratic republican election year variety or of a bombastic appeal for unity, mingled with a bitter denunciation of all militants and a condemnation of progressive action.

The petty bourgoisė leadership comes out in broad relief against the frank class conscious arguments put up by those workers who are being thrown out one by one from the convention. So far six have been unseated, five from New York and one from Chicago. There are still about twenty more objections. It is only thru this violent method that the present reactionary leaders can hold control of the organization. Their purpose is to remove from the convention the leading spokesmen of the left wing and then after making the left wing inarticulate, to push thru their reactionary and disruptive policy.

Expel Oldest Members.

The six that have been unseated are members of long years standing, from five to fifteen years in the I. L. G. W. U. They have held, and four of them are still holding, official position in the union. The reactionaries have not yet found ways and means to stop the rank and file from electing them to office, or electing them to represent them at the convention, but they have been able thru their ruthless expulsion policy and arbitrarily removing leftwingers from the convention election ballot, and by objecting, to those who managed to pass this barrier, being seated at the convention, to get the majority of the delegates to the convention in lieu of support of the majority of the membership.

One can have respect for Gompers, at least he is a frank open enemy of everything progressive or revolutionary. He hates amalgamation, Independent Working Class Political Action, Soviet Russia, the T. U. E. L. and the Workers Party. He is for

COMMITTEE ON APPEALS TO HEAR ARGUMENTS OF THE EXPELLED MEMBERS

BOSTON, May 11.—A committee on appeals has been appointed here at the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, to hear the cases of the expelled members in Chicago and Philadelphia, and of the 19 members of Local No. 22, of New York City, removed from the ballot in the election of convention delegates.

The cases of two more contested delegates are yet to come before the convention. The speech making before the convention was just about completed on Saturday, when Jacob Panken, the Socialist judge in New York City, appealed for support of the July 4 gathering at Cleveland.

APPOINTEES OF FARRINGTON IN FEAR OF JOBS

Myerscough Writes Of "Coal Mine Blues"

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

BELLEVILLE, Ill., May 11.—Appointees of President Frank Farrington in the Illinois mine workers seem to have "interpreted the handwrting on the wall," if the efforts of some of these men can be taken as a criterion.

The determination of the rank and file miners to do away with the appointive power is so strong that the men who now hold jobs by virtue of such power in the hands of Farrington are getting afflicted with "the coal mine blues."

Many of the men holding these jobs, by appointment, are strenuously opposing the rank and file efforts to put an end to this method of "machine" building, and are proposing a referendum vote of the membership to settle the question. They are claiming that this is a democratic procedure, but the men hereabouts say that they do this because a check up of the delegates elected has showed that the miners are overwhelmingly opposed to appointments.

The working miners have for too long seen the use of this power work hardships on the men who are forced to pay the bills. For instance, men who once held elective positions, if they have served the machine well while holding same, thereby winning for themselves the enmity of the men who elected them, with the result that they were defeated in a subsequent election, are put on the pay roll and the rank and file have no say in the matter. They see their only hope in the referendum, because they know how to "put it over" on a state-wide basis. If the appointive power is taken away and they are forced to submit their candidacies to sectional elections, these men know, in many instances, that they cannot be elected. Hence this display of "meal ticket philosophy" under the guise of democracy.

However, this is not going to stop the rank and file delegates from fighting at Peoria next week to do away with Farrington's appointive power, for they intend to follow the lead of Kansas.

As one miner expressed it, "We are quite willing to have some of those birds join us in our job of looking for a job. We want them to have a bird's-eye view of their own plan of stabilization in operation." And the fight will be staged in Peoria, starting Tuesday.

Workers See Forbidden Film.

DECATUR, Ill.—Workers and many other residents of Decatur turned out to the Alhambra theater to see the film, "Russia and Germany—A Tale of Two Republics." Interest had been stimulated by the action of the Chamber of Commerce in preventing the use of the Decatur high school for the film a week previous.

FURRIERS HOLD CONVENTION IN MORRISON HOTEL

Expulsion of Radicals Big Issue

The International Furriers' union will open its annual convention this morning in the Morrison hotel. The union has approximately 12,000 members, the great bulk of the membership being in New York.

The Furriers' union is under the control of the New York Daily Forward leadership. Abie Cahan's agent is Morris Kaufman, who is international president. While the great majority of the members in New York support the left wing position, not alone have they no delegate to the convention, but radicals are not allowed to hold office in the union or have their names placed on the ballot.

Tenth Vice President Surof was expelled from the union because of his progressive stand in the organization. In a recent issue of the Furrier, an editorial declared there should be a constitutional provision giving the officials the right to expel all left wingers. As a matter of fact the officials are doing this without any such provision. "What is the constitution between friends?"

Local Toronto which has three delegates at the convention, passed the following resolutions, among others to be presented for consideration:

Civic Federation.

"Whereas, The National Civic federation is an organization tending to perpetuate the slavery of the working class, and its spirit is, therefore, contrary to that of the international union and all progressive labor unions; and

"Whereas, Some of the worst enemies of labor in the United States are members of the said National Civic

PULLMAN STRIKERS ARE HOLDING MONSTER MASS MEETING THIS MORNING TO MAKE STAND CLEAR

The striking Pullman car builders at a rousing strike meeting, unanimously agreed to hold a mass meeting at 8 o'clock this morning in their strike hall at 205 East 115th street, to present their side of the wage controversy to Benjamin Marshman, strike conciliator for the U. S. department of labor.

The reason for the lies being spread by company union stool pigeons that half of the men had returned to work was learned Saturday. It is reported to the DAILY WORKER by well informed Pullman employes that Marshman has already conferred with the Pullman President, E. F. Carry, and asked for a conference among the men, the company and himself.

Marshman was informed by the Pullman Company, the DAILY WORKER learns, that the strike was broken, and that the men had all promised to come back to work today. It was finally agreed that if the men did not return to work by this morning, Marshman was to hear the strikers' side of the case, and do his best to effect a just settlement.

He Won't Go Back.

The Pullman Company evidently, was afraid to put its case before a fair judge, for it has left no stone unturned during the last few days to get the men to return to work by hook or crook.

"Seven-eighths," a company stool pigeon, who has been wandering in and out of the Pullman offices ever since the strike started, was again on the job for the Pullman Company Saturday. When the vote was taken to refuse to go to work today, and to meet Marshman in an effort at a just settlement, "Seven-eighths" tried to sneak out the door so he would not have to put himself on record. He was caught, however, and was jeered by the men until he had to get up and say he had no intention of going to work today.

The following resolution was sent off to the Pullman officials Saturday, by the strikers' committee, stating the strikers' position on the meeting of stool pigeons with the Pullman Company, where the stool pigeons pretended they represented the strikers.

Men Hit Misrepresentation.

"Be it resolved that any individuals who may attend this meeting or other similarly called meetings in

FRENCH COMMUNISTS CALL ON WORKERS AND PEASANTS TO FIGHT THE BOURGEOISIE

PARIS, May 11.—As the campaign for the parliamentary elections closed last night the indications were that the left would win easily over Poincare and the bloc national. The Communist party, which occupies the extreme left and must not be confused with the bourgeois-socialist bloc, which calls itself "left," issued a manifesto thru its paper Humanite, urging the "proletarian bloc of workers and peasants to vote against the bourgeois bloc." It is predicted that the Communists will make large gains.

Successor To Ousted Stoolpigeon Will Be Selected Without Delay

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Inspector Faurot, noted criminologist of the New York police force, today was the man most prominently mentioned as probable successor to Wm. J. Burns, who resigned as head of the bureau of investigation, department of justice. Faurot is understood to have the support of Senator Wadsworth and his name has been suggested already to President Coolidge and Attorney General Stone.

W. H. Moran, head of the secret service, also is mentioned as Burns' successor.

Labor Against Lash.

MONTREAL, May 11.—The Trades and Labor Council of Montreal is on record against capital punishment and the use of the lash, both legal Canadian punishments.

STRIKE OF DETROIT STREET CAR WORKERS LOOMS TOMORROW AS CITY TURNS DOWN ARBITRATION

DETROIT, May 11.—Fighting to save their union from destruction at the hands of the Detroit Street Railways the street car men are preparing to walk out Tuesday. Full support has been pledged by the Detroit Federation of Labor.

So united are the union motormen, conductors and car barn workers in their stand that not a car will be moving Tuesday morning unless the officials of this city owned company consent to arbitration of the grievances of the workers.

Union Men Discharged.

Discharge of union officials by the company, withdrawal of the right to collect union dues at car barns, low wages and other grievances forced the workers to fight for self-preservation.

This latest move, of forbidding collection of union dues at the barns, has awakened the most conservative workers to the open shop plans of the present city administration and the policies of Ross Schram, assistant general manager of the lines and tool of the big open shop industrial concerns in Detroit, who have determined to wipe out the example of unionism in every industry of the city lest their own employes become aroused to the need of organization.

Workers Double Crossed.

The Detroit street car workers are aroused at the double crossing of the railway management. When the lines were taken over by the city Mayor Couzens assured the workers that the department of street railways would do business with the chosen representatives of the men. In those days the union officers were granted leave of absence from their jobs while on duty representing the men.

Times have changed. Big business in Detroit has notified the city administration that the street car men's union must be destroyed. So the obedient corporation flunkies in charge of the municipally owned lines have begun their attacks.

The list of attacks on the union is tersely given by William Fitzgerald, first vice president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, as follows:

Broken Promises.

"It has been quite evident that the street railway commission has been seeking an opportunity to destroy our organization. They have constantly sought to embroil us in

PITTSBURGH STRIKE FORCED WHEN BOSSES REFUSED ARBITRATION

PITTSBURGH, May 11.—The strike which the Pittsburgh street car men will carry thru to victory was forced by the company's hard boiled refusal to consent to the formation of a local board of arbitration by John H. Reardon, representative of the international executive board of the carmen's union. The mayor is equally blamed with the company in the statement which follows:

"In all the conferences which have taken place between the mayor, officials of the company and the representatives of the men, the officials of the company refused to concede anything, while the representatives of the men offered, to concede several of their demands and settle the controversy for a 3-cents-an-hour increase.

"Regarding arbitration, the representatives of the men offered the following proposition:

"Let the officials of the company select a man as the representative of the company, the men to select a man as their representative, and these two men thus selected to select a third man to act as umpire. These three men to investigate and hear all of the facts in the case, and whatever decision was arrived at by a majority of these three men should be binding on both the company and the men.

"This would have avoided the strike, but the mayor and the officials of the company wanted to tell these three men how they should decide the matter before they heard the case, while the representatives of the men insisted that the three men should hear all the facts in the case first and then render a decision.

BUY GUNS AND GAS TO CRUSH CAR STRIKE

Mayor Declares War On Pittsburgh Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, May 11.— First rounds of strike ammunition were served out to the police yesterday when scores of modern riot guns, more than 10,000 rounds of ammunition and hundreds of revolvers arrived at detective headquarters. More riot guns, tanks and gas grenades are being rushed in

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 11—Tear gas grenades, riot guns and tanks are the weapons with which Mayor McGee and the Pittsburgh Railways company intends to fight the strike of 3,200 motormen and conductors which has paralyzed street car service in this city.

The strike for better working conditions which began Saturday morning has thrown business interests into a state of panic and resulted in the immediate passage by the city council of an appropriations bill for the death dealing weapons against labor.

Twenty-five thousand dollars is the amount provided, at McGee's request, by the "emergency" ordinance which will be used in purchasing the gas, guns and tanks to protect scabs and to attack the strikers.

Demands Just, Mayor Admitted.

Mayor McGee's declaration of war on the strikers, before they have been even accused of any acts of violence, comes just two days after his admission that there was much justice to their demands.

The demands of the strikers are the slightest possible. They demand that the company pay half the cost of their $28 company uniforms; they demand that they be given "thirty minutes instead of fifteen for making out accident reports. A demand for a small wage increase followed.

Plan to Crush Union.

The company's purpose is to crush the street carmen's union. Their program is part of the great open shop drive in the Pittsburgh district, long noted for the greed of its employing class.

John N. Nelson, business agent of the street carmen, has notified the public that the workers are going to insist on their rights in spite of opposition.

Scabs Endanger Life.

Warning the public of the danger from reckless and untrained scabs—as well as from the riot guns—he says in part:

"It may conserve human life from accidents if the public which uses street cars going to and from their homes would bear in mind that the men to be put in charge of the street cars by the Pittsburgh Railways Co. are men of little or no experience in managing cars.

"Pittsburgh grades are steep and many short turns are experienced by motormen on every line running thru, into and out of the city. Only trained men, used to these dangers, have been in charge of the cars. Regretful and very great accidents are liable to occur.

40 Overcome In Gasy Tunnel.

Danger to human life from automobiles carrying passengers, came in an unexpected way Saturday when nearly 40 automobile passengers were overcome with gas in the new Liberty tunnel running from Brownsville to Carson streets.

Mayor McGee's police, in their eagerness to break the carmen's strike, allowed the autos to crowd into the tunnel recklessly with total disregard of traffic laws.

What was worse no inspection of gas conditions had been made.

Fearful Auto Jam.

Gas was seeping into the tunnel. Had there been no traffic jam no one might have been injured, but as the cars caught into each other and the line of scores of machines became blocked, men and women began to fall unconscious.

Police Responsible for Injuries.

Twenty-four persons were more or less seriously injured and about 40 in all were overcome by the gas.

These first injuries indirectly traced to the strike are directly at the door of Mayor McGee's poli-

FARMER-LABOR PARTY BUILDING IN PHILADELPHIA

Unions Issue Call For A May 27 Conference

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 11.—A call for a Farmer-Labor party conference, to be held May 27, 8 p. m., at Machinists' temple, was issued last night to all working class organizations of this city.

The call was issued in the name of several local labor unions affiliated with the A. F. of L., by an arrangements committee consisting of representatives of these unions.

Brother Adolph B. Gersch of Painters' Local No. 1083 was elected chairman of the arrangements committee, and Brother H. O. McLurg of Paperhangers' Local No. 587 is the secretary.

The fact that the initiative for the organization of a Labor party in Philadelphia comes from the rank and file of labor unions is a guaranty in itself that the new Farmer-Labor party which will be organized at the May 27 conference will become a real power in the hands of organized labor of this city. Attempts to organize labor parties in this city have failed in the past mainly because of the fact that it was a movement of individuals rather than of the masses of the unions.

The arrangements committee expects to make the May 27 conference the biggest gathering ever held by organized labor in this city.

The call follows:

PHILADELPHIA F.-L. CALL

"Greetings: There never was a time in the history of the labor movement when the possibilities were so apparent for the formation of a Labor party.

"The cost of living is rising. An intense campaign is being carried on everywhere for the destruction of our organizations and for the establishment of the open shop system. Millions of farmers are bankrupt. The Teapot Dome exposures have shown conclusively that the government is completely subjected to Wall street and the big business interests. When a strike takes place the governmental machine is used to protect the bosses and against the workers.

"The money powers in control of both the old parties are able to rule both in the political and economic world because of lack of co-operation among the toiling masses.

"The success of the British Labor party is an outstanding achievement of first order. It comes at a time when the need for united action for our common defense is most pressing. It is an alluring precedent to follow.

Millions of Farmers Bankrupt

"The success of the Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota is another striking example of the wisdom of the united efforts of the exploited farmers and industrial workers. The farmers and the workers have a common cause. Those who work for the destruction of our organizations are also responsible for the appalling conditions prevailing among the farmers. More than five and a half million farmers are bankrupt and are at the point of starvation.

"All over the country the workers and the farmers are getting together and forming Farmer-Labor parties with the end in view of consolidating all these local Farmer-Labor parties in state and a national party, which will nominate candidates for president and vice-president on a Farmer-Labor ticket.

"A number of Philadelphia labor unions adopted resolutions for the immediate formation of a local labor party. Delegates were elected by these locals to a committee to call a conference for the formation of such a party. The committee met on May 8, at the Paperhangers' hall, 1534 Ridge avenue.

Machinists' Temple, May 27.

"In the name of these local unions the arrangements committee calls upon all labor and farmer organizations, working class fraternal and working class political organizations to come to a conference to be held in the Machinists' temple, 13th and Spring Garden streets, on Tuesday, May 27, 8 p. m., for the purpose of organizing a local Farmer-Labor party in Philadelphia.

"Representation to the conference will be as follows: Three delegates for each local labor union or working class political party; one delegate for each central labor body or working class fraternal organization.

"We call upon your organization to elect delegates to this conference and to forward their credentials to the arrangements committee, whose secretary is H. O. McClurg, 1549 North 13th street.

"Thanking you in anticipation of your co-operation in this most important matter, and with best wishes for a united front, we beg to remain,

"Fraternally yours,
"PAINTERS' L. U. No. 1083,
Adolph B. Gersch, Chairman.
"PAPERHANGERS' L. U. No. 587,
H. O. McClurg, Secretary."

class collaboration and he makes no bones about it. He is the natural leader of the petty bourgeoise labor officialdom that controls the American labor movement.

Hypocricy.

The officials of the I. L. G. W. U., on the other hand, open the convention to the tune of the International, then proceeds to condemn everything that hymn implies. They condemn fascism but their actions can be symbolized more correctly in the Fascisti hymn of hate than in the International.

Almost the entire delegation of Local 9, the largest local in the International, is being objected, too, but they are not ready to bring it before the convention. The objections in this case brings out the rawness of the administration dealings and their crude effort to keep control of thte union.

The regular procedure is to take up the locals by numbers but in the case of Number 9 they want to compromise. They are quite willing to seat the delegates of Number 9 irrespective of their league membership, providing that they will promise to put administration men in control of the joint board. The end of the fourth day indicates how desperate they are, and how well they understand that control of the convention by their methods weakens rather than gains the support of the membership.

Spend Money Like Water.

Fifty thousand dollars spent and the business for which the convention was called not even touched. Not one-half of the contested delegates disposed of, the expelled members' cases still to come before the convention. "Every time Sigman speaks it costs the organization $500," is the jocular remark of the convention which will be taken in a different light by the membership who have to foot the bill.

The Sigman-Perlstein-Fineberg machine works well when it comes to a ruthless, violent method of enforcing their policy, but when they begin to explain it, they get terribly mixed up. I overheard one of their staunch supporters remark to another of the same breed, "Why don't they bring it to a vote without gumming the game by talking; the longer they talk the worse they make it look. Let the others do the talking, we have the votes."

The first objections to the militants were made on technical ground, but the arguments why they should not be seated in the convention was that they were members of the league. Perlstein spoke for an hour condemning the league, the Workers Party, sneering at amalgamation and independent political action. Fineberg took up as much time in the same manner and on this type of argument asked that these delegates be unseated.

Rose Wortis Gives Battle.

Rose Wortis of New York, was objected to upon these same grounds, but when she tried to explain the policy of the league she was not only ruled out of order but was removed from the floor by the sergeant-at-arms on two occasions.

Metrich of Chicago was unseated on objection made by a former scab. Zer, another Chicago delegate, made this declaration on the floor of the convention, yet the man who made the objection and takes Metrich's place in the convention did not even have the nerve to deny it.

The flimsy excuse for removing Metrich shows to what extremes they have gone to remove the left wing spokesmen from the floor. He was charged for being responsible, sometime between the last convention and this one, for a stoppage of work in his shop. He had nothing to do with the stoppage, but that is not the point. He was chairman of the shop when the stoppage occurred; the grievance was settled; nobody thought of blaming him at the time, he went back with the workers as chairman, no charges were brought against him or even thought about. He ran for delegate and defeated an administration candidate, the man that is accused of being a scab, and the only thing that they could trump up was this stoppage of work that everybody had completely forgot about except Perlstein and his lackeys.

Against All Progress.

This is the method pursued in all the objections. The chairman of the credentials committee let the cat out of the bag, when on concluding his report on one of the contested delegates, produced a leaflet to prove why this delegate should be unseated. It was the platform on which the delegates was running for delegate. He said, "here is the proof; yesterday we unseated delegates because they beleaged to the league, here is a program that is almost identical as that of the league, so why waste any more time on this man?"

One minute they say you can advocate anything you want, but you must not belong to the league, the next minute they admit that it is amalgamation, etc., that they are apposed to.

Similar Tactics.

As in the case of Wortis, so also in that against Chasanov, Local 35 New York, proof was given that the question at issue was not one of disobedience to a decision of the union, but of fundamental differences in viewpoint on the labor movement.

Chasanov was charged with being affiliated with the League and with having been elected as a member of the Executive Board of his union on a program advocating the shop delegates League and freedom of opinion in the organizations.

During the discussion it was definitely proven that in issuing the order against the leagues the General Executive Board did not care about league connections but aimed to eliminate all elements in the union who opposed the policies of the present administration and advocated policies which are against the interests of the officialdom. This was clearly demonstrated in the closing remarks of the chairman.

More Machine Work.

After reading a leaflet which contained the platform under which Chasanov was elected as delegate to the convention which in brief called upon members of the local to elect only progressive candidates who advocated amalgamation, Labor Party, shop delegate system, an all-inclusive labor party, the merging of locals, and pledged themselves to fight against the order of the General Executive Board that members of the International must withdraw from the league, he concluded that since four delegates had been unseated on the previous day for advocating a similar program, and since this was the program of the league, the convention should also unseat Brother Chasanov. The recommendation was accepted by 183 for to 41 against.

federation and have great influence in its deliberations; and

"Whereas, We consider it inconsistent for labor men to belong to said organization and to give thereby prestige to our enemies, be it therefore

"Resolved, That we instruct our delegates to all future annual conventions of the A. F. of L. to vote at such conventions against all candidates for the office of president, vice president, secretary or member of the executive council in the N. C. F."

2. Contracting Shops.

"Whereas, The process of manufacturing in our industry has been split up among numerous contractors, every one of whom has a little sweatshop where a certain part of the garment is produced, and

"Whereas, The tendency of the manufacturers to encourage an ever stronger entrenchment of the contracting system in our industry, has enabled them to forge a very powerful and successful weapon in their struggle with the union; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the incoming G. E. B. be instructed immediately after the convention to begin an energetic struggle against this division in our industry, and use all the power of our union to the end of re-establishing the inside shop, where all tasks on a garment such as fluting, knailing, ironing, squaring and complete finishing will be performed in the same shop."

Shop Delegate System.

"Whereas, The structure of our present form of organization is such as to centralize the entire control of the organization in the hands of few, thereby bringing about a state of affairs in which the majority of the membership is uninformed and indifferent to union matters and do not participate in the shaping of the policies, tactics and activities of our union; and

"Whereas, Such conditions delay and obstruct the growth and progress of our organization; and

"Whereas, Our unions are still based on narrow craft divisions, which give rise to petty craft interests, narrow selfishness, misunderstanding, much unnecessary friction and is detrimental to the unity and solidarity of the workers which is so essential to defend the interests of the workers against the employers; therefore be it

"Resolved, That this sixth biennial convention of the Furriers' union instructs the incoming general executive board immediately towards reorganizing our union on the basis of the shop delegate system.

Chicago School Teacher Opposes Turning Over Muscle Shoals To Ford

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Government operation of Muscle Shoals by a commission was urged on the Senate Agriculture Committee today by Miss Evangeline Hursen, a teacher in the Chicago public schools, the first woman witness to testify in the Muscle Shoals hearings.

Miss Hursen appeared for the Illinois Public Ownership League and the Professional Business Women's Association.

"I am not coming here with statistical information," Miss Hursen said. "I come to tell you that the people of Illinois don't want you to sell Muscle Shoals. The people's money built that plant and the people should get the benefit. It would be absolutely criminal to lease that valuable resource."

CARMEN IN ROCHESTER REJECT COMPANY OFFER ALMOST UNANIMOUSLY

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 11.—Only 10 men out of 1,625 voted to accept the wage cut of the New York state railways for workers in Rochester, Syracuse and Utica. Representatives of the men, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, are negotiating with the company regarding arbitration. The union demands joint arbitration, while the company wants to deal separately with each city.

The proposed reduction is two cents an hour or a scale of 49, 51 and 53 cents as a maximum after a year's service. The old contract expired May 1.

Strike As Effective as Ever.

At the Saturday strike meeting, the men each gave in their names and occupations to the secretary, and it was found by accurate count, that the strike is as effective as when it started. The men thus learned definitely that all rumors that there had been a decision to return to work were spread by unreliable men like "Pullman John" and "Seven-eighths."

A man from the tinshop who has been attending the strike meetings regularly, reported that he has learned that there is absolutely no production in the plant. The few scabs have made only a bare pretense of working. He declared that the men have been sleeping inside the shop, afraid to show their faces to the strikers. The strikers have instructed their lawyer to notify the board of health, as they believe the Pullman Company to be violating the sanitary code.

David Bentall, the strike lawyer, today sent President Carry a letter asking for the return of transportation money for his clients, who now number over half a hundred. These men were done out of several days' pay and transportation money by the lies of the Pullman Company.

Business Men Show Colors.

Strikers yesterday informed the DAILY WORKER that the Cut-rate Army Store, 11363 South Michigan Ave., has been aiding the Pullman Company and siding against the strikers. The carbuilders are asking all the Pullman employes to boycott this store.

A wife of one of the strikers told the DAILY WORKER that she overheard the store owner say, "The Pullman Company was justified in reducing the wages of the men. The men ought to go back to work."

Some of the strikers are highly incensed at this statement, as they have been liberally patronizing this army store. They declare they will go elsewhere in the future.

Another prominent business firm which has been talking against the strikers, is John M. Gibbons and Company, mortgage bankers, at 11415 So. Michigan Ave.

Decatur Students To Vote On Compromise Offered By Managers

DECATUR, Ill., May 11.— Tired of having their affairs manhandled by the moneybag trustees, students of James Millikin university, went out on strike last week and tomorrow are triumphantly going to vote on conciliation offers made by an alumni committee.

Trouble arose over the constant interference with the board of managers by the trustees of the estate of the late James Millikin, who founded and endowed the university.

Four hundred students took part in the strike which stopped the wheels of the university completely.

"CAUTIOUS CAL" DOUBLE CROSSES CALIFORNIA ON THE JAP ISSUE TO BEAT "CLAY-FOOT IDOL" JOHNSON

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Coolidge has done to the Californians in 1924 what Hughes did to them in 1916—he has doublecrossed them in the most stupid manner possible, when the first principles of politics required that he keep faith.

As an immediate consequence, the endorsement of Coolidge in the Republican primary has become a mockery to the winner. Coolidge has lost the electoral votes of the three states on the Pacific coast, if he ever had a chance to get them.

A week before the California primary was held, the President astonished the press correspondents by telling them that he favored "exclusion" and not "regulation" of Asiatic immigration.

The word "exclusion" is enthusiasm among the race-emotional element on the Pacific slope. Coolidge was as radically anti-Japanese as Hiram himself! And the voters went to the Republican primary and gave the President a majority over Hiram, their clay-footed idol.

But on the day after the Coolidge victory in California was assured, the White House politician reversed himself and forced the House and Senate conferees to discard a report on the immigration bill which they had already agreed upon and made public, and substitute for it a plea to Coolidge himself to negotiate a treaty with Japan, dealing with immigration into America. Sen. Robinson, minority leader, denouncing this surrender of the principle that immigration control is a purely domestic legislative function, did not fail to point out that Coolidge had prefaced the trick by betrayal of the trust of the voters of California.

Sam Shortridge, the hard-boiled senator from the Golden state, was outraged. He is the loudest champion of exclusion and he served notice that he would raise a point of order against the treaty phase of the immigration bill unless the conferees should meantime cut it out of the measure. Half a dozen democrats, assisted by Borah, took occasion to point out that the House and Senate's instructions to the conferees on this Japanese business had been directly violated by the Coolidge scheme; that it was a defiance by the executive of the acknowledged legislative right of Congress; that if we let Japan force us to negotiate a treaty dealing with an immigration issue, then we must expect Italy to threaten us until we yielded to her also. American independence was involved and Congress must refuse to accept foreign dictation, even if Coolidge gave orders and Secretary Hughes threatened to resign, just before the presidential campaign, in protest.

"Let Hughes get out," was Shortridge's challenge.

Elections In Japan Wind Up With Heavy Rioting Thruout Country

TOKIO, May 11.—Rioting broke out in several parts of the country as political parties wound up a heated campaign for the parliamentary elections to be held today.

One man was killed and ten wounded in an election riot at Kure.

Electioneers in Fukushima requested the governor to call out gendarmes to protect them; but he refused and disorders followed. Rioting also was reported in the town of Morioka, prefecture of Iwate.

The campaign was closing peaceably in Tokio, with many speakers in evidence and socialists working hard to gain a greater representation. Police put only the usual precautions in effect.

The weather was bright and sunny and a heavy vote was forecast.

Worcester Bosses Hear Johnson But W. P. Gets Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WORCESTER, Mass., May 11.—In spite of over 500 invitations sent to leading employers here, only 50, including the mayor and the key to the city, showed up at a meeting arranged by the conservative Central Labor union. William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, spoke on "Labor's Rights and Responsibilities," and included a generous mouthful of thanks for the key.

That was last Thursday.

But the Sunday evening before the Workers party held a May day celebration and didn't send out invitations to all the money bigwigs, either. Over 450 people jammed the hall.

The contrast showed how much better than the official labor movement here can organize the employers, the Workers party could organize the workers.

Mayor Of Indianapolis To Reward His Friends And Punish Enemies

INDIANAPOLIS, May 11.—Mayor Shank today was compiling a "black list" of city employes who are said to have worked against him for the Republican nomination for governor in the primaries.

Shank said he was going to discharge those on the black list and hire loyal workers in their places.

STRIKE OF STREET CAR MEN LOOMS ON DETROIT LINES

a fight. They have broken their word and refused to give our officers leave of absence while engaged representing the men. They have fired Brothers McClellan and Nugent for following the instructions of the organization and refusing to report for work. They refused to permit us to circulate petitions authorizing the officers of the union to represent the men.

3,700 Men in Union.

"In spite of this we have secured nearly 3,300 signatures out of the 3,800 platform employes, 3,700 of whom belong to our organization. Their latest move has been to deny us the right to collect dues from the men at the barns. We have had this right for the last thirty-five years in this city.

"Thousand-Dollar Luncheon."

"In addition to this Schram has been spending the car riders' money in an effort to break up our union. His 'thousand-dollar luncheon' is an example. It was an old trick which has been tried by labor-hating employers for the last 50 or 100 years. The men invited to the luncheon were given their day's pay, cigars and nice food. They enjoyed it. But the trick didn't work. The men knew what the union had done for them and stood pat. The move was a blunder upon the part of the management, as it merely showed that the men were loyal to their organization.

15 to 16-Hour Day.

"I cannot believe that the people of the city of Detroit will back up the administration in its unfair attitude toward the platform men. The citizens of this community will not deny the men the fundamental right to organize and choose their own representatives. This has been the real issue in the controversy. The matter of wages and hours has become secondary. The fact that some of our men have to work 15 or 16 hours to get in an eight-hour day has taken second place. The real issue is the question of the right of the men to organize and select their own spokesmen.

"We intend to insist upon the right. Mr. Joe Martin (acting mayor) will find that he is not dealing with a few garbage workers. It is intolerable and unthinkable that such conditions should be permitted to exist without a struggle."

AMALGAMATED OPENS BIENNIAL CONFAB TODAY

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—The June 17 Farmer-Labor party convention will be one of the issues in the sixth biennial convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, which opens tomorrow morning in Witherspoon hall, Walnut and Juniper streets, at 10 o'clock.

Delegates from Chicago, New York, Cleveland, Rochester, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other centers of the men's clothing industry will represent the 200,000 members of this big needle trades union.

Unionizing of Philadelphia.

Philadelphia has been aptly chosen as the convention city. Campaign plans of the union call for a 100 per cent organization here by next year. In the language of the huge signs which welcome the delegates to Witherspoon hall: "PHILADELPHIA, AN AMALGAMATED MARKET BY 1925."

Leading spirits of the union are confident that the convention city will be as effectively organized then as are Chicago and New York.

Several big achievements can be pointed to as the delegates open their sessions:

Wage Reductions Prevented.

The union has held its forces together well during the last year. In spite of the fact that the industry is not flourishing as well as last year, wage reductions have been prevented. This was notably illustrated this spring in Chicago, where the big employers tried to insist on reductions. Union negotiators, backed by the economic strength of their organization, refused to consider any reductions, pointing to the unusually high profits made last year.

The putting into effect of the employment insurance plan by which unemployed workers get 40 per cent of their wages, is another achievement pointed to by the union.

GERMAN GENERALS ARM FASCISTI AS THE RUHR STRIKE STOPS INDUSTRY

HALLE, Germany, May 11.—Forty thousand armed Fascisti were expected to be in Halle today on the occasion of the dedication of a monument to General Von Moltke.

The workers are furious because of the refusal of the government to allow them to even hold mass meetings, while the Fascisti had complete liberty.

The proposal of the Socialist Party for a referendum vote on the Dawes plan is not liable to be adopted a the International bankers will probably give the German government an ultimatum within the limits of which it must reject or accept the plan.

In the meantime the industrial war in the Ruhr is growing in intensity. The General Labor Federation and the League of Clerical employes are back of the miners. Everything in the Ruhr is shutting down, even the French being obliged to cancel trains.

HUGHES FEARS JAP REVOLT IS LOOMING LARGE

Dictates U. S. Stand On Oriental Exclusion

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Authorities will differ as to the motives behind Hughes' insistence that Japanese politicians must not be offended by the exclusion law.

Some will say that in this case Hughes stands for world peace and is opposed to stirring up racial sensibilities—especially when America and France and Japan have so smoothly-working an arrangement in the Far East, to prevent China from falling under radical Russian influence.

Others will say that Hughes is not moved so much by a love of peace as by calculation that a Japanese revolution is threatened, and any sacrifice of the privileges of Congress is better than a liberation of an infuriated working class upon the militarist imperialism now ruling Nippon.

Still others will say that Hughes is naturally submissive to ambassadors and financiers who know exactly what they want. In any case, Hughes has joined with Coolidge in concealing from the voters of California the fact that the exclusion program was to be delayed pending the negotiation of special treaty which would recogniz the right of Japan to a voice in American immigration control. An Hughes, who lost California and th presidency in 1916 by betraying a affronting the progressives, now see his chief headed in the same direction.

The conference report on the immigration bill does not contain the King amendment which would safeguard the Seamen's Act. It is reported to be in substantially the same form as approved by the House—giving the Secretary of Labor the power to put oppressive restrictions upon the coming ashore in American ports of alien seamen who quit their own ships in order to gain the American scale of wages and to force their late masters to pay that scale to anyone employed to take the ship home again.

On the issue of protecting foreign seamen in the equalizing of wage costs between American and foreign ports, the progressives in both houses will wage a new fight when the report comes up for action.

FARRELL MAN CONVICTED BY STEEL TRUST

MERCER, Pa., May 11.—First of the Farrell defendants in the famous "sedition and criminal syndicalism" indictments has just been convicted on all counts by a steel trust court at Mercer. Five other trials are coming.

Tony Kovacovich, who has just been convicted, is a steel worker. His crime was not making steel, but attending a Workers party meeting in Farrell, Pa., shortly after the death of Nicolai Lenin.

Burns Conspiracy.

Department of Justice agent Lennon, was the chief witness for the prosecution, having been assigned to the case by William J. Burns, late head of the U. S. Bureau of Investigation. Lennon, it was, who represented both Burns and the steel interests.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 11.—Elizabeth Gurley Flynn known for many years to Pittsburgh as an active strike leader and a great labor orator, prominent in the Lawrence Strike, will pay a visit after a long absence to this city. She will speak on Tuesday night May 13, at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller st., on the subject of "War on the Reds."

DEFENSE COUNCIL BULLETIN SHOWS DEBT OF $5000

Date of Ruthenberg Hearing Set

The Labor Defense Council has issued the following letter to the members of the national committee accompanying the financial statement, which is published herewith:

To L. D. C. Officers and Committee,

Dear Friend:

Enclosed is the financial statement for the first four months of 1924, showing $13,626.69 raised. This is considered very good in the face of the conditions and difficulties. We have a little over $2,000 in the bank, which, with what we can raise over the summer, will be needed in connection with the Ruthenberg Appeal. We are in debt $5,000, but see no prospects of being able to pay it off, unless we get some large donations. This is because the workers, from whom the bulk of the money has come during the last year and a half, have given over and over again and cannot be expected to respond to calls this summer, in the face of the delay in the Ruthenberg hearing, the natural summer apathy, competitive appeals for other worthy causes, and unemployment.

The delay in the Ruthenberg Appeal is no fault of the defense attorneys, who have been ready for the last six months. Each month the prosecution has asked for a delay.

Now, however, it seems that things will be speeded up. Judge White has set May 16th as the final date for filing the Bill of Exceptions. In all likelihood, then, the date for the hearing of Ruthenberg's Appeal before the Michigan Supreme Court will be set for early fall.

Fraternally yours, Labor Defense Council.

(Signed) GEORGE MAURER,
Secretary.

Parade Impair Profits.

ST. LOUIS, May 11.— If anybody wants to parade at night or on Sunday in downtown St. Louis, he will be permitted, providing big business does not exercise its undisputed pull at the city hall. Otherwise, "good night."

Director of Streets and Sewers Fiske has yielded to the protests of downtown merchants against parades with their accompanying brass bands, floats and decorated automobiles. The merchants complained that these attractions during business hours have a tendency to attract employes to the windows and away from their work, "to the detriment of efficiency." No more parade permits will be issued in the restricted district until the invisible municipal government lifts the ban.

CROOKS, THIEVES AND STOOLPIGEONS POISON THE WASHINGTON OZONE AS GRAFT CESSPOOL IS PROBED DEEPER

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, May 11—Harry Daugherty, as attorney general of the United States, put a government secret agent on the trail of Senator Wheeler, with orders to "get" Wheeler if evidence of any wrongdoing could be discovered. That was the substance of William J. Burns' testimony before the committee investigating the department of justice, when the head of the detective bureau of that department was recalled to the stand on May 7.

Burns was in one of his worst-humored moods when Wheeler drew this admission from him. His attempts to browbeat the Montanian failed, however, to break down the smiling persistence with which Wheeler uncovered the conspiracy against himself that led up to his indictment by one of Daugherty's federal grand juries.

Burns Lies Again.

Ralph Hately, who died at about the time of the indictment, was the Burns man who was sent out to "get" Wheeler. Burns said Hately was ordered to go first to Washington Court House, Ohio, Daugherty's home town, to see a man who was supposed to know something of Wheeler's past. Arriving there, he reported that the man had gone to Nashville, and he was ordered to Nashville. Burns indignantly denied that his own private detective agency had been involved in the matter, or in the combing of Montana for bits of evidence that Wheeler had ever broken any law. He insisted that Hately was a purely government detective, travelling on government mileage and with a government expense account.

Hately failed to get anything "on" Sen. Wheeler from the Nashville trip. The man he met was an old friend of the senator, as Wheeler has testified, and he reported to Wheeler that Hately had asked him whether there were not something somewhere in Wheeler's career "that he would not like to have known." He was answered in the negative.

Fink Trails Fink.

Burns added to the evidence of cynical intrigue in the department by saying that a detective has been shadowing Gaston V. Means, one of Burns' former pals who now is aiding the Senate committee. He denied that this man stole the records which Means has lost. Howard Manningtou, who lived in the Little Green House on K. Street, and who denies that he received money for his "pull" with Daugherty in the matter of whisky removal permits and other evasions of law, is another of Burns' confessed "old friends from Columbus." Burns knew of his close association with Daugherty. He knew, also, that Jess Smith was an intimate associate of Daugherty. Burns has talked with Lockwood of the republican national committee, too, during the period of Lockwood's most violent attacks on Wheeler and the other progressives who have probed the corruption of the Coolidge administration. And Burns' confidential secretary, afterward a special agent, was the wife of the private secretary to Ned McLean of the Washington Post and Cincinnati Enquirer—the McLean who falsely declared that he lent the $100,000 to Fall.

Burns on Vermin.

Attorney General Stone has made no move, so far as is known, to rid the department of Burns. He has, according to Burns, ordered that the list of dollar-a-year special agents, which included McLean, Fred Upham and other big politicians in the Daugherty gang, be cancelled. Yet Burns seems extremely anxious that his private detective business shall not get involved in the scandal which he as a public official, has waded in. He denied, over and over, in a loud voice, any connection between the Burns agency and the attacks on senators or the defense of the administration.

"A lot of these lice around here have been trying to make you believe those things, but they are false," he shouted.

Ladies Demand "Bucket of Blood."

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Patriotic ladies of the vintage of 1812 led by the valiant Mr. Noble Newton Potts, have raised the standard of Americanism against the insidious advances of pacifism, which under cloak of christianity is permeating the life of this country with the red flag of Bolshevism tucked away in its inside pocket.

The venerable ladies held a protest meeting here and selected for the target of their wrath the very innocuous aggregation of females listed under the general heading of the "Womens' International League, of Peace and Freedom." After listening to bloodthirsty advocates of bigger, better and bloodier wars, wade metaphorically in gore, the patriots summed up enough energy to howl down two speakers who tried to insinuate that the organization above mentioned was not entirely unconcerned with national efforts culminating in bloodletting; that they would help to bandage the wounded and serve doughnuts to the heroes on the way to their graves.

Resolutions were passed urging Congress to stop investigating such patriotic citizens as Harry Sinclair, Harry M. Daugherty and Col. Charles Forbes but to run down the source of revenue that finances these pacifist movements. A committee was appointed to go on a handshaking expedition to Pres. Coolidge.

KU KLUX KLAN BIG POWER IN INDIANA POLL

Old Party Politicians Planning Accordingly

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 11.—Out of the wreckage left in the path of Tuesday's primary election, Indiana political leaders today were starting to rebuild their campaign plans and trying to measure the strength of a new power in state politics—the Ku Klux Klan.

From the governorship race down to the contest over local offices, the primary was marked by surprises and upsets. Election returns did not come in the way politicians figured they were going to. The klan had been to the polls.

Jackson Is Klan Candidate.

The klan nominated Ed. Jackson as the republican candidate for governor by a majority of 35,000 over five other candidates when politicians had agreed that a majority was impossible. It left Mayor Shank of Indianapolis, the anti-klan candidate, trailing 130,000 votes behind in second place.

Anti-klan strength in the democratic party lifted Mayor Durgan of Lafayette from the obscurity to which the old guard leaders had consigned him and put him second in a field of eight running for the nomination for governor.

Neutral Candidate Defeated.

The split of strength among the candidates prevented the nomination of Dr. Carleton McCulloch, backed by Tom Taggart, democratic boss of Indiana. McCulloch had a substantial plurality, but not the necessary majority and the nomination will be made in convention. McCulloch was neutral on the klan issue.

Some Child Slavery Facts Admitted In Bosses' Conference

NEW YORK, May 11.—Half of the child workers between 14 and 15 years of age in the United States are unprotected by law. Half of the factories of the country are working their employes longer than 48 hours a week. These are some of the points brought out by a report of the employers' National Industrial Conference Board, New York. The report states in part:

"Thirty-five states and the District of Columbia have fixed an 8-hour day as the maximum for children, while in Virginia 44 hours is their maximum work week. In 19 states the weekly period is shortened so that children may attend parttime school, and in a few such cases the working week for children under 16 is only 40 hours during the school year.

"The workday for women is held down to 8 hours by law in only 8 states. Fourteen permit a 9-hour day and in 18 states 10 hours or more are permitted. Altho the customary legal limit of work for men is 10 hours a day, in special occupations it is set at 8 hours."

In agriculture which has 46.6 per cent of all working children, according to the report, there is no legal protection. Nor are the many children in domestic service safeguarded by law.

FILIPINOS FIGHT TO REFUTE TIES OF U. S. PLUTES

Imperialist Poison In Washington

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The Philippine Press Bureau, which is in constant touch with every detail of the campaign for special funds for independence in the Philippines made necessary by the suspension of the regular independence fund by the American insular auditor with the support of the governor general, denounces as an attempt to defame the Filipino people for the purpose of defeating their just aspirations to become a free and independent nation, the special dispatch of Walter J. Robb appearing in various newspapers in the United States charging that a scandal of large proportions has developed in connection with the sending of a third parliamentary mission to the United States to work for the independence of the Philippines.

To provide for fund for propaganda in this direction all of the 50,000 civil service employes have been asked to contribute annually one-fifth of their monthly salaries. If all contribute it is estimated that the fund thus raised will amount to about $2,000,000, and that secret pledges written on white sheets intended to be destroyed as soon as read, are made by the employes.

To prove that this dispatch is a mere fabrication, out of the total of 270,000 pesos (in dollars half that amount) already subscribed and paid up to April 25, the proportion coming from government officials and employes is less than 5 percent.

Robb May Have Been Dick.

Walter J. Robb was formerly an employes of the Philippine Press bureau and in the past tried to win the favor of Senate President Quezon and other Filipino leaders and is now paid by the American Chamber of Commerce, well known as opposing with all its might the political aspirations of the Filipinos. Personally and as secretary of that body he is conducting, as he has always done in the past, a campaign of defamation and misrepresentation in the United States papers together with other American correspondents such as Norbert Lyons and Russell Zeininger. Walter Robb has published many articles in American magazines here illustrating them with photographs of practically naked non-Christian tribes of the islands for the purpose of giving the impression that the majority of the Filipinos are uncivilized. We denounce Walter Robb as a man paid by interested parties to poison the hearts of the American people against the Filipinos.

Filipino Bill Before Congress.

An offer of a constitutional republican government to be known as the "Commonwealth of the Philippines" is the latest proposal of the United States Congress as settlement of the troublous Philippine affairs. The United States would retain complete control, however, for thirty-four years which provision will undoubtedly make the Filipinos skeptical of this latest suggestion of their American exploiters.

The Bill.

The bill providing for the republican government was proposed in the House of Representatives by Chairman Fairfield of the committee on insular affairs. It provides for the holding a constitutional convention, "the members of which shall be elected by the qualified electors for the purpose of drafting a constitution for the commonwealth. The convention shall provide for the submission of a constitution to the qualified electors for their ratification or rejection at a referendum to be held within three months or not more than five months after the adoption of the constitution by the convention."

"The constitution shall provide for a republican form of government with the executive power vested in the governor, the legislative power vested in the legislature, composed of a Senate and a House of Representatives, and the judicial power vested in one supreme court and such inferior courts as from time to time may be established."

A bill of rights including the following provisions revocable only by the United States Congress is provided:

How Much Freedom?

"All citizens of the commonwealth shall declare allegiance to the United States. Citizens of the United States shall have the same civil and political rights as citizens of the commonwealth. Every officer of the commonwealth shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, declare, among other things, that he recognizes and accepts the supreme authority of the United States and will support and defend the constitution of the United States and that of the commonwealth."

The bill of rights is to allow absolute religious toleration and tax exemption to all church property.

At the end of the thirty-four year period the Filipinos are to decide by referendum whether the commonwealth should continue or complete independence should be theirs.

So far, there has been no announcement of more important details of the Fairfield bill. Filipinos are wondering how much authority will still be left in the hands of the Governor?

NON-MAGNETIC LABORATODY BUILT BY YOUNG SCIENTIST AT ALPINE, N. J., ON THE PALLISADE HEIGHTS

ALPINE, N. J., May 11.—Where the sheer palisades rise 500 feet above the glistening Hudson at Alpine, a strange, red, mushroom-like monstrosity of architecture struggles in a tangle of young trees and underbrush.

The "Mystery Castle" is a non-magnetic research laboratory. The builder is Dr. John Clawson Burnett, a youthful, sandy-haired, dynamic idealist who haw-hawed heartily as he showed the correspondent about the place.

Not a Commercial Enterprise.

"Nothing in life is so constant as change," he said, in explanation of his theory that all life is moving in cycles and that thru his elaborate instruments for stimulation of that change he can prolong and make happier existence for every one.

The laboratory and the little cluster of wierdly built buildings about it, are not part of a commercial enterprise, Dr. Burnett insisted. The doctor, who is 38, is a man of independent means. His wife, a former New Jersey heiress, Cora Timken, designed the unusual group of houses.

The most important discovery which the doctor had to announce from among a maze of elaborate and expensive machinery with which he had equipped his laboratory, was proof that the oscilloclast, a device invented by the late Dr. Albert Abrams, of California, actually gives off energy.

"I am not yet making any claims as to the effect of this treatment by the oscilloclast upon the human body," Dr. Burnett said. "But we have proved beyond doubt that the machine gives off regulated energy, in direct contravention of what Henry Ford's scientists said."

The non-magnetic laboratory is the only one of its kind in the world. There is a non-magnetic laboratory at Washington, D. C., constructed upon somewhat different lines.

Even Paint Non-Metal.

There is not a scrap of magnetic metal within 200 feet of the ungainly red building. Huge beams of long leafs pine, covered with fire-proof lathes and plaster, are the foundation of construction. Where nails and screws were necessary, they are of copper and brass. The radiators are brass; even the tiny screws in electric light fixtures have been changed. The very paint on the walls is non-metal.

A sunken platform within the main room of the laboratory goes down to the bedrock of the Palisade Cliffs, so that only an earthquake can shake it. In every way, the doctor has designed his plant by and for the most delicate instruments known to science.

Dr. Burnett and Hallberg demonstrated an elaborate device that throws a motion picture of your heart beats on a scene, while another machine measures the amount of air you breathe and what comes out of what goes in. They showed how a little pith ball proved the earth a positive conductor; how a live twig, when crushed, gave off electrical energy; and how two lights counter-act one another and produce darkness.

Daugherty Will Be Compelled To Take The Witness Stand

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Hearings on the petition of former attorney general Daugherty's suit for injunctions to prevent the senate Daugherty committee and the local telegraph companies from obtaining and making public his personal and official telegrams, was deferred until May 9, when the case came up in court today.

Counsel for Daugherty will be given opportunity to cross-examine Gaston B. Means, declared Senator Burton K. Wheeler, prosecutor for the D. of J. investigating committee. The hearings will continue thruout the month.

The ex-attorney general will also be given opoprtunity to testify and if he does not come willingly he will be dragged into the witness chair by force, said Senator Wheeler. "Daugherty is the man we want to get on the witness stand," said Wheeler. "The hearings would not come to an end without giving the big grafter an opportunity to make his speech.

It is expected that senator Wheeler will get a clean bill of health from the Borah committee investigating the charges made against him by the Republican National Committee. That outfit is now pretty well discredited and their statements are no longer given any credence.

Frank A. Vanderlip has organized a posse of investigators and prominent lawyers to run down crooks who are defrauding the government. His organization is called "The Citizens Federal Research Bureau." He has engaged J. Weston Allen, former Attorney General of Boston, Edward J. Abbot Jr. and Albert Hurwitz to prosecute the culprits when caught. Mr. Allen made a reputation in Boston for convicting District Attorney Pelletier, Supreme Advocate of the Knights of Columbus and several prominent attorneys of blackmail. He also convicted Ponzi and Thomas Lawson.

The fact that so many Massachusetts men are on the job in Washington bodes ill for Coolidge in the opinion of press reporters here. Efforts to sidetrack the investigations are still going on, but the powers that be, dare not come out too openly fearing an explosion and the creating of more suspicion.

AUSTRALIAN BANKERS PROFIT ON WORLD WAR

Country's Debt $900 Per Head

By W. Francis Ahern.
(By The Federated Press)

MELBOURNE, Australia.— The money power in Australia is raising the interest rates on loans. The first shot was fired in March when the money trust forced the Australian government to convert a 5 1-4 percent bond issue into 6 percents free of income tax.

The loan was to meet war bonus bonds issued to the soldiers in 1920, to the amount of approximately $100,000,000, now falling due. The government has no money to meet them.

All appeals to "patriotism" fell on deaf ears. To the money trust this loan is equivalent to a net return up to 8 percent.

The bankers were able to squeeze the government because since 1920, when the bonds were issued, the financiers have been quietly buying them from the war veterans. Having got the equivalent of 8 percent for government bonds, the trust is not likely to lend money for any other purpose at less.

Farmers whose mortgages are awaiting renewals will, many of them, be unable to pay increased interest. Manufacturers and other industrial concerns are likewise penalized.

Australia has also issued its first inflated currency and though the issue of inflated money is small—$21,000,000—it is a start in the direction that has sent other nations towards bankruptcy.

Australia is carrying a combined war and domestic debt equal to $900 per head of population. Taxation has reached the limit and cheap loans are a thing of the past.

BRITISH LABOR BACKS RUSSIAN DAMAGE BILL

Rap Bankers' Move Against Parley

LONDON, May 11.—The Anglo-Russian conference is proceeding normally, despite inspired reports to the contrary. An international conspiracy to sabotage the relations between Britain and Russia exists and it never worked harder than at present. The Daily Herald is exposing the enemies of the Soviet government and publishing articles from progressive labor leaders who declare that the bill for damages presented as a counter claim to Britain is thoroly justifiable and moderate.

The Soviet government, thru, its representatives, demands, according to reports, the sum of $20,000,000,000, for damages caused by its armies and other hirelings in Russia during the period of activo intervention. The British claims against the Soviet amount to about one-quarter this sum.

The heaviest single item in the Soviet claim against England, is $12,213,000,000, for British support to Admiral Kolchak. London bankers pretend to laugh off the Soviet claims, but "he who laughs last laughs best," and it is conceded that tho the bankers may have laughed without restrictions up until now, the hour is approaching when they may be more inclined to pray to their Sterling God than to laugh.

While British governments not excepting the present one, have made loud cries about Bolshevik tyranny, it is a well-known fact that England is inciting rebellions among the Moslems against the Soviet Republics. While the success of the uprisings are greatly exaggerated with the alleged instability of the Soviet power during the Anglo-Russian conference, much loss of life is caused thru the plotting of the British imperial government. That MacDonald has not called a halt on this devilish work shows what a dyed-in-the-wool imperialist he is.

The Communist Party of Great Britain in a statement demands the withdrawals of all claims against Soviet Russia. Immediate appointment of a Trade Unionist ambassador to Moscow, who shall be nominated by the General Council, conclusion of an economic treaty and the granting of credits to the Soviet government.

FAMOUS DEFENDER OF CAMERON DAM WHO KILLED SHERIFF DIED OF DROPSY IN MILWAUKEE, WIS.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 11.—Scores of morbidly curious people today swarmed thru the home of John Dietz, 63, for a last look at the "Defender of Cameron Dam," one of the most picturesque characters in the history of Wisconsin.

With members of his family at his bedside — those who had helped in the five-year battle against the state and the lumber interests—the famous pioneer Badger died in a hospital last night from dropsy.

Twenty years ago Dietz started farming a piece of land beside the Thornapple River, near Cameron dam. He managed to wrest a bare living from the farm, when lumber interests decided to tear down the dam on the Dietz property for the purpose of floating logs over the farm. Then a five-year battle started. When the sheriff and his deputies came with a writ ordering him to move, Dietz and his family locked themselves in their cabin and with rifle and revolver fought back the invaders.

For five years Dietz and his family held off all attempts to evict them. On October 8, 1910, Dietz and his family were captured after a fight in which Deputy Oscar Harp was killed. Dietz was found guilty of murder in the first degree, while his wife and son Leslie, also charged with murder, were freed. Dietz was sentenced to life, but on May 13, 1921, he was pardoned.

The World of Labor—Industry and Agriculture

IMPORTED COTTON CLOTH AND SOUTHERN NON-UNION LABOR HIT NORTHERN TEXTILE WORKERS

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Importation of cotton cloth into the United States while tens of thousands of American textile workers lack the opportunity to earn a living, was condemned by the emergency committee of the American Federation of Textile Workers at a special meeting in Fall River, Mass., April 29. Similar action was taken a week earlier by the council of New Bedford textile workers.

The critical situation is shown in reports of curtailment in Fall River reaching 80 per cent while in New Bedford operation thruout April averaged little more than 50 percent of normal. In New England activity averaged only 129 hours per spindle during March.

These northern textile operatives are being told by agents of big business that their meager working standards prevent their securing employment in competition with the still cheaper labor preserves which textile capital owns in the south and in other countries. They are vainly hoping for protective legislation to forestall wage cuts.

Department of commerce figures show the extent of the depression. Orders for cotton goods during March aggregated only 80,300,000 yards as against 120,441,000 yards during the same month in 1923. Production amounted to 85,110,000 yards as against 115,456,000 yards a year ago. In other words, with production cut by more than 25 per cent it was still running ahead of demand.

Here is the situation. Foreign textile workers have had their living standards reduced to the point where they can undersell American textile workers. And southern textile workers in America, because of their lower standards, are underselling those in the north. So the pressure of competition in an over-expanded industry comes squarely on the workers who have achieved some sort of living conditions and is acting to force them to give up those conditions.

Only Way To Make Industry Safe For Labor Is Abolish Capitalism

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 11.—Labor officials and physicians who are working to make industry safe for the life and limbs of workers will gather in New York city May 17-18 for the second annual conference of the Workers Health bureau. The entire country will be represented by delegates and a national campaign will be launched to combat industrial diseases and poisons. Fifty labor organizations will participate. Among the experts who will take part in the conference are Dr. Joseph Aub, Harvard university; Dr. Emery R. Hayhurst, Ohio university; Dr. James P. Warbasse, Co-operative League of America, and Dr. Bradley Kirschberg, consulting chemist Workers' Health bureau.

Special attention will be paid to poisoning by lead, benzol, and mercury, and to silicosis, described by the bureau as "a dangerous lung disease affecting thousands of workers in many trades." Legislative experts will consider laws aimed to reduce the number of industrial accidents. The equally important matter of law enforcement will be studied.

Motion pictures have been made to show the effects of industrial diseases. A program will be drawn up for the use of trade unions that desire to start co-operative health centers for their members.

STARVATION WAGE IN GERMANY HITS BRITISH MINERS

Causes Unemployment In America Also

An illuminating statement on the cause of the wage reduction drives in the British mining industry is given out by the American office of the International Workers Aid (F. S. R.) which is in intimate touch with industrial conditions in Germany. The committee's statement, which follows, tells how starvation German wages are affecting the working class in every industrial country.

"In the negotiations at present being conducted to settle the dispute between the bosses and workers in the British coal mining industry," says the committee, "the whole basis of settlement proposed by the owners is calculated to allow them to cut prices to meet competition from Germany, where the workers are receiving starvation wages, thus enabling German big business to underbid all competitors. This cut in prices by the British owners would reduce wages in proportion. The coal miner's family is made to carry the burden of this competition by accepting a depreciated standard of living which approaches slow starvation.

U. S. Workers Unemployed.

"The same thing is happening in many other industries. The bosses want to compete with German products which are glutting the market because the German products are being sold more cheaply. This the German owners are enabled to do because of the low wages in Germany.

"In this country, also, wages are being cut and unemployment is increasing constantly. Cheap German labor is throwing American workers out of employment. In Massachusetts alone there are 90,000 unemployed with little hope of early improvement in the industrial situation. In the coal mining industry there is general unemployment. Even the steel industry is being hard hit—observers predict a drop soon in production of 75 per cent of capacity, the rate last autumn.

"If American workers do not help the workers of Germany the present situation will only become aggravated.

Russian Trade Necessary.

"Another cause for unemployment in this country as well as other countries is the loss of the Russian market. Recognition of Soviet Russia and the restoration of credit to Russia would be followed by an enormous trade between the two countries, and this would give employment to hundreds of thousands of workers, as Russia needs an immense amount of every conceivable kind of product.

"The Committee for International Workers' Aid is carrying on a campaign for aid of German workers and for recognition of Soviet Russia. Not because it believes in doling out charity to needy workers. But because it believes in the class conscious solidarity of the workers of the world. Because it believes that only by helping each other can the workers of the world be saved. Because it believes that a defeated working class of Germany would mean a defeated working class of America and the world.

"By contributing to the fund being raised by the Committee for International Workers' Aid the workers of America will help the first workers' republic, the workers of Germany helped in their present plight, and will also help themselves by helping others.

"Note new address: Committee for International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago."

"Train More Farmers."

"The average tenure on the farm of a state in which there are 506,614 workers in agriculture is two to four years," admits the Bureau of Education of the United States department of interior in its latest Rural Schools News Letter. "Farming has become commercialized and highly complex. New Problems are continually arising with changing conditions in the social order. Unless we do a better job of reaching the farm boys with training related to their occupation, can we hope to have a self-sustaining agriculture in the United States?" questions the report. But the solution offered is to train 506,614 farm workers during every four years to take the places of the departing tenants!

$7 PAY FOR TWO WEEKS' WORK IN THE STEEL MILLS

Too Poor to Enjoy the 8-Hour Day

By J. A. HAMILTON.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 11.—A steel worker at the McDonald mill of the Carnegie Steel Co., (subsidiary of the U. S. Steel Corporation) near here recently drew $7.00 in cash for his two weeks' labor.

This was what remained after the company had deducted rent, gas, water, coal, and electricity for use of the company-owned house in the company-owned town of McDonald, Ohio.

The poor devil was so much put out at this evidence of lack of appreciation for his services that he rebelled and demanded — a cheaper house.

Expense Figures Juggled.

A favorite accounting trick of the corporation, is to juggle the expense figures to show that wages consume a very high percentage of the corporate income, so high in fact, that the workers are really getting as much as possible. But when the wage costs of certain processes are examined by themselves, one wonders how the total wage costs can possibly come to more than a small fraction of the selling price.

Operation of Steel Mill.

The McDonald mill is a so-called "strip mill" which rolls comparatively narrow and thin strips of steel, such as are used in the manufacture of automobiles. It is thoroly modern, using electric motors and with practically all the handling of the steel done by mechanical power. One of the "mills" in the plant consists of a heating furnace and three trains of rolls.

Steel Manufactured Practically Free.

A typical "run" will start with steel "slabs" of about 1800 pounds in weight and 10 feet by 18 inches by 2½ inches in dimensions, and result in strips perhaps 20 feet by 18 inches by 1-16 inch. To get the steel from the incoming railroad car in the billet yard to the outgoing car in the stock yard, passing thru the furnaces, thru three trains containing 11 pairs of rolls, over the "hot bed" to be cooled, past the "shears" to be cut to the desired length, requires 27 workers. On a "straight run" producing strips the same width and thickness, one mill can handle over 500 tons of steel in an 8-hour shift. On a run where considerable adjustments of the rolls must be made for varying widths or thicknesses, at least 250 tons can be put thru. The wages of these 27 men amounts to $150.24 at current rates, or from about 30 cents to about 60 cents per ton, according to output. (All figures of course, obtained from workmen, not from the company.)

Outrageous Exploitation.

Current quotations show a difference of over $20.00 per ton (2000 pounds) between pig iron and finished bars. Part of the manufacturing process is done in the rolling of the slabs before they reach McDonald mill. The Carnegie company may sell the McDonald product much below the quotations referred to. Nevertheless, when they can get a large part of the manufacturing process done for 30c per ton in direct labor cost, a condition of tremendous exploitation is revealed.

Joys of the Skidman's Job.

The daily wage for the 8-hour shift of these 27 men varies from $4.00 for laborers to $12.00 for the roller, according to statements of the workmen. One of the choicest jobs (the boss chooses it for the greenhorn) is that of "skidman." The furnace bed is inclined to facilitate the row of some 60 slabs lying crosswise of the furnace, one in front of another, being pushed thru from the upper to the lower end. The skidmen must perch on the upper edge of the furnace roof and by means of long bars and hooks, replace any slabs which may happen to get piled on top of the others.

For this pleasant occupation, in which he can observe the beautiful hell of heat in the furnace and entertain himself by smelling the variety of escaping gases, the skidman receives the extra emolument of 1 cent per hour over the 50 cents received by the ordinary laborer. The company does not provide him with a gas mask, but so far as is known, every skidman having been "gassed," as often happens, has thus far been carried away by someone; proving that the company is most solicitous for its employes' welfare.

Soviet Auto Factory

MOSCOW, May 11.—Beginning with the First of May, the Automobile Factory "Amo" will produce trucks for the general use of the government. The factory is under the direction of American workers. It was organized about two years ago by a group of members of the Chicago and New York Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia. The mass production of trucks is being greeted by the Russian press and is offered as an example to the other workers of Russia.

Prison Tuberculosis Takes the Life of Another Wobbly

(By Defense News Service.)

TUCSON, Arizona, May 11.—Tuberculosis, contracted in prison, has claimed one more I. W. W. member who was convicted of opposition to the United States entering the war in Europe. James Mulroney, sailor and shipbuilder, is dead here after a desperate struggle of two years to regain health. Only a few weeks ago William Weyh, another I. W. W. also convicted in the war case, died here under similar circumstances.

Mulroney was arrested in California in 1917. He was one of 53 men who were confined for 64 days and nights in a cell 20 by 30 feet in the Sacramento city jail. All of them could not lie down at once. It was winter. Each man had but a cotton blanket. They slept in relays on a damp concrete floor. Food was bad and inadequate. Five of those men died, of tuberculosis and influenza, in the months while the group awaited trial under war indictments.

Thomas Martinez, a Mexican I. W. W., imprisoned in the Chicago war trial in 1918, also died of tuberculosis after being let out of Leavenworth two years ago. Ricardo Flores Magon, Mexican editor of a periodical in Los Angeles, nearly blind, was permitted to die in his cell at Leavenworth in December, 1922, for lack of medical attention. He was likewise imprisoned for war opinions.

Arrangements for funeral services over Mulroney's body are being made by the General Defense Committee of Chicago.

NEGRO TENANTS WILL HIT RENT HOGS TONIGHT

Hold Mass Meeting At Community Center

With the slogan "Tenants, Organize Against the Rent Hogs," the Negro Tenants Protective League is completing arrangements for a big mass meeting at Community Centre, 3201 S. Wabash Ave., tonight.

Otto E. Huiswoud, Lovett Fort-Whiteman and Gordon Owens are among the speakers who will put the League's program of action before the hard-wrung tenants of the South Side.

All these speakers took a leading part in the recent All-Race Congress or Sanhedrin. Thruout that assembly they emphasized that the housing problem is one of the biggest issues before the Race. The Negro housing problem is far more serious than the white's. Negroes are crowded into segregated districts where they pay higher rents for poorer accommodations than the whites pay elsewhere.

The League seeks to build up a powerful mass movement of Negro tenants in the segregated district which can take effective action against greedy landlords of either color.

Marsh Wants Collections.

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Benj. C. Marsh, for the People's Reconstruction League, has called upon the democrats in the senate to join the progressives in recovering nearly a billion dollars a year from the rich by restoring the excess profit tax as outlined in the Brookhart amendment.

ARMY OF RAIL WORKERS FIRED SINCE AUGUST

Discharge Of Shopmen Hurts Equipment

A total of 220,216 railroad workers joined the ranks of the unemployed between August, 1923, and February 1924 according to the monthly wage statistics of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The number on railroad payrolls is now 30,266 below that in February 1923. This means that tens of thousands of railroad employes are without an opportunity to earn a living for their families because the profits of absentee owners get first shot at the revenues of the industry. Children may go hungry but these profits must not fall short of a billion.

Shopmen Hit Hardest.

Shop forces have suffered the heaviest casualties since a year ago. The number on the payrolls in February was 34,213 below February 1923. Since August the railroads have laid off 55,936 shopmen including 21,424 car repairmen, 4,200 machinists, about 1,000 each of blacksmiths and boilermakers, 17,437 mechanics helpers and 8,430 shop laborers. The executives talk of saving $100,000,000 for stockholders this year at the expense of equipment repair work.

Cars and Engines on Sick List.

As a result the proportion of cars and locoomotives in bad order is steadily increasing. The report for April 15 shows 176,698 freight cars and 12,144 locomotives on the sick list. This means 7,8 percent of the cars and 18.8 percent of the locomotives out of commission for lack of repairs. But the rail executives appear to welcome the traffic recession as an excuse for this condition.

The slump in employment makes the railroad wages which averaged $136 for the month of February insecure. The average represents a gain of $5 or approximately 4 percent as compared with February 1923 but this gain is probably almost wholly due to the extra pay added by leap year. And rail executives are already quoted in financial papers as quite satisfied with a moderate traffic recession at this time hinting broadly that it affords an opportunity to push down costs, particularly labor costs.

Slight Wage Gain.

The small gains in the wages of typical occupations affected by the upward tendency of wages in 1923 are shown in the following table straight time hourly earnings:

Hourly Earn's	Feb. 1924	Feb. 1923
Boilermakers	$0.754	$0.725
Machinists	.750	.720
Carmen (frt)	.669	.644
Clerks B	.615	.605
Mechanics' helpers	.512	.487
Section labor	.349	.333
Telleg's and Tower'n..	.617	.609
Freight handlers	.441	.422
Yard brakemen	.735	.731

During February 1924 machinists averaged $138 exclusive of overtime, boilermakers $139, freight carmen $124, helpers $95, section labor $63, clerks $115, telegraphers and towermen $133, freight handlers $84 and yard brakemen $142.

Such wages are inadequate for a decent living standard. But in view of the tendency of unemployment to increase the vital question is whether even these can be maintained. The general situation has sufficient resemblance to 1921 to put railroad workers on their guard.

HOOVER'S UNEMPLOYMENT FIGURES ARE FAKED, SAYS ECONOMIST

Was Secretary Hoover conspiring with Wall street to give the people a false sense of prosperity when he announced thru the president's cabinet that there was little or no unemployment in the country? U. S. bureau of labor statistic figures to which he must have had access seem to answer in the affirmative. This is the second instance in which the executive branch of the government appears as the publicity tool of business interests.

The downward tendency of employment in manufacturing industry, according to the bureau for March, is approaching a real industrial depression and business is beginning to recognize it. The bureau's general employment index for March stands nearly 6 percent below a year ago, more than 18 percent below the peak of 1920 and just on a par with July 1914.

Only Three-quarters Capacity.

During March 3 per cent of the country's manufacturing establishments were idle and the remainder reported production at about 77 per cent of capacity. This means that the concerns operating had only 82 per cent of their full working forces and in addition were averaging 6 per cent under full-time operation.

In spite of industry as a whole operating a little more than three-quarters capacity, production was running ahead of consumption and a further slowing down during April is indicated.

Jobs Growing Slimmer.

Decreased employment as compared with a year ago was reported by the major groups of industries as follows: textiles 8½ per cent, iron and steel 5 per cent, leather and its finished products 7½ per cent, chemicals and allied 2 per cent, metal products othe than iron and steel 5 per cent, tobacco manufactures 8 per cent, vehicles 4 per cent, miscellaneous including agricutural implements, electrical manufactures and auto tires 11 per cent. Only four industrial groups stood against this general decline. Lumber held its own, paper and printing gained 1 per cent, food products gained 1 per cent and stone, clay and glass products gained 3 per cent.

Textiles Hit Hardest.

Individual industries reporting large decreases in number on payrolls are cotton goods with a drop of 15 per cent, dying and finishing of textiles 17 per cent, millinery and lace 15 per cent, foundries and machine shops 13 per cent, car building and repair 14 per cent, agricultural implements 16 per cent, automobile tires with a decline of 20 per cent.

The major groups of industries make the following reports as to capacity operation: Food products are averaging 87 per cent of full-time with 77 per cent of a full working force, textiles 92 per cent full-time with 82 per cent full working force, iron and steel 95 per cent and 75 per cent, lumber and its manufactures 96 per cent and 90 per cent, leather 93 per cen and 77 per cent, paper and printing 9 per cent and 91 per cent, chemicals 94 per cent and 82 per cent, stone, clay and glass 91 per cent and 82 pe cent, tobacco 87 per cent and 71 pe cent, vehicles 97 per cent and 89 pe cent, while the miscellaneous grou of industries reports 96 per cent o full time and 77 per cent of full working force.

Thus the industries of the countr during March were averaging from low of less than 70 per cent of capacity in the case of the food and tobacco groups up to a high of 98 pe cent of capacity in the paper and printing trades. This may appear t the president's cabinet as uninterrupted prosperity but an authoritative statement, as to how the countr is to dispose of its surplus productiv capacity would be a more valuabl contribution.

SCAB KENTUCKY FIRM ABSORBS BIG UNION MINES

Trustification And Open Shops Go Together

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

The largest coal operation in the west Kentucky field is being thrown into the non-union column as the result of a $4,000,000 deal by which the North American Co. adds the St. Bernard Co. to its coal properties. The resulting consolidation will control approximately 30 per cent of the annual production in this field. The North American is a public utility holding company corporation dominated by eastern financiers.

The change of ownership will also result in an increase in the capitalization on which coal profits will be demanded as the owners of the St. Bernard company are to get $200 in cash and $66.67 worth of West Kentucky Coal Co. proferred stock for every share they hold in the old concern. The $200 cash bonus will be provided out of a $5,000,000 bond issue. Such inflation is a regular accompaniment of consolidations engineered by bankers and gives them a heavier mortgage on the productivity of the workers.

Has Company Union.

The mines of the St. Bernard company have been union mines for a number of years. But these mines will now be consolidated with the West Kentucky Coal Co. which is nonunion, controlling its miners thru a mutual benefit association or company union similar to Atterbury's on the Pennsylvania railroad. To prepare for its jump into the nonunion column the St. Bernard company withdrew from the West Virginia Coal Operators' Assn. so as not to be bound by any contract made with the union.

Employes of the St. Bernard mines are now on strike along with the other union miners of the district and the company has made plain its stand in a statement which says: "The St. Bernard Mining Co. will not sign the so-called Jacksonville agreement providing for the present scale of wages for a period of 3 years." It points to the suffering which the men and their families are undergoing because of their refusal to accept a lower wage.

22 Mines In Scab Combine.

The combined companies will operate 22 mines with a capacity of 3,250,000 to 5,000,000 tons a year. In 1923 they produced 2,861,449 of the 9,800,000 tons produced in western Kentucky. They will control over 75,000 acres of coal lands with reserves in excess of 400,000,000 tons. Included on the property are more than 1,100 company-owned miners' houses and 12 large commissary stores.

Profits of the two companies for the last 6 years averaged $1,762,438 a year which would have meant an average of 14 per cent a year to common stockholders on the basis of the present capitalization. The profits of the parent North American company for 1923 amounted to $27,176,069 after all possible deductions, or at the rate of $31 on each $100 invested.

FRIENDS OF STRIKEBREAKERS SHOULD NOT HOLD EDITORIAL POSITION IN THE AMALGAMATED

By J. S. BAKURAS.

The strike of International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in Chicago is well known to all members of Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and workers in general. The bosses organized a great force of police to protect the strikebreakers and to crush the strike. The strikers resolved to fight the bosses' assault to the finish.

The strike assumed the form of a bitter war between the masters and the slaves of the clothing industry. The Amalgamated supported the strikers morally and financially. The Chicago Joint Board of A. C. W. contributed money for the support of the strikers. All members of the Amalgamated should be on the side of their fighting brothers and sisters of the I. L. G. W. U.

On whose side is Mr. V. Poshka, the editor of the Darbas, the Amalgamated bi-weekly in the Lithuanian language?

Tho he, as an editor of the Amalgamated organ, hypocritically shows little support for the strikers in the paper, because of the position he holds, nevertheless he is a loyal friend of strikebreakers. He is not only a friend, but humble servant of the bosses of the Chicago Lithuanian Daily News (Naujienos). That vicious yellow sheet is the organ of strikebreakers. On March 29, 31st, and April 1st, it published the following advertisement for the strikebreakers:

"Wanted: Experienced operators on power machines to sew dresses; steady work, good pay. An excellent opportunity to learn a trade and receive a good wage.

Graceline Dress Co., 302 S. Market St. 4th fl."

Of course, Grigaitis and Jurgelionis, the owners of the paper, received a good piece of gold from the bosses of the company for such an "ad" when the company was in very great need of strikebreakers, because of the strike of ladies' garment workers. As yellow type socialists they gladly received money in their mammonic pockets. Nothing curious about those socialists. Not the first time they showed their strikebreaking teeth.

On August 30, 1919, without a bit of shame they published the following "ad":

"Wanted: Laborers to do work outside of city to take place of the strikers. Good wages, steady work, free board, room and fare. Open all day and Sundays, 630 N. Sagamon St."

During various strikes in Chicago (butchers strike in 1920, ladies' garment workers in 1921, the Amalgamated in 1922) the Naujienos published ads for strikebreakers.

After all, Grigaitis and Jurgelionis are strikebreakers themselves. In February, 1921, they used strikebreakers to crush the strike of their workers (the workers of Naujienos) who demanded recognition of their union and better conditions in the shop.

Mr. V. Poska, the editor of the Darbas, is in friendly relation with the bosses of the Naujienos. More than that. He is one of the contributors of articles to that strikebreaker's paper. This year, under his name, appeared in the Naujienos a series of articles on February 12, 14, 15, 21, 22. In those articles he viciously slandered the militant members of various unions. Many articles he wrote in Naujienos under pseudonym attacking Soviet Russia and the Russian-American Industrial Corporation, organized by the Amalgamated Union.

In my opinion such an open friend of strikebreakers should immediately be ousted from the position of the union. Mr. Poska draws pay from the union and at the same time works for the bosses of strikebreakers. Is it not ridiculous? Is it not dangerous for the union?

It must be mentioned that all the Lithuanian locals of the A. C. W. of A. are very displeased with the present editor of the Darbas. They have been dissatisfied since he got the paper into his hands. Hence they constantly demanded the General Executive Board of the union to oust Poska and put in his place a competent man, loyal to the union principles. The board paid very little attention. The locals are dissatisfied with his reactionary position toward Soviet Russia and the Russian-American Industrial Corporation. They want the editor of the Darbas to be active and a loyal worker in the Recently the Lithuanian locals 5 (Brooklyn) and 269 (Chicago) adop ed resolutions demanding the Gener Executive Board to release M Poska from the editorship of th Darbas. It is believed that the Boar will not turn a deaf ear now.

BIG WAGE CUT TO FORCE GENERAL STRIKE IN THE SHOE INDUSTR

HAVERHILL, Mass., May 11—Rumor has it that if the workers are force to take the 25 per cent reduction in wages that the manufacturers of this cit are trying to give them thru the local arbitration board, there will be general strike in the shoe industry. The wage reduction is in line with th reductions in wages that are being given to the shoe workers all over New England states.

"WHAT IS TREASON," QUERY OF CAPTAIN MARTIN, AIR EXPERT, IN TALE OF GIGANTIC FRAUDS

WASHINGTON, May 11.—What is treason to one's country, under the rules of modern capitalist society?

Is it treason, for instance, to seize control of the essential weapon needed in a war already in progress, and bleed the public treasury to the bottom in return for false promises of quantity production of this weapon?

Is it treason to make a billion dollars in profit from thus defrauding a nation at war? Or is it, indeed, the mere logical application of the ordinary rules of the game of profits, that plays bandit against one's own government while that government is supposed to be defending the life of the nation?

Captain James V. Martin wants to know. He is a pioneer airman, and he is trying to interest the congress of the United States in the fact that the wholesale frauds, thefts and criminal conspiracies of the aircraft ring, whose friends now dominate the air policy and air force of the government, have gone unpunished, laden down with gold.

"A particular group of men knew, and we have it over their own signatures, that they knew, that the airplane was the most important weapon possessed by the United States when it entered the world war," he told the DAILY WORKER, in a special interview. "These men were E. A. Deeds and H. E. Talbot, of Dayton, Howard Coffin, Sidney W. Waldron, J. G. Vincent of the Packard Motor Co., and others. Deeds had been convicted under the Sherman act of the crime of conspiracy, and sentenced to a year in jail, at Miami, Ohio, but never served. Charles E. Hughes, when he investigated the aircraft frauds for President Wilson, recommended that Deeds be courtmartialed, but he wasn't.

"Here is the story that never has been published:

"1. The pioneers of airplane work had the fighter plane, the bomber plane and the training plane already developed and flying at the beginning of American participation in the world war. They offered these types free of expense to the government.

"2. This particular group of men, who had never successfully built nor flown planes, proceeded to destroy these weapons already offered to the government. I charge that they bribed public officials, forged minutes of the meeting of the Council of National Defense, and usurped themselves into the Aircraft Board.

"They bought the fighter plane, dismantled it and stored it.

"They got rid of the trainer plane by direct suppression of the plane itself and by depriving its projectors of motors for the planes, under the powers of the emergency act for the Aircraft Board.

"They destroyed the bomber by delaying and suppressing its introduction and finally by shooting incendiary darts into its gasoline tank.

"3. They then received one billion dollars, and in spite of having destroyed something already in existence, which they knew to be the essential weapon of the United States in the war, they did not even make an effort to supply a substitute. Not even one fighting plane made by them was in commission when the war ended."

Martin sketched the early years of flying in this country, and the coming upon the scene of Coffin, Waldron and others interested only in making a huge profit from control of the invention. Russell A. Alger, Jr., son of "Canned Beef" Alger, who was secretary of war during the McKinley administration, was one of the group. They saw American participation in the war coming, and they organized to make the most of the opportunity. By talking a great deal, and forming companies of big capitalization—on paper—they captured the limelight just before 1917. When the war declaration was signed they were ready to form the Aircraft Board which lobbied its way triumphantly to the public treasury and grabbed an initial appropriation of $640,000,000 for its advertised program of "winning the war" in the air.

"There were at that time in this country," said Martin, "eight pioneer fliers who had designed, built and flown airplanes with success. These men were ready, as I have said, and they proceeded to enlist financial backing and to propose to the government that they be given the chance to build planes of the types they had proven. But Deeds, Coffin and their group simply eliminated all of these pioneers from the situation. Deeds was made a colonel and placed in charge of the air service. He then dictated to whom the contracts for airplanes should go. Not only were the pioneers shut out, but they were banned from any post where they might advise the government as to its aircraft policy. Coffin and Waldron, with Deeds, made up the Aircraft Board. When the Council of National Defense refused to give them power to direct the air program, they illegally assumed that power within 24 hours, and retained it until the close of the war. They put J. G. Vincent, of the Packard concern, in charge of all motor and airplane design work, and various other co-conspirators or lieutenants into the other positions of authority.

"Their ban against experienced constructors and fliers was carried to the point where experienced fliers had to pretend to learn over again, in order to get a chance in the service organization. The fearless pioneer type that went in for flying before any money could be had or safety known were unwilling to doublecross the government, but they hadn't a chance against the Deeds-Coffin crowd, which had allied itself with Stettinius of Morgon & Co. Stettinius was put in charge of aircraft work in the war department, and the Morgan interests helped the rest of the ring to get government jobs. Then it shared in the big clean-up. The treasury paid all the bills.

"The Dayton Wright Co. was organized by Deeds, and was first owned by the Dayton Metal Products Co., in which Deeds and one Kettering were chief stockholders. Deeds passed his stock over to his wife, took his job in the government, and handed to this company some millions of dollars of public money as advances on the manufacture of planes. There wasn't a man in the whole Dayton Wright concern who had even been responsible for building a successful plane. Orville Wright had nothing to do with it in any way. It simply stole his name.

"The Wright-Martin case was of the same sort. Neither Wright nor Gleen Martin was in it all all. The overpayments made to these mushroom companies without responsible technical men ran into many millions. There was the Lincoln Motors Corporation, the airplane division of the Fisher Body Co., and the airplane division of the Packard Motor Co. Vincent, Waldron, Deeds, and their friends held stock. The Guaranty Trust Co. extended aid to them in launching their plans. The game was so good that they soon came back to Congress and reported that their first $640,000,000 was not enough. They finally absorbed $1,600,000,000.

"When the pioneers saw Deeds, Coffin and Waldron in control, they got together financial backing, on the basis of their years of scientific achievement, and went to the Board, saying, "We will build you thousands of planes on our own responsibility, on our own money. We guaranty performance of our planes. We ask only contracts on that basis, and we will put up bond."

"The scoundrels who refused these offers turned around and gave the millions to their own confederates who never delivered a plane in all that 18 months of war.

"Benedict Crowell, assistant secretary of war, side-tracked two separate investigations which President Wilson ordered made after I had talked with him. Deeds, instead of being courtmartialed, was given a banquet here in Washington by his crowd, and then they pinned a gold medal on him."

Martin's inventions chiefly valuable during the war period were a form of lateral control and an aerodynamic control—devices which removed much of the danger of accidents and gave the flier more freedom of action in battle. His patents stood in the way of the Deeds-Coffin crowd. When they took power as the Aircraft Board they stopped all tests of his devices, which had been placed on army planes in 1916. Records in the war department relating to these devices disappeared. The inventor was then advised that he had better stop experimenting along those lines.

Martin protested, but to no effect. He asked for credentials for flying, but was refused, altho a month earlier he had been refused on the ground that his services in a scientific capacity were indispensable to the government. Discouraged, he went to England, where years earlier he had taught the first British army men to fly. He was welcomed, and the French government also sought his help. His aerodynamic control was at once adopted by the British war planes.

But the Aircraft Board profiteers followed him. An order was sent to London, to an American agent, who notified the British government that Martin was discredited at home and "no good." He was told by the British that they had faith in him, and needed only permission of the Washington government to continue him as their adviser. He went to Chipps Drexel, one of the Philadelphia Drexels, who had been his pupil and who now represented the Aircraft Board in London. Drexel begged him not to ask questions; he could not give the inventor the credentials or character that would allow the British to keep him in their service. Seven of his inventions, then under trial by the British, were dropped.

Details of the persecution of his fellow pioneers he does not claim to know. The Deeds-Coffin group, with Morgan & Co. and the Guaranty Trust Co. as their allies and many of the ruling clique in the war department organization as their friends, went boldly on with the looting of the aircraft funds and the piling up of excuses for non-delivery of airplanes. How many hundreds of thousands of men on both sides died, because the war was thereby prolonged to the degree it was, nobody will ever know. The airplane companies were stowing away their billion dollars in profits.

Martin finally came home and got command of a ship, and in 1919 made a voyage to Reval with supplies sent by Hoover to Yudenitch—but that is a story familiar to readers of the DAILY WORKER. He is now trying to break thru the barricade of indifference and of organized loot in Washington, to get the aircraft scandal so aired that the crowd which has clung to control in the army and navy air services on the one hand, and in the manufacturing plants on the other, will be forced to give away to men who seek development of the science of flying.

Coolidge And Cox, Ohio's Selections For The Presidency

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 11.—President Calvin Coolidge and former Governor James M. Cox are Ohio's selections for the republican democratic nominations for president.

Voters of Ohio, in the recent presidential primaries, gave decisive majorities for Coolidge and Cox in the preferential vote, and gave to each, the state's delegations to their respective national party conventions.

Coolidge's victory over Senator Hiram Johnson was overwhelming. Incomplete returns indicate the president won by a majority of more than six to one.

Cox apparently defeated William G. McAdoo by nearly three to one.

Bandits Rob Baker

NEW YORK, May 11.—Four bandits, only two of whom were armed, held up Henry S. Levy in front of his bakery in Brooklyn today and robbed him of $5,000.

Friendly organizations are urged to keep this date in mind and not arrange for any affairs that week.

Czarists Tumble Out Of The Sky; Russia Is Safe

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 11.—The Russian Communist government is safe—at least for awhile longer—because of the collapse of certain monarchist plans. The collapse consists in the wreck of the lone biplane of the Sikorsky Aero Engineering company, New York. The company consists of sundry czarist generals and counts who live in New York and support themselves by providing swank for swell parties of the rich, or at worst, by peddling papers and waiting on table.

One of them is Igo Sikorsky, former captain in the czar's army, aviation section. Gen. Theodore Lodijensky, who runs a restaurant, put up a little money, Sikorsky furnished the design, and the rank and file of the monarchist colony gave their odd time—result, one airplane. It was to break all records for weight, distance, endurance, speed, cheapness, and safety. The company would get rich and proceed to drive the wicked Bolshevists out of Russia.

Eight of them got into the machine with Sikorsky for the test flight at Roosevelt Field, Long Island. They woke up a few minutes later on the Salisbury golf links. Nobody was killed. But the czarists were so badly bruised that amused spectators had to call in a near-by Dobbin and shay to cart home the pieces.

WORKERS PARTY MAKES STATEMENT ON THE PULLMAN STRIKE DRAWING ATTENTION TO THE ISSUES INVOLVED

(Statement Issued by the Workers Party, Local Chicago.)

TO THE WORKERS AND STRIKERS OF PULLMAN!

Dear Sirs and Brothers:—

The Pullman strikers are now engaged in a life and death struggle with the Pullman corporation to maintain a human standard of living. On April 14, the riveters, buckers, fitters, heaters, reamers, vestibule and steel shop car building forces of the Pullman corporation struck. The profit-greedy Pullman attempted to put over a 10 to 40 per cent cut on the employes. On top of that, the Pullman Company was enforcing the terrific and murderous Taylor or speed up system and thus sucking the last ounce of energy out of the bodies of the workers. The cost of living has gone up and yet the Pullman Company attempts to cut wages.

The company has refused to deal with the carmen. Instead, the company has put over what it calls the "Pullman Plan of Employee Representation," a fake union game in which the EMPLOYERS have their own representatives on the so-called General Employes' Committee, and the WORKERS HAVE NO REPRESENTATION WHATEVER on the Company's committee. The steel carmen struck.

Carry On Militant Struggle.

You must understand that the action of the Pullman corporation is but the beginning of another systematic wage-cutting and longer hour campaign. What the Pullman corporation is trying to sneak over on the carmen, it will, if it succeeds now, attempt on all the workers employed by it. But the Pullman Company will not succeed if YOU WORKERS are organized and carry on a militant struggle to prevent it.

In 1894, in the great Pullman strike, the workers put up a remarkable fight which frightened the bosses and nearly brought them to terms. During the next strike, the men organized in the Railway Employees Department of the American Federation of Labor. They forced the Pullman corporation to an agreement which brought also union recognition and representation. Even thru this small organization the workers brought about the abolition of piece-work, established the 8-hour day, time and a half for overtime, and secured proper classification of employes, besides improving tremendously the working conditions.

In the present strike, the striking carmen have been putting up a fine and courageous battle against the Pullman bosses. The picketing of the strikers has been great stuff and inspiring to workers everywhere and already is causing the powerful Pullman corporation to want to talk "agreements" with the Strikers' Committee.

The Workers Party of Chicago and its Pullman Section are with the strikers 100 per cent and stand ready to help in every way they are called upon. Your battle is our battle, is the struggle of all workers against oppression and exploitation by the capitalist robber system.

Organize the Union.

In this strike, the striking workmen are making some headway in organizing into the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen. At all costs you must endeavor to hold this nucleus of a union organization together after this strike is over and continually to bring in more and more of the workers for future inevitable attacks. Unions are the economic organizations by which the workers can defend themselves from the attacks of the bosses. Bosses fear organized workers and their unions; they are not disturbed a bit if you are not organized. But the organized strength of the workers makes them talk "turkey" to you.

Because workers have struck in some shops in Pullman, other workmen have also had to lay down their tools. We say, this is the time to bring all these workers together, to make common cause with them. Unite your forces. The Pullman Company of bosses is organized 100 per cent against the workers. The workers must organize 100 per cent against the Pullman bosses and then you will be able to lick them and prevent 40 per cent wage cuts, the Taylor speed-up system and even worse slave conditions.

During this strike, the workers of Pullman have had an opportunity to see how the Workers Party is ready to give the strikers all possible assistance. The DAILY WORKER, official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party, is the only daily paper that has told the facts and the workers' side, the only true side, of the strike. The DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party are always at the command of the workers in their struggles.

No Language or Race Division—Workers United.

In this strike, foreign-born workers of many lands are out with American workers. The Workers Party of Chicago is glad to see the unity of interest that prevails among the striking workmen, and that they are not divided, as the Pullman capitalists would like to have them, along race and language lines. The Workers Party of America, a political party of the exploited masses has no color line, no race line. All workers accepting its program are welcome into its ranks.

The Workers Party, supporting the striking workmen in all ways, points out at the same time, that the struggle of the workers is a wider and bigger one than that of the Pullman workers against the Pullman bosses. This is only a skirmish of the world's working class against the capitalist class.

Government Protects the Bosses.

In this struggle between the workers and employers in Pullman and elsewhere in America, you will note that the bosses depend also upon protection from the Government, the State forces, the police, militia, etc. You have seen how well and easily the Wall Street interests control the Republican and Democratic parties. You are beginning to realize that the Government and the Republican and Democratic parties are but tools of the American capitalist class. You have seen how powerfully the privileged capitalist class uses the Government it owns body and soul against the workers in many strikes, thru injunctions, etc. Your pickets, too, have been arrested and thus again you see that the government protection is only protection of the bosses, in this instance the owners of the Pullman plant.

Workers Must Own and Manage Industries and Government.

The Workers Party of Chicago declares that the only real remedy against capitalist oppression, wage cuts, long hours of toil, speed-up system and many other ills, is a united struggle of the exploited workers to do away with Capitalist society and Captalist government. The Workers Party, Local Chicago, declares that the workers must organize into their unions and other economic organizations of the working class against the bosses. But they must also join the political party of the working masses and then engage in a struggle to displace the capitalist class and its protector, capitalist government, with political rule and power by the workers, in order that the workers who produce all, may take over, own, operate and manage the factories, mills, fields, shops, etc.

The Workers Party of America is organized to do away with capitalist Tea Pot Dome Government and to replace it by a government of Workers' councils, Soviets. The Workers Party is the only political party of the working class which actively participates in the struggles of the workers at any and all times, and thus proves its right to be the acknowledged representative of the interests of the workers. As before, so in the future, we stand ready to work with you in closest harmony and co-operation. We are with you 100 per cent on the struggle against the Pullman corporation. We will work with you to effect a strong union organization for the future and to win the strike today.

Fight the attacks of the Pullman Corporation!

Hail the Pullman Strikers!

Hail the Solidarity of the Workers!

WORKERS PARTY OF CHICAGO,
Martin Abern, City Secretary.
Sec'y Pullman Section, A. Yuris.

Get the Difference.

One round-the-world aviator is lost along the icy coasts of Alaska and every resource is drafted in the effort to save him from death. The daily press dramatizes the possible danger that beset him and all the nation is expected to hang on the fringe of nervous hysteria.

But when the department of interior issues its "memorandum for the press," at Washington, D. C., giving the latest statistics of the slaughter of workers in the coal mines, no mention is made of it. The yellow press is mum.

When Major Frederick Martin started on his globe girdling flight he knew the dangers he faced. He accepted them. He knew that he was engaged in a jingo venture, planned to lure the youth of the nation, thru an appeal to its spirit of adventure, into the military service of the capitalist U. S. government. So we have no worry for the major. He and his will be well taken care of.

But where are the widows and orphans of the 2,452 coal miners who lost their lives at their work place last year? Somewhere, trying to earn some sort of a livelihood, under a government that never troubled itself about their well-being.

A million miners in the United States go to their work places facing death. They know it. The government knows it. The bosses know it. The worker cannot help himself. He must live. He must provide for those dependent upon him. The government cares little if he is killed. The boss cares less.

Little attention is paid to the fact that 339 coal miners were killed in March. Some months the figures go higher. Other months they may drop a little lower. But always the toll goes on. The life of the miner is cheap. There are always live, healthy, strong coal miners to take the places of the dead ones, carried from the smoking pit, scene of the latest explosion. There is plenty of new fodder for the capitalist industrial machine.

But capitalist war and militarism must be glorified. For it is the military arm of the bosses' dictatorship at Washington that lets the worker know his place in the coal mine, and at every other work place that he is needed. It is the most powerful weapon of the employer to make the worker take wage cuts, and toil thru the long workday. Only when capitalism has been abolished will the life of the worker be valued above all else. That will be the day of Communism.

Burns Is Out

One by one the leaves continue to fall from the Coolidge administration tree at Washington. It ought to be stripped bare.

William J. Burns, the creator of anti-revolutionary hysteria, the self-proclaimed supporter of the Sam Gompers' policies in the labor movement, has sneaked out of the department of justice at Washington, following his corrupt, labor-baiting chief, Harry M. Daugherty. The knock-out record now stands—Denby, Daugherty, Burns.

But Coolidge is still surrounded by as choice a gang of grafters as ever gathered where spoils were to be had.

There is Secretary of War Weeks, who joined General Leonard Wood, in plundering the Filipinos, and has a record of aiding Wall Street bankers and big utility corporations in other subjudgated colonies under the control of the United States.

Hoover is the office boy of the fish trust; Wallace is the enemy of the farmers, altho secretary of agriculture; Hughes is the pet of Standard Oil; Davis, the banker-secretary of labor, has a fascisti, anti-labor immigration policy; New, the postmaster general, is the foe of the postal workers; this is as exclusive a nursery of Wall Street babies as was ever brought to life under any old party administration at the nation's capital.

The DAILY WORKER has waged its war against them all. We have not tried to get any single individual. We feel, however, that with Denby, Daugherty and Burns out, the fight can be centered on the rest; the attack on the whole Coolidge administration can be strengthened. And the crimes of the republicans are also the crimes of the democrats. And when the workers and farmers learn the real nature of the two old political parties, then they will turn en masse to the class Farmer-Labor Party.

Burns has been fighting the "reds" and "radicals" with the full power of the United States government behind him. He is out! The revolution goes marching on! And there will be more casualties in Washington.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has given ex-attorney general Daugherty a clean bill of health. That made help him with Wall Street. But the endorsement of this "open shop" railroad will not go at all with the workers.

Mundelein Comes Home

George Cardinal Mundelein arrived in Chicago Sunday, fresh from the presence of the Roman Catholic Pope at Rome, where he was crowned with a red hat, insignia of the new honors thrust upon him.

Mundelein came home lifted to a higher place in the Catholic Church, and with the power to lift others to seats of eminence. And he has already used that power. But how?

Mundelein gives no honors to the masses of workers, of many nationalities, still in the black grip of the Catholic Church.

Recently he was banquetted by James Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, for his brilliant services to the bosses during the steel strike.

And now we notice that E. F. Carry, president of the open shop, labor-crushing Pullman Company, has been selected to be a Knight of St. Gregory, whatever that may mean.

That will be something else for the strike pickets at the gates of the Pullman Company to think about this morning. The Polish, the Italian, the Lithuanian and other Catholic-enslaved foreign-language workers among the strikers will understand better why the Catholic Church has not leaped to their defense in the present struggle. Instead of pledging aid to the workers, in their righteous cause, the Catholic Church makes new alliances with the unholy trinity—Rent, Interest and Profit—the pillars of capitalism.

It is the lackeys of the profit system that the Catholic Church honors. Two other selected Knights of St. Gregory are Robert M. Sweitzer, the Chicago Tammany Hall politician, and Anthony Czarnecki, a kept newspaperman, who was especially sent to Poland, to help buttress Polish-Catholic white terror rule against the Russian Workers' Republic.

Mundelein comes home a cardinal, the red hatted cardinal of the employers, not a red-blooded fighter for the workers. The workers at Pullman know, and other Catholic workers will learn.

In Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh city council, living up to all the bloody traditions of Pennsylvania's steel and coal czardom, has voted $25,000 for the purchase of tear gas equipment, riot guns and other murderous munitions of war, to crush the street car strike that started on Saturday.

Murder has always been the weapon of the steel barons and the mine owners, and Pittsburgh is their capital city. It is promised that the power to kill, in the hands of the employers' dictatorship, will be brought to bear over the whole city today, in an effort to start running scab street cars, in place of granting the few cents wage increase demanded by the carmen.

Mayor William A. Magee has ordered that the cars be started running at the earliest possible moment, "with whatever forces are available." So spoke "Andy" Carnegie at Homestead, and the steel profiteers at McKees Rocks, and the mine owners in Fayette and Westmoreland counties, and in many other industrial centers crimsoned with the blood of labor, scenes of the massacres of workers, struggling for a little more bread.

The Pittsburgh plutocracy has armed itself with the latest weapons of war—tear gas, riot guns, armed tanks.

It is inconceivable that a single worker should remain on a street car in Pittsburgh under these conditions. A 100 per cent strike would tie up the traction system, so that Mayor Magee would have to run his own cars. And he'll find that tear gas, riot guns and armed tanks can't run street cars, any more than court injunctions.

Pittsburgh's ruling class, in this street car strike, challenges the whole working class thruout all of Pennsylvania if not of the nation. Let the reply of the workers be a united front in support of the carmen. They are today waging the fight that may yet result in the 100 per cent organization of the steel workers and coal miners of this satrapy of American profit.

Labor Elected Him

Organized labor's officialdom in Chicago has received its answer to the election endorsement given Judge Charles M. Foell last fall. It came in the form of heavy fines imposed upon the pickets of the striking garment workers for alleged contempt of the bosses' courts.

It should be difficult for Fitzpatrick, Nockels, Olander, Nelson and the rest to face a rank and file worker, knowing that they had helped the bosses put Foell in the job he now holds, a job that he uses, at every opportunity, against the working class.

These labor officials advanced the exploded theory that there are good judges and bad judges to be had among the candidates of the old political parties. So "Dennie" Sullivan was fought, while Foell was fawned upon.

The garment strikers have learned, as we pointed out they would learn, that there is no difference between "Dennie" Sullivan and "Charley" Foell, that they are both creatures of the same employers' judicial system, that crucifies labor in the name of the protection of private property.

Labor cannot blame Sullivan and Foell. They are loyal to their class, the employing class that put them in power. They do not bear the brand of traitor. But the charge of treason may well be brought against the officials of labor, who so far forgot loyalty to their class interests, as to throw their support to a judicial lackey of the enemy.

Let the workers follow more closely the actions of labor officials, of the stripe of Fitzpatrick, Nockels and Olander, in future elections.

THE PIED PIPER OF TAMMANY HALL

By J. Louis Engdahl.

THERE will be no change, in this important presidential year, in the political policies of the American Federation of Labor.

Sam Gompers and the executive council of the A. F. of L. have provided that the "platform, parties and candidates" will be measured this year, as usual, by the same old standards.

Gompers and his lackeys will go to the republican convention at Cleveland, and to the democratic convention at Madison Square Garden, New York City, to reward friends and punish enemies in the same old way in the Wall Street parties.

But another conclusion can be just as easily drawn, and that is that Sam Gompers will always remain loyal to his first love, the democratic party, and that he is even now pulling all the strings he can to secure the nomination of Al Smith, Tammany Hall governor of New York State, on the national democratic ticket.

Gompers has always been close to the Tammany Hall machine in New York City. The dominating officials in the New York labor movement are part and parcel of Tammany Hall. And Al Smith has always been their little hero, since he was pushed into the limelight by the late "Boss" Murphy.

Gompers and his executive council will have nothing to do with a third party movement, let alone the drive for the National Farmer-Labor class party. The coming months will show whether Gompers can win any masses for his donkey procession. We predict that few will be cured by the discordant music of this Pied Piper of Tammany Hall.

JUST how Gompers is seeking to win over the officials of labor to his moth-eaten program is shown by the fact that President Morris Sigman, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, joined in the hip-hip-hooray demonstration for Al Smith at the convention now in session in Boston.

None other than Mayor Curley broke the ice for Gompers' program, and it was announced that "Al" himself would appear before the convention later on.

Thus Gompers not only has the Irish labor leaders in New York City under his thumb, but is even trying to make inroads among the Jewish workers by winning the leaders of this needle trades union. What Sigman's price will be, we do not know. It will be remembered that Gompers bought Sigman's predecessor, Benjamin Schlesinger, with a delegateship to the British Trade Union Congress.

There are included a large number of officials who met with the N. Y. Socialist leaders, about a year ago, at Albany, and with the spokesmen of the railroad brotherhoods, to talk politics as it is played in the nation's largest state. There are the Hollands and Sullivans, the Coughlins and O'Hanlons, the Ryans and Fitzgibbons, the Doyles and the Bradys, the Conboys and Murphys, all cogs in the Tammany machine. The boom for "Al" is on. And Gompers is one of the chief boomers.

SINCE the A. F. of L. officialdom thus develops its alliances, it can be taken for granted that it is not troubled much with program and principles. The slogans advanced for Wilson, in 1912 and 1916, and for Cox in 1920, are good enough for "Al" Smith in 1924. No bother about the fact that the world has gone thru a great war, that great strikes have hit and dismembered some of America's largest unions, while the working class is now face to face with a new industrial depression.

Gompers meets universal wage cuts with a plea for the "revival of the spirit of honesty, integrity and high-mindedness in public office." In the stern exigencies of the class war, he makes use of the empty phrases of the employers' chloroforming propagandists.

Gompers' greatest attack is levelled against the Volstead act, with 2.75 per cent beer urged as the salvation of the human race. So how could Gompers have the vitality to discuss greater issues.

IN THE A. F. of L. election program we find no mention of the unemployment problem, daily growing more acute, nor of the housing problem that confronts all city workers.

Instead Gompers polishes up his time worn policies on the immigration question, child labor, the bonus, injunctions, the railroad labor board, the Sherman anti-trust law, income and inheritance taxes and other issues.

But he shows his real position when he urges that the United States should get into the League of Nations, of the international bankers, and join the World Court, of the capitalist rulers everywhere.

In discussing international relations, Gompers conveniently sidesteps the Morgan-Dawes plan for the enslavement of the workers of Germany. But Morgan is for "The League" and "The Court," and in this he shakes hands with Gompers and the A. F. of L. officialdom.

IT IS also significant that the Gompers—A. F. of L. statement does not take up the war against the Recognition of Soviet Russia. This has been one of Gompers' pet themes, violently stressed at all A. F. of L. conventions since Soviet Rule came into power in Russia.

Under the high sounding declaration that "labor favors peace, opposes militarism and frowns upon pacifism," phrases worthy of the late Woodrow Wilson himself, Gompers plays the game of Hughes, Hoover and other anti-Sovietists in the Coolidge cabinet, who now openly admit that arms and munitions of war were furnished the counter-revolutionary generals, Yudenitch, Kolchak and others, in their attacks on the First Workers' Republic. This is the kind of "peace" that Gompers favors.

And since the furnishing of munitions to the white terror against Soviet Russia, is made the precedent for supplying the friends of J. Pierpont Morgan, in Cuba, Venezuela and other Latin-American countries, with similar aid, it is significant that Gompers has nothing to say in this national campaign about the depredations of American imperialism in many helpless lands. But Tammany Hall never did trouble itself with anything outside the immediate problem of getting the votes and the jobs.

GOMPERS and the A. F. of L. officialdom have not offered the working class of this country a program on which it can wage an effective fight. The program as announced is just as sterile as the document will be, that comes out of the July 4th gathering at Cleveland.

The class program upon which the workers and farmers of this country can unite this year will be drawn up and adopted at the St. Paul National Farmer-Labor convention, June 17th. It is in that direction that the latest proclamation of Mr. Gompers should turn new masses of America's workers and farmers.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

A Common Problem.

To the DAILY WORKER: I am writing this on the chance that there may be many other comrades in the Workers Party who have been confronted with the same problem, and therefore the citing of my experience and conclusions may possibly be of some use.

Previous to joining the Workers Party, some six or seven months ago, I was a member of the Socialist Party. My experience in the Socialist Party was, to say the least, very discouraging.

The English local to which I belonged consisted of a motley crowd of individuals, the largest part of whom did not understand the least thing about the class character of society, had no definite conception or opinion on the inevitable struggle looming ahead for the workers, and possessed in general a petty bourgeois ideology. They seemed to me the Peter Pans of the radical movement—who never grew up.

Needless to say, there was no discipline nor well formulated national policy, let alone international discipline and centralized authority.

For example: A member would hand the secretary one or more nomination cards, with the dollar entrance fee for each applicant; the name would be called out—not present. One would say, "Move the applicant be accepted." Seconded, passed, and, by presto, a brand new rebel registered. Time after time the same happened without any one except the proposer ever having seen the person before enrollment, or after; a mere farce.

Another example: A committee tried to look up registered Socialist voters. They found, and so reported, that the majority of those visited got their Socialist education and inspiration by reading a capitalist-liberal sheet of ordinary yellow variety.

Therefore I felt that for such a party to join a liberal-labor or third party would be a very dangerous experiment indeed. I felt that should such a third party make some headway that it would swallow the Socialist Party bag and baggage, and therefore, as a member of the S. P., I opposed all and every alliance or commingling with other non-Socialistic bodies.

I thought that the only way to preserve our existence and continue to function as Socialists we must first educate our members to a clear understanding of Socialism, so that they may be able to withstand the pressure and temptation of the disintegrating forces, that an alliance with non-Socialists would undoubtedly develop.

Since, however, I joined the Workers Party I have changed my attitude to so-called labor politics, and am heartily in accord with the view of the Central Executive Council on the policy with regard to the third party race.

My experience in the Workers Party is contrary to those in the Socialist Party. In the first place I found that the average member of the W. P. is far and away ahead in the understanding of the class nature of capitalist society; understands better the Marxian analysis of capitalism; has consequently a better and more definite idea of the ultimate issue of the class struggle and is in general of a proletarian ideology, being largely composed of workers.

Secondly, a very brave attempt is made at creating a strong discipline, and tho not universally successful as yet, has nevertheless attained a considerable degree of efficiency. The Workers Party in comparison to the Socialist Party is militancy itself.

And, last but not least, the Workers Party, being under the jurisdiction of the Communist International, is thereby assured an even and universal tenor and an unyielding revolutionary level that is of the greatest importance and incalculable strength to us.

Taking all the above agencies into account—first, the membership, then the local and national organizations, with its growing discipline and knowledge; third, the tremendous guiding, restraining or encouraging influence exerted by the watchful Communist International—one feels that such an organization need not be afraid of being misled or tempted away from its path.

The W. P. can boldly enter into any political venture it may think is going to further its interest, for, at any moment, it can, when the necessity rises, cut adrift with organization undamaged and principle unsullied.

Therefore I am for the policy of the C. E. C., because we go in with our eyes wide open; we have no illusions as to the morality, integrity, honesty or any other nice and honeyed attribute of a third or any other, except a real class conscious mass party as by the W. P. We do not trust them further than we can see; they will not be able to fool us individually or collectively, and if we can benefit by any such movement, if especially the benefits accruing to us will be greater than to our enemies, we go in—and when it will suit our purposes we will go out. A definite policy that only a well organized, well disciplined party, such as the W. P., is fast becoming, will be able to cary out with confidence and profit.—Fraternally yours, A. J. Our Little Rows

(In Australian Worker.)

Some members of the Labor Movement are deeply concerned about the fighting that is going on within its ranks.

I must confess I do not feel like that. In such a cause as ours, internal dissension cannot be avoided, and need not be feared when it comes.

We can quarrel, and still preserve our unity. We can be convulsed with fratricidal passions, and nevertheles be ready, at the first intimation of common danger, to stand together in unbroken and unbreakable solidarity.

I don't worry in the least when Comrade Smith declares that Comrade Brown is an unmitigated scoundrel, and Comrade Brown retorts that Comrade Smith is a rascal of the deepest dye.

Each comrade gathers a faction round him, and the air is clamorous with the sounds of their contention.

Never mind. Don't grieve about it. Don't think that all is lost because of this domestic turmoil.

It has its uses, brother. It shows that Labor possesses within itself that spirit of conflict without which the world would never press forward.

It shows that the fury of criticism which smashes old evils, and the energy of discontent which creates new systems, are both existent within our camp.

They are difficult to manage and control; sometimes they appear t overpower us, and we criticize each other savagely, and discontent expresses itself in internecine wrangling.

It's alright. A crisis will consolidate us. And is it not evident, brother, that we need not dread stagnation when Capitalism is destroyed—when the myriad incentives of the class struggle no longer diversify existence, and supply it with that impulsive force which is the guarantee of progress?

Conflict as well as co-operation is essential to the higher evolution of human society.

But when Labor is universally triumphant, and has no foe to fight it won't decline for lack of combative exercise, for it can always be depended upon to have a devil of a row with itself.

Do you see the point, brother?

The Poor Fish Says: He would be in favor of a Farmer-Labor Party if it would take in the captains of industry and the bankers who are really the best friends that the workers and farmers have, because they give the workers jobs and loan the farmers money.

Get the Difference.

One round-the-world aviator is lost along the icy coasts of Alaska and every resource is drafted in the effort to save him from death. The daily press dramatizes the possible danger that beset him and all the nation is expected to hang on the fringe of nervous hysteria.

But when the department of interior issues its "memorandum for the press," at Washington, D. C., giving the latest statistics of the slaughter of workers in the coal mines, no mention is made of it. The yellow press is mum.

When Major Frederick Martin started on his globe girdling flight he knew the dangers he faced. He accepted them. He knew that he was engaged in a jingo venture, planned to lure the youth of the nation, thru an appeal to its spirit of adventure, into the military service of the capitalist U. S. government. So we have no worry for the major. He and his will be well taken care of.

But where are the widows and orphans of the 2,452 coal miners who lost their lives at their work place last year? Somewhere, trying to earn some sort of a livelihood, under a government that never troubled itself about their well-being.

A million miners in the United States go to their work places facing death. They know it. The government knows it. The bosses know it. The worker cannot help himself. He must live. He must provide for those dependent upon him. The government cares little if he is killed. The boss cares less.

Little attention is paid to the fact that 339 coal miners were killed in March. Some months the figures go higher. Other months they may drop a little lower. But always the toll goes on. The life of the miner is cheap. There are always live, healthy, strong coal miners to take the places of the dead ones, carried from the smoking pit, scene of the latest explosion. There is plenty of new fodder for the capitalist industrial machine.

But capitalist war and militarism must be glorified. For it is the military arm of the bosses' dictatorship at Washington that lets the worker know his place in the coal mine, and at every other work place that he is needed. It is the most powerful weapon of the employer to make the worker take wage cuts, and toil thru the long workday. Only when capitalism has been abolished will the life of the worker be valued above all else. That will be the day of Communism.

Burns Is Out

One by one the leaves continue to fall from the Coolidge administration tree at Washington. It ought to be stripped bare.

William J. Burns, the creator of anti-revolutionary hysteria, the self-proclaimed supporter of the Sam Gompers' policies in the labor movement, has sneaked out of the department of justice at Washington, following his corrupt, labor-baiting chief, Harry M. Daugherty. The knock-out record now stands—Denby, Daugherty, Burns.

But Coolidge is still surrounded by as choice a gang of grafters as ever gathered where spoils were to be had.

There is Secretary of War Weeks, who joined General Leonard Wood, in plundering the Filipinos, and has a record of aiding Wall Street bankers and big utility corporations in other subjudgated colonies under the control of the United States.

Hoover is the office boy of the fish trust; Wallace is the enemy of the farmers, altho secretary of agriculture; Hughes is the pet of Standard Oil; Davis, the banker-secretary of labor, has a fascisti, anti-labor immigration policy; New, the postmaster-general, is the foe of the postal workers; this is as exclusive a nursery of Wall Street babies as was ever brought to life under any old party administration at the nation's capital.

The DAILY WORKER has waged its war against them all. We have not tried to get any single individual. We feel, however, that with Denby, Daugherty and Burns out, the fight can be centered on the rest; the attack on the whole Coolidge administration can be strengthened. And the crimes of the republicans are also the crimes of the democrats. And when the workers and farmers learn the real nature of the two old political parties, then they will turn en masse to the class Farmer-Labor Party.

Burns has been fighting the "reds" and "radicals" with the full power of the United States government behind him. He is out! The revolution goes marching on! And there will be more casualties in Washington.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has given ex-attorney general Daugherty a clean bill of health. That made help him with Wall Street. But the endorsement of this "open shop" railroad will not go at all with the workers.

Mundelein Comes Home

George Cardinal Mundelein arrived in Chicago Sunday, fresh from the presence of the Roman Catholic Pope at Rome, where he was crowned with a red hat, insignia of the new honors thrust upon him.

Mundelein came home lifted to a higher place in the Catholic Church, and with the power to lift others to seats of eminence. And he has already used that power. But how?

Mundelein gives no honors to the masses of workers, of many nationalities, still in the black grip of the Catholic Church.

Recently he was banquetted by James Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, for his brilliant services to the bosses during the steel strike.

And now we notice that E. F. Carry, president of the open shop, labor-crushing Pullman Company, has been selected to be a Knight of St. Gregory, whatever that may mean.

That will be something else for the strike pickets at the gates of the Pullman Company to think about this morning. The Polish, the Italian, the Lithuanian and other Catholic-enslaved foreign-language workers among the strikers will understand better why the Catholic Church has not leaped to their defense in the present struggle. Instead of pledging aid to the workers, in their righteous cause, the Catholic Church makes new alliances with the unholy trinity—Rent, Interest and Profit—the pillars of capitalism.

It is the lackeys of the profit system that the Catholic Church honors. Two other selected Knights of St. Gregory are Robert M. Sweifzer, the Chicago Tammany Hall politician, and Anthony Czarnecki, a kept newspaperman, who was especially sent to Poland, to help buttress Polish-Catholic white terror rule against the Russian Workers' Republic.

Mundelein comes home a cardinal, the red hatted cardinal of the employers, not a red-blooded fighter for the workers. The workers at Pullman know, and other Catholic workers will learn.

In Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh city council, living up to all the bloody traditions of Pennsylvania's steel and coal czardom, has voted $25,000 for the purchase of tear gas equipment, riot guns and other murderous munitions of war, to crush the street car strike that started on Saturday.

Murder has always been the weapon of the steel barons and the mine owners, and Pittsburgh is their capital city. It is promised that the power to kill, in the hands of the employers' dictatorship, will be brought to bear over the whole city today, in an effort to start running scab street cars, in place of granting the few cents wage increase demanded by the carmen.

Mayor William A. Magee has ordered that the cars be started running at the earliest possible moment, "with whatever forces are available." So spoke "Andy" Carnegie at Homestead, and the steel profiteers at McKees Rocks, and the mine owners in Fayette and Westmoreland counties, and in many other industrial centers crimsoned with the blood of labor, scenes of the massacres of workers, struggling for a little more bread.

The Pittsburgh plutocracy has armed itself with the latest weapons of war—tear gas, riot guns, armed tanks.

It is inconceivable that a single worker should remain on a street car in Pittsburgh under these conditions. A 100 per cent strike would tie up the traction system, so that Mayor Magee would have to run his own cars. And he'll find that tear gas, riot guns and armed tanks can't run street cars, any more than court injunctions.

Pittsburgh's ruling class, in this street car strike, challenges the whole working class thruout all of Pennsylvania, if not of the nation. Let the reply of the workers be a united front in support of the carmen. They are today waging the fight that may yet result in the 100 per cent organization of the steel workers and coal miners of this satrapy of American profit.

Labor Elected Him

Organized labor's officialdom in Chicago has received its answer to the election endorsement given Judge Charles M. Foell last fall. It came in the form of heavy fines imposed upon the pickets of the striking garment workers for alleged contempt of the bosses' courts.

It should be difficult for Fitzpatrick, Nockels, Olander, Nelson and the rest to face a rank and file worker, knowing that they had helped the bosses put Foell in the job he now holds, a job that he uses, at every opportunity, against the working class.

These labor officials advanced the exploded theory that there are good judges and bad judges to be had among the candidates of the old political parties. So "Dennie" Sullivan was fought, while Foell was fawned upon.

The garment strikers have learned, as we pointed out they would learn, that there is no difference between "Dennie" Sullivan and "Charley" Foell, that they are both creatures of the same employers' judicial system, that crucifies labor in the name of the protection of private property.

Labor cannot blame Sullivan and Foell. They are loyal to their class, the employing class that put them in power. They do not bear the brand of traitor. But the charge of treason may well be brought against the officials of labor, who so far forgot loyalty to their class interests, as to throw their support to a judicial lackey of the enemy.

Let the workers follow more closely the actions of labor officials, of the stripe of Fitzpatrick, Nockels and Olander, in future elections.

THE PIED PIPER OF TAMMANY HALL

By J. Louis Engdahl.

THERE will be no change, in this important presidential year, in the political policies of the American Federation of Labor.

Sam Gompers and the executive council of the A. F. of L. have provided that the "platform, parties and candidates" will be measured this year, as usual, by the same old standards.

Gompers and his lackeys will go to the republican convention at Cleveland, and to the democratic convention at Madison Square Garden, New York City, to reward friends and punish enemies in the same old way in the Wall Street parties.

THESE are conclusions easily drawn from the political declaration just issued from the A. F. of L. headquarters in Washington, D. C.

But another conclusion can be just as easily drawn, and that is that Sam Gompers will always remain loyal to his first love, the democratic party, and that he is even now pulling all the strings he can to secure the nomination of Al Smith, Tammany Hall governor of New York State, on the national democratic ticket.

Gompers has always been close to the Tammany Hall machine in New York City. The dominating officials in the New York labor movement are part and parcel of Tammany Hall. And Al Smith has always been their little hero, since he was pushed into the limelight by the late "Boss" Murphy.

Gompers and his executive council will have nothing to do with a third party movement, let alone the drive for the National Farmer-Labor class party. The coming months will show whether Gompers can win any masses for his donkey procession. We predict that few will be cured by the discordant music of this Pied Piper of Tammany Hall.

JUST how Gompers is seeking to win over the officials of labor to his moth-eaten program is shown by the fact that President Morris Sigman, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, joined in the hip-hip-hooray demonstration for Al Smith at the convention now in session in Boston.

None other than Mayor Curley broke the ice for Gompers' program, and it was announced that "Al" himself would appear before the convention later on.

Thus Gompers not only has the Irish labor leaders in New York City under his thumb, but is even trying to make inroads among the Jewish workers by winning the leaders of this needle trades union. What Sigman's price will be, we do not know. It will be remembered that Gompers bought Sigman's predecessor, Benjamin Schlesinger, with a delegateship to the British Trade Union Congress.

THAT Gompers' campaign for Al Smith is well under way is shown by the statement just issued by Franklin D. Roosevelt, chairman of the New York State Committee for the nomination of Governor Alfred E. Smith, to which are appended the names of practically all labor leaders of note in New York City.

There are included a large number of officials who met with the N. Y. Socialist leaders, about a year ago, at Albany, and with the spokesmen of the railroad brotherhoods, to talk politics as it is played in the nation's largest state. There are the Hollands and Sullivans, the Coughlins and O'Hanlons, the Ryans and Fitzgibbons, the Doyles and the Bradys, the Conboys and Murphys, all cogs in the Tammany machine. The boom for "Al" is on. And Gompers is one of the chief boomers.

SINCE the A. F. of L. officialdom thus develops its alliances, it can be taken for granted that it is not troubled much with program and principles. The slogans advanced for Wilson, in 1912 and 1916, and for Cox in 1920, are good enough for "Al" Smith in 1924. No bother about the fact that the world has gone thru a great war, that great strikes have hit and dismembered some of America's largest unions, while the working class is now face to face with a new industrial depression.

Gompers meets universal wage cuts with a plea for the "revival of the spirit of honesty, integrity and high-mindedness in public office." In the stern exigencies of the class war, he makes use of the empty phrases of the employers' chloroforming propagandists.

Gompers' greatest attack is levelled against the Volstead act, with 2.75 per cent beer urged as the salvation of the human race. So how could Gompers have the vitality to discuss greater issues.

IN THE A. F. of L. election program we find no mention of the unemployment problem, daily growing more acute, nor of the housing problem that confronts all city workers.

Instead Gompers polishes up his time worn policies on the immigration question, child labor, the bonus, injunctions, the railroad labor board, the Sherman anti-trust law, income and inheritance taxes and other issues.

But he shows his real position when he urges that the United States should get into the League of Nations, of the international bankers, and join the World Court, of the capitalist rulers everywhere.

In discussing international relations, Gompers conveniently sidesteps the Morgan-Dawes plan for the enslavement of the workers of Germany. But Morgan is for "The League" and "The Court," and in this he shakes hands with Gompers and the A. F. of L. officialdom.

IT IS also significant that the Gompers—A. F. of L. statement does not take up the war against the Recognition of Soviet Russia. This has been one of Gompers' pet themes, violently stressed at all A. F. of L. conventions since Soviet Rule came into power in Russia.

Under the high sounding declaration that "labor favors peace, opposes militarism and frowns upon pacifism," phrases worthy of the late Woodrow Wilson himself, Gompers plays the game of Hughes, Hoover and other anti-Sovietists in the Coolidge cabinet, who now openly admit that arms and munitions of war were furnished the counter-revolutionary generals, Yudenitch, Kolchak and others, in their attacks on the First Workers' Republic. This is the kind of "peace" that Gompers favors.

And since the furnishing of munitions to the white terror against Soviet Russia, is made the precedent for supplying the friends of J. Pierpont Morgan, in Cuba, Venezuela and other Latin-American countries, with similar aid, it is significant that Gompers has nothing to say in this national campaign about the depredations of American imperialism in many helpless lands. But Tammany Hall never did trouble itself with anything outside the immediate problem of getting the votes and the jobs.

GOMPERS and the A. F. of L. officialdom have not offered the working class of this country a program on which it can wage an effective fight. The program as announced is just as sterile as the document will be, that comes out of the July 4th gathering at Cleveland.

The class program upon which the workers and farmers of this country can unite this year will be drawn up and adopted at the St. Paul National Farmer-Labor convention, June 17th. It is in that direction that the latest proclamation of Mr. Gompers should turn new masses of America's workers and farmers.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

A Common Problem.

To the DAILY WORKER: I am writing this on the chance that there may be many other comrades in the Workers Party who have been confronted with the same problem, and therefore the citing of my experience and conclusions may possibly be of some use.

Previous to joining the Workers Party, some six or seven months ago, I was a member of the Socialist Party. My experience in the Socialist Party was, to say the least, very discouraging.

The English local to which I belonged consisted of a motley crowd of individuals, the largest part of whom did not understand the least thing about the class character of society; had no definite conception or opinion on the inevitable struggle looming ahead for the workers, and possessed in general a petty bourgeois ideology. They seemed to me the Peter Pans of the radical movement—who never grew up.

Needless to say, there was no discipline nor well formulated national policy, let alone international discipline and centralized authority.

For example: A member would hand the secretary one or more nomination cards, with the dollar entrance fee for each applicant: the name would be called out—not present. One would say, "Move the applicant be accepted." Seconded, passed, and, by presto, a brand new rebel registered. Time after time the same happened without any one except the proposer ever having seen the person before enrollment, or after; a mere farce.

Another example: A committee tried to look up registered Socialist voters. They found, and so reported, that the majority of those visited got their Socialist education and inspiration by reading a capitalist-liberal sheet of ordinary yellow variety.

Therefore I felt that for such a party to join a liberal-labor or third party would be a very dangerous experiment indeed. I felt that should such a third party make some headway that it would swallow the Socialist Party bag and baggage, and therefore, as a member of the S. P., I opposed all and every alliance or commingling with other non-Socialistic bodies.

I thought that the only way to preserve our existence and continue to function as Socialists we must first educate our members to a clear understanding of Socialism, so that they may be able to withstand the pressure and temptation of the disintegrating forces, that an alliance with non-Socialists would undoubtedly develop.

Since, however, I joined the Workers Party I have changed my attitude to so-called labor politics, and am heartily in accord with the view of the Central Executive Council on the policy with regard to the third party race.

My experience in the Workers Party is contrary to those in the Socialist Party. In the first place I found that the average member of the W. P. is far and away ahead in the understanding of the class nature of capitalist society; understands better the Marxian analysis of capitalism; has consequently a better and more definite idea of the ultimate issue of the class struggle and is in general of a proletarian ideology, being largely composed of workers.

Secondly, a very brave attempt is made at creating a strong discipline, and tho not universally successful as yet, has nevertheless attained a considerable degree of efficiency. The Workers Party in comparison to the Socialist Party is militancy itself.

And, last but not least, the Workers Party, being under the jurisdiction of the Communist International, is thereby assured an even and universal tenor and an unyielding revolutionary level that is of the greatest importance and incalculable strength to us.

Taking all the above agencies into account—first, the membership, then the local and national organizations, with its growing discipline and knowledge; third, the tremendous guiding, restraining or encouraging influence exerted by the watchful Communist International—one feels that such an organization need not be afraid of being misled or tempted away from its path.

The W. P. can boldly enter into any political venture it may think is going to further its interest, for, at any moment, it can, when the necessity rises, cut adrift with organization undamaged and principle unsullied.

Therefore I am for the policy of the C. E. C., because we go in with our eyes wide open; we have no illusions as to the morality, integrity, honesty or any other nice and honeyed attribute of a third or any other, except a real class conscious mass party as by the W. We do not trust them further than we can see; they will not be able to fool us individually or collectively, and if we can benefit by any such movement, if especially the benefits accruing to us will be greater than to our enemies, we go in—and when it will suit our purposes we will go out. A definite policy that only a well organized, well disciplined party, such as the W. P., is fast becoming, will be able to cary out with confidence and profit.—Fraternally yours, A. J. Lipshitz, Los Angeles, California.

We can quarrel, and still preserv our unity. We can be convulsed wit fratricidal passions, and neverthele be ready, at the first intimation of common danger, to stand together i unbroken and unbreakable solidarity

I don't worry in the least whe Comrade Smith declares that Com rade Brown is an unmitigated scoun drel, and Comrade Brown retort that Comrade Smith is a rascal of th deepest dye.

Each comrade gathers a faction round him, and the air is clamorou with the sounds of their contention

Never mind. Don't grieve abou it. Don't think that all is lost be cause of this domestic turmoil.

It has its uses, brother. It show that Labor possesses within itsel that spirit of conflict without which the world would never press forward

It shows that the fury of criticism which smashes old evils, and the en ergy of discontent which creates ne systems, are both existent within ou camp.

They are difficult to manage an control; sometimes they appear t overpower us, and we criticize eac other savagely, and discontent ex presses itself in internecine wrang ling.

It's alright. A crisis will consoli date us. And is it not evident, bro ther, that we need not dread stagna tion when Capitalism is destroyed— when the myriad incentives of th class struggle no longer diversify ex istence, and supply it with that im pulsive force which is the guarante of progress?

Conflict as well as co-operation i essential to the higher evolution o human society.

But when Labor is universall triumphant, and has no foe to figh it won't decline for lack of combativ exercise, for it can always be depend ed upon to have a devil of a row wit itself.

Do you see the point, brother?

The Poor Fish Says: He would b in favor of a Farmer-Labor Party i it would take in the captains of in dustry and the bankers who are reall the best friends that the workers an farmers have, because they give th workers jobs and loan the farmer money.

DENY HALPERIN SEAT IN MEET OF THE I. L. G. W.

Hits Expulsions As Repetitions of 1919

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., May 12.—The ax of the Sigman administration in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union fell again in the convention here when George Halperin, delegate of Local 66, of New York, was unseated by a vote of 192 to 35, with 15 unseated delegates not voting. The charges against Halperin were the usual ones of membership in the Trade Union Educational league, to which was added that of slandering the officials of the Sigman regime.

He was also attacked as a member of the Workers party, and for not protesting against the criticism of the Freiheit, the Jewish Communist daily, leveled against Sigman rule.

Halperin Replies.

In his reply to the attacks made upon him, Halperin charged that the Sigman dictatorship considered it criminal if a union member urged his local to pass resolutions requesting the general executive board to rescind the decree outlawing the T. U. E. L., and instructing its convention delegate to vote against the Sigman expulsion policy, tho the constitution of the union declares the convention to which all matters of disagreement may be brought.

Halperin charged that the whole crusade growing out of the expulsion policy was a campaign against the political movement of the workers, represented by the Workers party. He therefore charged it was an attack on the union's members because of their political views.

Halperin charged that the officialdom of the international were following the same tactics pursued by the Socialist party, in 1919, when the reaction within the party expelled more than half the membership in order to maintain its leadership. He charged that the 1919 expulsions in the Socialist Party was the first shot fired against the left wing movement in this country.

One delegate had the temerity to

POINCARE RETURNS TO PARIS, COUNTS VOTES, DECIDES TO RESIGN

PARIS, May 12.—Premier Poincare has decided that he must resign as a result of the defeat of the national bloc in the parliamentary elections.

The premier returned hurriedly to Paris this afternoon from a week-end in the country, and consulted with some of his ministers, at which time his decision to resign was reached.

Edouard Herriot, leader of the Radical Socialists, is believed likely to succeed Poincare, and Aristide Briand, former premier, may become foreign minister.

Practically complete returns from Sunday's elections showed that the national bloc, which has been in power in France since 1919, has lost its majority in the chamber of deputies.

Millerand himself may resign the presidency, but cannot do so until the chamber meets.

PITTSBURGH'S CAR STRIKE IS STILL SCABLESS

Workers' Power Brings Arbitration Talk

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 12.—Pittsburgh's street car strike ended this afternoon. By a vote of 1,073 to 920, the striking motormen and conductors voted to return to work at once. The carmen accepted a proposal presented by mediators which provided that the present wage scale, which carries a maximum of 67 cents an hour, be continued for the next two years; that there shall be no change in working conditions and that the company pay one-half the cost of one uniform for each employe every year.

PITTSBURGH, May 12.—The Pittsburgh Railways company's announcement that it would run cars Monday morning with strikebreakers turned out to be a monster bluff.

ATTACK OF SIGMAN MACHINE ON MILITANTS CULMINATES IN UNSEATING OF 8 DELEGATES FROM LOCAL NO. 9

BOSTON, May 12.—Charges that the case against Local No. 9, New York, was a deliberate frame-up by the International officialdom, and that lynch law was replacing justice in the organization were made to-day at the convention of the International. The question at issue was the recommendation of the Credentials Committee to unseat 8 out of the 10 delegates from Local No. 9, and to place the local under the direct supervision of the General Executive Board of the union.

Louis Hyman, manager of Local No. 9, stated in a bitter and eloquent attack upon the International administration, that flimsy evidence from an unreliable source was being used by the officials to blackmail regularly elected delegates in a determined effort to wrest control of the local out of the hands of the progressive elements and place it under the dictatorship of the official machine.

He accused the officials of having used their power to prevent the election to the convention of well-known, active trade unionists who disagreed with the policies of the administration in order to pack the convention with representatives of their own choosing who would assure them a majority.

This attack came after the report of Dubinsky, secretary of the credentials committee. Dubinsky charged eight of the delegates with having attended a meeting where delegates to the convention were nominated.

Delegate Hyman then took the floor and in a scathing denunciation of the international policy of suppression and coercion pointed out that no evidence of the secret nominating caucus existed other than the word of an irresponsible member of the local.

Iron Workers Force New York Bosses To Sign New Contract

NEW YORK, May 12.—Despite the powerful openshop combine in the steel and iron trade, the Architectural Iron, Bronze and Structural Workers' union, has signed new contracts protecting 1500 of the 2600 inside or shop iron workers in Greater New York. The Allied Metal Building Industries, branch of the Iron league openshop organization, still controls a group of small employers by threatening to shut off raw materials if they sign with the union.

To strike these small shops one at a time is now the policy of the union, which has called out the men at the Stolz Iron Works. The Mercury Iron Works has just signed without a strike, and negotiations are in process with the Prudential shop.

BURNS CHASED RADICALS WHILE U. S. KILLERS HUNG UP RECORD THAT WILL MAKE BRITONS STEP LIVELY

(By the Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 12.—While the U. S. department of justice and its detectives under William Burns were chasing red bomb throwers which did not exist, 10,000 murders were committed in the United States in 1923 and many went unpunished. These figures are given out by Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, crime expert for the Prudential Insurance Co. The increase he says is from 9 per 100,000 in 1922 to 10.2 in 1923.

Fifty times as many persons were murdered in this country as in England and Wales, and twenty-five times as many on the basis of comparative population.

STRIKE STRONG WHILE PERLSTEIN STAYS IN BOSTON

"Dennie" And Taylor Whet Teeth For 52

The lull in the garment strike here does not require that vice-president Meyer Perlstein leave the exhilirating scene of the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in Boston, according to Miss Romer, Perlstein's secretary. The vice-president had expected to come back about the middle of this week if the situation here demanded, but his plan now is to return at the end of the following week.

No court cases come up today, but tomorrow will find Judge Charles M. Foell running a hot race with Judge "Dennie" Sullivan in adjoining court rooms. Some fifty-two cases are slated for Sullivan's annoyance and about twenty for Judge Foell.

Taylor Keeps Dennie in Trim.

"Dennie" will undoubtedly win for the amount of fines imposed, even if the sum is averaged by the number of pickets tried. Sullivan was in a mean mood when he last sentenced the garment strikers and dosed them out jail sentences as well as fines of $250 or more apiece. He may be in better humor tomorrow and satisfy the bosses a little less, tho Dudley Taylor, attorney for the dress manufacturers, keep Sullivan toeing the mark of severe sentences pretty closely.

One of the cases to come before Sullivan is that of Meyer Barkan, who spent another night in the lousy county jail when he was arrested for contempt. This is the second time Barkan has been treated to the inhospitable quarters of the jail.

Fifty Cases Up.

The other cases coming before Sullivan tomorrow are those of: Gertrude Hansen, Mary Shinska, Dora Rubin, Ida Borkan, Sarah Orlove, Rebecca Shore, Rose Pester, Ida Kaufmann, Pauline Bernhardt, Martha Rybicka, Anna Doleschek, Ada Abrams, Tillie Green, Ida Geffin, Rose Katz, Josephine Leone, Martha Wentor, Frieda Forbahn, Lena Stanish, Yettie Katz, Clara Krasnowsky, Fanny Batt, Sara Shapiro, Leah Katofsky, Libby Shenkman, Ester Gittelman, Haddie Grenberg, Frieda Nitchberg, Fanny Jacoby, Rose Cohen, Sofia Rosen, Sara Wood, Mary Armoto, Angel Matusisiak, Rose Weiner, Gussie Abramowitz, Nanna Peterson, Fannie Kramer, Sylvia Krause, Dora Hoffman, Marian Brosteck, Etella Spaczeck, Jacob Hoffman, Bessie Beffield, Dora Samuelson, Caroline Reiner, Anna Sax, Esther Pegnoff and Saddie Beikoff.

Bosses Dicker.

Several bosses are negotiating with the union for terms but they are unwilling to accept the demands made by the garment workers when they went out on strike, February 27th. It is possible when vice-president Perlstein returns that the bosses and the union officials may reach some settlement, but the commitee in charge of the strike in Perlstein's absence have no authority to compromise the strike demands to gain a settlement with any boss.

The summer dress season should be well on in the shops by now but this season has been slack and to some extent the dullness of trade worked against the striking dressmakers. The regular work should pick up within a few weeks and make the bosses more eager to come to terms.

The strikers are determined to hold their lines intact until they can go back to work on the conditions they themselves have set. If they can survive this critical short period as well as they have the long weeks past of the strike, they surely should gain the victory they are hoping for.

Champion Military Glutton Assails The Women Peace Workers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 12.—General Barnett, former head of the Marine corps, has told the Republican Women's Campaign Training school, in session here, that the recent congress of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, headed by Jane Addams, was a "treasonable society," made up chiefly of foreigners who came here to "corrupt our people with false ideas of national peace."

Barnett is one of the capital's ablest diners, dancers and medal carriers, and for years has appeared weekly in the society columns.

Pullman Bosses Agree To Meet With Strikers

Brave Carmen's Fight Forces Conference

For the first time in its 59 years of labor fighting the Pullman company yesterday agreed to meet with a duly elected strikers committee.

First refusing to recognize that a strike existed, next refusing to deal with a strikers' committee, the steel car company was finally forced by the loss of valuable contracts to get down to realities.

Twelve Strikers Elected.

The strikers chose a body of twelve men to represent them before the conference in the Palace Building late that afternoon. The committee was instructed to give its report to the strikers that same evening so that action could be taken.

Full reports of the workers' decisions will be given in the next issue of the DAILY WORKER.

The conference was arranged by Ben Marshman, official mediator of the department of labor who has been drawn into the strike, which is proving so costly for the rich steel car company.

Three Parties At Conference.

But the conference which the company consented to, is not a pure and simple conference of workers and employers. There is a third element present—the so-called "conciliating committees" from the departments of the plant not on strike. Most of the members of these departmental committees are company men. Their jobs depend on acquiesence in the company's decisions.

Three parties are represented at this conference: the twelve elected strikers, twelve company men not on strike and McLaren, general manager of the Pullman plant.

Company Wants Pullman Terms

Marshman admitted that manager McLaren was eager to settle the strike and was willing to make some concessions, but he said the Pullman boss asserted the reduced wage would stand.

"Doesn't that mean that he wants to settle the strike on the Pullman company's own terms?" asked a reporter for the DAILY WORKER.

"Yes, that's about it," said the department of labor conciliator.

Conference Result Reported.

In his speech to the strikers at the noon meeting, the second big mass meeting of the day in Stancik's hall, Marshman reported the result of his confab with the Pullman boss that morning, McLaren's final decision to meet with the union committee.

Company Wants to Blacklist.

He said that McLaren tried to insist on blacklisting six leading spirits among the strikers and would not sit on a committee with these men. Finally McLaren and "efficiency expert" Francis Gunn said they might

PULLMAN STRIKE HEAD TELLS WORKERS ABOUT BASIS OF STRUGGLE

John Holmgren, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, told the workers at the mass meeting that they had struck a blow at the wage cutting policy of the Pullman company that would be long remembered; he urged them whatever else they did, to unite in the labor organization that would make their next battle still more effective.

He painted an inspiring picture of the class struggle and the world labor movement, which is fighting in Germany against the Morgan plan to enslave the workers of Europe.

Asking for support of the DAILY WORKER, he showed how this newspaper, which gave the strikers their only publicity support, would keep them informed on the great world issues of labor.

As a climax to his speech, he pointed out the necessity of class conscious political action. He showed how United States senators and congressmen cared nothing for the workers and bound the chains around the necks of the child slaves of this country. He urged the workers to fill the posts of government with the members of their own class.

FRENCH COMMUNISTS ARE CLOSE BEHIND POINCARE'S NATIONAL BLOC IN PARIS AS ELECTIONS SHOW BIG LABOR PROGRESS

PARIS, May 12.—Communists scored heavily in Sunday's elections. Altho no figures have been received, of the total vote, or the number of party members elected to the chamber of deputies, it is reported that the Communist Party ran second only to the Poincare National Bloc in Paris, that carried the metropolis by only a slight majority.

The Communists swept Bourges, an industrial and railway center in Central France. In fact, labor everywhere thruout the big French industrial centers showed a big revolutionary drift, just as in the recent German elections.

The latest returns indicated that the anti-Poincare parties, including the Communists, secured 229 seats, as against 153 for the National Bloc, with 202 results yet to be announced. The extent to which the voters were aroused by the issues at stake is shown by the fact that 80 per cent of the voters, an unusually high number for France, with strong syndicalist tendencies among her workers, went to the polls on Sunday.

Victory for the lefts was achieved by overwhelming majorities in the provinces. When Poincare piled up a small majority in Paris, the residents of the capital went to their beds believing him to have won.

Leaders of the left claim the result is an overwhelming repudiation of Poincare's foreign policies, including occupation of the Ruhr and insistence upon reservations to the experts' report.

The premier's supporters, however, claim the overthrow was due to dissatisfaction with the cost of living, recent raising of the tax rate and other domestic matters.

The new chamber, despite what Poincare's followers say, will undoubtedly affect modification of France's foreign policies.

The group which will control the chamber of deputies, favors moderation towards Germany. Many of Poincare's foreign policies are certain to be replaced by others of a conciliatory nature.

The premier may resign at once and it is possible that President Millerand, who created the national bloc, which has met its first defeat, may resign as well.

Premier Poincare and the national bloc have been in power in France for five years, and the overwhelming na-

HEAVY DECREASE IN STEEL ORDERS ANNOUNCED BY TRUST

NEW YORK, May 12.—The U. S. Steel corporation figures announced at noon yesterday show a decrease in the unfilled tonnage of 574,360 tons during April. On April 30 the unfilled tonnage stood 4,208,447 tons against 4,728,807 on March 31, 4,912,901 on February 29, 1924, and 7,288,509 on April 30, 1923.

WALL STREET JOURNAL "BLACKSHIRT" EDITORIAL READ IN THE SENATE

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Sen. Shipstead, during debate on the Lockwood matter, in a ringing voice, read to the Senate the "Blackshirts, On To Washington," article published by the Wall Street Journal of March 17th, and the later editorial in the paper declaring that 48 Mussolinis are needed—one in each state—as a sample of reactionary lawlessness in America.

GERMAN WORKERS MURDERED BY FASCISTI ARMY

Kaiserists Reviewed By Ludendorff

HALLE, Germany, May 12.—Without a murmur of protest from the Socialist president of Germany, 70,000 Fascisti followers of the kaiser and bitter foes of the German republic, helmeted and armed to the teeth, marched in parade past Generals Ludendorff, Hindenburg and other monarchists, who were gathered here to unveil a statute to General Moltke, to replace one destroyed by the Communists after the Hohenzollern head fled into Holland.

The Fascisti came from all parts of Germany in special trains. They were out for the blood of the workers, and wherever they saw a group of workers gathered they fired upon them. It is estimated that ten workers were killed, hundreds injured and over 500 jailed. Workers marching along the highways were fired upon from behind fences by Fascisti assassins. Armored cars were used by the monarchists to storm a brewery in which the workers sought protection.

Monarchist speakers, advocating the overthrow of the republic, shouted for the kaiser's return. "We will never rest until we have a kaiser again," was a usual phrase. The reactionary mob in arms was called "the Defensive Alliance of Overland Young German Order." Ludendorff reviewed the Fascisti, dressed in his gold braid, red trousers and spiked helmet. He did not look like the same general who threw himself in the gutter when the barroom Fascisti rebellion in Munich fizzled.

While this monarchist carnival was going on in Halle, the Ruhr miners were on strike and had succeeded in paralyzing industry completely.

FRENCH FRANC DROPS AS POINCARE'S BLOC GOES DOWN TO DEFEAT

PARIS, May 12.—The French franc dropped sharply today to 17.40 to the dollar when it became apparent the government had been defeated in the national elections. Saturday's closing was at 16.75. The victory of the parties of the left over Poincare is considered as making certain a settlement of the reparations problem on the basis of the experts' report.

War Mad Senator Now Shows Concern For Poor Farmers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 12.— Senator Norbeck of South Dakota, who was made governor of his state, during the war hysteria, on the issue of jailing or otherwise suppressing the Nonpartisan League organizers, has changed his mind. The man who saw only pro-Germanism, bolshevism and red ruin in the Nonpartisan League doctrine that the farmer must be given the aid of the government in his struggle to get a free market for his products, told the Senate, in A. C. Townley's own words, that "the farmer must buy in a controlled market and sell in a competitive one, and then you tell him to solve all his own troubles by organizing co-operative stores when what he wants is a day's wage by which he can live."

PEORIA CONVENTION OF UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA WILL DISCUSS LIVE PROBLEMS

The convention of the United Mine Workers of Illinois which opens today in Peoria promises to be the hottest of the many hot conventions held by the miners of District 12.

The issues before the convention that will be most hotly contested and bitterly fought are the appointive power of the president and the reinstatement of Alexander Howat, former president of the Kansas miners. Approximately 800 delegates will be present.

Other questions to be taken up will be a demand for a special convention to consider charges against John L. Lewis, action against the Ku Klux Klan, which is attempting to gain control of the miners' union in the interests of the coal barons; the abolition of eleven sub-districts; inauguration of an old age pension fund; and demands that employes on miners' union payrolls now appointed shall in the future be elected.

There is no doubt where the Illinois miners stand on the question of the reinstatement of Alexander Howat. During the early days of the successful effort on the part of the bully Lewis to drive his rival out of the organization, District 12 poured their money like water into Kansas to support the miners who were on strike there against the Kansas Industrial Slave Law. Not alone were the miners assailed by the entire power of the state, but they were treacherously

JACKSON, Mich., May 12.—Divorces are increasing because the American woman "has been driven out of the home" by economic and social forces, Miss Marion Leonard, dean of women at the University of Illinois, told the Michigan Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs here.

Dean Leonard pointed out that women are becoming socially and economically independent. Over 8,500 American women are employed in gainful occupations, she told her hearers.

The American woman, she said, "has been driven out of the home by the high cost of living, by the invention of labor-saving devices which give her more leisure; by the public schools, where her children are taken off her hands during the day, and by motor cars, country clubs and other outside entertainments."

STEEL COMPANIES PLANNING TO BESTOW WAGE SLASH ON SLAVES; WILL PAY FOR MUNDELEIN FEED

(By the Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 12.—Wall Street is full of reports received from Pennsylvania that the independent steel companies are on the point of cutting the already low wages. Some of the companies are now working only 50 per cent capacity due to the recent slump in orders. Judge Gary denies knowledge of the proposed cut but has stated that the policy of the U. S. Steel Corporation, would be to follow the independents in the matter of wage reductions. Republic Iron and Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube are among the big independents said to be planning a cut

Left Wing Will Press Amalgamation

Opening session of the Furriers' convention at the Morrison hotel in Chicago, yesterday, turned out to be more of a socialist party picnic than anything else.

This opening session which consisted of a program of speaking under the direction of President Morris Kaufman, opened with Morris himself and followed with Mayor Daniel Hoan of Milwaukee, John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor and George Kirkpatrick.

Kaufman declared that the union, which had suffered in the post-war period, had recovered its original strength; Hoan praised himself and the socialist government of his city, which he said, never cracked strikers on the heads as did other administrations; Fitzpatrick welcomed the delegates in the name of Chicago labor and Kirkpatrick talked of the solidarity of labor.

Following this love feast, the real business of the convention will come, —probably beginning today.

The left wing, which represents the vast majority of the strikers, is represented in the convention in spite of the strong-arm election methods of the administration. It will work at the convention for its program.

Amalgamation is vitally needed by the furriers. Their membership of only 10,000 needs the support of the hundreds of thousands of workers in the other needle trades.

The class Farmer-Labor Party is vital to its well being also. Its members have been beaten and slugged during strikes.

Recognition of Soviet Russia and other left wing issues will also be pressed.

Count Sore Because He Missed Balance Of Millicent's Cash

VIENNA, May 12.—Count Ludwig Salm, husband of Millicent Rogers, sulked here today and refused to talk about his separation from his heiress bride.

"I've been talking to reporters ever since we arrived in Europe," the count shouted angrily as he alighted from the Orient express and was met by no one save a delegation of newspapermen who wanted to hear what he had to say about the action of Col. H. M. Rogers in taking Millicent home on the liner France Saturday.

Reverend Gent Plays Stool-Pigeon Role In Longshore Strike

By Defense News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 12.—Fred R. Wedge, clergyman, prize fighter and member of the University of California's department of education, entered the ranks of the I. W. W. in 1922 as a spy, according to his own admissions. In an address recently to the Berkeley Rotary club, he said: "I wanted to know the causes which lead men into this revolutionary organization. So I joined the I. W. W., with the knowledge and consent of the federal authorities."

Wedge interpolated himself into the free speech fight on the San Pedro docks last year, making emotional speeches, and finally getting into jail for a few hours. He is writing a book about it all.

PICKETING LEGAL, SAYS WAUKEGAN JUDGE TO BOSS

Dress Manufacturer Is Denied Injunction

WAUKEGAN, Ill., May 12.—Peaceful picketing is within the law, declared Judge Edwards of the circuit court at Waukegan yesterday, refusing to grant an injunction to Julius Eisenberg, Chicago dress manufacturer, who is trying to run a scab factory in Waukegan during the present strike.

Boss Weeps.

Eisenberg broke down in court and cried like a baby, saying that as a free born American citizen he had a right to run his business "open shop."

Judge Edwards replied that the union had a right to peacefully picket his shop. This was Eisenberg's third attempt to get an injunction from Edwards during the present strike.

Police Tell the Truth.

Policeman Gillis testified and declared their business was to enforce order and tell the truth. Eisenberg was greatly nettled at his stand.

Nathan Bosen, Waukegan organizer, selected for the post from the ranks of the members expelled from the I. L. G. W. U. for their affiliation with the Trade Union Educational league, is in charge of the strike and of the fight against the injunction conspiracy.

Sawmills Tied Up by Strike.

under fire from the headquarters of their international union in Indianapolis with John L. Lewis acting the role of a Benedict Arnold.

In those days Frank Farrington, president of District 12, was lined up with Howat against Lewis. There was no name in his, the most up-to-date dictionary of Billingsgate, that Farrington did not hurl at his foe. In speeches bristling with charges, any one of which, if proven, were enough, not alone to have Lewis expelled from the union, but to send him to the penitentiary, Farrington ripped Lewis to tatters. He pledged his devotion to the cause of Alexander Howat and promised to carry on the fight until he was reinstated.

Then something happened. There was a closer bond between Farrington and Lewis than between Howat and Farrington. Howat is an honest, conscientious rebel, while both Farrington and Lewis are crooks—on their own admission. Both had good reasons to bury the hatchet, not in each other's necks, but in the necks of the progressives in the union. So they joined forces shortly before the Indianapolis convention, where the Howat case was to come up.

There Farrington showed himself in his true colors as a traitor and renegade.

The backbone of the fight for every progressive measure brought up at that convention was the Illinois delegation. There were about three hundred delegates there representing nearly 100,000 miners—a mighty force, and led by Freeman Thompson, John Watt, Joseph Tumulty, John Hindmarsh and others, they put up a splendid fight. With the exception of the Farrington payrollers, the entire delegation voted against Lewis on every issue. Once or twice they almost tipped over his machine. Farrington stood by his bargain with Lewis, and received the honor of being appointed chairman of the Scale Committee.

Farrington Against Six Hours.

In making his report, Farrington attacked those who favored the six-hour work day in the mines, regardless of the fact that he circularized the district in favor of the same measure several years ago. This was brought to his attention by members of his own delegation, but the taunt did not pierce his thick political hide. Farrington was the only president at the convention who could not control his own delegation. In electing representatives on the Scale Committee, the Illinois delegation took the meeting entirely out of the hands of Farrington's henchmen, elected their own tellers and ran things pretty much as if Mr. Farrington were not in existence.

When the Lewis gunmen refused Howat to speak after getting to the platform and over 1,100 delegates voted for a roll call vote on the question of his reinstatement, it was the Illinois delegation that gave the leadership and the greatest numerical strength to the meeting held after Lewis walked away without adjourning the convention. The meeting made plans to carry on the fight for the reinstatement of Howat and for progressivism rather than reaction in the United Mine Workers of America.

Thus the convention that opens today in Peoria, is of particular interest, not alone to the miners thruout the country, but to every class-conscious worker in the United States. The miners' union, once the shock troops of the army of labor in America, has lost much of its effectiveness thru the treachery of Lewis and his lieutenants in the district offices. Of these lieutenants, none is more despised than Farrington. A reactionary of the worst type, he shamelessly sold himself to his arch foe and swallowed his hate for John L. Lewis when confronted with the still greater danger to himself and his capitalist masters, the coming to power in the union of the progressive elements.

The delegates of the miners of Illinois at the Peoria convention are expected to follow the lead given by the veterans of Kansas and deal another blow to reaction and autocracy in the United Mine Workers of America by taking the appointive power away from the president, voting to back up the reinstatement of Howat and the calling of a special international convention to try John L. Lewis for his many crimes against the miners in particular and the American labor movement in gener-'

GENERAL STRIKE GREEK'S THREAT TO GOVERNMENT

Demand Release Of 250 Communists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATHENS, Greece, May 12.—The Greek Federation of Labor has demanded that the government release unconditionally the 250 Communists and unionists who were arrested in the May day celebrations. The federation threatens that a general strike will be proclaimed thruout Greece if the "democratic" government does not let the workers out of prison.

The military clique which controls the government forbade the workers' May day meetings and broke them up by force when the workers disregarded their orders. A company of "engineers" first turned a fire hose stream of water on the various workers' assemblages, and when that tactic failed to intimidate the workers, a company of militia fired. Seventeen casualties were the result, besides the 250 arrests.

Communist ideas are spreading rapidly in Greece. The party blames the government for the May day disturbances and calls upon the workers and farmers to close their ranks and march together toward their own class government.

consent to take all the strikers back but one. Further backdown of the company to avert continuation of the walkout is expected.

The men have again and again signified their loyalty to these strike leaders who are their fellow Pullman workers. One of them, Louis Nelson, has worked 14 years for the company.

Marshman Urges "Conservatives."

Marshman, who represents James A. Davis, secretary of labor under the Coolidge administration, advised the strikers to choose "conservatives" to the strike committee and to elect no radicals. Strikers decided that the issues of "conservative" and "radical" were not involved. The thing was to choose men they could trust.

Day of Best Solidarity.

The best mass picketing and the best mass meetings in the history of the strike was the answer of Pullman strikers yesterday morning to the stool pigeon propaganda that the "strike is over" and that the "company has settled it."

Strikers and Workers Party members were selling the DAILY WORKER at every entrance of the great Pullman plant, which stretches along Michigan avenue for half a mile.

Meeting a Big Victory.

Holding such a big mass meeting—the biggest yet held by the strikers—was in itself a victory. Company stool pigeons had visited every striker's home, telling each striker that all the others had gone back and that the company was settling the issues involved thru the company union.

The strikers showed an understanding and class consciousness that they did not possess before the experience and education of the last four weeks of struggle together.

Conciliator Amazed.

"Manager McLaren of the Pullman company telephoned me this morning that the strike had been settled," said Marshman after he was introduced. "This doesn't look like it. When I see 350 men in this hall so early in the morning it looks as tho there still were a strike in Pullman."

Marshman went on to say that he was satisfied the men had something to strike about or they would not be there.

Did Pullman Manager Lie?

As to the big issue of discrimination against strike leaders, Marshman said McLaren promised him that there would be no discrimination except of men who had "committed acts of violence."

Since no one has been convicted for any act of violence, it was apparent to the strikers that McLaren was simply seeking an excuse for blacklisting active strikers.

"Fixing Up."

McLaren promised Marshman that the wage grievances would be "fixed up." But the mediator advised the men that they knew best just what this "fixing up" meant.

Marshman said he waited until Monday to see whether the men really were standing pat. Finding that they were, he was going ahead in the effort to settle the strike.

He promised to see the company officials at once and would report again to the strikers.

Houses to Cure Slaves.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12.—Solution of the farm labor problem in Massachusetts lies in providing better housing conditions for farm hands and their families, steady employment, and wages on the basis of skill, declares the United States Department of Agriculture.

New York Stationary Engineers May Offer Battle To Bosses

NEW YORK, May 12.—Unless the New York refrigeration plant owners come to terms by May 15, their 3000 engineers may strike for a $9 day. Eight dollars a day for a 48-hour week is the present wage of the men who are members of locals 20, 56, and 670, International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, American Federation of Labor.

The contract expired May 1. Employers are negotiating but refuse to meet the demands.

A. C. W. MEET FACES MANY BIG LABOR QUESTIONS

PHILADELPHIA, May 12.—The Russian American Industrial corporation, R. A. I. C. formed by the A. C. W., now in convention here, is a distinct achievement in the field of international solidarity. Facts showing the improvement in the Russian textile industry which has come with the aid of the class conscious workers in the American needle trades industry will be presented to the convention and there is no doubt that the convention will unanimously continue to support this big international industrial concern.

Amalgamation will continue to be a big issue. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers has already gone on record in favor of concentrating the great needle trades industry both in the men's and women's branches and others into one union which can more effectively organize the entire industry.

Big men's clothing firms, such as Hart, Schaffner & Marx, are now turning out hundreds of ladies' garments a day. The absurdity of making union divisions where industrial divisions are ceasing will give impetus to the demand for one big union in the clothing industry.

Endorsement of the great Farmer-Labor convention coming at St. Paul on June 17th is one of the big issues before the conventions. Thousands of delegates from trade unions and farmers organizations will be present at this convention.

In New York in Local 2, while the administration looked the other way, the right wingers stole the election and in New York a reactionary, David Wolf, was appointed manager of the Joint Board.

SOLONS SEEK TO AVOID AN EXTRA SESSION

Statesmen Flopping In Legislative Puddle

WASHINGTON, May 12.—With adjournment of congress arranged for four weeks from today, capital leaders are groping for a way out of their legislative dilemma in the hope of avoiding an extra session of congress.

Talk of coming back after the convention has again been revived, but party leaders still hold hopes of cleaning the legislative slate. This week will decide. If President Coolidge vetoes the bonus, immigration or tax bills, which are not to the liking of his masters, then an extra session is considered inevitable.

Here are how the prospects shape up now:

Tax Reduction.

House and senate bills got action today with prospects that the bill finally decided upon cannot be placed before the president for two weeks. The plan is to pass a flat 25 per cent tax reduction all along the line for this year and go to the country in the next campaign if Coolidge vetoes the bill.

Farm Relief.

The McNary-Haugen and Sinclair-Norris price stabilization bills to be taken up by both senate and house this week with a spirited and perhaps lengthy fight in prospect.

Railroads.

Senate interstate commerce committee is preparing to report out the Smith resolution declaring agriculture a basic industry and instructing the government rate-making commission to lower freight rates on farm products. May be put thru both houses at last minute but final outcome is still in doubt.

World Court.

Seems lodged between the legislative jam in the foreign relations committee. Democratic leaders, however, are planning to bring it arbitrarily to the floor and some kind of a vote on the issue will be forced before adjournment.

Immigration.

Conferees report will be passed on by both houses this week and the bill sent to the president.

Bonus.

Leaders making arrangements to adopt the bill speedily if Coolidge vetoes it today or tomorrow.

This member had himself viciously slandered the highest officials of the union and had urged members of the league to take out an injunction restraining the union from taking action against them, showing himself to be entirely opposed to the interests of the international.

Official Secrets.

Hyman accused the officials themselves of participating in secret conferences, citing several instances. One of the vice-presidents of the international, he claimed, had organized a caucus in Toronto whereby he had been elected as delegate to the convention. This statement aroused heated protest from officials, but it quickly subsided when a delegate cried out that he had written proof of the fact. Eva Pasha, a very active member of the union and one of the challenged delegates, took the floor after Sigman. The case against the local was a frame-up intended to cover the present policy of the international of suppressing by any and all means differences of opinion on the labor movement.

Eva Pascha typifies the worker who has given the best of her energy and enthusiasm to the labor organization to which she belongs; she is a personification of the fearless militant who has that indomitable courage that comes from faith and determination. Her plea carried with the weight of earnest conviction and sincerity.

"You want to throw dust in our eyes by the charges of secret meetings," she said to the officials. "But you know and we know that you are after us because of principles in which we believe, but you do not. I have never been a member of the Workers Party or the Trade Union Educational league, but after seeing your tactics, I can promise you that I will be in the future."

The previous question was called for. Points of order were raised from all sides. Demands rang out that the challenged delegates be all given an opportunity of self-defense. President Sigman, following out the policy of cutting off discussion begun the day before by Perlstein, ruled the previous question in order. It was put to a vote and carried.

The case of Local No. 9 marked the climax in the contasting of delegates, which was part of the expulsion policy adopted by the Sigman administration against league members or sympathizers.

A significant fact revealed in the discussion was that the accused delegates from Local No. 9 had never been tried, nor had the charge of a caucus ever been investigated.

For almost three years Local No. 9 has been controlled by the progressives, who oppose certain policies of the administration, and for almost three years the officials of the international have striven their utmost to bring the local under their own domination. Threats of reorganization have been repeatedly made in an effort to intimidate the local, but these could never be carried out. The present convention gave the administration the opportunity it had long sought. The convention, it was alleged by many delegates, was packed with representatives from small town locals which had been artificially created prior to the convention, only for the purpose of getting more votes for the official machine.

Freiheit Is Target.

A vicious attack upon the Freiheit, official organ of the Jewish federation of the Workers party, was made by leaders of the international. The Freiheit, which exerts a tremendous influence in the Jewish labor movement, advocates and agitates for amalgamation, an all-inclusive labor party, recognition of Soviet Russia, and a trade union policy based upon the class struggle.

For this reason one of the strongest counts in the indictments against Local No. 9 was the fact that it advertised in the Freiheit and in other ways gave it financial and moral assistance.

It was furthermore charged that the local showed its disloyalty to the organization by inviting as speaker to its May day celebration a well-known, active Communist—Juliet Stuart Poyntz.

Miss Poyntz was at one time educational director of the international, and very popular amongst the membership. It was noticed that the reporter for the credentials committee avoided using her name because of this popularity.

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, was present at the convention to extend the greeting of his organization to the international. He made a mild plea for unity in the union, stating that the present differences were merely an incident in the labor movement. In conclusion he pledged the fullest support of the Amalgamated to the workers of the international.

Little Banks Close; Big German Banks Grab Morgan Coin

BERLIN, May 12.—While the Social-Democratic reichstag is selling Germany out to Morgan, a slower but more bitter process is going on, ruining the small industrialists and consequently bleeding the German workers.'

One after another small banks, speculating in francs, close their doors, at the rate of about one a day.

In April alone twenty-eight banks failed, and of them eight "broke" in the last week of the month. In the train of these failures over 125 industrial failures followed in the same month, as compared with only twenty-five in February.

charge that the left wing movement in this country started in Local 66, after Halperin's return to this country from Soviet Russia.

The credentials committee also recommended the unseating of Mary Rodowell, of Local 100, Chicago. Vice-president Meyer Perlstein stated that Delegate Rodowell had been active in the Chicago dressmakers' strike, proving her devotion to the union, and should be seated. President Morris Sigman came to the front with a denial that "The International" was seeking to suppress difference of opinion in "The International." He charged that all the trouble began with the agitation for amalgamation and the united front. He claimed that the unions are economic and not political organizations. He claimed that the left wingers want to make the unions an industrial arm of a political party; but in the unions there is no place for politics.

The convention sent a cablegram of congratulation to J. Ramsay MacDonald, premier of the British labor government.

Pankin Praises C. P. P. A.

In the effort to head off the class Farmer-Labor Party, which the labor fakers fear, the convention leaders introduced Judge Jacob Pankan of New York.

This loyal member of the right wing machine sounds a patriotic call for July 4, day of the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the conference for progressive political action.

Panken, the socialist, spoke with feeling of the great day on which we were supposed to have gotten our liberties and begged the delegates to endorse the C. P. P. A. that would meet on that sacred day.

Hillquit on Discipline.

Morris Hillquit, another C. P. P. A. bellwether, followed Panken.

Hillquit lauded the labor fakers who are running the convention, and advised the delegates to submit to their discipline. All this in the name of "unity."

The convention committees—all of them—are appointed. Even the appeals committee is appointed, not elected. This means that the committee which hears the cases of the expelled members from Chicago, Philadelphia and the 19 members of Local 22, New York, who were removed by official orders, is a Sigman committee.

Three members from Local 22 have come to plead their comrades' cause.

Leaflets explaining the T. U. E. L. stand on workers' united front, the class farmer-labor party, and giving the text of the call for the St. Paul June 17 convention were distributed.

Producing Theatre Managers Break Up Their Scab Union

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 12.—The minority group of theatrical managers who planned to break the Actors' Equity Association, American Federation of Labor, by a June 1 lockout are out of luck. When the managers who control over 70 per cent of the productions, broke away from the antiunion crowd planning to sign with the union, the diehards marched out their company union, Actors' Fidelity League. Now even the company union is breaking up.

William Faversham was so indignant at the unauthorized use of his signature to a statement by Fidelity members attacking the A. F. of L. that he immediately joined Equity in protest. The statement attacked the union for "affiliating with men guilty of the butcheries of Los Angeles and Herrin."

David Warfield and Margaret Anglin have also notified Equity that their names were put on the statement without their knowledge. As Fidelity only has 30 or 40 members, against 10,000 Equity members, the action of Faversham, Warfield and Anglin is a serious blow to the company union. It was formed by the managers to break the 1924 strike.

MUNDELEIN IS GREETED BY BIG BUSINESS MEN

Papal Titles Given To Corporation Heads

The exploiters of the American working class and their lackeys are vieing with each other to honor Bishop Mundelein of Chicago, now a Prince of the Church. His return from Rome where he received the Red Hat from the Pope was made the occasion for receptions and fetes equalling in display and pomp the pageantry attendant on the return of a proud monarch. Rodman Wanamaker, owner of a chain of department stores, fitted out a royal room on the pier at which the prelate landed. The Cardinal had his picture taken in the throne chair, which dates back to the sixteenth century and came from Florence, Italy.

Big business without regard for creed or race joined in welcoming the new Prince of the Catholic church. James Farrell, president of the Steel Trust, gave a dinner "in honor of the services rendered by Bishop Mundelein in the Chicago steel district."

Among the Chicago laymen to be given a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory, are E. F. Carry, president of the Pullman company; F. J. Lewis, Chicago manufacturer; Robert M. Sweitzer, Democrat politician and County Clerk; Joseph W. McCarthy, architect of the Area, Ill., project, and Anthony Czarnecki, member of the board of election commissioners.

The elevation of Bishop Mundelein will be the signal for a great fund raising campaign among the Catholics under his jurisdiction. The Vatican needs money badly and the United States is the only country that can supply the Papal needs.

While passing thru Cowentown, Md., on a fast B. & O. express, the Cardinal's train killed a horse at a crossing, causing a jolt that sent his Eminence sprawling into a couch with the committee that was presenting him with a $25,000 check on top of him. Nothing daunted, he accepted the check and thanked the donors.

It is reoprted that several Klokards and Goblins of the Ku Klux Klan have died of Dementia Catholix as a result of the number of Nordic protestants who have kissed the Cardinal's Catholic toe since his return from Rome.

Howat Prosecutor Knocked To Kansas Governor In Letter

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 12.—Protest has just been sent to Governor Davis of Kansas by T. L. O'Neil, president of the O'Neil Implement Manufacturing company, for the "personal aggrandizement" of Attorney General Charles B. Griffith. Griffith has succeeded in adding another "victory" where no one thought he could. He has had Ellison White convicted for wife murder by the flimsiest of circumstantial evidence.

Griffith is the same man who is responsible for the unwarranted conviction of Alexander Howat, former president of the miners' union, for violation of the Kansas industrial court law.

O'Neil writes to the Kansas governor:

"I don't know Scott or any of his friends. I never met Howat. . . . I have had experience with unjust injunctions, given and used for unjust causes. . . .

"The original intent of justice, as I see it, is: That it would be better for 99 criminals to escape justice than to convict and persecute one innocent man. On any other base life and liberty of the poor and the average man has become a cheap commodity."

COMMUNISTS ARE CHASING POINCARE IN PARIS POLL

ture of its defeat was surprising.

The avalanche of votes that swept into office a majority from the left, seems to have given the greatest strength to the so-called radical socialists, making this party the strongest in the forthcoming parliament.

The radical socialists have never been considered a part even of the socialist movement. One of its leading members is Edouard Herriott, leader of the opposition in the French chamber of deputies, who recently made a trip to Soviet Russia, and upon his return urged recognition by France of the Workers' Republic. It is purely a middle class party, also being known as the democratic party.

The socialists of the unified socialist party are more or less in league with the radical socialists, its middle class elements drifting in that direction, while the workers and farmers in ranks are going over to the Communist Party.

ABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL OFFERS LIBRARY PLAN

plendid Books Are Offered As Premiums

Fraternal organizations and party ranches have hit upon a method of orming libraries and helping the de-nse in the Michigan cases at the ame time. A number of them are aking advantage of the Labor De-nse Council's offer of free books in eturn for the sale of Ruthenberg Ap-eal Coupons.

It was the recent expansion of the abor Defense Council's offer which urned the attention of party mem-rs and sympathizers to this unique ay of establishing a library. Inter-st in the sale of Ruthenberg Appeal oupons is greatly stimulated by the ct that whereas formerly the Labor efense Council was only offering pies of "A Week" to those who sold full sheet of coupons, it is now of-ring a choice of 4 different volumes, ncluding Albert Rhys William's fam-us work, entitled "Thru the Russian evolution," a A. A. Heller's "Indus-rial Revival in Soviet Russia," and Villiam Z. Foster's own story of the reatest industrial upheaval the Unit-d States has ever known, "The Great teel Strike."

All four books are classics in their elds. "Thru the Russian Revolution" as won praise from everyone with ven the faintest appreciation of what as been going on in Soviet Russia. is a familiar narrative, interspersed ith facsimile posters and hand bills rinted during the revolution. There re also a number of remarkable hotographs as well as brilliant color-lates.

Any one of the four books offered the Labor Defense Council can be ecured by selling a full $6 sheet of uthenberg Appeal Coupons and send-ng the money to the Labor Defense ouncil office, 166 W. Washington treet, No. 307, Chicago, Illinois, to-ther with the name of the book de-red and the address to which it hould be sent.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE STOOL, POSING AS FIRE BOSS, BLAMED FOR DEATHS OF BENWOOD MINERS

How the use of a department of justice stool as a fire boss cost the lives of 115 miners employed by the Benwood mine of the Wheeling Steel Corporation is told in this communication from a workingman at the scene.—Editor's note.

By DANIEL SPEHAR.

BENWOOD, W. Va., May 12.—Readers of the DAILY WORKER will be surprised when they read this communication from the neighborhood where the Wheeling Steel Corporation's scab mine swallowed up 115 workers lives April 28, leaving eighty widows with three hundred small children in misery.

President Isaac M. Scott, the strike-breaking head of the scab corporation said in the Wheeling News that the Benwood mine "is an old one" but "we have no idea how the gas developed which caused the present explosion."

In the Wheeling Register he says: "Fire boss J. J. Boyle made his usual inspection of the mine before the men started on their ill-fated journey to their working place."

The bulletin board at the millyard entrance of the slope reads: "Safe, April 28, 1924," J. J. Boyle.

Information secured April 30th by Wheeling Intelligencer reporters tends to confirm rumors and statements, by competent mine authorities, that the Benwood mine explosion, which cost the lives of more than 100 men Monday morning, was caused by lack of mine inspection on the morning of the disaster.

It is known positively, that the supposed J. J. Boyle fire boss and one of the victims, who is officially credited with having inspected the mine on last Monday morning and marked it safe for working, was actually Mathew V. Herron, and was employed by the company as fire boss at the Benwood mine without having had any previous experience which could qualify him to pass on such a matter of safety.

His brother-in-law, Mathew L. Craig, 236 Sycamore street, Pittsburgh, Pa., who claimed the body of the Cooey-Bentz morgue last night, is authority as to the identity of Herron, alias Boyle.

Craig told Intelligencer reporters last night Herron was in the employ of Department of Justice of the U. S. Government and that he had been in the employ of the government for the past eight years in the capacity of a special investigator.

Made No Inspection

By a careful check up of the actions of Herron on the morning of the fatal explosion, he did not make any inspection of the mine, that he did not leave his rooming house, 723 Main street, Benwood, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Galb, until between 6:30 and 7 o'clock, and did not have time to make any inspection of the interior of the mine, previous to the time he rode into the mine on the trip with the foreman, George Holliday, Sr.

This theory confirms the statement made to The Intelligencer by Jerome Watson, chief of the Division of Mines of the State of Ohio, and in Benwood at the present time as the official representative of the Ohio governor.

Watson said at that time that no accident of the kind would have happened had a proper inspection of the mine been made prior to the men entering the mine.

Herron left his home, Ninth and Chess, Monongahela, Pa., Sunday, April 20, and came to Benwood, according to Craig and confirmed by his landlady, who stated he engaged a room there Monday, April 21. He was employed as fire boss as shown by the officials list, furnished by the company entering the mine Monday morning.

No Qualification For Job

Credentials furnished the company by Herron were obviously such, as to warrant his employment by the company. His brother-in-law, however, claims that he had no qualifications for this job and that he was here on a secret mission, Federal Secret Service.

Friday night Matthew received a telephone call from Pittsburgh to meet certain operatives of the Secret Service Department on business which was naturally unknown to me, said Mr. Craig. "He spent Saturday and Sunday in Pittsburgh, but failed to meet his party. Late Sunday afternoon Herron came out to our house and gave me all the information I am now giving to you. The responsibility of his mission in Benwood must have weighed heavily on his mind, as he tried several times to tell me of it, but each time was interrupted by the entrance of members of the family."

Didn't Want to Return

"He left Pittsburgh on the last train Sunday night, after remarking that he did not wish to return," said Craig. His absence from Benwood over the week-end was borne out by Herron's landlady, who said he returned to his room late Sunday night. He had left all jewelry and credentials with his brother-in-law.

Craig showed several of these credentials to Intelligencer reporters.

Isaac M. Scott, you are guilty of murder.

Why U. S. Thinks Filipinos Need Ruling—Rubber

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12.—Vast tracts of land in which the soil is suitable for the establishment of rubber plantations have been located on territory within the possessions of the United States government by a party of investigators sent to the orient by the department of commerce, according to Mark Baldwin of the United States department of agriculture, who has just returned with the expedition, which he accompanied in the capacity of soil expert. These lands, now growing native grasses and timber, are located on the island of Mindanao, in the southernmost large island of the Philippines, and adjacent smaller islands.

Nearly 80 per cent of the rubber produced in the world is consumed in the United States, and, so far as known, practically all is grown within 15 degrees latitude of the equator. The possession of this territory within the climatic range of possible rubber production offers an opportunity for United States capital to engage in one of the most important industries in territory within the restrictions of the big bosses' government.

Mellon Tax Bill Is Murdered By Congress; "Cal" May Use Veto

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The senate has passed the tax bill and sent it to conference with the house.

As passed, the measure has virtually no resemblance to the bill as reported by the senate finance committee three weeks ago.

All the important rate schedules in the Mellon plan were wiped out by the Democratic-Progressive coalition and the Democratic rates substituted for them.

FILIPINO LEADERS THANK LOVESTONE FOR AID OF W. P.

Express Appreciation Of His Activities

By JAY LOVESTONE.

WASHINGTON, May 12—(By Mail).—"We certainly appreciate the help and publicity that the Workers party of America has given to our independence campaign," said Manuel Quezon and Osmena, two of the leading members of the new Philippine independence mission, to the writer.

The present situation in the Philippines and the conditions leading up to the proposal of the house committee on insular affairs for a continuation of American sovereignty for 20 years longer were discussed at length in my conference with the Hon. Quezon, president of the Philippine house; the Hon. Osmena, speaker of the Philippine senate, and Filipino Resident Commissioner Guevara.

Oppose Compromise.

"We are opposed to the Fairfield measure with its twenty-year provision. We are just as much in favor of genuine national independence now as we ever were and we do not believe that it can be fairly said that it would take anywhere near this time to arrange for a transfer of sovereignty to the Filipino people. This is the only measure which we will accept. Such a transfer of sovereignty and an arrangement to have our people take over their own government would take at most only two years."

It was a reply to my question as to the attitude of the new freedom mission towards the Fairfield proposal, that the Honorable Quezon, who along with Osmena, Bnevara, Roxas, and Gabaldon constitute the leading political spirits of the Island today, declared the official position of the Filipino people in the above clear words.

Workers Party Greetings.

Speaking in behalf of the Workers Party I assured the Filipino representatives that we would do all in our power to unite the working and farming classes of the United States and the Philippines for the achievement of our common goal of complete freedom from all exploitation and oppression. In extending the greetings of welcome to the new Freedom Mission, the writer declared in part:

"Allow me as the representative of the Workers Party of America which has been pursuing a vigorous campaign in behalf of complete genuine national freedom to greet you officially in the name of my organization.

"I take this occasion to transmit to you our welcome and lay before you the attitude and policy of the Workers Party towards the heroic struggle for freedom that your brave people have been waging for many years.

"The Workers (Communist) Party of America conducts its aggressive Filipino Freedom Campaign not as a matter of charity to your nation, but as a matter of duty to our own working and farming classes to whose political leadership we aspire and by whose welfare alone we are animated.

"As followers of the Communist International, we believe that oppression and exploitation of the masses anywhere is a menace to the freedom of the city and rural masses everywhere.

"It is in this spirit that the Workers Communist Party is prepared to go all the way down the line, pursuing the most effective steps provided for in our special Filipino independence program, steps which will hasten the success of our common good, the freedom of your people, and which will develop the solidarity of the working and poor farming classes of both countries for their joint victory over their common enemy, the imperialist capitalist ruling class."

Mission Representative.

Not only is the new mission directed by such able statesmen, experienced fighters for national freedom and determined opponents to American capitalist imperialist aggrandizement as Quezon and Osmena, but it is representative of all political parties and groups in the Island. One of the members of the mission is the Honorable Senator Ricco representing the Democratic Party, which is the opposition political party in the Philippines. No matter what differences the various parties and groups may have, they are all united in their demand for complete national freedom.

Able Moro Spokesman.

Another member of the mission is H. Gulamer Rasul. He is the son of Senator Hadji Butu whom General Wood appointed to represent Mindanao in the Philippine Senate. He is the adopted son of the President Sultan of Sulu and strikes one as very able and energetic.

Rasul is an ardent advocate of immediate Filipino freedom from the American capitalist government. He voices the great demand of the Moros for national freedom. The enthusiasm with which Mr. Rasul made his plea for national freedom belied decisively the repeated allegations of the American employing class government and the kept press that the Moros are opposed to the relinquishing of American souvereignty. Rasul declared: "The Moros want independence. We are not for a continuation of American control. We hate oppression and tyranny. For centuries we have held back the Spanish conquerors who have never been able to overpower our archipelago. We have not dropped our love for freedom.

The newspapers are reporting falsely and misrepresenting the attitude and conduct of the Moros, the non-Christian population of the Islands. Most of the little difficulty that has ever occurred has been instigated by the outsiders having special interests in giving the wrong impression of the situation to the American masses."

U. S. Capitalists Seek Rubber.

The territory for whose inhabitants Rasul speaks is that section of the Philippine archipelago especially suited to the cultivation of rubber. General Leonard Wood has recently been making suspiciously frequent visits to this territory, ostensibly with the objective of keeping the Moros in order. However, many people take General Wood's declaration with a grain of salt, particularly in view of the repeated strong efforts being made by the Firestone Rubber Company, (assisted by Wood), cajole the native Filipino government into granting it a concession involving a huge tract of land so that the American capitalist concern might raise a large quantity of rubber.

In this dispute, in the unwillingness of the Filipino people to surrender their natural resources to the American capitalists, lies the crux of the whole Philippine conflict.

BURNS LOSES IN BATTLE WITH WHEELER BUT COOLIDGE WILL "TAKE CARE OF HIM," SAYS TODD

By LAWRENCE TODD.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Burns' resignation was announced, on the very day that the documents gathered by Burns' gunman of industry and head of the detective bureau in the department of justice, for the indictment of Wheeler in Montana were turned over to Senator Borah's committee, and when Wheeler had taken the stand and categorically denied every one of the technical charges made against him by the Montana grand jury on Burns' "evidence." Burns quit, or was dismissed, before Senator Borah had had a chance to report to the Senate and the country the frame-up character of the attack on Wheeler and to publicly demand the dismissal of the braggart detective.

It is assumed in Washington, on the face of the record thus far, that President Coolidge will see that his friend Burns is taken care of, in a business way, during the presidential campaign. While government secret service men will guard the life and luggage of the chief executive, the republican national committee will provide funds for detectives for various political services, including the running down of clues to stories reflecting on prominent democrats and progressives. This employment will balm the wounded pride of Burns, and prepare the way for a return to his normal activity as a strikebreaking expert.

Large Order.

It has been known to Wheeler's friends that before he came to Washington he had seen so much of the Daugherty-Burns interference on the side of big employers against labor—particularly in the instance of the railroad shop strike—that he determined to do three things in the senate at the earliest possible moment. First, to break the reactionary control of the committee on interstate commerce. He did this by objecting to unanimous consent to the election of Cummins as chairman of that committee and by forcing a long series of roll-calls that led to the choice of Smith, a democrat, by the combined votes of democrats and progressives.

Second, to drive Harry Daugherty from his control of the department of justice, where law had been made a mockery. This he accomplished thru the investigation of the department, made possible by a long fight on the floor in which democrats and progressives again joined forces.

Third, to kick Burns, the gunman spy, out of the department, thereby serving notice to American labor and American farmers, that by control of the senate they could free themselves of individual tyrants or crooks in administrative offices.

Wheeler Not Radical.

Nobody should assume that the underlying business control of the United States has dropped its determination to destroy the junior senator from Montana. He will be attacked in proportion to the further damage he may do to the financial group that dominates railroads, banks, coal, steel, power and other closely organized industries. He is in no sense a radical, any more than is La Follette. He is trying only to make the profit system in America work within a few rules which itself has announced. But so strong at present are the profiteers and so weak the masses of producers and consumers, as to political and social control, that the rules have tacitly been declared off; corruption and defiance of law in the amassing and extorting of money have become nationwide. Wheeler thinks that he can drive the old parties back within the lines of law. He finds that he can at least win a few immediate objectives when he points out individuals as big offenders. His appetite for fighting has grown as he has gone ahead. It is because he has set an example which men more radical in their economic views may adopt, that big business has, in a way, set a price upon his head.

For the moment, however, the democrats and progressives are patting Wheeler on the back for his triumph over Cummins, Daugherty and Burns.

Hot Dogs Yelp As They Flee Before Detroit Rent Hogs

DETROIT, Mich., May 12.—Many small business establishments have been driven to move out or quit business altogether by the general exorbitant rent increase here this spring. Even hot dog stands have been forced to close up. Some of the cases are pathetic.

One sign on the Coney Island hot-dog stand on Laffalote near Michigan avenue, pathetically demonstrates how the greedy rent hogs are forcing the small businesses into failure by the score. It says:

"The End. Driven Out. We regret to announce that the landlord forces us out of business. We can renew our lease for 700 dollars per month. This is a 500 dollar a month boost, or 350 per cent. We will not lower our quality by buying much cheaper material. WE ARE THRU. We are quitting May 1st, 1924. We bid you all good-by, thanking our many customers and friends for their patronage which made our small measure of success possible, a success which the landlord seems to enjoy."

As rents increase, unemployment and strikes are on the increase here, foretelling an acute industrial depression in the near future.

Can't Scab on the Lord.

HAVERSHILL, Mass., 12.—Everett Martin discovered that he couldn't scab on the ministers by using the Lord's Day for himself, even to build his own house, without becoming susceptible to a $50 fine.

2,000 IDLE AS FIGHT IS MADE ON STREET BIDS

Brick Monopoly Is Threatened

While war rages between John J. Sloan, president of the Chicago board of local improvements, and Peter S. Shaughnessy, president of the Bricklayers' union and a large shareholder in the Washington Construction company, 2,000 men are idle in the city, and the street improvement work involving $7,000,000 expenditures is held up.

Sloan claims that he wants to break the Washington company's monopoly on city street work and he has given the Mansfield avenue work to the Union Contracting Company. Arthur Wallace, a business agent of the painters' union, is one of the officials of this concern.

Say It With Bricks?

The particular job involved is the construction of catch-basins and manholes. Sloan promised that the new company, using concrete, would save the city considerable expense. Engineers and the bricklayers deny the possibility of saving this way, and the fight fares merrily.

The bricklayers and excavators are prevented from working on the Union Construction job by union orders. In retaliation Sloan stopped the men from working on all other street jobs, including those on which the Washington Company had the contracts.

The 2,000 workers involved protest in vain to their union and to Sloan. They were just ready to make their days count after the idleness of the winter season.

Coolidge Tells the Ladies.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Coolidge told the students of the "political campaign school," conducted by the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia to give up looking for "ideal" candidates. Coolidge did not deny to the ladies that he was the "perfect president." No one questioned him.

ARRESTS CAUSE TAXICAB STRIKE TO FLARE ANEW

Anti-Union Bosses In N. Y. Tammany Friends

By LUDWELL DENNY.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

NEW YORK, May 12.—New York's taxi war has broken out again. After a speedy settlement on the first day of the strike, one group of employers had the union officials arrested and the largest anti-union company was shown to have special connections with Tammany, the city administration and police. So the strike is on again, with about 3500 drivers out, according to the Brotherhood of Taxi Chauffeurs of Greater New York.

The Amalgamated Taxi Chauffeurs, 1400 drivers who own their cars, support the strikers. The Amalgamated and the union have revived charges that the Yellow thru Carroll Sinnott, a Yellow official and brother of Mayor Hylan's secretary and son-in-law, gets special privileges and police strikebreaking service. Yellow taxis are allowed to pass police lines closed to other cars at the theatres and baseball parks, are allowed to keep cars on park property for $2 while other companies have offered $200 for the privilege and been refused. A long list of privileges are charged, which Yellow officials and the city administration cannot explain.

Since the union succeeded in getting 900 Yellow drivers to walk out, Yellow officials and the police have co-operated in slugging and strikebreaking. "The cops have told us 'We will be right with you, but you have got to keep away from the Yellows,' " the pickets say.

Meanwhile the union has struck the various fleet companies again following the alleged frameup by the Mogul Checker Company. President Jules Martin and another were arrested and the next morning the others gave themselves up. All are out on bail, and the case is to be heard May 12.

"They framed our leaders to break our union, but it won't break," read the banners carried by the 1000 strikers who marched to the court house hearing. The police searched all the strikers in the court room until they came to the Millionaire Taxi Driver "Freddie" French—and let him go. French, who is a striker, is the son of banker, Amos T. French and a cousin of William H. Vanderbilt.

INDEPENDENT LABOR PARTY, POLITICAL APPLE OF BRITISH WORKERS' EYE, CRUMBLING

By EVELYN PRESTON,
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

YORK, England.—A general agreement not to embarrass the British Labor government marked the annual spring conference of the Independent Labor party at York. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and five other cabinet members belong to the I. L. P., as do over half of the Labor members of parliament.

An instance of this desire not to embarrass was the decision to abandon the historic practice of preceding conferences of instructing the party members in parliament to vote against army and navy appropriations. This time they were left to vote as they please, while the party confined its anti-militaristic action to urging the government to start a disarmament conference.

Another instance was the toleration extended to MacDonald when he casually referred to Socialism as a "bookish term." Only a few Scottish members expressed a hushed dismay.

The proceedings as a whole were marked by expert knowledge and concise talks rather than by vague repetition of formulas. Education from kindergarten to college, agriculture, health and finance were the chief topics.

Premier MacDonald claimed as achievements of the Labor government the recognition of Russia, with the conference over trade and credits now going on in London "between representatives of two great Labor governments of Europe," the abandonment of the Singapore naval base which would have been a menace to other powers in the far east, better relations with the powers of western Europe and first steps in meeting the housing problem in Great Britain.

Clifford Allen, chairman of the party, struck the keynote with his assertion that the business of the delegates was to confer on how to construct Socialism rather than destroy capitalism.

The I. L. P. was organized 33 years ago by Keir Hardie as an organization for spreading Socialist ideas. It was then a small courageous group of pioneers. Today it numbers 70,000 members and is the driving core of the heterogeneous British Labor party.

SCRANTON, Pa. — A victorious strike has won the Scranton bricklayers union an increase of 15 cents giving them $1.50 an hour. The men have been out since May 1.

Are you self-conscious about the impression you make on people?

PERSONAL appearance has a lot to do with the way you feel. Clothes count, of course. But still there is one thing so many people overlook—something that at once brands them as either fastidious or careless—the teeth.

Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel—a difficult problem finally solved.

Greek Workers In Huge May Day Mass Demonstration

(Special to The Daily Worker)

Seventeen killed and injured. Wholesale arrests. Water drenched ranks of marching workers. That was the May Day toll in Greece.

Workers of Greece celebrated May Day in spite of orders from the "democratic" militaristic clique now in control of the government forbidding the workers to assemble or to make any demonstrations. Gathering in hordes in the many squares of Athens, and led by Communists, the workers defied the government-sent "regiment of engineers," instructed to extinguish the revolutionary fire by turning on the water hose.

The celebrating masses really got a shower. But not a bit daunted they kept on marching in unbroken file. The militia was then called and blood began to flow.

Communist papers have laid the blame squarely on the shoulders of the government, and are calling on the proletariat to close ranks for a general strike, which may be called any day to free the political prisoners.

Farmers Hammer Plot To Deliver Shoals To Ford

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MT. VERNON, Wash., May 12.—Denunciation of the politicians who plan to pay a political debt to Henry Ford by turning over to him the immensely valuable public water power resources at Muscle Shoals is contained in a resolution passed by Bakers' Heights Local No. 13 of the Western Progressive Farmers, Skagit county.

The resolution demands that these public water power resources be publicly developed for the benefit of the people and not for the benefit of capitalists. The resolution is signed by Mrs. Fred D. Wood, secretary.

Skagit county is the scene of gigantic power developments of its own, and the Washington workers and farmers have had disastrous experiences of private exploitation of their resources in the past.

The Western Progressive Farmers' organization is enrolling the intelligent dirt farmers of Washington state, and is working hand in hand with the Federated Farmer-Labor party and other forces behind the June 17 convention at St. Paul.

AID UNEMPLOYED, ASKS FALL RIVER LABOR COUNCIL

FALL RIVER, Mass., May 12.—Relief for the unemployed is sought by the Textile Council and the Central Labor Union. An appeal was issued soliciting funds to aid the hundreds of idle workers. It states that organized labor has aided 429 individuals in two weeks. Of those, 106 were adults and 323 were children. Food has been provided for 160 families, 260 pairs of shoes given away, and 80 families given articles of clothing.

Any contributions should be sent to the Central Labor Union Relief Committee, Martin J. Walsh, treasurer, 58 Pleasant street, Fall River, Mass.

Unemployed Beg Aid

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 12.—Unemployment here is so acute that the city's Poor Department is swamped with applications for relief. Hundreds of Portugese workers with large families have asked aid. The labor co-operative bakery offered to supply about 30 unemployed families with free bread and received scores of applications. The manager of the bakery, Benjamin Levine, was forced to remark, that he had not seen a more pitiful sight in years.

Venezuela Where Unions Are Banned.

WASHINGTON.—At last the revolution which has been due in Venezuela since the Castro dictatorship was supplanted by the Gomez dictatorship, is reported to have started. A party of Venezuelan liberals has been in Washington to get the truth to the American people. The revolutionary forces feel that Secretary Hughes is about to apply the same crushing rule to the Venezuelans as to the Cubans—that the power of the United States will be thrown behind an oppressive government which makes trade unions illegal.

PEORIA WHERE MINERS MEET IS OPEN SHOP TOWN

Workers And Farmers Are Disorganized

By J. A. HAMILTON.

If the Illinois miners, in selecting Peoria as their 1924 convention city, where they will convene May 13, had in mind the doing of some missionary work for the general labor movement, they could hardly have chosen a better meeting place.

There are thousands of unorganized workers in the manufacturing plants of Peoria and vicinity, and they have been among the worst exploited in the country. For some years Peoria had the reputation of being the second city in the United States in respect to the amount and value per worker added in the process of manufacture. This was largely because of being one of the leading cities in the manufacture of agricultural implements, ranking first in diversity of output, and third in aggregate value of product. The implement business for a time was one of the most profitable, the workers being paid exceptionally low wages at one end, and the farmer being charged excessive prices at the other.

However, the financial pirates of Wall Street, who, of course, have an interest indirect or direct in the implement business, overreached themselves in their efforts to exploit the farmers, and have seriously injured the golden egg laying ability of the farm implement goose. So many farmers have gone bankrupt, or nearly so, that they cannot stand any further cash or credit burden for machinery. They have seen that merely to increase the product by machinery often puts them in a worse position by putting so much foodstuff on the market that the price drops and they are worse off with big crops than small ones. Hence the number of farm implements and machines bought by the farmers in 1922 are shown by reports to have been only about half of the number bought in 1914.

This conditon of poor business resulted in the bankruptcy recently of the Avery company, one of the leading farm machinery manufacturers in Peoria, and of course the workers in the implement factories will suffer from low wages and unemployment.

Peoria is pretty much an open shop city. The street car employes are said to have an open shop agreement, which gives them from 47 cents to 52 cents per hour, the combined conductor-motorman on the one-man cars getting 55 cents per hour, according to reports. The factories and mills are unorganized. An employee of the Keystone Steel and Wire company reported that in a seven-day week, working 12 hours night turn, he was able to "earn" the large sum of $36.

Peoria has in the past seen stirring events in the labor movement. In 1919 the employes of the Keystone Steel and Wire company and other plants in Peoria and nearby cities conducted a strike involving some 3,000 men, and lasting for months. The strikers were blacklisted when they tried to get work in plants not included in the strike, and as a result a general strike was called which brought out a very large percentage of all the workers in Peoria, and culminated in a monster parade on the day before Labor day. Even the street car service stopped, it is said, all day.

One thing which handicaps the labor movement in Peoria is the extent of the commercial business, both in the hog trade, of which this is a great center, and in general wholesale lines. Some $30,000,000 wholesale business is said to be done annually, and about 3,500 traveling salesmen to have their homes in Peoria. The workers in the industry of trade are notoriously backward toward organization to better their conditon.

Gompers May Lose His Love For Atlantic City If Beauty Shows Stop

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 12.—"Unscrupulous exploitation of young womanhood in beauty shows, pageants and revues" was declared in a resolution adopted by the thirtieth annual convention of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs here.

"These unspoiled flowers are attracted as butterflies to the light," Mrs. Sophie Irene Loeb, chairman of the National Child Labor association, said, in speaking of girls who participate in such competitions.

The resolution described the beauty contests as a "menace to the highest ideals of the nation."

Old Scale Adopted.

ALLIANCE, Ohio, May 12.—Stark electric street car strike here ended last night, when the old wage scale was adopted for another year. The men suspended operations May 1, refusing to accept a four-cent-an-hour pay slash.

The company was given the right to operate one-man cars and to use two men on freight trains in the yard limits here.

DELIBERATE OVERPRODUCTION HAS INTENSIFIED TRADE SLUMP, PRELUDE TO MASSED ATTACK ON WAGE SCALES

Over-production deliberately fostered by the masters of American finance has intensified the present trade slump and opened the way for a general wage reduction movement. At least 2,500,000 wage earners are out of a job with every indication that more will join their ranks. The surplus which workers produced during recent months will enable employers to sit tight until conditions which they consider essential to success in world competition are accepted.

The artificial expansion of business which preceded this situation was recently exposed by a well known investors' service which held that during the Autumn industrial leaders made a deliberate effort to manufacture prosperity. The resulting collapse was termed an illustration of the fact that without a solid foundation no prosperity could be produced. According to the New York Times, "to many minds it was quite clear that an artificial stimulant was being administered to business last autumn and early winter."

U. S. Steel.

With unfilled orders running far behind 1923 the captains of industry speeded up production in basic industries until it exceeded the high mark of a year ago. In March the U. S. Steel corporation maintained the highest rate of production on record, altho its output was running more than 10 per cent ahead of orders. As a result its unfilled orders fell off 130,094 tons to 4,782,807 tons as compared with 7,403,332 tons on the books a year ago and production in April was sharply curtailed.

The widespread unemployment which has developed tends to curtail consumption and to prolong the depression. Since a year ago the number of workers employed in mining, manufacture and transportation has fallen 720,000 according to the conservative index of the department of labor. But to absorb the increased number of productive workers due to the normal growth of population the number on the payrolls should have increased by at least 700,000. The steady drift from the farms to the cities means that this entire number can be added to the number of city workers looking for jobs. This means 1,420,000 looking for work in addition to the "normal" margin of about 1,000,000 unemployed present even in times of prosperity.

Wage Cuts Threaten

As a result a wage reduction movement is being anticipated by financial editors in paragraphs which might have been clipped from their sheets in late 1920. The N. Y. Times sets July 1 as the probable date for the start.

"Altho revisions of wage schedules," writes one, "are not a general thing as yet, it is evident that industrial leaders have some plans along this line under consideration." Another writes "It would not surprise shrewd trade observers if this year showed the turn of the tide from the constantly increasing labor costs which are now gravely affecting production and distribution. The entering wedge so far as wage reduction is concerned seems likely to appear in the textile trades. They are in a comparatively weak condition, etc." In the steel industry, says the Journal of Commerce, "the lead in reduction of wages is expected to be taken by the Republic Iron and Steel Co. and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co."

The industries in this country have been expanded to the point where huge foreign markets are required to maintain full industrial activity and the United States cannot hope to capture these markets in the face of British, French, Italian and German competition, (to quote Vice-pres. Fred. I. Kent, Bankers Trust Co. of New York), on the basis of the present cost of production. He wants lower wages.

Miner's Rogues Gallery

MIDDLEGROVE, Ill.—For taking mine cars intended for his fellow union miners and for loading cars with dirt and putting coal on top—to the detriment of his fellows—Joe Gasjarovich has been expelled from the miners' union for 99 years. Local 2840, United Mine Workers, which expelled him, describes him as 28 years old, 5 ft. 10 in. high, 165 lbs., brown hair and blue eyes, Croatian who can talk good English.

Barbers and Carmen Win Raise

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill.—Union barbers here have won their strike, called a week ago, for an increase of wages. Thirteen shops were affected. The union won its demands in full, and hereafter the men will receive 70 percent of receipts instead of the former 65 percent. Efforts to replace the strikers failed.

Union streetcarmen employed by East St. Louis — Suburban Railways and subsidiary lines, have voted to accept a wage increase of 2 1-2 cents and 3 cents an hour offered by the company. The new scale is 47 1-2c an hour for men in service 21 months or less and 59 cents an hour thereafter.

Producing Theatre Managers Scrap Over Equity Recognition

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—The anticipated split in the Producing Managers' association has occurred, and the bosses' hope for victory in a proposed June 1 lockout against the actors' union has gone glimmering. The Shubert-Selwyn group, controlling 74 per cent of current theatrical productions, have replied to the P. M. A. anti-union stand by forming the Managers' Protective association, pledged to sign the new contract with the Actors' Equity association, American Federation of Labor.

The union haters, who control 18 theaters in New York, against 45 controlled by the pro-union group, say they will stage the lockout on the issue of an Equity shop. There is apt to be a fight between the two groups for the $100,000 in the P. M. A. treasury, raised by weekly assessments on the managers to fight possible strikes.

The new peace pact protects the Fidelity league (a small company union), which has been covered in all the negotiations with Equity.

Teachers' Union Making Drive In Eastern States

NEW YORK, May 12.—According to a statement issued by the secretary of the Eastern States Federation of Teachers, an educational campaign is now under way among non-union teachers' organizations thruout the east. Literature from the national office of the American Federation of Teachers, as well as illustrative material from active teachers' union locals, has been sent out. It is expected that there will be a considerable revival of interest in the teachers' union movement thruout the eastern states as a result of this campaign.

Local unions, as well as individual members of the American Federation of Teachers, can help in this campaign, by getting in touch with adjacent teachers' organizations, sending them union literature and, if possible, union speakers. Literature may be obtained from the office of the American Federation of Teachers, 327 South LaSalle street, Chicago, or the Eastern States federation, 70 Fifth avenue, New York city.

NEEDLESSLY KILL 339 COAL MINERS DURING MARC

750 Slaughtered In Months In U. S.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Preside which are largely preventable caus the death of 339 coal miners duri March, according to the monthly r port of the U. S. bureau of mines. Th brings the total killed for the fi quarter of the year to 750 in contra with 692 killed during the same peri of 1923.

Coal dust explosions accounted f 196 out of the total killed in Mar and 286 of the total during the fir three months of the year. During th same period a year ago 164 mine were killed by such explosions.

The death rate per million to mined rose sharply from 4.19 duri the first quarter of 1923 to 4.68 duri the same period of 1924. The numb of miners killed by gas and coal du explosions per million tons near doubled, rising from .994 in 1923 1.786 in 1924.

Action to lower the present hi death rate in the coal mines of th country was urged in the house representatives by Robinson of Ke tucky, chairman of the House commi tee on mines and mining. He calle attention to the major disasters in th last 9 months. Of the eight which o curred in that period, he said, all b one were due to coal dust explosio He referred to the recommendatio of the U. S. bureau of mines that a dusty mines should be "stone duste and suggested that Congress provid more funds for the bureau.

The Workers Party has won a definite position in the Minnesota Farmer-Labor movement. Help us to carry on the work for our Party and for Communism. Let everyone respond to this call.

EVERY BRANCH OF THE WORKERS PARTY IN DISTRICT NINE SHOULD MAKE A DONATION FROM THE BRANCH FUNDS TO THIS DRIVE.

Send in your money and lists before June 1st, 1924, to Room Six, 225 South Fifth St., Minneapolis, Minn.

COMMUNISTS CAMPAIGN MINNESOTA WORKERS PARTY MEMBERS FILE IN THE FARMER-LABOR PRIMARIES

By NORMAN TALLENTIRE.

The Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America in District Nine acting under instructions of the Central Executive Committee of the Party, has taken action to place the principles and programs of Communism before the electorate of the State of Minnesota in the coming elections by filing six members of the Workers Party in the Farmer-Labor primaries, one for United States Senator, three for United States Congress and two for the Minnesota legislature.

A real political campaign will be conducted for Communist principles and the message of working class solidarity and of the United Front will be voiced in hundreds of meetings in this state during the next six weeks.

The district executive committee, together with our candidates, after they had filed on Wednesday, laid down the policy for the campaign. Local committees are already in action in Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis, and special speakers' classes are already organized under the direction of city central committees, where members are receiving instructions as speakers for the coming campaign.

Party Has Won Its Spurs.

The Workers party has already won a definite place in the Farmer-Labor movement of Minnesota. Its delegates have been seated in various district and county conventions of the Farmer-Labor federation, and two of our candidates have received the indorsement of the Hennepin county committee of the federation. Members of the party fully realize the significance of this movement and the responsibility that rests upon them to carry on a clean-cut campaign for Communism, and they are responding to the demands made upon them by the district committee.

In the Eighth congressional district (Duluth and Mesaba Iron Range district) two conventions have already been held, on April 20 and May 4, where record delegations turned out to lay plans for the work of the coming month. At the Farmer-Labor conference held in Hibbing on Sunday May 4, 34 Communists participated, and Comrade Bentall, our standard bearer in that district, was received with great enthusiasm when he addressed the 200 assembled delegates.

A great opportunity presents itself to our party in this campaign to bring the organization into closer touch with the farmers and workers than ever before, and the Workers party mebers in Minnesota may be depended upon to take full advantage of the campaign in order to spread the influence of the Communist movement into ever section of this state.

GOMPERS—1924

(Gompers addressed the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Convention on the afternoon of May 7, 1924 and assailed the progressive element within the union.)

The aged leader speaks to crowded room—
A white-haired, shrunken shell with voice like death—
A phantom of the fire that glowed of old.
Life's oft repeated joke is played once more—
The one who led, now stands in progress' door.
Youth's voice from out the mob mocks at the shell.
It shakes its shrivelled fist in helpless wrath;
Cries squeaking insults blindly into air.
While youth, all conscious of its vigorous blood,
Hears not the menace of that weary voice
And fails to sense the tragedy therein,
Nor sees its own doom waiting at the door.

THE POWER COLUMN

Who Will Be Next?

When the little town of Ambridge, Pa. went over the top last week the question naturally arose; "Who will be next?" While we will have to wait until Friday for the printed answer, a look at today's Honor Roll compared to the quota standing of last Friday will make easy an answer. Superior which was on vacation for a few days, by turning in a roster of 11 new subscriptions has indicated what may be the order when the standing of the cities is printed in next Friday's issue.

Eastern cities led by Philadelphia and New York are showing a burst of speed this week. The former after a steady grind which has always kept it in the running is threatening to cover itself with glory by a whirlwind finish. The comrades from Philadelphia have not said much and have made no claims to greatness but some "have greatness thrust upon them." Chesty New York which was forced to hang its head in the early stages of the campaign is beginning to live up in part to its self admitted reputation as being the center of left wing activity. A few more strings in the manner of this week's will place it ahead of Chicago even in the number of subs turned in, to say nothing of the percentage of its quota.

Chicago comrades need to get a move on. It is true that THE DAILY WORKER circulation in Chicago has enjoyed a tremendous increase by reason of newsboy and news stand sales. But that is all the more reason why the militants can profit from the increased prestige of the paper in Chicago and make the results show in subscriptions. Let's see what you can do in the next weeks, Chicago. This week little Nanticoke, Pa., sister city to the now famed Ambridge, put it all over you by selling 16 subs to your 13 and it was the members of the Lithuanian branch of the Workers Party which turned the trick. Let some of the American-born workers of Chicago try to explain that away!

Like Bloody Wilson, Bishops Believe In War For "Humanity"

SPRINGFIELD, May 12.—War ain't so worse when it is waged in self-defense or for some other good cause, according to the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church in their quadrennial address to the general conference in session in Springfield. The bishops used more elegant verbiage, but that is what they meant. Speaking for the rest, Bishop Joseph F. Berry, the senior bishop, said:

"Our position must be that international warfare, unless indisputably in self-defense or in defense of humanity, is a monstrosity of the pagan past which has absolutely no proper place in the program of the modern world."

After reviewing domestic and international problems and reaffirming the social creed adopted eight years ago the bishops presented to the conference as their general formula:

"What America needs and the world needs is now to turn to God."

The Poor Fish says that Poincare's defeat is proof that the masses never appreciate a great statesman who loves his country.

COMMUNISTS ON TRIAL IN ITALY DEFY SPY GANG

FLORENCE, Italy, May 12—A storm raged behind the bars of the courtroom here a few days ago when the Communists arrested in the 1921 raids were brought to trial. A small group was separated from the main group of 138 defendants, and when the crowd was to betray them by giving state's evidence, a bombardment of oaths and protests shook the building.

These nine stools are charged with deliberately murdering and robbing nine marines and carabiniers and injuring others in the 1921 riots at Empoli. It is expected that the trial will last at least four months, with 500 witnesses for defense and 200 for the prosecution, which is conducted by the King's prosecutor.

Liberals Beat the Air.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Government ownership of railroads and public control of the nation's money and credit thru government owned banks were two of the principles advocated by the Woman's Committee for Political Action today at the second session of its national conference, called for the purpose of organizing women for direct political action on a liberal platform during the coming campaign.

N. Y. Young Workers League Begins First Convention May 17

NEW YORK CITY, May 12.—The first district convention of the Y. W. L., District No. 2, will open with a banquet Saturday, May 17, at 8 p. m., held at the Young Workers league hall, 105 Eldridge street. The banquet is arranged for the purpose of celebrating the first convention of the newly formed district, as well as to welcome the out-of-town delegates. There will be delegates from the states of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, as well as fraternal delegates from Philadelphia and other nearby cities.

The business of the convention will begin promptly Sunday, May 18, at 9 a. m. This being the first convention, it will have the task of laying the basis for all future work in the district.

The agenda includes, among other things, a discussion on shop nuclei, education, junior work, press and the general activity of the members.

A district executive committee will be selected at this convention.

Members of the Workers party and the Young Workers league are invited to attend the convention.

New York Harlem Meeting.

The Harlem section membership meeting is called for Friday, May 16, Madison hall, 1666 Madison avenue, where a member of the C. E. C. will report on the question of the F. F.-L. P. policy, and after the report a discussion will be followed by the members.—M. Nemser, Section Organizer.

NEW YORK CITY ORGANIZATIONS, ATTENTION!

District No. 2, Workers Party, has arranged a grand excursion and moonlight dance on the Hudson river for Saturday, June 28th. The commodious steamer Clermont, having a capacity of 3,000, has been chartered for this occasion.

Friendly organizations are urged to keep this date in mind and not arrange for any affairs that week.

ONWARD IS RIGHT.

"I did not sell all the May Day DAILY WORKERS which you sent me," writes Comrade James Onward, of Rochester, "and I gave many away at the May Day parade, but I am paying you for all you sent.

And this isn't the only way that Comrade Onward shows that his name means something. "We have got for the DAILY WORKER fifteen more subs. And when the warm weather comes and we can begin our street meetings we will sell still more.

"Yours in the fight!" he says.

NEW YORK CITY Party Activities

The state of New York, the empire industrial and commercial state in the nation, is still without a political party of the workers and exploited farmers. To organize such a party a call for a convention was issued by the Buffalo Labor party and the Federated Farmer-Labor party of New York city. This convention will take place on Sunday morning, May 18, 10 a. m., at the Labor temple, 269 State street, Schenectady, N. Y.

We extend to all organizations a hearty invitation to join with the workers of other organizations in this state in uniting the labor forces of New York for the political struggle against their oppressors and exploiters, by sending delegates to this state convention. Every local organization of workers and farmers in this state may send one delegate to the conference.

Labor in New York state must organize for a political struggle. Send your delegates to the May 18 convention and let us build a powerful party of workers of New York to fight side by side with the workers of other sections of this country.

Our slogan is "On to Schenectady on May 18, and then on to St. Paul on June 17."

New York Membership Meeting.

A general membership meeting of Local New York, Workers party, will be held Tuesday evening, May 20, at Stuyvesant Casino, 9th street and Second avenue. Comrade James P. Cannon, member of the C. E. C., will lead the discussion on the Labor party policy and the June 17 conference at St. Paul.

Please note that on communication sent to branches a mistake was made in dating the meeting for May 18.

Admission will be by membership card only.

Ruthenberg Reports On Workers Party Policy To Milwaukee Members

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 12.— A large number of sympathisers and militant unionists filled the hall at which comrade Ruthenberg was announced to speak on our policy in regard to the Farmer-Labor Party movement and the historic significance of June 17th convention.

In concluding his extensive report on the subject comrade Ruthenberg said:—

The test of our policies must be whether they lead toward this goal. The task of our Party is to create in the minds of the majority of workers the will to take power. The method of pure theoretical propaganda can never win the support of the majority of the workers for our principles. We, as Communists, have adopted the method of the United Front, of allying ourselves with workers for our principles, of allying ourselves with the workers in their immediate struggles, and in the process of these struggles developing their revolutionary conscious and class action.

The Farmer-Labor Party United Front is a movement which develops class consciousness and class action, as it brings masses of workers into the political struggles against the capitalist parties. While supporting La Follette as the candidate of the Farmer Labor Party, we must at the same time criticize his shortcomings and compromises, to destroy the illusions of the workers.

Comrade Ruthenberg's report met with a unanimous approval of the entire membership of Milwaukee and the policy of the C. E. C. of the Workers Party will be carried out.

The hall in which comrade Ruthenberg spoke was packed and many sympathisers had to be turned away.

There was a large number of members of local trade unions who have fully approved the June 17th convention of the Farmer Labor party and also are in full accord with the United Front policy of the Workers Party of America.

"The Amalgamated" Meets

It is not exaggerating to say that every convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America turns some new page in the history of the American labor movement. And every new page has had some new, inspiriting story written upon its surface.

Last year the Russian-American Industrial Corporation was launched, thru which "The Amalgamated" organized its aid to the needle industry in Soviet Russia. The achievements of the "R. A. I. C." during the past year, has been one of the big inspirations, not only to the workers in the needle trades, but to the whole advance section of the American labor movement.

It is to be hoped that such another new page and such another encouraging story will be the outcome of the present convention of "The Amalgamated," now meeting in Philadelphia.

It can be done thru the convention taking an uncompromising and undivided stand for the National Farmer-Labor Party Convention to be held at St. Paul, Minn., June 17th. The value of sending delegates to St. Paul would be greatly lessened by also flirting with the nondescript gathering of July 4th, at Cleveland, Ohio.

It was in a recent issue of "The Advance," the official organ of "The Amalgamated," that an editorial appeared headed, "A Labor Party—Not a Third Party." The spirit of that editorial expression demands that "The Amalgamated" go to St. Paul and not to Cleveland.

It may be that "The Amalgamated" would be the only large international union to go to St. Paul. If this develops, then "The Amalgamated" can only be proud of the pioneering work it is doing. Its delegates were at the July 3rd Conference in Chicago, last year, and the delegates to the convention of "The Amalgamated," at Philadelphia, must know that it is the forces, organized at Chicago last year, that are shouldering the big struggle for a class political party of the workers and farmers of the United States.

St. Paul will see the gathering of the labor party forces. The third party elements will go to Cleveland. "The Amalgamated" is a class organization. Its delegates must go to St. Paul.

A Worthy Task

There is only one German publication, a weekly, the Arbeiter-Zeitung of Chicago, left in the land that displays any sympathies for the Socialist Party in this country, and for the Social-Democracy in Germany. And that sympathy seems to have undergone considerable change since the recent elections in Germany.

"If the loss of nearly half of the Socialist seats is to be regretted," says the publication, "there is cause, on the other hand, for rejoicing in the fact that the loss benefitted the Communists."

These are words of confession, indeed, from a source that has gained its inspiration these past years from the Hilquits, Bergers and other bitter anti-Communist socialists. The Arbeiter Zeitung admits a long trail of German socialist failure, from the day the Kaiser was overthrown, in the following words:

"One thing the election should teach the German workers and that is, not to repeat the mistakes made since the November revolution of 1918; the mistake of compromise with the capitalist class. We repeat what we have been teaching for decades, 'The liberation of the working class can be achieved only by the working class itself.'"

Since even this socialist organ now admits, what Communists have always contended during the whole struggle of the German workers for power, then there is no excuse for the thinking among the German workers of this country to remain outside the ranks of organized Communists. They should immediately get into the Workers Party.

The best way for America's German speaking workers to prevent the mistakes of the German social-democracy being repeated in this country is to completely repudiate the American Socialist Party. The Arbeiter-Zeitung, if it believes in its editorial expression, should join in the effort to accomplish this worthy task. And the same reasoning applies to the outlook before the workers of all other nationalities.

Mayor Curley, the Tammany Hall mayor of Boston, handed a golden key to the city to President Morris Sigman, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Convention in session there. But this kind of a key will give the workers no aid in unlocking their problems. That will only come thru intelligent action of the union's members, irrespective of the reactionary and disruptive policies of the union's officials.

The Illinois Miners Meet

The DAILY WORKER warmly greets the Peoria Convention of the Illinois Mine Workers, and thru it the 100,000 organized coal miners of the entire state. The gathering that assembles today has problems before it, just as large in scope as those that confront many international unions. In fact, the number of organized mine workers in Illinois outstrips by far the total membership of the majority of international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The United Mine Workers of Illinois constitutes the largest district unit within the miners' international union. What the Illinois miners decide, therefore, has a tremendous influence on the activities of the whole international.

Big issues are up for decision this week. The appointive power of the Farrington administration will be under fire. The rank and file wants to elect its spokesmen. Illinois miners will again be called upon to take action on the reinstatement of Alex Howat, expelled president of the Kansas District. The coal miners of this state can be depended on to stand 100 per cent with Alex Howat against the boss rule of International President John L. Lewis. In fact, Lewis himself, will be on trial for his refusal to give Howat a hearing at this year's convention of the international at Indianapolis. And the alliance of President Frank Farrington with the Lewis machine against Howat will also go on the grill. In fact, the Peoria gathering ought to be such another rank and file demonstration as the Kansas coal miners staged recently in their state, at Pittsburgh, at their district convention, when the Lewis spokesmen, repeatedly defeated, left in disgust, allowing "the men from the picks" to carry on their own business. And they did.

Action will also be taken against the Ku Klux Klan. It is hoped that this will be decisive, a resounding repudiation of the flirtation with the Klan carried on by International President Lewis.

There is unemployment rampant, not only in the coal industry of Illinois, but thruout the nation. This is another problem, out of which grows the wage cutting efforts of the bosses.

Unemployment and wage cutting are two issues that link up the coal miners with the workers in all other industries. But the Illinois miners should, and to a very great extent they do, consider all their problems from the standpoint of the welfare of the whole labor movement.

It is, therefore, to be expected that the Illinois miners will take definite action, not only on the gathering at Peoria, next Sunday, of the class Farmer-Labor forces of the state, but also on the mass National Farmer-Labor Convention to be held in St. Paul, Minn., June 17th.

We greet the delegates to the Peoria Miners' Convention as militant warriors of the workers against the whole capitalist class. The decisions of the convention will show how well they have learned to fight.

After Five Years

Five years ago the convention of the International Furriers' Union met in Chicago, a united organization, militant in spirit, proud of its achievements, and with enthusiasm for the future.

This week another convention of the Furriers' Union is being held in Chicago. Unity has been mutilated under the blows of the fascist club of the yellow socialist regime that maintains with force its seat in the administration saddle. The militant spirit has been put in a straight jacket, insofar as this has been possible, while the outlook for the future is marred by the prospect of new struggles with the reactionary officialdom, instead of a united assault against the bosses.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, at Boston, has its Sigman, and the Furriers' Union has its Kaufman. Both of these are a blight upon progressive action of the workers in the needle trades.

In spite of all the efforts of Kaufman's dictatorship, to exclude all semblance of opposition in this year's convention, there will be dissenters to face reaction and sound the appeal of progress.

It is time that Mussolini rule in the Furriers' Union, as in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, came to an end. Let the delegates to the convention realize that this year is a good time to end it.

One By One They Fall

The British government is planning to turn the old imperial Russian embassy in London over to the Soviet Delegation. Vladimir Sablin, czarist diplomat, has been allowed to maintain possession for the seven years since the czar fell, but the changing order has now dispossessed him. He must get out.

Thus the tentacles of the old czarist regime are clipped, one by one. Russian Soviet rule has secured possession of similar embassies in Rome, Berlin and other European capitols. One by one the citadels of the czarist reaction fall into the hands of the Soviets. Where the agents of Nicholas plotted foreign alliances with capitalist powers, the Soviet representatives will now keep open house for the workers and farmers, in the nations of the oppressed.

Judge E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, announces that the steel trust is not contemplating cutting wages. No doubt he has been reading about the stubborn fight of the car builders of the Pullman Company, who objected to having their wages slashed by this powerful corporation, that gets its inspiration from the steel profiteers.

"Liberty" is the name of a new weekly issued by the Chicago Tribune. We should say "Liberty" to think as the Tribune tells you to think.

Some Allies Against Communism

By J. Louis Engdal

VERY few workers are aware of the fact that there is a socialist congressman in Washington. If we are any judge, the voice of Victor L. Berger is not heard far beyond the neighborhood of his own desk in the House of Representatives' office building. Which in some ways is a pity. Because if a larger number of workers could hear the voice of the Milwaukee socialist, we are very sure there would be many more Communists.

If the workers know "Vic" Berger is in congress, fewer still know that the editor of the Milwaukee Leader, this lone surviving socialist daily, delivered a speech the other day to his fellow congressmen. It appears in the Congressional Record under the high sounding title, "A Survey of Our Political and Economic Conditions." And we have received a copy of it.

GEORGE Washington, surveying Virginia and Pennsylvania in the early days of the colonies, in an effort to steal as much land as possible from the Indians, didn't allow himself more latitude and longtitude than "Vic" Berger in his speech, as he dipped into all the problems confronting the human race. It was only after he had waded thru some 8,000 words that his impatient fellow-congressman from Wisconsin, Mr. Nelson, rose to inquire:

"Will the genleman please tell us what the Socialist Party really stands for—give us something of an outline of the party's principles."

It was only then that Berger condescended to use up about 200 words in an effort to tell what the Socialist Party stood for. This was in effect that, "The Socialist Party stands for the collective ownership and democratic management of all the social means of production and distribution."

THIS reply is typical of Berger's whole speech, which is really a study in pathos. Berger could have made pretty much the same reply, and probably did, when someone asked him what the People's Party stood for, when he attended its convention as a delegate in St. Louis, Mo., in 1896, before he helped organize the Social-Democratic and then the Socialist Parties.

Berger's speech in congress stands with Gompers' political proclamation for the American Federation of Labor, in showing that neither man has advanced in thought, let alone in action, in spite of the great upheavals that have taken place over the world these past ten years. And they both join in an opposition duet to the effect that:

"I am absolutely opposed to Communism."

BERGER'S speech was a pathetic one. He announced that he is not bothering much what is going to happen after the socialist party has accomplished the taking over of a few trusts, "because that is a pretty large program."

And then this confession:

"I gave Lenin six months for his experiment when he took control in November, 1917, but it has lasted six years, and it may last another sixty."

These are words that fall from the lips of a man more than 64 years old. On the brink of the grave he shows he has no faith in the onward march of his own cause, and with palsied hand, he vents his wrath upon the thing he hates—COMMUNISM.

His whole speech is a warning to capitalism against Communism. If the U. S. autocracy will not repeat the mistakes of the czarist autocracy, he argues, then it will be safe from Communism.

"I am not a Communist and have never agreed with Lenin," declared Berger in congress. "Moreover, I would rather use a hundred years to bring about a new world, a better world by evolution, with all the blessings of civilization, than bring it about by the bloody revolution." Which would indicate that the ex-school teacher Berger needs a few elementary lessons in the definition of the two words "evolution" and "revolution."

But instead, Berger continues with the usual broadside against hhe Soviet regime, concluding with, "In America also we shall soon have to decide the question whether the English or the Russian method is to be followed. What is it to be—a MacDonald or a MacLenin?"

Berger made his speech before the recent elections in Germany. Otherwise he would have had the answer of the workers of Germany, who have had half a century's trial of Berger's brand of socialism in all its phases. In connection with his speech Berger published in the Congressional Record a table showing the parliamentary representation of the socialists in the various countries. Germany he lists with 173 seats in the reichstag. But the workers revised that a week ago by cutting the socialist representation in half and turning it over to the Communists. The German workers will give Berger a lot of this "peaceful evolution." And they'll give him real revolution, too.

THE German workers set the pace for labor in other lands outside Russia. The British workers will follow their example. They will in time put their stamp of disapproval on the MacDonald regime, that urges increasing the British navy to defend British imperialism, that threatens force against the restless and oppressed masses of India, Egypt and other colonial dependencies, that seeks to arouse the backward peoples of Afghanistan in Asia against Soviet Rule in Russia, and that is an instrument for breaking strikes at home.

Just as socialists in all parliaments are an ally of capitalism against Communism, so Berger in congress warns his fellow republican and democratic spokesmen of Wall Street, that:

"Poverty is the mother of misery and the grandmother of revolutions. Again I say, then, gentlemen, our main fight ought to be to combat poverty. Poverty is a curse. Poverty is the mother of ignorance, of crime and disease. Poverty is dangerous to every body, but it is especially dangerous to the ruling class."

BERGER is like the bird in the jungle that warns the hippopotamus, uncouth monster of primeval places, of the approach of his enemies. Berger tries to warn capitalism of its enemy—Communism. But there is a big difference. The hippopotamus, lumbering along, has a chance of escape. But the capitalist system is here and it can't get away, it cannot escape, except thru its complete extermination.

All the dangers that Berger warns capitalism against are inherent in it—graft, corruption, war, militarism, child labor and all the rest. Capitalism cannot escape from them, any more than pre-war socialism can escape from the treason to the working class inherent in it, and that is working daily for its complete elimination from the field of the class struggle.

BUT Berger rattles on. Corruption must be eradicated, in his own words, in the name of "the beautiful scenery of Wisconsin," and of his "admiration for the First District of Wisconsin that sent him to Congress." Berger hit the Mellon tax bill, the housing shortage, child labor, the coming unemployment, the Teapot grafters in both parties, the world war, the bi-partisanship of Wall Street, and then offered this advice to the old party representatives of Big Business:

"If you want to defend property and make sure of property rights—and that, gentlemen, seems to be your aim—see to it that everybody in our country gets property."

A plea that the big profiteers divide a little of their swag with the workers and farmers—a flivver and a free pass to the movies for the city workers, perhaps, with a few acres of unmortgaged ground, and an extra Sears-Roebuck catalog for farmers. Berger cites the "6,000,000 peasant owners in France now," but somehow fails to show how French capitalism is immune from Communism as he claims under his scheme. The big capitalists would laugh at Berger's "dividing up" scheme. No doubt some of them are laughing at it now.

BERGER'S speech is a confession that the socialist party is not a class party, that he does not pretend to speak for the robbed and exploited workers and farmers. He was most blunt about this when he said:

"There is so little difference between the socialists and the progressives, and the so-called radicals of every description, that I cannot understand why they do not get together."

And again:

"There is not much difference between honest progressives and the socialists. . . . . There is virtually no reason why honest progressives should stay out of the socialist party."

ALL of which has put the Bergers and the Hillquits, with their socialist party in a dilemma. While they flirt around with the alleged progressives, these remain in the old parties, while the thinking workers and farmers are demanding a class Farmer-Labor Party. It is thus that the memberless socialist party goes to the progressive convention at Cleveland, July 4th, while all class conscious elements turn to St. Paul, for the June 17th Farmer-Labor gathering.

MOST pathetic of all is the fact that Berger, in his speech, and elsewhere, tries to traffic with the 20-year prison sentence imposed upon him for alleged violation of the espionage act.

His declaration sounds like the outbursts of Edwin Denby, deposed secretary of the navy, the other day, that if he had to choose between being shot and repudiating his part in the Teapot Scandal, he would rather be shot. But there is no danger of that.

So with the Milwaukee socialist. Referring to his trial and conviction, he confesess, "If I had to do it over again, I would do it all over again, as sure as my name is Victor Berger."

But capitalism will not trouble Berger again. He is safe, for them.

EVENTS during the past five years, since Berger joined with others in expelling the Communists from the socialist party, have shown that Berger was inspired by pro-Germanism during the war, and since, rather than by anti-capitalism.

During the war Berger wanted to save German supremacy from Wall Street. Now he wants to save Wall Street from Communism. He lost during the war because world imperialism is more powerful than narrow nationalism. And he will lose again, no matter how many rambling speeches may be permitted to make in congre because there is no power on ea that can stop the growing masses workers and farmers from marchi to world victory under the standa of Communism.

Capitalism has had its day! So Berger! They will pass together, lies to the last—AGAINST CO MUNISM.

Literature - - Music - - Drama

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

The annual prize contest of the Chicago Musical College was held at Orchestra Hall last Saturday night. There were two prizes for pianists, one for violinists and one for singers. Joe Harding won the violin prize, Harold Strong and Dorothy Kendrick the piano prizes, and Arlene Durkee the vocal award. It is noteworthy that of the nine contestants only two were men, and also noteworthy that both men won first prizes.

The violinists each played the first movement of the Spanish symphony by Edward Lalo. It is called a Spanish symphony probably because it is so distinctly and unmistakably French in character. Like so many French works for instrumental solos, it contains bits of music here and there, and the rest is tuneless and foolish technical display.

The Grieg piano concerto which followed is quite different. It is a big and powerful work, conceived not as a solo with orchestra accompaniment, but as an integrated composition, in which orchestra and piano play equally important parts.

The second piano prize was awarded for the best performance of a concerto by Xaver Scharwenka. The two movements played by each contestant contain in them the same sort of brilliant tunes that made Scharwenka popular with his "La Paloma."

Each singer sang a different operatic aria. Miss Durkee, the winner, sang the familiar "Kennst Du das Land" in Thomas "Mignon." The other arias were from "The Prophet" by Meyerbeer, and Verdi's "The Favorite."

Judging a contest of this kind is no easy job. So much weeding out has occurred beforehand that the final contestants are pretty evenly matched. The violinists and singers present differences in tone quality, which the pianists do not, and all have differences in interpretation. There is generally little difference in technical ability shown. Judgment must be on the basis of tone, for violinists and vocalists, interpretation, and that scarcely defineable quality known as musicianship. The judges were Frederick Stock, Leopold Auer, Rudolph Ganz, and Herbert Witherspoon.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

Sad State, West Virginia.

To the DAILY WORKER: I have done my very best to get subscribers for the DAILY WORKER, but have made no success. The people here are in very bad shape. There has been no work for some time.

I have showed my friends the paper. Everybody says it is a fine paper. And so long as I can get a dollar I will never be without the DAILY WORKER, as my wife and I know it is one of the best papers ever printed. It sure does give the straight news. The first DAILY WORKER I read was given me by my friend Martin Alapic. He is a reader of the DAILY WORKER.

Will close wishing you much success. Your faithful DAILY WORKER readers, Mr. and Mrs. George Gurkovich, Box 76, Handley, W. Va.

Canadian Farmers Broke

To the DAILY WORKER: I am sorry to return the enclosed list. It is not possible to get subs for anything here. There are no wages paid here, and the farmers are hopelessly in debt. I pass my own copy around always but I cannot get a sub. Yours truly, W. TRUSCOTT, Blackfoot, Alberta.

Morgan Passes the Buck.

NEW YORK, May 12.—J. P. Morgan found it more agreeable and safe to discuss how he and his wife got back without their passports than to explain what part he had in the proposed allied loan to Germany under the Dawes plan of reparations. After he had arrived on the Homeric, he intimated that since the United States government was not to participate in floating half of the proposed German loan, J. P. Morgan & Co. was the private firm most likely to take over the issue for disposal.

DAILY WORKER STORM CENTER AMONG FURRIERS

Delegates Sure Do Read Our Paper Closely

Twice yesterday the issue of the DAILY WORKER interrupted the regular order of business in the Furriers' Union convention, which is now in session at the Morrison hotel. The first time the matter was brought up by Delegate B. Golden, who took exception to the editorials in the paper, referring to President Morris Kaufman.

President Kaufman, who was in the chair, questioned whether the editorials had attacked the union or only the president. When the speaker replied that the affront was made upon the president, Kaufman replied that he could stand criticism and suggested that in place of the motion to exclude the DAILY WORKER reporter, he, the chairman be allowed to rule that all reporters could remain until the accounts printed in their papers showed a twisted version of the proceedings of the convention. Kaufman was unanimously sustained.

Toronto Delegates Wake Up.

Just before the adjournment of the morning session, the DAILY WORKER again became a subject of discussion, one in which all of the members evinced interest.

Delegate Holsworth of local No. 35, Toronto, introduced a clipping from the Monday issue of the paper, in which three resolutions are given as "passed" by Local Toronto. Both Delegate Holsworth and Delegate Curry, of the Toronto Joint Board and business agent of the union, denied knowledge of these resolutions.

Delegate Steinberg, of Local No. 40, Toronto, then explained that the resolutions were drawn up by him from recommendations given him by his local. The resolutions are (1) against the election of National Civic Federation officials in the American Federation of Labor conventions; (2) that the incoming G. E. B. of the union work for the re-establishment of the inside shop, where most of the tasks on a garment be done in one shop; (3) that the Furriers' Union be recognized on a shop delegate system.

Further heated debate on the matter of excluding DAILY WORKER reporters was evoked by Delegate Minor, of St. Paul, but President Kaufman from the chair suggested that Minor's exclusion motion be withdrawn and that the statements of Delegates Holsworth and Curry regarding their non-participation in the printed resolutions be accepted.

The regular business of the morning was the secretary's reading of the executive board's report. Much of the report was concerned with "left wing" activities, especially in New York.

The "Freiheit," Communist Jewish daily, was repeatedly mentioned and condemned for taking the part of the left wing in the Suroff instance and in the fight over the elections in certain New York locals, especially No. 15. The battle in this local was recounted in detail and the machine officials congratulated themselves that they had the membership of the union behind them as their re-election in the last elections showed.

From the indications at the convention's opening, the "red" issue is likely to consume a good deal of the time in discussion. The policy of the "machine" delegates is "treat them with ignorance," meaning ignore the Communists and the members of the Trade Union Educational League. But judging from the space in the Executive Board's report, devoted to the activities of the militants, the "machine" officialdom guided by its "Daily Forward" inspiration, is considerably concerned over their lack of rank and file support.

Every delegate had his free copy of the Jewish Daily Forward.

Sun Yat Sen, Rebel Leader in China, Is Reported to Have Died

JUDGE SHOWERS INJUNCTIONS ON FOOD PICKETS

Freund Rushes To Aid Of Greek Friends

Judge Hugo Freund again stepped to the aid of his friends, the Greek restaurant bosses, by granting an injunction that attempts to restrain picketing of seven more restaurants.

The injunction is directed against the Amalgamated Food Workers' union, which is striking against the 12 to 14-hour day in the eating houses. Five writs had previously been issued.

"The fight will go on until victory," announced District Organizer Charles H. Keller, when he heard of the writ. A big mass meeting will be held in Ryan's hall, 6512 Cottage Grove avenue, tonight to spread the strike to more restaurants.

The joke of Freund's injunction is that four enjoined restaurants, the Armore, 1050 Argyle avenue; the two William Karras restaurants at 5012 Broadway and 1141 Bryn Marr, and the New Diana at 1063 Argyle avenue, are not yet on strike.

Other restaurants just granted injunctions are the Royal at 4404 Broadway, the Peterson at 1007 Lawrence avenue, and the Washington at 1007 Argyle avenue.

INDIANA KLUX DECLARES WAR ON ATLANTA

Pillow Case Nighties Faction Torn

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 13.—The Indiana realm of the Ku Klux Klan was in open revolt today against the national organization.

D. C. Stephenson, elected Grand Dragon by Klan representatives from ninety-one of the ninety-two counties in the state, announced that the Indiana Klansmen had thrown off all the outside control that was not in harmony with their purposes. He charged national officers of the Klan with prostituting the organization for political purposes and called for a general house cleaning within the invisible empire.

"Our action does not necessarily mean secession," Stephenson explained. "We are going to defy the despotism of those who have used the Klan for their own personal gain."

MILLIONAIRE SLEUTHS LOOSE FEDERAL JOBS

Corny Vanderbilt And DuPont Fired

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Prominent men, who until Attorney General Stone dismissed them were carried on the rolls of the department of justice as "dollar-a-year" special agents of the bureau of investigation, were named before the senate Daugherty investigating committee today by Warren F. Grimes, a department attorney. They were:

Judge George A. Carpenter of Chicago.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., now a newspaper publisher in California.

General Coleman Du Pont, former senator from Delaware.

Charles D. Hilles, Republican national committeeman of New York.

Fred W. Upham, treasurer of the Republican national committee.

E. M. McLean, Washington publisher.

H. H. Votaw, superintendent of federal prisons and brother-in-law of the late President Harding.

John K. Tener, former governor of Pennsylvania.

Others who are still retained because they are government officials were:

Colonel Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian.

Assistant Attorney General Holland.

BOSSES' SHYSTER BUNK PALLS ON JUDGE FOELL

Tells Taylor Stuff Getting Old

Judge Charles M. Foell got tired of listening to the same old testimony of the same old stool-pigeons and dicks and yesterday told Dudley Taylor, attorney for the Chicago Dress Manufacturers' Association, where to get off.

Foell had just heard the cases of three more striking garment workers and given them sentences of $15 each. Taylor, as usual, argued for heavier fines for his "to-teach-them-a-lesson" policy. Judge Foell was bored and said that Taylor needn't repeat the old stalls and arguments, that he would fine the rest of the respondents as they should be fined for first offenses and if any later charges of contempt should be brought against them, he would be more severe.

All Fined and Dismissed.

Twenty-five of the striking garment workers were given $15 fines apiece, and eight were given $25 each, for peaceful picketing. Most of the workers fined are women; not more than a third are men.

The fifty cases to come before Judge "Dennie" Sullivan were put off until this morning. Some of these cases are from Hyman Bros. and should have been discharged before this time since the shop has settled with the union.

One of the bosses, W. J. Reinhardt, refused to take the stand yesterday in Foell's court against his employes. He has been a regular attendant at the court.

Pat Collins, the chief reciter of the prosecution's witness' catechism, came into the court room late and grinned maliciously when he saw the pickets all arrayed before Judge Foell. When he found out what was going on and how little the judge cared to hear his lies, he changed color a bit and retired to a back seat.

The strikers held a dancing competition for prizes in their meeting yesterday afternoon. A lively crowd attended the dance.

DAILY WORKER'S SERVICES IN THE CHICAGO GARMENT STRIKE LAUDED IN RESOLUTIONS BEFORE CONVENTION

By REBECCA GRECHT.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, May 13.—Facing the Sigman red-baiting machine at the International Ladies' Garment Workers' convention is a resolution from the striking dressmakers' local of Chicago, Local 100, asking the convention to express its appreciation of the services rendered during the Chicago strike by the DAILY WORKER.

The resolution sent in by the striking I. L. G. W. U. members tells how the DAILY WORKER co-operation rallied the labor movement to the cause of the union men and women who were battling the open shop bosses of Chicago.

This testimony from the rank and file as to the splendid support given by the Communist paper shatters the Sigman propaganda that the Communists are "disruptive" forces in the labor movement.

Demand Reinstatement.

Telegrams have been coming into the convention from I. L. G. W. U. shops in New York and Boston protesting the unseating of duly elected delegates and demanding the full reinstatement of the members who were expelled so outrageously from the union by the international officials.

Nothing has been accomplished so far at this convention which the union treasury is financing. That is nothing except red-baiting, praise of offi-

Wisconsin Copper Quick On Trigger; Kills Young Student

MADISON, Wis., May 13.—Peter M. Posepny, 21, of Two Rivers, Wis., a student at the university of Wisconsin, was shot and killed here early today by Patrick Powers, a veteran Madison policeman. Posepny was slain near Power's residence. Powers said he thought Posepny was a prowler.

ST. LOUIS, May 13.— President Coolidge's pre-campaign dope advertises a wave of prosperity in this country, but John Gonzales with his wife and nine children would not believe it if they read it. They had come from San Antonio, Tex., after having been told that in St. Louis there was abundance of work at high wages.

COURT MARTIAL FOR COMMUNIST LEADERS IN REACTIONARY ROUMANIA

VIENNA.—Raids against Communists are going on in Bucharest, the capital of Roumania, according to information reaching here. Among the 34 arrested Communists are two members of the central executive committee of the Communist party—Christesku and Dobrojanu, the leader of the Young Communist movement, Helen Philipovich; the editors of the underground party organs, Vasilesku and Lesten. All those arrested will be court martialed.

CAL'S TAX RELIEF FOR RICH FACES TEST THIS WEEK

Against Bonus And For Mellon Plan

WASHINGTON, May 13.—President Coolidge's taxation program will face its crucial test this week. Three important developments affecting the tax reduction question are expected.

1. President Coolidge's expected veto of the bonus bill and congressional reaction to this.
2. Decision whether the tax bill, now in conference between senate and house, can be made more nearly to approximate the Mellon program, which the president favors.
3. The fate in congress of Mr. Coolidge's veto of the Bursum pension bill, which entails a further drain on the treasury.

Possibility of a veto of the tax bill, should it come to the White House in the shape it passed the senate, is intimated in quarters close to the president. If Mr. Coolidge disapproves the tax measure, he could at the same time ask congress to pass a resolution providing for the 25 per cent reduction in this year's income tax and make the Mellon program one of the campaign issues.

Mr. Coolidge has until midnight, May 16, to act on the bonus bill. If not approved or disapproved by that time, the measure automatically will become a law.

COMMUNISTS GIVE LIVES TO HALT MONARCHIST COUP

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HALLE, Germany, May 13.—Eleven German workers were murdered at Boellberg, and hundreds more injured, many fatally, when police in armored cars yesterday fired machine guns on a group of Communists. The Communists, who had been attacked by armed Fascisti, had sought protection in a brewery at Boellberg, a small town near Halle, where Fascisti monarchists were parading in honor of the restoration of the statue of Von Moltke, destroyed when the German republic was established. The police were the agents of the Socialist government, which not only gave permission for the kaiserist demonstration, but also sent a company of honor from the so-called Moltke regiment to participate.

While the workers in the Ruhr were striking against the conditions brought on them by the war, militarism was the order of the day at Halle. War veterans of the steel helmet organization marched side by side with boys of the Werewolf bands, carrying 3,600 red, white and black banners and black skull flags, symbols of imperialism. Timorous Halle tradesmen, encouraged by government protection, hung out the banners of reaction. Two admirals, twenty-five generals and the former kaiser's fifth son and General von Ludendorff, who reviewed the troops, added the royal touch needed to recall the days of blood and iron. A demand to bring all Germany into one empire under a kaiser was made by Lieutenant Duesterberg, trainer of the Fascisti and one of the most bitter opponents of the republic.

Communists who attempted to reach Halle on foot to witness the parade found the roads blocked. Only 3,000 persons, favorable to the Fascisti, were permitted to reach the monument. Blows from sabres and rifle shots of General von Ludendorff's Bavarian guards answered all attempts at protest. "This is according to the custom of that country," reports a Berlin newspaper correspondent.

The strength of the Communists in the elections reveals the insignificance of the manifestations as giving an index to the strength of monarchist sentiment among the masses.

COAL MINERS OF ILLINOIS IN SESSION

Radical Note Struck At Opening of Meeting

By JACK JOHNSTONE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 13.—A radical note which was sounded early in the first session of the great Illinois miners' convention was displaced shortly after by the horn blast of reaction from Oscar Nelson, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

A louded blast of reaction no doubt, will be sounded later in the convention when President John L. Lewis, Secretary William Green and Vice-President Phil Murray, of the international, take the platform with the new friend, Frank Farrington.

The convention opened with Joe Lynal welcoming the delegates in the name of the Peoria central labor council. Mayor Woodrow, who followed, invited the visiting miners to enjoy themselves while they were in Peoria.

Next Reverend Carpenter was given the platform and lost no time in telling the convention that he was proud of being called a radical. He said that the world had changed since the big war and that democracy was on trial today against the forces of reaction.

Carpenter went on to say that he could not see why workers in one country should go and shoot down workers in another country.

Great applause followed from the delegates who have come from towns where hundred percenters are denouncing every foreigner and trying to whip the people up into the temper for any murderous purpose their masters may desire.

The Rotary Club came in for a lashing at the hands of the speaker and he stated that what was needed in the world, was service, not profit.

Thomas O'Connor, ex-mayor and ex-president of the plumbers' union and now holding the post of manager of the only union cracker factory in the United States, was the first who took the floor in behalf of the union label. In the course of his speech, O'Connor paved the way for Nelson with a reference to people who come into an organization for the purpose of creating dissension.

But before the vice-president of the Chicago Federation got the floor, the convention sat thru the ceremony of Lynal presenting a union-made gavel to President Farrington. Then the call for the convention was read and Farrington announced that John M. Lewis, international president, William Green, Secretary and Phil Murray, vice-president, would later attend the sessions.

This news that Lewis, the long-established enemy of Illinois miners' policies, would speak from their platform, got no applause from the men who had supported the Kansas miners' brave fight while Lewis was sending scabs into Kansas.

At last Oscar Nelson was given the floor and he was soon into the midst of a laudation of the old party political game and an attack on the Trade Union Educational League.

The one thing remarkable about Nelson's speech was that he forgot to mention Moscow.

Beginning his talk with the story of the fight of the flat janitors and thanking the officials present for the aid they had given the janitors when they were sent to prison, he began praising the governor of Illinois.

Then he declared that labor had defeated the constabulary bill, prevented strikes from being declared illegal and stopped the attempt to incorporate unions.

But, said Nelson, the greatest victory labor has ever had was the defeat of Essington, Brundage and McCormick at the primaries. He said that the unity of labor at the primaries had "taken the punch" out of the employers' association. He attacked the conspiracy between the courts, State's Attorney Crowe and and the employers' association.

The attack on the Trade Union Educational League—which actually has been one of the greatest forces behind the garment strike—was made with Nelson's usual animosity. His particular count against the League was the charge that certain officials of the federation had suffered somewhat in reputation as the result of the criticisms of the League. This criticism of reactionary leaders, Nelson termed "spreading poison."

PITTSBURGH STRIKERS BACK TO WORK UNDER PRESSURE OF LEADERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, May 13.—The carmen's strike which paralyzed the Pittsburgh railways' system since Friday midnight, has been called off with a two-year contract at the old wage scale. The union waives its just demands for a wage increase and gets the meagre promise that half the cost of the men's uniforms shall be borne by the company.

In spite of the leaders' pressure, the return-to-work motion barely carried. The vote was 920 in favor of continuing the strike and only 1,073 against.

MORGAN AIDS LOSE OUT AT FRENCH POLLS

Communists Show Surprising Strength

PARIS, May 13.—Raymond Poincare, the House of Morgan's French lackey went down to defeat in an election landslide which swept himself and his government from power and with him, all his royalist supporters. Not a single royalist candidate escaped the tornado. Clemenceau's supporters failed to weather the storm. Caillaux, still in exile as a result of his conviction of high treason during the "Tiger's" regime, staged a comeback thru the election of the entire list that had his support.

The strength showed by the Communists was remarkable. According to the latest reports, they have elected 26 representatives. Their election slogan was "A Workers and Peasants' Government."

The French senate is composed of 314 members, and the chamber of deputies of 610.

The elections of 1920 divided the senate among Radicals 120, Republicans of the Left 58, Progressives 23, Conservatives 20, Liberal Republicans 14, Socialist Republicans 2, United Socialists 2. The chamber of deputies, as elected in 1919, consisted of Republicans of the Left 133, Progressives 130, Socialist Radicals 83, Action Liberale 72, United Socialists 68, Radicals 60, Conservatives 31, Republican Socialists 27, Dissident Socialists 6.

The present representation is: Communists 26, Socialists 91, Republican Socialists 39, Radical Socialists 124, Radicals 33, Left Republicans 82, Republicans 117, Conservatives 11.

This was the first time the Communist party of France participated in an election campaign. Five years ago, when the last national election took place, there was yet no Communist party.

American workers are warned against attaching too much importance to the imposing radical designations of the left groups in the French assembly. As a matter of fact, the term "Socialist" means practically nothing here. Even Poincare is a Socialist of some stripe or other. It may seem paradoxical, but the only real Socialists in France are the Communists, tho the party of Longuet is entitled to the doubtful honor of

RUSSIANS IN GREETINGS TO A. C. W. UNION

Labor Party Issue Also Up at Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 13.—Cabled greetings from the Russian clothing workers were greeted with prolonged applause at the opening session of the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America here.

The message from the freed needle trades in Soviet Russia was as follows: "On behalf of 150,000 Russian clothing workers we greet the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. We urge the closest political and industrial unity, nationally and internationally."

It has become a custom, and an enjoyable one, for the conventions of "The Amalgamated" to receive greetings from the Russian needle workers, the closest possible co-operation existing between them.

Raise "Labor Party" Issue.

The Labor Party issue came before the convention in crystallized form when Arthur Holder, secretary of the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action addressed the delegates.

He asked for financial assistance for the July 4th gathering at Cleveland, "to continue the great work begun in the last elections, in the sending of patriotic men to congress."

There was no indication in anything that he said that there was any intention, on the part of the Cleveland gathering to form a labor party. Among the many resolutions presented and referred to the committee, were included quite a number demanding participation in the St. Paul, June 17th, National Farmer-Labor Party convention, not only by the international but also by its subordinate bodies. The introduction of these resolutions was greeted with stirring applause.

Local 2 Cases Postponed.

Today's session was mainly devoted to organizing the convention. Most disputed credentials were settled this morning, but the biggest dispute of all, that relating to the case of Local 2 in New York, was postponed for further hearings.

Great sentiment exists against seating the right wing which stole the election there. This issue is fundamental.

Workers Party—Debs' Greetings.

A burst of applause followed the reading of the greetings from the Workers Party of Philadelphia and the message from Eugene V. Debs.

Working with little success against the spirit of solidarity at the convention is the propaganda of the right wing, which is trying to arouse racial feelings between the Jews and Italians.

This propaganda is appearing in the pages of the Jewish Daily Forward and asserts, in last Sunday's issue:

While the band played "The International," hundreds of workers from the shops invaded Witherspoon hall and interrupted Hillman's opening speech to the convention. Delegates cheered and rose to their feet when-

PULLMAN STRIKERS GET SLIGHT CONCESSIONS; RETURN TO WORK; FEDERAL CONCILIATOR THE BUNK

The striking Pullman carbuilders, who have been out for close to five weeks, by a vote of 108 to 74, many not voting, at a meeting Monday night voted to return to work.

A committee of twelve of the strikers had battled gamely for a complete victory set down in a binding written agreement. But the odds were against them, three to one. Benjamin Marshman, conciliator for the U. S. Department of Labor, was in reality trying to get the men to return to work on the company's terms. The employes' committee of twelve, representing the Pullman Company Union, dared not speak out for their fellow workers on strike.

Under these conditions the men were forced to take back to their waiting strikers at Stancik's Hall, a decision to accept a compromise. Superintendent McLaren, for the Pullman Company, refused to lift the wage cut, but agreed to a considerable number of definite improvements in the working conditions of the men. A basic wage scale of $1.10 per hour for the riveters was also proposed by McLaren. He declared that if working conditions made the men fall below this average, the company would give it to the men as a day work wage. McLaren refused to sign a written agreement with the Railway Carmen's Union.

No Discrimination.

The biggest fight came over the discrimination against six of the strike

FIGHT AGAINST DEPORTATIONS AT ACUTE STAGE

Aliens Have No Rights, Rules Masters' Court

By Defense News Service.

Amended deportation warrants were issued this week for four I. W. W. ex-political prisoners on the grounds that they are undesirable residents of this country, because they have served terms in prison. These men are Herbert Mahler, Canadian; Joseph Oates, English; William Moran, Australian, and Pietro Nigra, Italian.

In order that the fight against these proposed deportations may continue, the general defense committee has just issued an appeal to all branches and members of the I. W. W. for immediate cash contributions. Money is needed to pay attorneys' fees and for publicity concerning these cases. For several months the New York branch of the general defense committee, of which Richard Brazier is secretary, has been carrying the burden of this campaign. It has financed all of its own operations, but has reached the point where it is exceedingly difficult to raise more money in the east.

Ex-Post Facto Law.

"These deportation warrants are both unjust and illegal," said James Morris, secretary of the general defense committee today. "They are based on a section of the immigration law which was not enacted until after the convictions of the men involved in the war opinion cases. Thus the warrants are a clear violation of article 1 of the United States constitution, which expressly stipulates that: 'No ex-post facto (after the fact) law . . . shall be passed.' We have succeeded in getting numerous organizations and individuals on both sides of the Atlantic to protest to President Coolidge and Secretary of Labor Davis against exiling the four fellow-workers mentioned and ten others against whom similar warrants are pending.

"So far the only visible result of these protests is that the case of John Avila has been reopened and will be accorded an opportunity to explain why he should not be deported. Only by steady pressure upon the authorities can we hope to win this fight, and only by gathering in adequate money quickly can we exert that pressure."

Gives Aliens No Rights.

"Action against the alien born ex-politicals by the department of labor and the decisions of the courts in the cases of Mahler and the other four are based upon a strange conception of law. Federal Judge George T. Page of Chicago said, and the United States supreme court has lately upheld his ruling, that aliens residing in the United States have absolutely no rights under the constitution, altho they are subject to all the laws grounded upon that document.

"Judge Page took the position that aliens entering this country come in solely as licensees and are amenable to discipline by congress.

"The same judge was upheld by the supreme tribunal in his decison that the ex-post facto provision of the constitution applied only to citizens and did not in any way affect cases brought against aliens. But you will find nowhere in the constitution any evidence that its framers had any intention of limiting its application solely to citizens. It clearly states that no ex-post facto law shall be passed."

P. O. Clerks' Death Fund.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—The postal clerks and mail carriers of Phoenix have created a death benefit by the payment of $3 per member. The total amount collected is placed at interest and on the death of a member the sum is used to defray funeral expenses or paid to his survivors and a new fund is created by another assessment.

NEW ORLEANS, May 13.—The New Orleans longshoremen's strike has been definitely lost and men holding union cards will not be employed if the fact is known. The unions have decided to abolish the differentials between the longshoremen and the loading screwmen and accept a flat rate of 80 cents an hour. Vessel agents refuse to meet the unions. Conditions on the docks are bad, owing to incompetent help.

LENINGRAD.—At a great mass demonstration, with thousands of workers, soldiers and sailors present, the corner stone for a monument to Lenin was laid the 16th of April in front of the Finland railroad station. It was on this spot that Lenin, in 1917, the 16th of April, made his famous speech calling upon the workers to take the power into their own hands. The armored car from which Lenin was speaking in 1917 participated in the ceremony. G. Zinoviev, president of the Third International, was the main speaker. The whole front of the railroad station was covered with a great ribbon with the words, "Lenin died, but his work is marching on. Close your ranks around the R. C. P., which is carrying on his ideals."

RIGHT WING SOCIALIST CLIQUE IN OKLAHOMA TRIES TO WIN FARMERS AND WORKERS AWAY FROM ST. PAUL

By JOSEPH MANLEY
(Special to The Daily Worker)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 13.—Out here in this Southwestern state famous for many products such as cotton, oil, high-jack politicians, and corn-whiskey (the latter made by the pioneers in the mountains), and lately in the public eye both because of the Ku Klux Klan and the late Jake Hamon's relation to Teapot Dome, live a people that will fight at the drop of a hat, and who will in the near future loom large in the coming political struggle to be waged around the banner of the Farmer-Labor movement.

The workers and farmers of this state are in a sorely exploited condition. The Standard Oil Company has them in a strangle hold. In the past this state witnessed many spectacular political campaigns. In 1914 the Socialist Party cast over 50,000 votes for its candidate for governor.

Oklahoma City, among other things, houses the Oklahoma Leader, a so-called co-operative printing institution, organized and dominated by Oscar Ameringer, John Hagel and Dan Hogan, former leaders of the right wing of the Socialist Party, who, when the split came, went into real "practical politics," and with their paper, "The Leader," backed and helped to organize the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction League with its non-partisan policy and its candidate for Governor, Jack Walton. Like all groups having for its goal—immediate political spoils to be gained by the worst kind of opportunism, this group is now at daggers drawn. And the Leader crowd are looking for a new place to light.

In the heart of this welter of political confusion, treachery and "shake down," met a convention of exploited farmers and industrial workers, less than one hundred in all, mostly farmers, ostensibly to form a Farmer-Labor Party. It had been called by a committee organized largely thru the instrumentality of J. E. Snyder and D. Cobb, both of whom had been active in former years in the left wing of the state Socialist Party. The call reads for a State Farmer-Labor Party in support of the June 17 convention at St. Paul.

Hold Sessions in Church.

The convention went into session on Friday morning in the Auditorium of the Baptist Church, the pastor of which pronounced the benediction. J. W. Houchin, temporary chairman of the committee that called the convention, announced he was very sorry that the Mayor was too busy to address the convention.

It was plain from the outset that Dan Hogan, Ernest R. Chamberlain and George Wilson, all of whom are commonly referred to as the "Leader bunch," were in complete control of the convention. Following the opening of the convention George Wilson delivered an oration typical of democratic Fourth of July gatherings. He is, or was until recently, a progressive democrat. And his fulsome praise of La Follette appeared incongruous alongside of his glorification of James Madison and Thomas Jefferson.

Temporary chairman Houchin, in his keynote speech said: "There was no motive behind the Third Party organization but to allow us to cast our suffrage untrammelled." And that "the main purpose was to perfect an organization to put Bob La Follette in the White House."

A credentials committee was appointed by Houchin and its minute examination of all credentials caused much delay, and impatience of delegates at the loss of time that was exhibited. The committee finally reported at the afternoon session and it developed that their report refused to recommend seating J. E. Snyder, "Because he was not a resident of Oklahoma." This caused an uproar and charges of "Communism" and "Moscow" were hurled thick and fast. The temporary chairman Houchin refused to entertain an amendment to the report of the committee, "that Snyder be seated," and rammed thru in true steamroller style the report of the committee.

Says Hogan Looks Like Cop.

The dullness of the afternoon session was little enlivened by the election of Dan Hogan, editor of the Leader, as permanent chairman. Hogan looks like a disappointed policeman. He unwound himself of a long peroration which he said, was an explanation of the platform of La Follette. He concluded with the striking statement that: "We must strip capitalism of its power and give the right of expression to the people." In what manner this was to be accomplished he did not indicate or say, except to vaguely hint that something could be accomplished by making La Follette President.

Immediately following the adjournment of the evening session, I learned why the Leader crowd gave me such black looks as I sat in the convention. On seeing the front page of the newspapers, I learned that one "Joseph Manley, high in national Communist circles, was closely watching the convention." This news travelled fast and I at once became a center of both fear and curiosity, even on the streets.

The night session threatened to be a tame and perfunctory affair. But the report of Ernest Chamberlain, another editor of the Leader, as chairman of the policy committee spilled the beans. His proposal on policy carried a clause that provided for allowing of "the endorsement of other party candidates wherever it would be a benefit." As this proposition of nonpartisanship was about to be voted upon, delegate Cobb succeeded in getting the floor. He pointed out the similarity of this policy to that of the Farmer-Labor Progressive League and offered an amendment that action on the proposition be postponed until the following day's session. Chamberlain's attempt to explain away the non-partisan feature of his policy brought forth speeches and created a turmoil that scared him and the rest of the Leader crowd. At midnight the convention finally adjourned until the next day to reconsider the question of policy.

The few champions of a class Farmer-Labor Party and the St. Paul convention have but a slim chance against the Leader steamroller, with George Wilson, who is after the nomination for U. S. Senator, as the engineer. But the militant farmer-laborites are determined to give this gang of political burglars a run for their money at the closing day's session.

MORGAN'S TOOLS LOSE OUT IN FRENCH POLL

representing the kind of Socialism that the orphans of the Second International inherited.

Immediately news of Poincare's defeat reached the bourse, the franc fell with a sickening thud. In financial circles it is predicted that the left victory, while making things look brighter from a political point of view for the Dawes plan, will have a tendency to make the house of Morgan disinclined to risk its good money to save a continent that appears to be on a liberal spree.

Morgan had based his calculations on a Poincare victory. He saved the premier before when the franc was sinking by pouring $100,000 into the French treasury. This time, however, the peasants who were being taxed to death in order to keep the troops in the Ruhr, rendered a "thumbs down" decision on the Poincare cabinet. The franc today before the bourse opened was being quoted at 18.30 to the dollar.

Poincare canceled his proposed conference with Premier MacDonald. The French premier and his cabinet will resign on June 1. It is expected Millerand, former Socialist, will resign from the presidency.

Edouard Herriot, Socialist mayor of Lyons and leader in the movement among French business men to recognize Soviet Russia, is picked as the most likely successor to Poincare. Herriot, despite his title, is not a Socialist, but of the LaFollette or Victor Berger type of liberal.

The left press is demanding the resignation of Millerand, who is, if possible, more reactionary than Poincare. The Comite des Forges—the French steel trust—recently planned to establish a Fascisti dictatorship, with Poincare at its head, but the growth of left sentiment prevented the carrying out of this plan. The latest figures give the lefts 307, with 264 for the right.

Chicago Commune Gets Land

MOSCOW.—The immigration committee of the committee of labor and defense has granted the Soviet economy "Krasnaya Dacha" in Odessa district to the Chicago Dairy and Poultry Commune "Herald." The delegates of the commune are at present in Moscow. The grant is subject to the approval by the Ukranian Soviet government.

Landlord Kind, But Poor.

A landlord who claims to be almost as poor as his tenants, appeared in renters' court before Judge Samuel Trude yesterday. Thomas Tobin is the man, who came to complain that since he was out of work he would have to put out his tenant, Mrs. Mary Kozlak, a young widow with four children, owing four months' rent.

The bailiff's heart was touched and he took up a collection in the court room, amounting to $64. Tobin generously allowed Mrs. Kozlak to keep the money, and said he would not charge her rent for the rest of the month.

ANTOFOGASTA, Chile, May 13.—One hundred houses and a railway station were destroyed today by explosion of two cart loads of powder in front of the offices of the Edward Nitrate Workers, the largest in Chile. Many casualties are reported. Half of the Edwards installations were destroyed by the blast.

GERMANY SHUT OFF FROM ALL RUSSIAN TRADE

Soviet Boycott Order Stuns Berlin

BERLIN, May 13.—Business circles in Germany were in a state of consternation yesterday, when it became known that the Soviet government had sent a telegram to its trade delegation in Riga instructing all foreign trade representatives of the Workers' Republic to immediately cease business with all German firms and cancel all contracts already made.

The message ordered that all goods usually shipped thru Germany must be diverted to other ports. The order was over the signature of M. Krassin, Commissar for Trade.

"What next?" is the question asked here by the capitalists as they consider the retaliatory measures adopted by Moscow for the illegal raiding of its embassy in Berlin by political police under the instructions of the Prussian minister of the Interior. The excuse for the raid was a fanciful tale of the escape of a Communist prisoner into the embassy and the consequent search, thru desks and files for the missing culprit.

The Workers' and Peasants' government resented this challenge to its independence and showed immediately that it would stand no nonsense from the German bourgeoisie. It promptly shut up its trade headquarters, called its ambassador to Moscow and along with cutting off trade relations with Germany, cancelled all German concessions in Russia.

Monster mass meetings are being held daily thruout Russia and at these meetings the Soviet government is urged to warn the capitalists of the world that the workers and peasants of that country stand ready for any emergency, to protect their revolution from the bourgeois wolves who cannot help showing their fangs every now and then.

That the German government committed a bad blunder in raiding the embassy is now conceded by all except the Ludendorf-Socialist forces. Their hatred for Communism and Communists outweighs whatever judgment they they might be able to exercise on ordinary occasions. The heavy vote of the Communists in the last elections and the swing toward the left wing in France making de jure recognition by that country of Russia almost a certainty, adds to the anxiety of the more sober-minded Germans whose pockets feel the results of the anti-Soviet saber-rattling of the militarists.

RUSSIAN NEEDLE WORKERS GREET AMALGAMATED

ever the strains of the workers' anthem reached them. Three hundred and fifty delegates and hundreds of visitors packed the convention hall.

Hillman recounted in his speech the establishment by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of the Russian Industrial corporation. He said it was a practical demonstration of international workers' solidarity.

For the preservation of the Amalgamated, Hillman mentioned the need of a Farmer-Labor party, to which he pledged the co-operation of the union.

"It appears to be a possibility, and if it becomes a reality, the Amalgamated will put all its forces behind it to strike a new way in the political field," stated Hillman, with tremendous applause and cheers from the convention.

Resolutions supporting the June 17 convention, in St. Paul, of Farmer-Labor representatives are before the proper committee. Gossip in the convention hall intimates that the administration of the union favors sending delegates also to the July 4 convention of progressives. Struggle on this issue is expected.

Credentials Fight Coming.

A big fight is expected on Local No. 2, New York, when the credentials committee reports. In this local, right wing representatives stole the election with strong arm men.

Royal Meeker, Congressman LaGuardia and Jacob Schlossberg, secretary of the Amalgamated, were the other speakers of the opening of the convention. Schlossberg received a considerable ovation upon speaking.

The convention opening was marked with a magnificent floral display and with much fine music.

The Jewish Forward carries a story insinuating that there will be racial clashes in the union. The right wing seems to be looking for trouble, but may have trouble getting it, as the issues are between the left and the center factions.

"The great problem is national differences. Each nation has its own view of organization tasks. There are often separate interests—special economic interests. It is not a secret that there is a struggle on the subject of which race should have the bigger place in the shops. New York, formerly the Jewish center, is losing its Jewish color and Italian workers almost equal the Jewish now."

Few delegates fall for this propaganda.

American Committee For Relief Of Russ Kids To Liquidate

NEW YORK, May 13.—The American Committee for Relief of Russian Children, of which Captain Paxton Hibben is head, announces that it will liquidate its work for the destitute children of Russia on June 30.

"It is not that there is no longer need for such work," Capt. Hibben declared in making the announcement. "There is terrible and compelling need as a consequence of the war, the invasion of Russia by the white armies and the famine. But it is no longer possible to raise money to meet this need at the very low cost of raising funds that this Committee has set as the limit of its overhead. So we must stop. We are still $4,000 short of what we have promised to send over before June 30. I do not know whether we shall even be able to keep our pledge to send this amount, or not. If not, a lot of Russian babies will just have to die, and that's that."

PULLMAN STRIKE ENDS; WORKERS GET CONCESSIONS

leaders, whom the company had threatened to fire and blacklist. McLaren proposed that these men confer with him individually. He would not promise to take back all the strikers, but said he would take back whom he pleased.

The strikers voted to return to work in a body, and included in the motion to return to work, the provision that every single man would be taken back without discrimination, or no one would return.

Holmgren Fights to End.

John Holmgren declared before the vote that he hoped the strikers would not return to work. "I will not count the votes," said Holmgren. "I would not like to have the handling of one single vote to return to work on my conscience."

"You have completely tied up production in the Pullman plant for almost five weeks; you have forced the Pullman company to do what they have not been known to do before—to recognize the strikers' committee. If you return to work, go back with your heads up, knowing that you have given the Pullman company the worst battle they ever had. I will be out at the gate in the morning, and do my best for the men the company threatens to blacklist."

Many of the strikers spoke, declaring that they would carry thru the fight inside the shop that they had started outside. The men are laying plans to get everyone into the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen's Union, so that the next time the men walk out, every department will strike together.

Meaningless Concessions.

Some of the concessions made to the strikers were; From now on they will be paid for cutting out bad rivets; they will be supplied with newer tools, and each man is to permanently keep possession of these tools; scaffoldings will be rebuilt; preliminary preparation will be paid for.

However, it was evident from the reports of some of the committeemen representing the strikers, that the afternoon conference had been controlled by the company union committee of twelve, which the strikers know to be stool pigeons, by Benjamin Marshman, professional strike-breaker for the government, and by McLaren representing the Pullman company.

"Conditions will be the same as we had when we walked out, only with a little sweetening," one of the strikers committeemen reported. "If you boys think that I am going to go like a cringing cur to McLaren and ask him to please take me off the blacklist, you are much mistaken. If you boys go back to work, you won't have a damn thing to say about the setting of the prices you will work under, in spite of company promises."

Gunn Hardboiled.

It also came out in the report of the strikers' committee that Francis Gunn had told the strikers' committeemen that if they didn't show their faces in the shop yesterday morning, they would be fired. "I will leave the gates open three days," said Francis Gunn to the committee. "Then after that, those who have not come back to work, will be fired. We will hire who we please, and blacklist who we please."

Holmgren, in his last speech to the strikers, again thanked the Workers Party and the DAILY WORKER for the large and effective part they had played in the strike. He advised the men to keep in touch with the Workers Party and to read the DAILY WORKER.

The Workers Party will hold a mass meeting in Stancik's Hall on Tuesday, May 20th, to discuss the meaning of the strike and some of its probable after effects. Jack MacCarthy, who is well known to the Pullman workers thru his activities for the DAILY WORKER on behalf of the strikers will speak. Earl Browder, for many years one of America's keenest trade unionists, has been invited to attend the meeting.

Form W. P. Branch.

An English Branch of the Workers Party has been formed, which some of the strikers have already joined. The first meeting of the English branch of the Workers Party of Pullman will be held in Stancik's small hall this Friday. All the Pullman workers are invited to attend.

Daily Worker On Job.

The reporter for the DAILY WORKER took the floor just before the vote. He declared, "The DAILY WORKER does not want you to go back to work. If you do, do not go back joyously. Realize that you are beaten. But whether or not you go back to work, we want to assure you that the DAILY WORKER is supporting you. We will be on the job in the next Pullman strike, and we will be on the job to help you organize within the shop.

"Benjamin Marshman seems pleased that you are going back to work without guarantees. He says he represents the government. Sure, Marshman represents the government. He represents the government just as those cops who slugged you and dragged you off to jail represent the government. Marshman and the Pullman Company represent the government, because big business, including the Pullman Company, control and run the government.

"Marshman wants to see you go back to work on no matter what terms. It would be a feather in his cap if he could tell his masters that he had smashed this strike. He would be aiding big business well. Marshman, like the government he represents, is a professional strikebreaker."

Marshman had said in his speech that he hoped the men would go back to work. He had declared he thought McLaren and Gunn, the slave-driving and union-smashing lackeys of the Pullman Company, were "big men." "I believe if the men who are blacklisted go up and ask Gunn in a nice way, they will get their jobs back," said the mushy-mouthed Marshman.

The speech of the DAILY WORKER reporter seemed to get under Marshman's skin. After the DAILY WORKER reporter left the floor, Marshman rushed over to him and spoke in a very conciliatory manner. "Why do you knock me?" asked Marshman. "You know I am friendly to labor, I used to work with Oscar Nelson. I made a weak speech purposely tonight so that the men would vote not to return to work, I believe the men will reject the Company's proposition. I really believe that the blacklisted strike leaders will be taken back to work."

The DAILY WORKER reporter replied that Gunn and McLaren and Marshman himself, were not fit to wipe the shoes of the strike leaders. He said it was no victory to go crawling up to the Pullman officials like whipped logs and begging for their jobs. He declared Marshman an enemy of labor, practically in the employ of the large corporations, who should be discredited by labor.

Jack McCarthy, circulation manager of the DAILY WORKER, also spoke.

DAILY WORKER GETS PRAISE AT I. L. G. U. MEET

cialdom and the boosting of the policy of class collaboration.

The star booster for reaction today was Lucy Robbins, Gompers' unofficial mascot who was introduced by Morris Sigman as organizer of the amnesty movement for political prisoners—the same "amnesty" worker who thought that the amnesty issue was settled when Debs was out of prison tho Leavenworth penitentiary was still full of workingmen convicted for their opinions during the war.

Gompers-Cahan-Hillquit Unity.

Lucy Robbins attempted to flatter the organization for the cordial reception given Samuel Gompers. She praised the "understanding" which she said now existed between formerly antagonistic elements in the labor movement which this reception to Gompers indicated.

The "understanding" that exists is the one between Gompers, the old party politician, and Morris Hillquit and Abe Cahan, socialists—all united for self-preservation in a triple alliance against the "Reds."

President Sigman took the floor during the session and outlined the report of the annual general executive board. This report admits the growing small sweat-shop evil the union is confronted with.

Would Help the Boss.

The G. E. B. remedies for this small sweat shop evil which is so closely relation to the new jobber situation involves a program of class collaboration. This is shown by Sigman's exposition of the report which puts it up to the union to protect the interests of the manufacturer and jobber as well as the union.

Left wing delegates—the only convention force which is working for a strong, fighting union—are demanding that the convention get down to business and take up concrete proposals for building up the organization. The amalgamation issue will not down and it cannot be sidetracked.

UNITED FRONT IS URGED BY PENNSY LABOR

Farmer-Labor Convention Calls For Unity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 13.— The state convention of the Farmer-Labor Party of Pennsylvania opened its sessions yesterday in Eagle's Hall with fifty-two delegates present, the great majority of whom are also delegates to the convention of the State Federation of Labor now on here. Many more delegates are expected to arrive.

All speakers addressing the convention appealed for a united front of labor regardless of political views. The first clash occurred over the seating of delegates. All delegates were finally seated.

Delegate Fred Merrick of Pittsburgh moved that all delegates to the Federation of Labor convention be seated as delegates to the Farmer-Labor convention. After a lengthy debate, this motion was lost by a vote of 16 to 24, the radicals voting for the motion.

Secretary Fuller reported that possibilities for a Farmer-Labor Party thruout the state are very favorable and that in several places Farmer-Labor Parties succeeded in nominating candidates and even in capturing the primaries of the old capitalist parties.

Delegate Pat Toohey of Cannonsburg, pointed out that the Federation of Labor failed to do its duty in building up a real organization of the working class and expressed hope that the rank and file would insist on action in the future.

A big fight is expected on the report of the resolutions committee on the question of June 17 and July 4 conventions. The sentiment is strong for June 17. Officials of the party failed to make any recommendation on this subject.

The convention will meet every night after the Federation of Labor convention adjourns. The latter opened yesterday in the Lyric theatre. President Maurer is subjected to much criticism for inviting the steel trust secretary of Labor, James J. Davis to address the convention on new immigration laws.

STIR SENATE IN THREAT TO SCALP RAILROAD ACT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 13.— Senate leaders were thrown into confusion today by threats of progressives to scalp the Esch-Cummins act.

Not content with promises of action on farm relief measures, the progressives, who have moved the senate to their bidding thruout this session, have quietly made plans to force immediate lowering of freight rates. The first hint of this purpose was given when Senator Pittman, of Nevada, acting from the democratic side, tacked the long and short haul bill upon the war department appropriation measure.

Trick to Bring It Up.

It is realized that rail legislation could not be acted upon if it was taken up in order, so the expedient of adding it to an appropriation bill has been used.

The band of progressives and democrats are determined to force a vote upon the amendment today if possible and leaders are seeking some means to stop them.

The "long and short haul" bill, reported out of the interstate commerce committee by its democratic chairman, Senator Smith, is vigorously opposed by the railroads. Briefly, it would prevent them from charging a lower rate for a long than for a short haul. It has previously been the custom of the roads, according to charges made by Pittman on the floor, to reduce their rates along the waterways where rates were cheap.

Railroads vs. Boats.

Pittman said that these low rates were merely given to chase steamboats out of business.

Now the charge is made that transcontinental rates have been lowered by the railroads to hurt shipping from coast to coast thru the Panama Canal. Pittman says if their plan was carried out as placed before the interstate commerce commission, half the shipping of the Panama Canal would be killed off within a short time.

The army appropriation measure contained an appropriation of $7,500,000 for the Panama Canal and hence the railroad issue was advanced by Pittman. The railroads now are protected by section four of the Esch-Cummins act, which the amendment would repeal.

Most of the leaders do not wish to vote on the issue at this time and thus another test of strength between the democratic-progressive coalition and the remainder of the senate is in prospect. The success of the coalition rests this time as on previous occasions, upon how many votes the democrats can furnish.

COAL COMBINE UNDER FIRE IN FEDERAL PROBE

Midwest Assn. Wants Bosses' Closed Shop

By MARTIN A. DILMON,
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—The Midwest Coal association, charged by the federal trade commission with being an unlawful combination in restraint of trade, is undergoing a hearing before the commission at St. Louis.

From the testimony, it appears that coal dealers not members of the combine are driven out of business or into the association. Pressure is brought on mining companies to refuse coal to independents, with the veiled threat that "established" dealers (association members) cannot purchase coal from mines which do.

E. J. Wallace, St. Louis coal dealer and commissioner of the association, admitted efforts against independents. He holds he was within his legal rights.

Mining Companies Approached.

The commission supports its complaint by letters written by Wallace to coal companies. The documents were admitted in evidence despite objections of counsel for Wallace, who contended they were taken from his files under duress. Most of these letters were written in 1921 and blacklisted two or three Chicago dealers, others in Iowa and St. Louis. In the letters Wallace contended that these dealers were not recognized by the combine and should not be recognized by mining companies, to whom the letters were written.

No one anticipates serious penalties in the case. The accused combine will fight to a finish in support of the boycott as a means of forcing a closed shop of organized business.

Coolidge Leads In G. O. P. Primaries But Not In Washington

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Accidents Coolidge failed to stop the employment of Francis J. Heney, America's greatest graft prosecutor, by Senator Couzens' committee which will probe the administration of Secretary Mellon in the bureau of internal revenue. A seven-hour battle in the Senate between the Old Guard Republicans on the one side and the Progressives and Democrats on the other settled that issue. He was severely beaten.

Next morning Coolidge called Lodge, Borah and Smoot to the White House, to warn them that he would veto all radical legislation, including the Japanese exclusion measure involved in the immigration bill. He intimated that he would veto the tax bill as it is being revised by the progressives and Democrats in the Senate and House. Only a week ago Coolidge said he was for "exclusion" of the Japanese. Now he is frightened at the public response to that declaration.

The two opposition parties laugh at his veto threats, and beg him to go ahead. They propose to keep congress in session and show the country that Coolidge is a plain fascist, lacking the Mussolini boldness.

Glick Thinks Of Your Paper So You Should Think of Glick

The Glick Music Stores are popular and successful because they are more anxious to please than to make big profits.

They deserve the support of every DAILY WORKER reader not only because they advertise in our paper, but because this growing firm employs many of our friends and personal acquaintances.

Going into either the store at 2100 W. Division street, or their branch store at 1655 W. 63rd street, is like going to the home of a friend.

Personality, punctuality and persistency has been the keynote of the splendid service and rapid growth of this music store where you can buy anything in the musical line and feel that you are getting your money's worth and that you are dealing with friends.

The success of any newspaper depends in a great measure on the revenue from advertising, and advertisers spend their money to get business. You can help the DAILY WORKER by saying, "I saw your advertisement in the DAILY WORKER," and by going out of your way if necessary, to patronize the friends of our paper.

When you think of anything in the music line, think of Glicks.

CITIZENSHIP PAPERS GRANTED TO SWORN ANTI-BOLSHEVIKS ONLY

MERCER, Pa., May 13.—The adjoining courtroom in Mercer, where Tony Kovadovich, steel worker, was being convicted for "sedition," was crowded with prospective American citizens being examined for final citizenship papers. A small but autocratic examiner from Pittsburgh was firing away questions. The prize question was: "ARE YOU A BOLSHEVIK, ANARCHIST OR I. W. W.? Do you believe in these things?" Out of several hundred examined no reds were discovered. All read the local town scandalizers, loved their family and boss, never were arrested and opposed the reds.

The one principal qualification required by the commonwealth of all future citizens is that they love their master and oppose his slaves daring to think out loud.

Mercer K. K. K. Holds Konklave.

Large white letters were painted on the roads surrounding the Mercer county courthouse, where the "sedition" trial was being held—all roads leading into Mercer were painted up with these large white letters. These three letters were K. K. K., announcing that an all-day county konklave would be held Saturday, May 10, the day Steel Worker Tony Kovacovich was found guilty of sedition.

Vital Mechanical Coal Loading Issue Ignored By Lewis

By J. A. HAMILTON.

The interest in the mechanical coal loader as a substitute for the miner with his shovel is reflected in the proposal of the Hillman Coal company, one of the largest operators in the Pittsburgh district, to bear part of the expense of an investigation by the United States bureau of mines, of the performance of mechanical loaders in actual use.

The proposed investigation would require ten months, cover all coal mining states, and would result in a report suggesting methods and mine layouts for loading coal from the Pittsburgh seam with machines.

Mechanical loading would affect the miners (1) by reducing the labor required, and hence the demand for miners; (2) reducing the skill and effort, and hence furnish an excuse for cutting wages and make it easier to secure miners from other industries.

One of the worst condemnations of the Lewis machine is that in its policy it entirely ignores the changes which will be brought about by mechanical loading, among other technical changes of the near future.

John Brown's Birth Remembered; Plan Memorial At Grave

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., May. 13.—Memorial services were held here Saturday, to commemorate the birth of the anti-slavery champion, John Brown, born 124 years ago, by the John Brown Memorial Association of Philadelphia.

In an address delivered during the memorial services, Mr. William Pickens, Field Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said:

"More than half a century afterward most sane men admit that John Brown was right; that slavery was an evil not to be compromised with but destroyed.

"It is familiar history today how John Brown's whole life, from his birth in New England to his death on a Virginia gallows, was a protest and a warfare against human slavery. It was not the Negro that he loved. It was slavery that he hated. And unlike many others, he would not compromise with brutal wrong on the shallow excuse of color. He planned and plotted and worked and fought and bled until he made Kansas free, and then from the mountains of what was then northwestern Virginia, he struck a mighty blow at the almost almighty slave power. In prison and on the scaffold he was as steadfast and unchangeable as the God in whom he believed. He died and his immortal soul inspired a million men to accomplish the work which he dared with a handful of men to attempt.

"If John Brown, of Connecticut, and New York, had done his magnificent deed in defense of the fortunate and the favorites of the powerful, the shaft to his memory today would tower up in rivalry to that erected to the honor of George Washington, who was one of the slaveholders of Virginia."

'SEDITION' TRIAL OF KOVACOVICH IS STEEL FARCE

Employers Out For Five More Convictions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MERCER, Pa., May 13.—The trial of Tony Kovacovich, first of the Farrell defendants, came to its close today. After seven days of battling, considered by many the greatest labor trial in the history of America's Siberia, the state and defense rested and made their final speeches to the jury. Attorney I. E. Ferguson, for the defense, made the opening speech proclaiming the right of workers to organize and their right to be members of the Workers Party of America. The history of the human race and the evolution of society was explained so clearly that few left the court room without knowing that all thru the ages men like Tony Kovavich have suffered for their ideals. A rebel in Palestine who was charged with sedition, and executed, for advocating the Brotherhood of Man. High school students with their instructors, members of the legal profession and crowds of curiosity seekers were in the court room as for three solid hours the case made by the prosecution was riddled and torn to pieces. The only argument left for the prosecutor was to wave the flag, which he did to the best of his meager ability.

A 12-Hour Day Steel Slave.

Attorney Barker, for the defense, told the jury about the life of the defendant since coming to America; of his many long years in the steel mills of the Sharon Steel Hoop Co. as a 12-hour wage slave; that no evidence has been introduced by the prosecution showing that the defendant was other than a hard-working man of noble character. Six days before his arrest in February, Tony Kovacovich married and his honeymoon has been spent in his masters' jails and courts. Attorney Barker charged that the prosecution has used old world grudges to stir up hatred amongst the steel workers and used Serbian nationalists, under the influence of priests, as stoop-pigeons, against members of the Workers Party.

Prosecutor Myers made the final plea to the jury. Soviet Russia was pictured as a land of bloodshed and riot. The sedition law of Pennsylvania was defended as a "fine law" and one the Commonwealth was compelled to enact because L. A. K. Martens was alleged to have spent "millions" of dollars attempting to overthrow the U. S. government.

Wants Daily Worker Outlawed.

The prosecutor let the cat out of the bag when he, in a minute of passion, told the jury that if a verdict of guilty is returned that the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party would be outlawed in the state of Pennsylvania. Classes are un-American and do not exist in America. The Farmer-Labor Party idea is all wrong shouted out the angered captain of militia who resigned his commission just BEFORE the World War broke out. Men like Tony Kovacovich were pictured as murderers and thieves out to turn loose fountains of blood and overthrow the glorious state of Pennsylvania—the most progressive state in the Union, the backbone of the nation, the keystone of the arch. There are NO wage slaves in America and Henry Ford is an example of what America does for its willing sons. Ford is a WORKER, yelled Myers, a sample of what can be done in America by those who are willing to live within the law and apply themselves.

Wild Flag Waving.

The last shot at the jury by Prosecutor Myers was the flag waving stunt. With tears running down his cheeks the ex-captain painted the boys in Flanders field, sleeping their last long sleep, all rising up to point the finger of scorn at the jury if they did not return a verdict of guilty. Those who died for alleged democracy were used as a witness by the Commonwealth against this humble steel worker. The jury was instructed by Judge McLaughry and retired to their jury room. The crowd filed out of the court house and gathering in groups discussed the outcome. All thru the night the light in the jury room shown thru the trees and lighted up the K. K. K. sign painted in large white letters on the pavement.

Guilty of Rebellion.

Along towards daybreak the jury reached its verdict. At nine o'clock Saturday morning they filed into their places and handed their sealed verdict over to Judge McLaughry. It read GIULTY as charged in the indictment, this jury of alleged peers, themselves slaves, found Steel Worker Tony Kovacovich guilty of being a rebel. Bail at $3,000 was immediately arranged and the verdict will be appealed.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, homeland of the liberty-loving Quakers, has received its proud pound of flesh and vindicated the coal and steel barons.

The fight has just started and the defense with forces intact prepares for the trials of the other five steel workers to be tried in June, prepared to fight to the last ditch. The prosecution will launch its campaign against all worker organizations and Pennsylvania promises to become the battleground, picked by the capitalist class, to make a nation-wide drive against labor.

Let it be remembered that the labor movement of Pennsylvania is on trial and the iron heel will be pressed down hard upon all other labor organizations daring to organize or assemble as workers.

Unless the labor movement and supporters rally to the support of the remaining five steel workers, yet to be tried, the fight will be almost hopeless and in this forsaken spot tucked away in the hills, the curtain will be drawn down on the labor movement of Pennsylvania.

The defense committee who have placed their resources, funds contributed by labor, back of the first case, have a very difficult task ahead. Defense funds are urgently needed for the defense of the remaining five workers.

Verdict Against Working Class.

The Workers Party, and all other working class organizations, will cease to exist legally in Pennsylvania unless the battle waged by the defense is continued. The verdict against Steel Worker Tony Kovacovich is a verdict against the working class of not only Pennsylvania, but the entire country. Other states will apply their sedition and criminal syndicalist laws against labor, whether its organized or not, and the master class mad from victory will crush out of existence and jail all workers daring to raise their voice in protest. Are the workers of America ready to battle the coal and steel barons of Pennsylvania for the right of workers to organize and assemble peacefully as workers? The six Farrell steel workers await your answer.

"The conviction of Tony Kovacovich for 'sedition and criminal syndicalism' in the Mercer county court was not based on evidence, but sheer prejudice," said defense Attorney Isaac Ferguson, who has returned to Chicago to prepare the appeal.

"We are confident of obtaining Kovacovich's release," continued Ferguson to the DAILY WORKER. "In every case thruout the country higher courts have been discharging men convicted under these syndicalist laws.

K. K. K. Prejudice.

"The prosecution confessed the weakness of its case when it found that the Workers party program could not prejudice the jury sufficiently, and it laid emphasis on programs of earlier parties. The whole technique of the prosecution was an appeal to prejudice in a community where the Ku Klux Klan is influential. All the roads leading to Mercer were covered with K. K. K. signs.

"The indictment of the defendant was a matter of class persecution. Justice had nothing to do with it. Kovacovich is a steel worker who believes in organizing for a better society than the steel corporation can give his class."

Other defendants coming to trial in the June term of court are Andy Kovacovich, Andy Dugan, John Sarovich, John Radias and Tony Mirich.

Stool, Judge, Prosecutor.

Leading figures in the Farrell, Pa., prosecution which the Steel Trust organized for the purpose of heading off organization work among the steel mill workers are Lennon himself, Judge J. A. McDaughry, the judge who tried and sentenced Israel Blankenstein on a similar charge; Prosecutor Myers, an ex-army officer, and a bigoted upholder of Steel Trust rule.

Prominent among the spectators was the Rev. Medio, founder of the Croatian-American Protective Society, a would-be Fascisti organization. Prominent also in the audience were Steel Trust stool pigeons and ladies of leisure who came to look over the "reds" their husbands were framing up. Numerous and undeterred by the hostile gazes of the authorities were crowds of working men and women who are aroused by the czaristic repression now going on in this district.

Attorney Izaas E. Ferguson for the defense is filing an appeal against the conviction. The conduct of the court bristles with errors.

Labor Unions Back Unions.

Labor unions in the Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio steel district are supporting the Farrell defense. The Cleveland central body was one of the last to join the movement. The issue effects all labor organizations because it involves the right to assemble, protest aganst the abuses of the Steel Trust and urge labor organization.

The Workers Party has been urging all steel workers to build up the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and make it a weapon with which to subdue the tyrannical Steel combine, the same terroristic organization that it has been since it was organized in 1901.

Address all letters for the defense to WILLIAM J. WHITE, treasurer, Box 883, Youngstown, Ohio.

2 COMMUNISTS FREED IN PENNSYLVANIA AS ANOTHER IS CONVICTED

Israel Blankenstein was convicted on the charge of being the organizer of the Communist Party in the Pittsburgh territory in May, 1922, and sentenced to serve from two to four years in the Western Pennsylvania Penitentiary. On May 11th, Comrade Blankenstein was released, having served his two years' minimum sentence. He sends the following telegram to the National Office of the Party:

> Feeling fine. Ready for work after short vacation. Will stay this week at Pittsburgh. Would like to spend week or two in St. Louis or New York. If you want me let me know where you place me. Address headquarters. Greetings all.

Joseph Martinowich, who was sentenced to three to five years in the Western Pennsylvania Penitentiary on the same charge as Blankenstein, was released a few days earlier, having also served his entire minimum sentence. Both Blankenstein and Martinowich are held on deportation charges by the Federal authorities, Blankenstein being a citizen of Russia and cannot be deported, since permission cannot be secured from the Soviet authorities for his entering into Soviet Russia, by the United States government. Martinowich is to be deported to Jugo-Slavia after sixty days if the Federal authorities are successful in making their case.

The expiration of the two sentences comes just simultaneously with the conviction of Tony Kovacovich at Mercer, Pa., under the same vicious "sedition and criminal syndicalism law."

NEGRO PHYSICIAN SEVERELY LASHED, POLICE IGNORE IT

Victimized Race Is Quitting Alabama

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TALLADEGA, Ala., May 13.—Dr. W. H. Brummitt, president of the Alabama Medical Association of Negro doctors, is recovering slowly from a frightful beating administered by leading white citizens of this backward community.

The respectable gangsters pulled him out of his house, tied and blindfolded him, took him into a patch of woods where they beat him and then gave him ninety days to leave town.

Police refuse to entertain formal complaints lodged by Dr. Brummitt.

The reason for the assault is Dr. Brummitt's policy of giving medical treatment to anyone who called for it regardless of race or sex. Nothing else was alleged except that he had overstepped the color line in the practice of his profession—a color line that does not exist when it comes to white doctors treating colored women for pay.

Dr. Brummitt does not intend to leave this community—within the 90 days, at least. However, hundreds of Negro tenant farmers and workers have gone North to escape from the lash and noose. Deserted farm houses and vacant cotton fields and farm houses cover the countryside today.

Fight Negro Lad's Hanging.

NEW YORK, May 12.—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is fighting the electrocution of a 13-year-old colored boy, Elias Ridge, in Oklahoma, who would be the youngest person ever executed in that state, if sentence is carried out. The boy was accused of having killed the wife of a white farmer living near Pensacola, Okla., in 1922, was hastily tried and sentenced to death by electrocution. Dr. A. Baxter Whitby, president at that time of the Oklahoma City branch of the N. A. A. C. P., became interested in the case, retained a lawyer, who gave his services without charge, to obtain a commutation of the death sentence for the boy.

LET RED FLAGS WAVE, COUNSELS CANADIAN LABOR ALDERMAN

MONTREAL, May 13.—"I say that the repeated seizure of red flags is only provocative and leads the people from whom they were taken to wonder if there is such liberty in Canada as they had been led to believe," declared Alderman Jos. Schubert, labor representative, in the city council, in protest against the seizure of red flags by the police in the Montreal May day parades.

Schubert stated that Premier Ramsey MacDonald of Britain had formerly participated in red flag demonstrations.

Illinois Natives Lead Foreigners In Illiteracy

Over 175,000 people in this state cannot write in any language, according to a recent report of the "Labor Bulletin" of the Illinois Department of Labor.

When this startling record is compared with others published by the same department, the result is even more astonishing. Figures show that 89,820 boys and 57,057 girls under 17 years of age are "gainfully employed" in the state. One-third of these are in manufactures; 40,000 in clerical work; 19,000 boys on the farms; 16,500 in transportation; 9,000 in domestic and personal service; 3,800 boys in the mines; 1,200 in professional service; and 1,100 in public service.

Immigration Not To Blame.

Over 36,000 of those employed are under 16 years of age and more than 3,600 are from 10 to 13 years old. A third of the boys under 14 are employed on home farms as laborers.

Immigration is not responsible for the high rate of illiteracy in the state because more than half the children of 10 to 14 who cannot write, are native born and of native born parents. Only 4 children out of every 1,000 of foreign parentage are unable to write, while 11 out of every 1,000 of native born cannot write.

Oil Promoter Runs Against Farmer-Labor Candidate

ROCHESTER, Minn., May 13.—Running against Julius J. Reiter, Farmer-Labor candidate for congress from this district, is an oil promoter, Oscar C. Ronkin. The oil candidate is also an attorney and Y. M. C. A. director.

Ronkin's bid for votes is his financial record as county attorney, an office he held until a year ago.

He brought $2,000 into the treasury in fines paid by bootleggers at $100 per. There are said to be 300 men and women following the bootlegging trade in the county at this time, so they got off easily.

House Suspects $20,000,000 Profit Of Shipping Board

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13.—Where did the Shipping Board get that $20,000,000 net profit registered for the operations of the last four years, the House investigating committee is asking? The treasurer, T. L. Clear, didn't make clear why the grafters hadn't absorbed the huge profit, nor why the profit is at all when the Board has been claiming a loss in operation. His tesimony is to be continued under the prosecution of Representative Davis, Democrat from Tennessee.

LEGION STEALING I. W. W. THUNDER IN "WHIPPING BOSS"

Radicals First Exposed Florida Lashing

By KARL PRETSHOLD.

When the American Legion is forced to steal its thunder from such organizations as the Federated Press and the I. W. W., it must be pretty hard up to find something to its credit. The poor legion in need of money and prestige and publicity is showing a motion picture, "The Whipping Boss" in a Chicago theatre. The story of the picture is based on the tragedy of Martin Tabert, a North Dakota lad who was arrested as a vag and beaten to death while a leased convict in a Florida prison camp.

In order to help along with the publicity that will make the showing of the movie a financial success, the legion is letting it to be known that they had a great deal to do with exposing the conditions which lead to Tabert's death. They also claim they helped abolish the lash and the convict leasing system in Florida.

Appealed to Labor Press.

The truth is, C. H. Grimson, district attorney in Langdon, N. D., Tabert's home town, wrote to the Defense News Service of the I. W. W. asking that they give publicity to the Tabert case. The Defense News Bulletin for March 17, 1923, carried a story about Tabert's death. The Federated Press also carried a story about the same time. These were the first stories carried by national news organizations. The stories from both services were widely reprinted in labor papers all over the country.

On March 16, 1923, the Defense News Service sent a letter to the district attorney suggesting to him that he write the New York World about the case.

The World carried several stories about Tabert's death. When the legislature of North Dakota protested to the legislature of Florida about the treatment accorded Tabert, the World began claiming credit for all publicity given the case. The first story in the World was printed after many labor papers had told the story to their readers.

When the state legislature of Florida abolished the lash and the convict leasing system, the World sat back and did a little crowing. "See what a great paper we are. See what we did. We are the stuff. We are the defender of the under dog. We are the original cat's meow."

The story which had been a seven-day wonder, passed and was forgotten.

Legion Claims Credit.

Now, in Chicago, the American Legion comes along needing both publicity and jack and is running the movie, "The Whipping Boss." They claim and insist that they are the original and only defenders of the under dog. They and no one else abolished all evils in the prison system in Florida.

Up till now no one ever heard of the legion in connection with the Tabert case. But no one seemed to remember that the I. W. W. Defense News Service and Federated Press were the first national news agencies to carry the story to the World and that the labor papers of the country were the first to publish the story.

The Chicago Tribune review of the legion movie said: "The American Legion and other organizations started an investigation which resulted in the abolishment of the convict leasing system in Florida and a law against the lash."

Entirely just, that "and other organizations."

NEW TREATMENT FOR PNEUMONIA DISCOVERED BY HARVARD STUDENT IS FIFTY PER CENT EFFECTIVE

NEW YORK, May 13.—Medical circles here today were discussing with great interest announcement of a new treatment for pneumonia with the potential power of saving from 22,500 to 45,000 lives a year in the United States alone.

The treatment, according to a statement by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which financed researches ending in its discovery, is effective in from 25 to 50 per cent of the cases where it is used. It was perfected by Dr. Lloyd B. Felton, a young physician of the department of preventive medicine and hygiene of Harvard Medical School.

Sixty cases have been treated successfully with the discovery in Boston and sixty in New York.

Substance forming the basis of the treatment is a white crystalline powder separated from the ordinary horse serum which has been used for some time with uncertain results in treatment of pneumonia. It is believed to be the protective substance or the "anti-body" against pneumonia, in a nearly pure state. Injected in human beings, it gives no unfavorable reaction.

Discovery of the treatment is the result of five years' work organized by the insurance company after the influenza epidemic of 1918.

The discoverer, Dr. Felton, is 32 years of age and was born in Pinegrove Mills, Pa., spent his youth in New Philadelphia, Ohio, and was educated at John Hopkins. He has been doing research work at Harvard since 1922.

OUST T. U. E. L. MEN FROM L. A. FAKERS' COUNCIL

Metal Trades Lead New Policy

By MAUD McCREERY,
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—The Los Angeles Central Labor council, in its last meeting, unseated E. Russell, delegate from Machinists' union No. 311 because of his admitted membership in the Trade Union Educational league.

The action was based upon a resolution recently adopted in the Metal Trades council, which declared unfit for membership any person holding membership in the T. U. E. L.

The metal trades resolution followed a letter from James O'Connell, president of the metal trades department, American Federation of Labor, in which he stated that membership in a dual organization unfitted one for a seat in the council, and that, in his opinion, the T. U. E. L. was a dual organization.

J. Selvis, Molders' union No. 374, was previously unseated in the Central Labor council. Other delegates are to be removed as soon as their affiliation with the T. U. E. L. is established, according to John S. Horn, council secretary. The council refuses to permit members of local carpenters' unions who have been expelled for alleged membership in the league and for working for amalgamation, the Labor party and recognition of Russia, to sit as visitors in council meetings. The meetings are open to the public.

Cigarmakers' Union In Bethlehem, Pa., Fight Pay Reduction

By A. JAKIRA.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., May 13.—About one thousand cigar makers of three large cigar factories of this city are out on strike for the last six weeks. Most of the strikers are Hungarian girls and women.

The cigar workers have in the past been receiving 85 cents per 100 cigars. At this rate the girls had to work hard enough to make ends meet. But the cigar manufacturers decided that the price paid was too high for a worker and decided to effect a cut of five to eleven cents a hundred. This the employes could not accept and went on strike. The sixth week still finds the workers united and the factories closed.

Much credit for the good spirit shown by the strikers must be given to members of the Workers' Party and Young Workers League who are playing a most prominent part in the strike. Even the A. F. L. organizers had to admit that the Communists have done much good in educating the workers to the needs of forming a union and to be united against the bosses. Comrade Eber of the Elore is right on the job assisting the strikers in their struggle against their employers.

It is rumored that steel manufacturers are assisting the cigar manucturers in their attempt to break the strike. Many of the striking women's husbands are working in the steel mills.

Many of the workers are now compelled to take a rest one week out of every two. It has been noticed that most of those laid off are the husbands of the striking cigar makers.

Skypilots and Labor Fakers Will Discuss Their Business Affairs

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The second annual meeting of the Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems is announced to take place May 27 and 28 in Pittsburgh at the William Penn hotel. Wages of American labor will be discussed by Father Haas, professor at Marquette university; by J. Rogers Flannery of the Vanadium Company and by Lee E. Keller, statistician of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes. Miss Sara Conboy of the United Textile Workers will talk on co-operative labor banks, while P. J. Conlon, vice-president of the International Association of Machinists will describe the Glenwood plan of industrial harmony in the B. & O. railroad shops. W. P. Clarke of the Flint Glass Workers' Union and F. F. DuBrul of the National Machine Tool Builders' Association will debate collective bargaining.

SUB-DISTRICT 4 SECRETARY WATT IN INCISIVE REPLY TO PHYSICAL PROBE PROJECT

Meeting in Springfield, Illinois, recently, the State Medical Association favored the passage of a law that should make compulsory the physical examination twice each year of all wage earners. The proposal of the medical fraternity was given much publicity by the Illinois State Journal, and John J. Watts, secretary-treasurer of Sub-District No. 4 of District 12, United Mine Workers of America, addressed the following open letter to the physicians and surgeons in reply to their expressions of approval for the measure mentioned:

Watt's Letter.

Sirs:

The problem of unemployment has been solved by the action taken yesterday by the Illinois Medical Society, who, it was reported, are contemplating activity along the line of having a Compulsory Physical Examination OF THE WORKERS enacted into law. "Hooray!" All that will have to be done is for the men who have been put out of the mining industry in this state and in the United States, will be to be examined by a M. D., and all the time he will be required to lose, will be 4½ days out of each year instead of hundreds of days each year.

Won't that be grand? The hundreds of mines in Illinois that now are closed down will be able to run almost full time; the 20 mines down in this vicinity, with thousands of miners now looking for work, will (just as soon as this law is passed) be employed all but 4½ days in each year. Hooray again, leave it to the doctors of Medical Science to cure the economic evils of the capitalist system. They deserve a ton of ton of bituminous coal for their discovery. We take it for granted that if in the event this law is passed, that the medicalists will, of course for the good of the workers and industry, charge no fee for their services (or will that be true?) You know it is hardly fair to presume that a M. D. would charge anything for services rendered to the workers, and besides this is for the benefit of all concerned; therefore, they of course could not think of charging for such services. You know they don't charge much now; what is it, $3.00 a call, $25.00 for confinement cases, etc. But be that as it may, just look at the benefit that the worker will derive, work guaranteed for every day in the year with the exception of 4½ days. Now, again we state that of course the M. D.'s will not charge for such medical examinations as contemplated by the law that they are requesting; but supposing the legislators who pass the bill, will provide for a $2.00 fee for the examination of each industrial worker twice a year, and there are approximately 30,000,000 wage workers in these United States. At $4.00 a head, it would make a nice little melon for the M. D.'s of about $120,000,000; that would be taken out of whose pocket, Mr. Doctor? Why, out of the wage earners' of course, because if the law would provide that the owner should pay for such services rendered, the owner derives his profits out of the production of the worker, and instead of it being a benefit as you declare, it would to the contrary be taking $120,000,000 out of the wages of the workers, according to your own argument.

We wonder why some of the great labor leaders did not get in touch with the M. D.'s before they sent work out to their constituents that industry was over-developed, that there were too many farms and too many farmers, that there were too many shoe factories and too many shoe makers; that there were too many mines and too many miners, etc., etc., etc., and the solutions for these grave problems was for the farmers to leave their farms (some hundreds of thousands have via the mortgage route) and go into the mines and factories; that the miners leave the mines and go to the farms (some have, but it has been to the POOR FARMS). Why, oh why was not the medical profession consulted first, and this valuable information secured that all that was required to cure the economic ills was to have a COMPULSORY PHYSICAL EXAMINATION OF THE WORKERS passed by law?

Now will these benefactors of the working class also have inserted in this law that they are contemplating that in every case where they examine a worker and find him physically fit to perform labor, that in case then he cannot be employed that he will be compensated? That should be, because you say that the workers are loosing millions by the lack of such legislation. Therefore, someone must be gaining what the worker loses; this someone can be no other than the "OWNER" of the industry, and it would be "illegal" gain, and should be paid to the worker from whom it must have been taken, as the "worker" is the creator of such.

Then coal miners' children in this state would not have to go hungry to school, bare-footed and ragged, while the M. D.'s are enjoying the hospitality provided by the Elks Club; then the wife might have a new dress and hat once in a while. Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness will become again a reality. I move that the M. D.'s be given the addition of two more letters for their last more for the benefit of the working class, and that these two letters be B. S.

Yours,
JOHN J. WATT, Sec'y.-Treas.,
Sub-District No. 4.

P. S.—Dear Benevolent Doctors: If you want to do something for the industrial workers, provide some legislation to cure the economic ills, instead of some law curing the ills of the individual.

DECISION HITS SYNDICALISM PERSECUTION

Idaho Court Frees An I. W. W. Organizer

(Labor Defense Council Service.)

Criminal Syndicalist legislation, whose jealous guardians (Messrs. Burns and Daugherty) have recently been forced out of the Government in disgrace, is said to have been undermined by a decision just rendered by District Court Judge B. S. Varian in Idaho, dismissing the case of C. W. Hammond.

Hammond, an I. W. W. organizer, was arrested under the Idaho Criminal Syndicalist law, solely because he was a member of the I. W. W. The defense was based on the principle that membership in the I. W. W. does not constitute a violation of the Criminal Syndicalist Law.

Just what effect this Idaho decision will have on the other Criminal Syndicalist cases, now pending in the various states, notably the famous "Michigan Cases" involving Foster, Ruthenberg, Dunne and the 29 other Communist leaders—is difficult to determine. However, well-known labor attorneys and other legal authorities believe that the Idaho decision is symptomatic of the present trend in cases of this kind. When jury-fixer Burns' stool pigeons raided the convention of the Communist Party in Berrien County, Michigan, in the summer of 1922, the indictments were based principally on the charge of membership in the Communist Party. From Judge Varian's decision in Idaho it would appear that membership in a revolutionary working class organization does not constitute a violation of the law.

Only Chance Here To See Great Film "Russia-Germany"

In Germany armed clashes have broken out again between workers and reactionaries. The workers are fighting against the monarchists, the capitalists, the Fascisti and the government troops. Workers' blood is being spilled. Ludendorff, with the connivance of the Social-Democrats, is openly preparing a military coup, and the workers, led by the Communist party, are throwing their forces against him. The only way to get an idea of what is going on in Germany is to see the film, "Russia and Germany—A Tale of Two Republics," which will be shown in Chicago tomorrow (Wednesday) night, in two showings, one at 7 and the other at 9, at Orchestra hall, on South Michigan avenue. Germany on the verge of revolution, with both sides preparing for the decisive battle; Germany with its laboring population presenting a picture of suffering and revolt—all this will be seen on the screen tomorrow night.

And Russia in contrast to Germany, having achieved its proletarian revolution, is going forward with immense strides. This also is seen vividly in the picture. No one can afford to miss this tremendous motion picture of misery and revolt in Germany and the joyous thriving of a free workers' republic in Russia.

The proceeds of the showing go to the fund being gathered by the Committee for International Workers' Aid for the relief of the workers of Germany.

50 SHOE FIRMS CLOSED IN LYNN IN LAST 18 MONTHS

LYNN, Mass., May 13.—Startling shrinkage of the shoe industry in Lynn is revealed by a report compiled by the Massachusetts Bureau of Labor Statistics. In the last 18 months Lynn has lost 50 shoe firms thru liquidation or removal. Capital invested in Lynn shoe factories in 1919 aggregated $42,728,162, and produced $66,457,349 worth of shoes annually, while three years later the 125 shoe shops remaining represented capital of only $15,748,129 and produced shoes valued at only $31,671,819.

"CAN" CANNED SALMON—OR GO AFTER HARDING

Flight Of Men Draws Notice To Foul Fleet

By HARVEY O'CONNOR
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

SEATTLE, May 13.—When 15 Filipinos and a Hindu clambered over the side of the salmon ship Ben F. Packard, moored in Seattle harbor, and forced their way to a launch, they focussed the attention of Seattle on the unbelievable conditions on the Alaska cannery vessels, known as the "hell fleet."

Their dramatic escape from actual imprisonment on the hell ship caused radio flashes to fly from the Packard's master to the harbor radio. A police patrol boat picked up the 16 orientals and rushed them to jail at dawn.

Later in the day the Washington state department of labor and P. B. Gill of the sailors' union obtained their release. An arbitration board visited the ship and found:

1. One hundred Mexicans, Filipinos, Negroes and Chinese confined in a black hole in the vessel devoid of ventilation and natural light.

2. A store run by a Chinese boss where $1 is charged for cotton socks, 25 cents for soap and similar extortions.

3. The men held for an entire week and denied shore leave.

4. A number of men detained against their will in the frightful oriental quarters.

5. A Filipino kitchen galley, six feet square; on the upper deck from which the men take their food down into the hole to eat it while sitting on their bunks, there being no dining accommodations.

6. A Chinese galley where two vats for cooking rice constituted the sole cooking arrangements.

7. Lavatories next to the galleys. No washroom and no chance of keeping clean. Vermin infesting the orientals.

8. Men with venereal disease.

The Hindu who escaped from the "hell ship" was a graduate student at the University of Washington and holds a degree from the University of California.

Crews for Salmon "Hell Fleets."

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13.—The Boilermakers' union has reported on behalf of two of its members a barefaced attempt to secure enforced labor for the "hell fleet" of Alaska salmon packing ships. Two union boilermakers looking for a job were accosted on the street by detectives, who, finding they were out of work, gave them their choice of enlisting on an Alaska boat or going to jail for vagrancy. The Alaska Fishermen's union reported a similar case with one of its locked out members, and the Central Labor council is investigating.

The deadlock over prices for piece work continues between the fishermen and the packers, and the union is conducting a passive resistance. No strike has been called, but union fishermen are refusing to take passage on the "hell fleet." The packers are recruiting crews by fair means or foul, half a dozen boats having sailed from this port so far. It is claimed that a number of workers so secured were caught by the methods used by the police department against the two boilermakers.

Three Labor Men Win Office Jobs In St. Paul Vote

ST. PAUL, May 13.—Tho defeated for the mayoralty, St. Paul labor put its candidate, William F. Scott, in office as city controller and elected Herman C. Wenzel and James M. Clancy to the city council. Both were city commissioners. George L. Siegel, Labor candidate for mayor, lost by about 5,000 out of 70,000 votes. The Labor platform fought domination of the city by big business thru Mayor A. E. Nelson, who was re-elected. Other Labor planks were municipal ownership of all public utilities, abolition of contract labor on city work and home rule.

Railway Men Lose Work When Tourists Shun California

PHOENIX, Ariz., May 13.—Approximately 150 railroad laborers, employed by the Arizona Eastern on the Phoenix and Globe division were laid off the last few days, according to C. M. Scott, general manager of the company. A number of shopmen and track men had been laid off here. Decrease in business, partly due to the foot and mouth disease in California, is said to be the reason.

KANSAS CITY. — Crate Owens, agent, Union Finance company, has been sentenced to 90 days in jail and fined $1,000 on a charge of usury, the maximum under the law. Owens was charged with collecting 10 per cent a week, or 520 per cent a year, on loans. This company specialized in loans to wage earners.

CIVIL LIBERTIES BUREAU DEMANDS INVESTIGATION OF BURNS' CRIMINAL ACTS, IN LETTER TO SEN. BROOKHART

(By the Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 13.—"The resignation of William J. Burns as chief, bureau of investigation, federal department of justice, while it may minimize the connection between the detective agencies will not affect the system itself," the American Civil Liberties union, New York, states in a letter to Senator Smith W. Brookhart, chairman senate investigating committee, demanding an investigation of the bureau.

"William J. Burns should have been dismissed long ago," says a New York World editorial. "He resigned because he was compelled to get out. He had defied public opinion as long as he could. His leaving is the one decent step in a long dishonorable career in Washington."

Charges contained in the Liberties union letter follow:

"1) That the department of justice is now maintaining a system of political and industrial espionage thruout the country which has no relation whatever to the enforcement of the federal statutes or a relation so slight as not to justify it. Only a small portion of the cases examined or the reports received ever result in prosecution. The activities are much more analagous to those of the secret police of the old autocracies of Europe and are intended chiefly to curb certain types of radical and labor activities by means of intimidation and disruption.

"2. Half a million dollars or more of taxpayers money are being wasted in this fruitless type of work.

"3. The system is from public view by a screen of secrecy thrown up around it by representatives of the department of justice, who allege that its workings cannot be exposed to public view because they are of so confidential a nature. That has always been the argument advanced by the secret police system of history to protect its own privilege and power.

"4. The agents of the bureau of investigation are engaged in wholesale lawlessness as testified to in hearings before your committee, as evidenced in their connections with private detective agencies engaged in provocative acts among radical organizations and trade unions, in their unlawful searches and seizures, in tapping telephone wires and the like.

5. The pretenses of secrecy in regard to "confidential lists" and data are a mere cloak for propaganda of the bureau of investigation which constantly gives out confidential information to favored organizations and publications in order to spread propaganda favorable to its activities against radicals and labor. It seeks by so doing to justify its claim about alleged revolutionary outbreaks in order to justify continued high expenditures in the employment of five times as many detectives as ten years ago."

Call Oil Worker Overthrower Of Oil Government

CAMDEN, Ark., May 13.— H. D. Weber, a member of the I. W. W. Oil Workers' Union, was arrested recently at Louann, and was tried and convicted on a charge of attempting to overthrow the government. There was no proof of any such attempt, the only evidence introduced against Weber, being his I. W. W. card. He was fined $500 and sentenced to serve 30 days in jail. The case was rushed. Weber had no attorney. His case is being appealed.

In Louann the prosecutor receives no salary, but is paid a fee out of the assessed costs; and the justice of the peace is paid likewise.

New England Solon Competes With Banker For Votes Of The Rich

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, who is running for re-election this year against a bankers' candidate yet to be selected, has offered in the senate an inheritance tax scheme which would permit a man to leave $2,000,000 to his heirs and friends without paying any inheritance tax to the government. The present exemption on estates is $50,000. This is arranged by providing exemptions up to $25,000 on gifts to relatives, and up to $10,000 on each gift to a friend or institution. The rich man or woman need only give away his property on the eve of his own death. If he wishes to do so he could give away these sums to each relative and friend each year, so long as he had anything to give. This bid for the support of "widows and orphans" and other dependents of the rich is based on the diverting of the tax from the whole estate to the individual parts of it. A gift tax should be based on the amount of the gift, regardless of exemption, and in relation to the total value of the holdings of the donor.

ACTORS' EQUITY DECLARES WAR ON SCAB HOUSES

Signs Up 70 Per cent Of Producers

NEW YORK, May 13.—The Actors' Equity Association ratified an agreement with the Managers' Protective Association by a vote of 1,099 to 1. The contract covers a period of ten years. The pact forces union conditions on 70 per cent of the theatres in New York city.

A small fraction of the theatre managers have refused to sign up with the Equity. In a statement issued by the Actors' Fidelity League, a Company Union, the American Federation of Labor was charged with everything from the Herrin riot to the foot and mouth disease in California. Gompers issues similar statements with the exception that he substitutes the Workers Party for the A. F. of L. Several prominent actors and actresses left the Fidelity because their names were used without their permission. In retaliation they applied for membership in the Actors' Equity Association.

The union thespians were not slow to take action against the open-shop producers. Members of ten companies whose owners refused to sign up, were instructed to notify their managers that their contracts terminated on May 31. The productions to be struck on May 31, are:

"Rain" and "The Nervous Wreck," produced by Sam H. Harris; "Lollipop," produced by Henry W. Savage; "The Swan," produced by Charles Frohman, Inc.; "The Outsider," produced by William Harris, Jr.; "Beggar on Horseback," produced by Winthrop Ames; "The Changelings," produced by Henry Miller; "Seventh Heaven," produced by John Golden; "Stepping Stones," produced by Charles Dillingham; "Kid Boots," produced by Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr."

The high spots in the agreement between the union actors and the bosses are: 80 per cent of the actors in any production must be members of the Equity; the other twenty per cent must pay into the union treasury dues and initiation fees equal to those paid in by members of the union; the Equity agrees to hold its membership rolls open for twenty-five years and not to raise its initiation fees; the probationary period for dramatic productions will be lowered from ten to seven days.

CHINESE SLAVES MAN SHIPS OF BRITISH TRUS

Steel Trust Uses N Canadian Sailors

By JOHN ROBUR,
Federated Press Staff Corresponde

OTTAWA, Canada, May 13. "Worse than any form of peonag was the description J. S. Woodswor labor leader in the house of commo applied to the importation of Chin labor for the vessels operated by British Empire Steel corporati The charge was fully borne out Minister of Immigration J. A. Robb.

Robb stated that 76 Chinese now working on the ships under bo under authority of the dominion g ernment. These men have not be admitted as immigrants to Cana but are held as prisoners on the B co vessels. The Chinese are worki as cooks and stokers for the m part, but on one vessel their emplo ment is not limited in this way. Th have been brought out from Englan having come via the Suez.

The Asiatics are taking the pl of Canadian seamen. The minist said that in asking for permission import Chinese, the steel compa had alleged "the difficulty of getti Canadian crews to remain with th steamers after signing up."

This special privilege granted Besco is evidence of the growing fluence of that corporation with t government. A couple of years a the same company tried to get mission to bring in white labor fr Holland for its mines, but this w refused. Since that time E. M. Ma Donald, formerly attorney for one the Besco companies, has entered t dominion cabinet.

Open Letter to National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party

To the National Executive Committee, Socialist Party:

There exists in the working class movement in the United States today an opportunity to crystalize in an organized form the movement for independent political action which has sprung out of the intensification of the class struggle in this country which followed the end of the war.

Thru their experiences with the government since the end of the war, millions of workers and farmers have begun to realize that the government of the Republican and Democratic administration is an instrument of the exploiters used to assist these exploiters in robbing the industrial workers and farmers and to maintain the system of exploitation as a whole.

The Railway Labor Board, the Daugherty Injunction, Coronado decision of the Supreme Court, the use of police and troops in strikes as never before, the wider use of injunctions against strikers, have all had their part in convincing the industrial workers that the existing government is their enemy. Similarly, the farmers, millions of whom have been bankrupted thru the deflation policy of the government, and who pay the high railroad freight rates, under the Esch-Cummins law, and are discriminated against by the character of the loan and banking legislation passed by congress, realize that the government is always on the side of their exploiters, and there is no hope that its actions will ,benefit them.

These conditions have developed the wide-spread movement for independent political action by the farmers and industrial workers thru a Farmer-Labor Party. This movement has expressed itself in the formation of many state Farmer-Labor Parties which have combined to call the June 17th National Farmer-Labor Party Convention. The call for the June 17th Farmer-Labor Party Convention specifically and decisively pledges those who will participate to independent political action, separate and distinct from the old parties thru a political organization representing the farmers and workers.

The movement which is represented in the June 17th Convention was the result of and gained its greatest impetus thru the failure of the Conference for Progressive Political Action to realize the hopes of the farmers and workers for a Party which would fight their political battles. It was not until the Conference for Progressive Political Action had shown at its first convention in February, 1922, and its second convention in Cleveland, 1922, that there was no hope of this group creating a political party or a party which would represent the exploited farmers and workers of this country; that the movement for a national convention of those groups who were in earnest in their desire to bring into existence a mass political party of farmers and workers took form. The movement had its first expression in the July 3rd Convention of last year at which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was formed. Thru the efforts of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in co-operation with the State Labor Party, the June 17th Convention which will bring about a greater crystallization of this movement and develop a mass party with the support of one or two million workers has been called.

In spite of the fact that the Conference for Progressive Political Action has repeatedly demonstrated that its leaders will not permit the formation of a political party, and its entering into the political fields as an independent political organization of this group, the Socialist Party still is part of the Conference for Progressive Action. The excuse of the Socialist Party for remaining in that organization of which the express policy is to vote for Republican and Democratic candidates because they are "good men" or favorable to labor, is that they still hope that the Conference for Progressive Political Action will form a Labor Party.

This hope, if it exists, is an illusion. The Conference for Progressive Political Action has shown by all of its actions that it will never form a Labor Party. Only a few days ago the latest manifestation of the policy of the Conference for Progressive Political Action came to light in the state of California where all of the progressive trade unionists, farmers and labor political groups have combined to call a convention for the formation of a Farmer-Labor Party and the Conference for Progressive Political Action has issued a manifesto denouncing this move and calling attention to the fact that the American Federation of Labor Convention at Portland voted against independent political action. In other words, the Conference for Progressive Political Action lined up with Samuel Gompers for "rewarding the friends and punishing the enemies of labor," and the Socialist Party, by its affiliation, endorses this policy.

It has already become apparent, too, that the hope that the July 4th Convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action will follow a different course, is due to disappointment. It is quite apparent from the statements of the leaders of the Conference for Progressive Political Action that their purpose at the Cleveland Convention, even tho they may endorse the candidacy of Robert La-Follette on a national scale, is to enter into the state elections on the basis of the old policy of the C. P. P. A.; that is, while on a national scale they propose to support LaFollette as an independent candidate, on a state scale they will again call upon the workers and farmers to vote for "good" Republicans and Democrats.

By its continued affiliation and endorsement of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, the Socialist Party endorses this policy. In supporting the C. P. P. A. against the June 17th Convention, it takes its stand against independent political action.

Even tho the C. P. P. A. thru some miracle were to enter into the political arena as a political party standing for independent political action, what kind of party would come out of the C. P. P. A.? Certainly, the members of the Socialist Party will not deny that political parties stand for definite economic interests. Does the C. P. P. A. stand for the economic interests of the exploited farmers and industrial workers? Every one knows that it does not. Its leadership belongs to the aristocracy of labor. The LaFollette group in Congress which it supports is not the representative of workers and farmers but of small business men, professional groups—the petty bourgeoisie. Out of the C. P. P. A. there could only come a petty bourgois Third Party, never a Farmer-Labor Party standing for the class interests of the exploited workers and farmers.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party calls these facts to the attention of the Socialist Party and demand in the name of hundreds of thousands of workers and farmers who are supporting the June 17th Convention that the Socialist Party immediately withdraw from the Conference for Progressive Political Action and support the mass movement of workers and farmers for independent political action thru a class Farmer-Labor Party.

If the Socialist Party wishes to retain any vestige of a right to call itself a workers' political organization it will give heed to this demand. Today it is an enemy of the movement for growing class action of farmers and workers thru its support of the C. P. P. A. which denies and opposes such class action and by its policy stands as an obstacle to the development of a great mass movement of workers and farmers which, for the first time in the history of this country, will develop a class party on a mass scale.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party joins with the hundreds of thousands of workers and farmers who support the June 17th Convention in demanding that the Socialist Party immediately sever its connection with and repudiate the C. P. P. A. and the July 4th Convention and that it accept the invitation of the great movement of farmers and workers who are taking their first stride toward class consciousness, and send delegates to the June 17th Farmer-Labor Convention.

The Workers (Communist) Party is giving all its strength to building the Farmer-Labor United Front to attain this end. It urges the Socialist Party to sever its reactionary connections and to join in building the mass class party which will fight the battles of the exploited farmers and industrial workers.

Fraternally yours,
Central Executive Committee
Workers Party of America.

LETTER SENT STRIKERS BY PITTSBURGH LOCAL OF WORKERS PARTY

The Workers party of Pittsburgh addressed the following letter to the union of the striking street carmen while they were still at outs with the bosses:

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 10, 1924.
Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dear Brothers:

The Workers party of Pittsburgh extends to you their congratulations upon your courage in demanding some improvements in your working conditions. As workers you are entitled to the best society can provide for you.

At the present time the workers and producers eat the poorest food, wear the poorest clothes and fill the jails and penitentiaries whenever they try to better their conditions. The workers form one economic class and the capitalist class the other. Up to now the capitalist class have had undisputed control of all arms of the political government in Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania. At the same time they have made the workers believe that certain politicians in the old parties are their friends. By this means they prevent the workers from organizing a class farmer-labor party to fight the battles of the working class.

Every strike is class war, whether you like to admit it or not. Capitalism has reached the point where there can be no compromise. Either we are to have a brutal, ruthless dictatorship of the capitalist class, as in Italy, or the workers must gain control of the political government and administer it in the interest of the workers and farmers. While they preach democracy to you they are now preparing to kill you on the streets of old Pittsburgh with machine guns, tear gas and bayonets. You are weak because you only organized on the industrial field.

This coming week at Allentown, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, the Farmer-Labor party of Pennsylvania will meet to discuss the matter of launching a real class farmer-labor party and stop the farce of supporting the Magees and the Leslies on the old party tickets. Nominate trade unionists, members of your own union, to the control of the police, militia and courts and take the government out of the capitalist class, who make a mockery out of democracy.

Wire to the State Federation of Labor, to the Pennsylvania Farmer-Labor party and demand the launching of a real farmer-labor party in this state. You sent a delegate to the Federated Farmer-Labor party convention in Chicago, July 3, 1923. Continue this policy toward independent political action by helping to organize the Farmer-Labor party of this state and endorse the national Farmer-Labor convention at St. Paul, June 17, where the workers and farmers of America will start the march toward emancipation from both international and class war by building an organization to take control of the government in the interest of all the workers.

DOWN WITH THE PARASITES! UP WITH A WORKERS AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT!

DISTRICT 5 OF WORKERS PARTY.
By order of the District Executive Committee.

The Workers Party in Action

DECISIONS OF CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA MEETING, MAY 2-3

The Central Executive Committee held a full meeting on Friday and Saturday, May 2nd and 3rd, and made the following decisions in regard to Party policies and Party work:

Policy in the June 17th Convention

1. Should the June 17th convention be dominated by the delegates representing industrial workers and exploited farmers we shall endeavor to organize a Farmer-Labor Party on the basis of the constitution adopted by the convention at which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was authorized. We shall intensify our propaganda for organization of such a party.

2. If such a Farmer-Labor Party is organized by the June 17th Convention we will merge the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in it, the Federated going out of existence as a separate organization.

3. Should the June 17th convention not be dominated by the class elements, but there be in the convention such a strong admixture of other than representatives of industrial workers and exploited farmers, so that the party if formed would not be a class party of industrial workers and farmers, then we shall not make a fight for the organization of a party, but accept a loose coalition for the election campaign.

4. If the conditions in point 3 prevail we shall maintain the Federated Farmer-Labor Party as the expression of the class party of industrial workers and farmers and seek to affiliate with it all such elements. The Federated under these conditions will form part of the coalition and during the election campaign seek to organize itself.

5. We shall submit to the June 17th convention a clear-cut class program and make a fight for its adoption. A committee of three shall be elected for the purpose of drafting this program.

6. The same commitee shall draft a statement on the question of the candidacy of LaFollette which shall be read to the convention after his nomination, if he is nominated, pledging our support but stating our Communist attitude toward LaFollette.

State Farmer-Labor Parties.

In Pennsylvania, the C. E. C. decided that our Party should send delegates to the State Farmer-Labor Party convention called in connection with the State Federation of Labor convention and make a fight there for endorsement of June 17th. Our policy in this case, should the convention not be a representative convention of the labor movement of the state, was left open for decision at the convention, with the exception of those delegates favoring the June 17th convention should be organized to a June 17th Propaganda Committee.

In Massachusetts, New York, Ohio and Illinois, the Central Executive Committee instructed the Party organization to endeavor to affiliate the state farmer-labor parties.

Socialist Party

The Committee authorized the issuance of an open letter to the Socialist Party demanding that it disassociate itself with the July 4th convention and join the June 17th convention group.

Broms Appeal

The Central Executive Committee refused to reopen the case of Allan S. Broms, expelled from the Party last year.

District 3 Statement

On the question of publication of a statement by District 3 of the Party in reply to the statement by the Central Executive Committee on the internal party situation, it was decided that Comrade Cannon should explain the matter at the membership meeting of district 3.

Daily Worker Management Committee

The Central Executive Committee appointed Comrades Dunne, Loeb, Ruthenberg, Tenhunen and Browder as the Management Committee of the Daily Worker. Comrade Burman will serve as a substitute for Comrade Tenhunen as the latter is unable to attend meetings.

May Day Assessment

The Central Executive Committee decided that Party workers in Party institutions who were paid for their services on May Day are to donate their day's wages to the DAILY WORKER.

Educational Work

The C. E. C. appointed a sub-committee consisting of Comrades Bedacht, Bittelman and Cannon on educational work to take the direction of educational work within the Party.

C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary.

Bakers Win $2.

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—Possibility of a citywide strike of 1400 St. Louis union bakers passed when the employers agreed to an increase of $2 a week. The union had demanded $3. The new scale is: Foremen $44 a week; Spongers $40; Bench hands $37; Helpers $29; Bread counters $30 and second-year apprentices $24.

South Slavs Will Present The "Army Deserter" Sunday

The South Slavic branch of the Workers Party is holding its last ball of the season, this coming Sunday, May 18, at the C. S. P. S. Hall, 1126 W. 18 street, at 2:30 p. m., continuing thru the evening. Besides dancing to the tune of the branch's own Banjo Orchestra and other interesting items on the program, the branch's own Dramatic Club will present a very interesting play in three acts, called, "The Army Deserter." This play alone is worth more than the meager admission. Although it is only in three acts, there are seven different settings of the stage, and that includes some very beautiful scenes.

Some of the scenes are as follows: Morning in the village, the harvesters, singing folk songs, are leaving for the fields; hunting (dog-like for recruits for the king's army; in the army prison; with the army deserter and another convict awaiting execution; a dual; a society masquerade ball; in a Budapest gambling house; love scenes, etc. The play abounds with many folk songs and other pleasing melodies, and with its beautiful scenes it should prove of interest even to one who is not fortunate enough to know the language in which it is acted.

The players, altho not professional actors, are by no means amateurish, some of them having as much as ten years' experience on the stage.

The admission to the dance, including the play is only 50 cents. The place: C. S. P. S. Hall, 1126 W. 18th street, near S. Racine avenue. The time: Sunday afternoon and evening. The play starts 2:30 p. m.

Comrades of all languages are invited and assured of a good entertainment. Instead of going to a bourgeois theatre, come for once and enjoy some real proletarian acting.

Call Roumanian Royal Thief In "Daily Herald"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, May 13.—Roumanian royalty visiting Britain in search of loans has been severely criticized by the "Daily Herald." The King and Queen of Roumania have arrived from France where they were arranging the Franco-Roumanian alliance.

The "Daily Herald" reports that the King's theme in speech-making is "Freedom" but that he ought to be asked about freedom in Bessarabia, part of Roumania at present, but rightly Russian. Military forces occupy this territory at present. The British labor paper also asks why Roumanian newspapers opposed to absolutism are suppressed.

Party Activities Of Local Chicago

The Third Annual Picnic of the Workers Party, Local Chicago, will be held on Friday, July 4, at Stickney's Grove. Speakers, dancing, games, refreshments, etc., are being provided. Sympathetic organizations are requested not to arrange any other affair, but to give all possible support to the July 4th picnic.

Enemies of June 17th

Another name has been added to the list of enemies of the June 17th National Farmer-Labor Convention at St. Paul. It is the name of "The Chicago Tribune." This sheet has sent its political writer, Arthur Evans, into the northwest, and like all loyal and true scribblers for the Tribune, he discovers many and strange things. He has found, as he claims, growing sentiment for Coolidge in Minnesota, and a tendency toward a split in the Farmer-Labor movement.

Evans reports that it was all a mistake that Governor Preus was defeated for the United States senate by Magnus Johnson. Preus was Preus. Coolidge, is Coolidge, and will have better luck. This, he claims, will be considerably aided by "an ambition on the part of the Communists to kidnap the third party national convention, which is to meet in St. Paul, June 17th."

He does not say why the Communists should desire to kidnap the June 17th convention, or what the Communists would do with it, after they had kidnapped it. But The Tribune never did trouble about details. And it never will where it desires to deceive.

The Tribune is the organ of the biggest exploiters, the landlords, the bankers and the most powerful open shop industrialists. It would like to see Coolidgism and Preusism firmly enthroned in Minnesota, and thruout the northwest, ruling with an iron fist for the benefit of the steel trust, the railroads, the grain speculators, the banks and the landowners. It is against these robbers that the Communists, most of all, desire a united front of the workers and farmers. And the Communists, most of all, will be against any kind of a split in St. Paul, June 17th.

There is only one kind of splitting that Communists will advocate at St. Paul, and that is the splitting away of all workers and farmers from the old Wall Street parties, from the republican and democratic parties, into the ranks of the class Farmer-Labor party.

That is the kind of splitting that brings unity into the ranks of the workers and farmers, and victory to their standards.

The Klan an Issue

There is no disputing the fact that the Ku Klux Klan will be an issue in this year's presidential campaign. Even without the decisions of the republican and democratic national conventions having been made, it can safely be said that the Koo Koos will provide one of the big factors in the national, state and local political struggles.

It was the Klan that recently nominated the republican candidate for governor in Indiana with a 35,000 majority over five other candidates. It has won similar victories elsewhere.

The Klan therefore becomes a source of worry for the old parties. There will be republicans and democrats both for and against the Klan, at Madison Square Garden, in New York City, and at the Municipal Auditorium, in Cleveland. Underwood plans to get McAdoo's scalp on the Klan issue. Among the broad masses of the workers and farmers there should be found only opposition to the hooded night shirts.

Edwin J. Clark, former Grand Klug, Dragon and Titan of the Texas Klan, told a senate committee the other day why the Klan is in politics, and why it selects certain types of candidates. The committee was investigating the election of Senator Mayfield, democrat, of Texas, and was informed that H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, wanted a senator elected from Texas, who could "get in touch with the big business interests, especially the railroads, and could even approach Standard Oil." That was the basis of support going to Mayfield. He was that kind of a candidate. He was already a member of the Texas Railroad Commission.

No one has ever heard of the hooded gentry giving militant support to the working class. Every worker and farmer recruited for the vile purpose of the cowardly Kluxers is a dividing and weakening of the ranks of labor.

There must be no division in the rising class Farmer-Labor movement on the Klan issue. Loyalty to class should be the only loyalty of city and land labor. Any other loyalty is disloyalty.

Let the Klan get support for its fascisti purposes from the oil, railroad and other big business profiteers. But let the Klan get no support from the working class. Without support from labor it must wither and die, because the employers will then have no use for it. Let it die.

Benito Mussolini, fascist dictator of Italy, will surely envy Sigman's dictatorship in the Boston Convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. We wouldn't be surprised if Ben cabled to Morris, "How did you do it?" And Morris could cable in reply, "Ask Abe Cahan." And the anti-Communist alliance is established.

The Fight Has Just Begun

Extreme reaction has been kicked out in both Paris and Tokio. These developments in France and Japan are supplementary to recent events in Germany, that gave 4,000,000 votes and 62 reichstag members to the Communists, and the lifting of a labor government to power in Great Britain.

The Communists are credited with 26 members elected to the chamber of deputies of France. This was the first parliamentary struggle in which the French Communists engaged. The party had not yet been organized in 1919, when Poincare won power. The members it has had in the chamber of deputies were the few that came over after the break with the Socialist Party over the question of affiliation with the Communist International.

It is conceded that with their 26 votes the Communists will hold the balance of power between Poincare's "national bloc" and the so-called "socialist bloc," made up of a motley array of parties calling themselves radicals, radical socialists, republican socialists and socialists. Only the socialists, with 91 members elected, have any affiliation with the Second (Socialist) International. All the others are professedly bourgeois parties.

The whole tendency in the socialist movement, now as always, is to over-emphasize, if not actually misinterpret, the significance of parliamentary election results. The victory of the British labor party was hailed as the millenium, while "The Leader," official expression of American socialism, is satisfied with the recent results in Germany, where the reichstag strength of the social-democracy was cut in half.

The trend of political development in Europe, as elsewhere, since the war has been from reaction, thru mock democracy in some form, and then into fascism, the forerunner of the social revolution. Italy and Hungary are the classic examples of this development. Horthy and Mussolini rule on the ashes of bourgeois democracy. The Ludendorff demonstration at Halle, last Sunday, with the consent of the Berlin government, would indicate that Germany is rapidly drifting in the same direction.

Communism is the only power that can save France and England from a Mussolini or a Horthy. Under Communist standards the fight against capitalism in these two countries has only just begun. The "socialist bloc" in the Versailles, at Paris, can no more lift France out of the capitalist chaos, into which the war plunged it, than the MacDonald labor government can usher in a new social order thruout the British Empire.

What the French "socialist bloc" and labor rule in London can and may do, is to so disgust the workers and farmers with the "democracy" they had been lured into supporting, that they will unwittingly turn about and give their allegiance to a fascist dictatorship. Socialist leadership has not, and will not learn the lessons of the rise of fascism to power in half a dozen European countries. Only Communist leadership, teaching the masses the real functions and limits of parliamentary action, inspiring the workers and farmers with their own historic mission—to achieve their own emancipation—only such Communist leadership can save the oppressed under capitalism from the terrors of a fascist dictatorship in France and Great Britain, the dictatorship of the exploiters that has claimed the blood of tens of thousands in Hungary and Italy.

With this realization comes the conviction that the fight for liberation has only just begun. Against the paralyzing bosses' reaction march onward the forces of the social revolution. The French elections in France mark a step forward only if the workers and farmers of France rally in sufficient numbers to the Communist Party and principles, and the same holds true for every other country.

Under the Red Thumb

The red thumb of Moscow has gotten the edge on the white thumb of Paris, in exerting pressure upon the German government, and members of the Soviet Trade Mission arrested in the raid on the delegation's offices have been released.

It was certainly a spectacular manner in which the Berlin slaves of the Versailles Peace sought to rattle their chains to reassure their masters in Paris, that they loved them more than Workers' and Farmers' Rule in Soviet Russia. How willingly Ebert-Socialist rule lent itself to the purpose of French imperialism, in an effort to frame up evidence intended to shatter the Russo-British Conference in London.

But, as Pravda, official organ of the Russian Communist Party, pointed out, "They found nothing because there was nothing to find."

Under further pressure of Moscow's red thumb it may be expected that Berlin will surrender to other demands of the Soviet government: compensate all who have suffered and dismiss and punish not only all German officials who took part in the raid, but also those who organized it.

The attack on the Soviet offices has proved a boomerang in every way. In Germany the workers are given another look at the anti-labor character of their government. In Russia the workers and farmers again rally in huge demonstrations to the support of their government. And all the time there is nothing so unstable as capitalist rule in Paris and in London. The power of the red thumb grows.

In its issue of May 2nd, the Kern County, Cal., Union Leader publishes the Gompers' publicity attacking the Communists, at the same time, however, using its entire first page calling on the workers and farmers to boost Hiram Johnson and William Gibbs McAdoo in the republican and democratic primaries. We are of the opinion that we couldn't choose our enemies any better. Let that stand.

THE C. P. P. A. IN THE OPEN

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

Those persons who still believe that the Conference for Progressive Political Action will at its July 4th Convention form a political party and carry on an independent political fight can learn a lesson from the action of the C. P. P. A. in the state of California.

The situation which exists in the state of California is the following. The old Farmer-Labor Party, the Non-Partisan League, the Socialist Party and the Workers Party have united in a call for a state convention to be held May 30th and June 1st for the formation of a state Farmer-Labor Party.

This call is having the support of all the workers and farmers of the state of California who are for independent political action by the workers and farmers. At the same time there exists in California a state committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, which has the backing of the conservatives and reactionaries in the California labor movement. This state committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action has just issued a call to all the local unions of the state of California, urging them to organize local groups of the Conference for Progressive Political Action.

In this call there appears the following paragraph:

> "Attention is called in this connection to a call recently issued for the formation of a new political party in California, to be known as the Farmer-Labor party. The last convention of the American Federation of Labor, by a record vote of 25,066 against 1,895, rejected a resolution favoring the formation of a new political party. The same American Federation of Labor convention urged the organized workers to be partisan to principles and not to be partisan to political parties. The last convention of the California State Federation of Labor also voted against the formation of a state Labor party, but approved the formation of the State Conference for Progressive Political Action. The state building trades convention, which met recently at Sacramento, resolved to do likewise."

The California Conference for Progressive Political Action is frank. It plainly states in the paragraph quoted above its opposition to partisan political action by the workers and farmers. It is for the policy of Gompers, to reward the friends and punish the enemies of labor. It even goes so far as to quote the decision of the American Federation of Labor convention against the formation of a Farmer-Labor party in the state of California.

Same for the Nation.

What is true in the state of California will be true on a national scale for the Conference for Progressive Political Action. The Conference for Progressive Poltical Action on July 4 may indorse LaFollette for the presidency, but will form no party to support his candidacy. This policy in the state elections will be the policy advocated by its California units. It will support "good men" on the Republican and Democratic tickets. This is the brand of progressive political action which this organization will offer the workers and farmers of this country.

The reason why the Conference for Progressive Political Action cannot break away from the old parties is quite clear. The leaders of this group have too many intimate relations with Republican and Democratic politicians, so-called "progressives," who refuse to break with the old parties, for them to form a new party and to make a clear-cut fight against the Republican and Democratic parties. There are too many friends of the leaders of the Conference for Progressive Political Action still in the old parties for them to take this straight course and to organize even a third party which will make an independent political fight against the Republican and Democratic parties.

Will Not Break Clean.

While the third party will have its expression in the Conference for Progressive Political Action, it is not likely to be organized as a party and carry on a fight as a party. It is characteristic of the hesitation and vacillation which is part of the ideology of the petty bourgeoisie represented in the Conference for Progressive Political Action that it is unwilling and unable to make a clean break and make a clean fight even in its own interests. It will continue to vacillate and compromise with the old political parties.

This development in relation to the Conference for Progressive Political Action is but another proof that the June 17 convention, with a clear-cut program of independent political action in the interests of farmers and workers, is the only hope that the farmers and workers will be represented in the political struggle this presidential year. There is no question about what the June 17 convention will do. It will nominate candidates independent of the old political parties in the national election. It will advocate and support the formation of state Farmer-Labor parties in every state of the union to nominate candidates on the Farmer-Labor party ticket and to fight for their election. It represents a clean break with the old parties and an equally clean break with the Gompers and C. P. P. A. policy of rewarding friends and punishing enemies of labor on old party tickets.

Will Clear the Air.

The action of the California C. P. P. A. will help clear the atmosphere. It will help to prove to the farmers and workers of this country that their slogan must be "On to St. Paul!" and "For a class Farmer-Labor party to fight the political battles of the workers and farmers," and "For the workers and farmers' government."

SALUTE THE FLAG!

By KARL REEVE.

It is well known to the old time vaudeville actor that the use of the American flag at the end of an act is a sure sign that the act is a failure. It is as if the booking manager said, "Your act is rotten, but we will have a tableau at the end, showing a big American flag with colored light effects, and you two singing, 'Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue.' Then the poor hicks will have to clap; if they don't they are unpatriotic."

"My country — right or wrong," is the tradition taught in the schoolrooms. Follow the flag at all times—show it respect no matter where it is or what it represents, even if displayed by a bunch of ham vaudeville actors. And we out in the audience have learned our lesson well. When a small group go down into Mexico to steal all the oil they can get their hands on, if their acts are done in the name of the American flag, out of patriotism, we must give them all the support possible, and be a party to the theft.

The American Legion is a small handful of cowardly rowdies, who, since the war, have endeavored to keep themselves before the American public at all cost. Their act has not been going lately—they have sunk to the level of the three a day. Today, therefore, the American Legion, degenerated to a bunch of ham actors, have taken up the old gag. The Legionaires are hiding behind the American flag. Relying on the phrase, "I pay allegiance to my flag," which has been stamped into the American youth since childhood, they have fashioned the American flag into pretty petticoats which at the same time make an attractive display, and protect their flabby virtue from any disconcerting attack.

The ruling of the Northwestern University officials, therefore, that the students were within their rights when they dared to hiss a corpulent and overheated Sunday school teacher while he was singing the "Star Spangled Banner" and frantically waving a huge American flag, was against all traditions, and formulates a new set of rules to govern sticklers for precise patriotic etiquette.

The American Legion rowdies, led by this Sunday school clown, from force of habit, tried to turn a brilliant and dignified address by Brent D. Allinson into a vaudeville show. They soon learned however, that the intelligent Northwestern University students present were not interested in an "amateur night." Both the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner," and the Legion show as a whole seems to have fallen flat. The audience started leaving before the act was over.

The most hopeful sign of the controversy over allowing pacifist students to express their opinion is the fact that the college students are waking up. The writer, for brief periods, has attended four colleges and universities in this country. He recalls with no pride how the Harvard, Tufts, and Boston University students so willingly acted as strikebreakers in the Boston police strike; how college students tried to break the railroad and coal miner strikes. After listening to a flag-waving politician, called in for the purpose, practically every student body in the country voted overwhelmingly to support the war. All that was needed in this action was a little flag waving demonstration. "No matter what your intellect tells you, or what your personal belief may be, the flag is in danger, and now is the time to rally to its support," we were told. Afraid of doing anything that might be interpreted as "bad form," the students gave up their intellectual integrity to flock by the wholesale to the support of an unjust slaughter, "in the name of the flag."

The students of Russia, France and Germany, covered themselves with glory as the leaders of the new revolutionary movements. They were the first on the barricades, and were always willing to lend a hand to the revolutionary workers. This is only natural. The students worshipped scientific study. They arrived at the same conclusion from a scientific study of sociology that the workers arrived at from personal experience.

It is a hopeful sign in these days of empty-headed American youths, that at least some students have come to the conclusion that if they must follow the flag, at least they have the right to take a good, long look at the fellow who is carrying it.

A Great Adventure

By ESTHER LOWELL.

Since Leaving Home, by Albert Wehde. The Tremonia Publishing Company, Chicago.

Truly, this is the "story of a great adventure," as the sub-title reads; but rather of great adventures than of a single stirring experience. It is a volume from which could be drawn tales for a thousand-and-one nights entertainment. And yet all the incidents are hung on the life thread of one man, the author of this unique autobiography.

Ralph Chaplin, whom Wehde met in Leavenworth, characterizes Wehde well when he says: "In an age which has for its ideal the meaningless pursuit of meaningless wealth, Albert Wehde has seen fit to follow the shining road of adventure—lead where it might."

From the beginning, when the youngster in Germany valued most among the treasures of the family chest the reminders of three uncles who had met death far abroad in their romantic venturings, Wehde was a restless, eager seeker after the distant places of earth and from then on led a life of hazard and uncertainty, almost each day bringing startling events. Startling events to any but the dare-devil, care-free descendants of the spirits of the old explorers and buccaneers, soldiers-of-fortune in the better sense.

The more melodramatic parts of Wehde's life would make corking yarns for "Adventure" magazine. They are fascinating in the condensed form which the autobiography compels. But the most interesting incidents of the author's career to class-conscious readers are those which deal with his early life as an immigrant to this country.

The lad came with a cousin to St. Louis in the early eighties and fell prey to the many fakers of that rough-and-ready day. (The fakers are still with us, more suave, more glib, better-financed). The under side of the young industrial America was not the smooth, golden road to a high position that it is painted by others.

When his puritanic uncle cast him out, the young lad fell among thieves, some respectable on the surface and rotten beneath, some kindly inside and hardened only as life made them steal to live. The boy wandered down the Mississippi and found the life of a migratory worker in the south more precarious than ever, involving competition with the Negro.

Exotic Central American Exploits.

Wehde's Central American exploits were as exotic as the countries in which they took place. They reveal the ready interference of British imperialism in the affairs of the theatrical little republics. They are packed full of the jungle atmosphere, achieved by keen-sensed description. They range from prospecting for gold to participating in revolutions and to searching for ruins of ancient civilizations. All of them wonder-tales.

For fourteen years, in the middle of his life, Wehde lived quietly with his family in New York and later, Chicago, learning and working at jewelry designing. Then the 1914 war came and the long-latent German feeling combined with the lure of daring, the unknown made the man offer himself as a secret agent to the German government. His work in the Orient was nearly all made futile by the power of Britain over Japan, China, and the neutral Holland and United States.

This country's entrance into the war came while Wehde was returning, after China's severance of diplomatic relations had blocked the chances for him to continue his work. On his arrival in Honolulu, he was arrested and brought on to Chicago, where he was railroaded to Leavenworth before that eminently self-righteous old wolf-in-the-sheep's-garb, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

Finger Prints Can Be Forged.

Prison disgusted the man who had endured innumerable hardships imposed by adventuring, and the only alleviating circumstances were his friendly relations with some of the I. W. W. political prisoners, among them Ralph Chaplin. There, too, he and a political prisoner who was secretary to the head of the Bureau of Identification, wrote the now deposed William J. Burns that fingerprints could not be forged, altho Wehde had many times proven to himself that they could be. Prison officials would not allow them to admit the discovery Wehde had made for fear of losing prestige.

The outrageous practice of buying pardons became common knowledge to Wehde and he knew well the high-handed manner the Inspector of Prisons, Rev. Heber Votaw, brother-in-law of President Harding, disposed of cases, by "intuition." Of these evils, as of other injustices he met in his long career, Wehde writes always with fairness, with eyes open to those injured by official wrong-doing, by a wrong system of government.

In the end, after his release, when he remembers, "it is the dark hours that seem the sweetest now; the times when I was penniless; and cold rain was falling, and I knew not where to sleep; when I was lost and broken by panic in the forest; when death touched my sleeve or my cheek."

In the end comes most clearly the recognition of the evil or things they are. There is not the deep ana ysis of one who has long studied lif but the keen seeing of the farce an the perplexity of him who has live hard and then suddenly asks, "Why

Wehde hears the working mass
asking for "Peace" and then: "

He has written a book rich wit

SEC'Y DAVIS SPURNED BY PENN LABOR

Delegates In Uproar Deny Vote of Thanks

By ABRAM JAKIRA.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 14. Organized labor of the state of Pennsylvania, assembled in the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Federation, gave Secretary of Labor James J. Davis the most sensational turn down that that capitalist tool has yet received from a body of workingmen.

The turn down came in the opening session of the convention when the motion was put to give Davis a rising vote of thanks for his speech to the delegates.

A thundering chorus of "nays" drowned out the feeble cry of the Davis boosters and the session was adjourned in a storm of excitement.

Maurer For Davis.

To the surprise of those who had known President Jim Maurer's earlier

KIDNAP GARMENT STRIKER KRAUSE GOING TO COURT

Held For Four Hours Without Charges

Just as he was going up to appear before Judge Charles M. Foell yesterday, David Krause, one of the striking ladies' garment workers, was accosted by two dicks from the state's attorney's office and rushed away from the hall of the City-County building.

Dudley Taylor, vicious Employers' Association lawyer, loaned to the dress manufacturers, pointed out Krause to Crowe's men, altho Taylor knew that Krause was on his way to court where Taylor was to prosecute him.

Charges Kept Secret.

Krause was held from ten o'clock to two o'clock without charges so that he could not be bailed out. At two he was released on bail but the nature of the charges against him were not made known. State's Attorney Crowe's office denied knowledge of the case, altho Krause had been held in their office "somewhere" for over four hours.

Krause's case before Judge Foell has been put off until May 23rd.

What Dudley Taylor expects to accomplish by his dirty tactics is far from clear. He is not succeeding in intimidating the workers striking for their rights in the ladies' garment industry. If he expected to get one of the union members to turn against his fellow workers, again he was fooled.

Taylor undoubtedly is disgruntled and sore because Judge Foell has refused to listen to his old bunk and soak heavy fines on the strikers. But if Taylor thinks he can get away with any "rough stuff" with these seasoned fighters in the ladies' garment workers ranks, he is sadly mistaken, they all agree.

The fifty cases before Judge "Dennie" Sullivan yesterday morning were put over till Friday, May 16th. It looks as tho "Dennie" just can't get up enough courage to face the crowd of strikers and hear their cases. This is the fourth postponement he has made.

Many of the strikers have been restrained from going on the picket line on Market street and many who could go are not, with the result that the battle front is left unguarded except by the bulls and dicks most of the time. Those who have not yet gone down on the line ought not to shirk just because their fellow workers have been picked up. The bosses need a lot of reminding that strikers have plenty of fight left.

Rosta Carries Story From Daily Worker To Far East, Europe

PEKING, May 14.—"Rosta," semi-official Russian news agency in the Far East, is carrying news stories based on facts published in the DAILY WORKER concerning the delivery of relief supplies by the American Relief Administration to the armies of ex-General Yudenitch, counter-revolutionist. The stories are being sent to all radical and liberal papers in both Europe and the Far East.

DEATH HOODOO BROKEN; MINERS FOUND ALIVE; IMPRISONED 78 HOURS

GILMAN, Colo., May 14.—Seventy-eight hours of imprisonment on the 1,900-foot level of the Empire Zinc company's black iron mine here came to an end for five miners when Elmer Anderson, 21, stuck a grimy, unshaven face thru the opening blown by a final blast, grinned at an almost exhausted member of the rescue party and said, "Hello, dad. Here we are."

None of the five was injured, and all reported that beyond some discomfort from cold they had not suffered in the least from their imprisonment. Food and air was supplied by a pipe driven thru to the prison room after a cave-in.

DEMOCRATS AND REPUBLICANS IN BIG KLAN TANGLE

Both Old Wall Street Parties Face Issue

WASHINGTON, May 14. — The hope, long cherished by leaders of both Republican and Democratic parties, that the Ku Klux Klan issue would not arise in this campaign to plague them, has been dashed, and in its place has come the certainty that the question somehow must be met.

The Republicans have been brought face to face with the issue by the Klan victory in the Indiana primary. Senator Underwood has raised it for the Democrats and intends to use it in reviving a presidential candidacy which seemed about expiring of inanimation.

Months ago, while the 1924 presidential election was in the dim future, certain Republican politicians got behind the fight to oust Senator Earle B. Mayfield from the senate. It was known at that time that any investigation of Mayfield would involve alleged Klan participation in his nomination and election, and that this would lead to a general investigation of reported Klan activities nationally. The Mayfield inquiry now going on shows every evidence of becoming a Klan investigation, unless present lines of questioning are stopped summarily.

Therefore, it would appear as tho the Klan issue had been made a certain factor in the campaign by those who saw in the Mayfield case an opportunity to get revenge for the ousting of Newberry.

Now all eyes are on President Coolidge, to see what position he will take with respect to Indiana's Klan controlled Republican organization. Senator Watson, ostensibly one of the Coolidge lieutenants, has been quoted as supporting Ed Jackson, the Klan nominee for governor.

Will the president indicate his approval of this or of the anti-Klan branch of the Republican party in the Hoosier state, is the question now being asked here. That he will be allowed to evade this choice no one here believes. Means will be found to place him on record, and naturally what he says will be construed as reflecting his attitude on the Klan not alone in Indiana, but all over the country.

Thus it becomes a definite factor in the campaign.

Underwood, by demanding that the Democratic party go on record against the Klan, appears to some observers here to be inviting an eventual coalition with the Al Smith forces.

PLAN NOT GUILTY VERDICT IN SEN. WHEELER PROBE

WASHINGTON, May 14.—"Not guilty" is the verdict that will be returned by a committee of his colleagues who "tried" Senator Wheeler of Montana on charges of misusing his office, it was learned today.

A report completely exonerating Wheeler was ready for submission to the committee for approval today and will be submitted to the senate before the end of the week. Action on the report by the senate is understood to be unnecessary in the event the charges against Wheeler were found to lack grounds for impeachment.

Senator Sterling, South Dakota, who assumed the role of "prosecutor" in the investigation, is expected to file a minority report. In addition to Chairman Borah, who is drafting the report, Senator McNary, Oregon, Republican, and Senators Swanson, Virginia, and Caraway, Arkansas, will sign the majority report, it was said.

After presenting the report, Senator Borah intends to deliver a speech and review the evidence on which Wheeler was indicted by a Montana grand jury

HOWAT GETS INVITATION TO PEORIA

Will Address District 12 Convention

PEORIA, May 14.—Alexander Howat was invited to address the convention of District 12, United Mine Workers of America, by an overwhelming vote this morning and against the opposition of the machine.

Howat is expected here tomorrow.

The speech of Victor Olander, who addressed the convention this morning, consisted almost exclusively of an attack upon the Communists. According to Olander, trade union officials and unions were one and the same thing and as the Communist attack union officials they, in the Olander denunciation, were against the labor movement.

Olander made no distinction between the one big union and the Communists, both being "disloyal" to the union officials, he said. He took up the cudgels for Andy Furuseth of the Seamen's Union, much to the surprise of the delegates who had some difficulty in getting the connection between seamen and miners.

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

PEORIA, Ill., May 14 Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois mine district, is on the defensive against the rank and file foes of his administration who have come to the state U. M. W. of A. convention with the intention of taking the appointive power away from the administration and having organizers elected by the union as a whole.

This appointive power, which Farrington saved at the 1921 convention by a bare margin, will meet its real test later in the convention, but Farrington made it one of the issues in the report which he read to the delegates.

First Protest At Machine.

First protest against the machine's use of organizers as delegates came when Delegate Joseph Tumulty of Springfield, took the floor after the credentials' committee had made a partial report and a motion had followed to seat delegates. Tumulty countered with an amendment demanding that a complete list of delegates be furnished to the delegates eight hours before taking vote to seat.

When the amendment was ruled out of order, Tumulty took an appeal from the chair, pointing out that he had been told on good authority that some appointees were here as delegates who were not elected according to the constitution. He urged that the delegates who must decide the qualifications of those present, should have time to go over the lists and see who was who before voting. Tumulty pointed out that if ineligible delegates were now seated the chair would later rule that the protest should have been made before.

Farrington Dodges Issue.

Farrington's reply was an argument based on precedent. He said his procedure had been followed before. He dodged the issue about the right to protest later against delegates illegally seated by stating that any appeals now before the committee would be considered and that the constitution

Not More Work But 4 to 6 Hour Day Solution Miners' Job Problem

President Frank Farrington has told the Illinois Miners' Convention, in session at Peoria, that what the miners want is more work, and he plans to get it for them thru the creation of hydro-electric plants that will absorb more coal.

We cannot consider this as anything but another Farrington fake maneuver to make the miners believe he is trying to get something for them in a hurry. Is Farrington trying to blind the Illinois miners to the practical repudiation of the six-hour workday by the international convention at Indianapolis, last January? It looks like it.

The late Charles P. Steinmetz, wizard of the General Electric Co., the electric power trust, knew more about hydro-electric power than any other man of his time. And his solution for the unemployment problem was the four-hour day. Not only in the mining industry, but in all industries. He knew, as all intelligent people must, that the use of oil and the harnessing of water power, will call for the use of less, not more coal.

Let the coal miners' delegates give ear to the wisdom of the greatest electrician, Steinmetz, and aim at the four-hour day at eight-hours' pay, as a weapon against unemployment, an evil that will continue as long as the bosses' social system lasts. That fight will get better results than doping up and going to sleep on Farrington's fakes.

FURRIERS ARGUE OVER EXECUTIVE BOARD'S REPORT

Labor Party Resolution Before Convention

Argument about the acceptance of the committee's report on the executive board's report took up almost the entire morning session of the Furriers' union convention in the Morrison hotel yesterday.

The committee on the executive board's report recommended acceptance with queries about the settlement of the jurisdictional dispute with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in the St. Paul case, and with the suggestion that hereafter the executive board's report be sent all delegates at least ten days previous to conventions.

Delegate Steinberg of Local No. 40, Toronto, asked, in reference to the New York case, why it was reported that certain left wing candidates were elected after their names had been taken off the ballot. Steinberg also asked about the case of a Toronto member who had transferred to New York, and why the serious beating up of one of the left wing members was not reported.

Considerable dissatisfaction was evident among certain members of the convention because the report of the executive board was not taken up by items and because it had not been presented to delegates in printed form in sufficient time for them to study it before the report.

Numerous resolutions were presented for the amending of the constitution. One called for an emergency sick benefit fund to be raised by increasing dues. Another called for a vote in favor of the pernicious Johnson immigration bill.

A call for a third party was sent in by the Brooklyn joint board, and a labor party was recommended in a resolution introduced by Abraham Brownstein, Sam Cohen and David Mickhof.

Milwaukee has invited the furriers to visit that city for one of their meetings, and this matter will also come up later for discussion and settlement.

RAILROAD WAGE NEGOTIATIONS UP FOR 60,000 MEN

Rail Union Head Denies Deadlock in Chicago

The United States Railroad Labor Board was to meet in executive session here to discuss the wage controversy, involving engineers, firemen and the managers of 85 per cent of the western trunk line railroads. Negotiations for wage increases are deadlocked, and the question has been placed informally before the labor board.

W. M. Jeffers of the railway managers' committee, wrote chairman Ben W. Hopper of the board, that the discussions had been halted and asked the board to be prepared to take jurisdiction "should the dispute be likely to substantially interrupt commerce."

It was held unlikely that the board would take jurisdiction unless the employes are ordered to vote on the question of a strike or both sides formally ask for action by the board. Union officials made it known that they will hold out for the five per cent increase in wages.

The men demand what is known as the "New York Central increases" but the managers refuse to consider the proposal unless it is broadened to include certain rules and working conditions in effect on the New York Central.

Approximately 60,000 men and 90 railroads are involved in the dispute.

The break in the negotiations, which had been under way for several weeks came today, it was learned, when D. B. Robertson, head of the firemen and H. P. Daugherty, assistant to Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the locomotive engineers, failed to return to the conference room.

Swing to Left in Europe Reflected Here In Drive Toward Peoria, May 18

The forecast of the smashing victories of the left parties in the German and French elections and the tremendous Communist gains recorded are resounding in this country. The movement for the formation of a Class Farmer-Labor Party is gaining in strength. To the Illinois State Farmer-Labor Convention, to be held at the Labor Temple, Peoria, Ill., Sunday, May 18th, many local unions, central bodies and other workers' organizations are electing delegates, particularly the miners' locals are preparing to be represented, according to announcements made by Duncan McDonald, Secretary pro tem of the provisional committee issuing the call.

As set forth in the call for this convention, it is completely in line with the call for the great Farmer-Labor gathering in St. Paul, Minn., June 17th. It is an attempt to solidify the one link in the chain composing the national movement for a broad party of the working class which is today represented by numerous state and local Farmer-Labor Parties. This convention will select a representative to the St. Paul Convention. It is an attempt to unite the many scattered progressive factions thruout the state for effective working class political action beginning with the state elections November, 1924.

The provisional committee plans to propose to the convention that all possible measures be taken to leave the way open for any further unity which may not be accomplished at that date. The nominations for the fall elections are to be made on a tentative basis which could be changed by authority of the delegates in case the work of the negotiation committee should obtain further results after the convention. In addition to the state platform the provisional committee proposes to suggest resolutions on all of the vital problems now facing the labor movement. It also proposes to present a basis for the future state organization with provisions for county and local units.

A booster meeting will be held in Peoria on Saturday, May 17th, at which speakers will acquaint the workers with the planned organization.

All indications point to a great successful convention which will crystallize into a revival of the farmer-labor movement in this state. The solid working class basis for this convention will insure its success.

DISRUPTION CLUB WINS STOLEN SEATS FOR RIGHT WING OF AMALGAMATED

By EARL R. BROWDER

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—The first definite clash between the right and left wings at the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' convention came late Tuesday when the right wing, with the aid of administration forces, won out on the seating of the contested delegates from Local 2, New York.

It was the most bitterly fought contest seen in the Amalgamated up to the present and the right wing brought its full strength to bear even to the threat of breaking up the convention if they did not carry their point. The vote was 171 to 89.

President Sidney Hillman preserved neutrality on the question before the convention and other administration forces are explaining to delegates that they yielded to threats of the right wing in order to preserve unity of organization.

The right wing's threat against the convention occurred when the delegates from the cutters' locals, which are the basis for the right wing strength, left the hall in the midst of the discussion. They left the hall with great ostentation for a caucus as a threat against the union.

President Hillman admonished them to return for the vote. The intimidating tactics were plain to the entire convention, but they worked.

Right Wing's Strategy.

In order to have a record of "impartial" decisions in relation to the left wing, contests had been placed by reactionaries against Local 5 delegates, all progressives. There was no basis whatever for such protest but it gave opportunity to give a decision to the left before delivering Local 2 to the right.

Delegate Catalonotti made a powerful speech pointing this out and also the forces behind Local 2 irregularities when he called attention to the fact that B. Charvey of the Jewish Forward, had shown in his speech earlier in the day that he was aware of the decision of the committee before the convention had it. He created a deep stir.

Appearance of Vladek had been carefully prepared for two days and strenuous attempts were made to return it into a demonstration, but altho considerable noise was produced, those who stood up to greet him were by actual count only 35. His flowery and poetical speech was received as good vaudeville should be with polite applause, but his hidden political thrusts against both left wing and Hillman forces did not register in this convention.

Danger To Amalgamated.

The attitude of the cutters in the convention taken in consideration with their participation in excluding members of Local 2 elections and their demands for special consideration in union negotiations in the past, indicates the development of danger to the Amalgamated that this union will doubtless awaken to.

It is equally a threat with that other attempt of the right wing to stir racial feelings and antagonisms. Unexpected strength of left wing and its militant fight in the convention give hopes that such tendencies will be overcome and that the sixth convention of the Amalgamated will consolidate still further that solidarity that has achieved such great things in the past for workers in the mens' garment industry.

COOLIDGE LAUNCHES NEW EFFORT TO MODIFY JAP EXCLUSION LEGISLATION

WASHINGTON, May 14.—President Coolidge today started another attempt to modify the Japanese exclusion provision in the new immigration bill.

The president called into conference at the White House Secretary of State Hughes, Representatives Johnson, Washington, chairman of the House Immigration Committee; Longworth, Ohio, republican floor leader; Snell, New York, chairman of the rules committee, all republicans; Garrett, Tennessee, democratic floor leader, and Garner, Texas, another democratic leader.

CONVENTION OF I. L. G. W. TAKES HALF HOLIDAY

Recognition of Russ Needle Workers

By REBECCA GRECHT.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, May 14.—The convention voted to go on an excursion this afternoon instead of remaining in session.

This is a good indication of the morale of the majority delegates to whom the pressing problems are not serious matters and the convention a pleasant vacation.

No committee has yet reported except on credentials and the speeches that have been made praising officials, have made no mention of conditions in the needle industry. The convention appears to be in a listless mood and most of the delegates are inattentive.

A resolution has been introduced instructing the delegates at the coming Copenhagen International Needle Workers' convention to vote to accept the affiliation of the All-Russian Needle Trade Workers.

80 SIGMAN MACHINE DELEGATES IN BOSTON CONVENTION SPEAK FOR ONLY 5000 MEMBERS

BOSTON, May 14.—Eighty delegates in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' convention here represent only 5,000 members. They are from small town locals and have supported the machine on every question. They are the backbone of the Sigman drive against the militants that has resulted in 16 left wing delegates being unseated.

The machine group itself admits that because of this fact the convention does not represent the membership.

In New York last night a mass meeting of members of the union held in Central Opera House which was as large as the total membership represented by these 80 delegates sent a telegram to the convention protesting against the expulsions.

It is believed that local unions thruout the country will not support the expulsion policy.

Tho the militants had the support only of a minority of the delegates at the convention, they have behind them the force of more than 50,000 members, which is at least half the membership of the International. Locals Nos. 1, 9, and 22, of New York, comprising a membership of 31,000, and many smaller locals, have voted at membership meetings against the expulsion decree of the General Executive Board.

Local No. 22, furthermore, at three section membership meetings did not recognize the delegates elected to the convention because they had been would be lived up to. The chair was sustained.

Farrington then put the motion to seat delegates to the vote without discussion over protest of some delegates.

On a point of information, Delegate Fritz said he thought he had heard officers' names read out as delegates from other than their own locals and protested against their being seated.

Delegate Thompson asked whether if it was found out that some delegates had been seated unconstitution-

Soviet Bookmakers Receive Praise From Czech-Slav Teachers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TROTSKY SAYS MACDONALD IS TOO SENSITIVE

British Premier Has Unclean Record

MOSCOW.—Leon Trotsky—back at work, and fully restored to health—dealt with his recent speech about Mr. MacDonald.

"You ask," he said, "whether the English press justly views my speech at Tiflis as an attack against England, or, to be more exact, against MacDonald.

"I don't know just how you mean the word attack, but MacDonald has frequently attacked the Soviet system and the tactics of the Communist party, and recently, as one of the leaders of the Second International, he declared, that he was fighting against Moscow. We reserve the same right of criticism of MacDonald's policy.

"It is well known that MacDonald's party fiercely attacked us for our policy in Georgia. I have just returned from there, and am sorry that MacDonald cannot visit Georgia and learn the mood of the Georgian workmen and peasants. I doubt whether the mood of the Indian and Egyptian peasants can compare with the Georgians.

What About the Lords?

"MacDonald has frequently condemned us for violating the methods of formal democracy. It is true that we place the predominance of the working class above formal democracy, but we had the right to hope that MacDonald and his party would place democracy above all.

"To our minds the existence of a democracy with a house of lords conflicts with the idea of democracy. But if we regard the workers' rule above democracy, we also consider formal democracy an advance over the monarchy and the aristocracy. This I also pointed out in my speeches at Tiflis and Baku.

"Is that an unfriendly attitude toward England? Does MacDonald's criticism of the Soviet system and Communist policy signify an unfriendly attitude toward our country?

"I cannot see why our continuing any serious disagreements regarding the Soviet system and the revolutionary dictatorship and the English monarchy and the church must interfere with our efforts to establish broad economic ties equally useful to both sides."

Fordtown Workers Know Guilt—And Guilt Of Big Boss

(By The Federated Press)

DETROIT, May 14.—"Ford's labor policy is well known to all who are close to Detroit, declares the Detroit Labor News, organ of the Detroit Federation of Labor. "As one gets away from the city of the straits the admiration for his policy increases in geometric ratio. He doesn't object to paying 'high' wages. He sweats his employes to make up for it. What he dislikes is independence on the part of his workers. Ford is the personification of the industrial autocrat. He will not tolerate anything but servile obedience.

"His plants, therefore, have the atmosphere of the well regulated penitentiary.

"Not being able to tolerate independence and self-expression in his sweatshop Ford naturally can not tolerate the unions."

Injunction Against Picketing New York Dives Is Issued

NEW YORK, May 14.—An anti-picketing injunction against the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' union in its strike at the Broadway cabarets and jazz joints of John Salvin has been made permanent by Justice Delehanty, New York supreme court. The union, an independent organization formed on industrial lines, struck the cafes two months ago when the owner discriminated against the union.

Screams In Church, Police Are Called, Only Negro Baptism

Seven persons living near the Afro-Methodist church last night were prompted to call police when they heard blood-curdling screams from within the church. The police arrived and found, not a murder, but a Negro baptism.

Union Whips Alaska Packers, Friends Of Herbert Hoover

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—The Alaska Packers' Association has given in at last to the Alaska Fishermen's union. Brought to terms by their failure to recruit non-union crews for the salmon season, the packers have signed a compromise agreement effective for three years, granting ½c a fish over the 1923 scale. The men had asked for a 1c increase, and the packers for a 1c decrease. Union conditions and recognition are to be in force in all canneries in Alaska under the control of the association. The compromise was offered by the union.

HOWAT INVITED TO SPEAK TO PEORIA MEET

ally would the chair entertain a motion to unseat them.

Farrington stated that any protest would be entertained "in conformity with the laws" of the union.

Thompson then repeated his question in more direct fashion. He brought out the fact that two years ago he protested against the seating of Mercer, and Farrington ruled his protest out of order on the grounds that protest should have been made before the delegate had been seated.

Farrington's reply simply was that they would take care of that when the time came.

FARRINGTON'S REPORT

Farrington's defense of his appointive power; his praise of the Jacksonville three-year pact and his argument for cheapening the cost of production were the major points in his report to the convention.

Beginning with some ingenious juggling, he claimed that the miners were running their own union organization cheaply. Then he went on to tell of the 50 per cent of Illinois mines now idle with more than half of the rest on a less than half time basis. From this he drew the conclusion that things would get worse, unless they were able to cheapen production. Unless the miners cut coal costs, he argued, the work will go elsewhere.

Lauds Jacksonville Pact.

The Jacksonville agreement was lauded as a mighty achievement, but did not say how this three-year agreement, which is intended to prevent the union miners who endorse it, from taking action to force the unionization of the open shop fields which are now depressing their conditions.

Again, in dealing with the necessity of the convention considering unemployment benefits, he gave no suggestions as to ways and means.

Asking the convention to decide decisively whether those unemployed should get anything from the union or not, he said that thousands of miners' families were suffering from hunger and want.

After this reference to the present hardships of the miners, Farrington went on to say that great progress had been made, quoting the 1898 wage scale in contrast with the present one.

Pleads For Appointive Power.

Defense of his appointive power came when he attacked the foes of that scheme as insincere. He insisted that the methods used to instruct delegates against the appointive method lacked fairness, saying that they were more concerned in smashing the Farrington machine than anything else.

Attempting to justify himself, he held up the examples of the tens of thousands of employes in city, state and the national government who were appointed, not elected by the people. Then he instanced the employes of the Standard Oil, Steel Trust and other "successful" business institutions that were not elected by the stockholders. The Soviet government was even cited—Farrington saying it was said to be the most democratic government of all—as having thousands of appointees.

Wants Instructions Disregarded.

Like many another man in a similar position, he argued against delegates coming instructed "with their hands tied," saying such instruction prevented "merit from prevailing" and urging the delegates to "use their reason" and vote their opinion, no matter how they were instructed.

He was in favor of democracy, Farrington said, but thought that abolishing the appointive power was "going too far."

The miners' union, he urged, was a "business institution and its policies to be successful, should be along the lines of business practice."

No rules of order were adopted, tho that is always the first business before a convention. Farrington's report goes to the committee.

Preacher Springs Surprise.

Something startlingly new in the way of a speech of welcome was heard in an opening address at the convention. Nearly 600 coal digger delegates were slouching in their seats as the Rev. B. G. Carpenter from the Peoria Universalist church was introduced.

The expected prayer did not come forth. Instead the minister launched into an excellent description of the world's misery. He said new ideas and new ideals are being born in the world. He called it the birth pains of a new social order. "We cannot go back to the pre-war world," he said. "The old order is gone forever and we must make way for the new. The ideal of profit in business is wrong." Carpenter said he was a radical and wanted to be put down as one. He did not make the usual qualifications, but urged the coal diggers to go to the root of things, as a radical does. He urged them to assume responsibility in the coming society. New ideals will never come thru governments, colleges, or newspapers, but thru the mass of people, according to this preacher.

"For the life of me I cannot understand how workingmen of one country can be induced to go to war for the purpose of killing workingmen of other countries," he said. To do away with wars, substitute service and brotherhood for profits in industry is Carpenter's advice.

RADICAL SOCIALIST IS PLANNING FOR THE FINANCIAL STABILITY OF CAPITALISM'S REGIME IN FRANCE

PARIS, May 14.—"The first pre-occupation of a government of the left would be to assure financial stability with a regime of international entente and peace," Edouard Herriot, leader of the radical socialists and likely successor to Premier Poincare, declared today.

It is considered probable that Herriot will be the first invited to form a cabinet when the present government resigns June 1.

Poincare is planning to withdraw from public life for a while and may ask a vacation from the senate.

Andre Tardieu, who was defeated in Sunday's elections, intends to abandon politics and go to the United States to enter business. His newspaper, the Echo National, will suspend publication Friday.

TWO FORMER FRENCH PREMIERS AMONG POSSIBLE SUCCESSORS TO DOOMED POINCARE

Aristide Briand
Paul Painleve
Louis Barthou

Altho Edouard Herriot, radical socialist leader, is considered the most likely successor to Raymond Poincare as premier of France, three other men are mentioned as possibilities. Paul Painleve and Aristide Briand, both former premiers, and Louis Barthou.

Painleve and Briand have been allied with the Poincare opposition.

The Poincare government, unexpectedly defeated in general election, cannot be forced out until the new chamber of deputies meets on June 2nd.

BLOWS AT REACTION IN EUROPEAN ELECTIONS MAKES STANDPATTERS IN THIS COUNTRY TAKE NOTICE

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The victorious sweep of liberalism in Europe is not being overlooked by American politicians, trying to pierce the veil behind which is hidden the outcome of this year's campaign.

The most thoughtful of them, with the examples of England and France before them, foresee a mighty struggle in the United States this fall between the same forces which have battled in the English and French elections.

Great Britain deposed from power her conservatives and near-liberals for a Labor government, frankly socialistic.

France has just been swept by liberal sentiment. The American government, insofar as its legislative machine is concerned, is controlled today by the liberals, and in the country there is a powerful surge of sentiment toward them.

Competent observers here are inclined to believe that the United States will share in what appears to be a world-wide readjustment, one of a series which have followed the war.

Now comes another adjustment, a swing to liberalism, in some countries an extreme swing. It is evident in the United States, politicians find, and the most they hope to do is to limit it.

President Coolidge and his group are seeking to do this by standing with the utmost firmness as the apostles of conservatism. In the Democratic party there is evident a desire to meet the liberal wing, if possible, by nominating some one with progressive leanings. This, however, is a natural consequence of the Coolidge conservatism and is simply the logical effect for political contrast.

Both these parties are trying to appraise the real strength of the great third group, whose size and power nobody yet knows—a group as yet unorganized, for the most part, because of lack of leadership.

Every day brings added evidence to political headquarters here that if leadership is furnished—if LaFollette will take hold—the liberal movement this fall will be so powerful as to determine the election, even tho the liberal candidate is not elected.

The American liberals hold the balance of power today, and in the light of what is happening abroad, some old party leaders here fear that after next November the liberals may turn that balance into a position of real dominance.

GOVERNMENT RUSHES TO THE AID OF BIG SOUTH DAKOTA THIEVES

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., May 14.—(United Press.—A million dollars in cash was rushed into Sioux Falls by the Federal Reserve Bank today to save the city's three remaining banks, while the grand jury investigates the closing of five others within the past few months. The Dakota Trust and Savings Bank locked its doors yesterday.

JUDGE BARES HIDEOUS RECORD OF KU KLUX KLAN IN TESTIMONY BEFORE SENATORIAL COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Testimony that shocked even the hard boiled solons of the world's political crime-capital, was brought out here yesterday when Judge Erwin Clark of Waco, Texas, former district judge and once general counsel for the Ku Klux Klan at a large salary, exposed the cruelties practiced by the Invisible Empire to the senate committee investigating the contested election of Senator Mayfield, of Texas, whose unseating is demanded by a large element of Texas people.

Gross Degeneracy.

Unmentionable crimes were committed by the Klan, declared Clark. So atrocious were some of those crimes and so gross was the language necessary to describe them that all the women in the audience were requested to leave the room while the former judge was recounting the acts of those who were ostensibly organized to protect the purity of American womanhood.

The Klan, thru its secret service, was able to intercept telegrams, listen in on telephone messages and judging by the manner in which Clark answered a question about the sanctity of the United States mails, the newspapermen had no doubt but the post-office also was under the domination of the hooded knights.

Political Persecution.

Immense Ku Klux parades were held in order to "make the negroes more amenable at voting time." and woe unto the negro who did not vote as the local Klan official wanted him to. It was not an uncommon penalty for braving Klan wrath for a man to be castrated or banished or have both penalties inflicted for some alleged moral lapse. The truth is that ninety-nine per cent of the outrages committed by the Klan against persons were for political or commercial reasons.

Klan Packing Donkey Convention In Behalf Of William McAdoo

WASHINGTON, May 14.—That the Ku Klux Klan is planning to pack the democratic convention in New York in behalf of William Gibbs McAdoo was the charge made by Senator Underwood in a statement issued here yesterday. The Klan recently ousted Clark Howell in Georgia as national committeeman and elected in his place, John S. Cohen.

Nathan Bedford T. Forrest, grand dragon, realm of Georgia, in his instructions to the Klansmen who unseated Howell said, "It is the earnest desire of Mr. McAdoo that his friends elect Major John S. Cohen as national committeeman."

The Klan connections of McAdoo will not make his fight for the presidential nomination easier at the New York convention, where he will face the more "invisible" empire of the Catholic Church and the gats of the bootleggers.

He claims it would take $200,000 to soothe his wounded feelings and compensate him for the injury done his reputation by the libelous and slanderous attacks made upon his honor by the aforesaid gentlemen.

MCNARY-HAUGEN BILL DEBATED BY EMPLOYERS

Illinois C. of C. Meet Is Scene of Clash

The pros and cons of the McNary-Haugen bill for farm relief, now pending in congress, were debated today, at a meeting of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

George N. Peek, president of the Moline Plow company, argued in favor of the bill. James E. Boyle, professor of rural economy at Cornell university, spoke against it.

Peek, who helped draft the bill, declared that he decided for it following a survey of the plow company to find out "what was wrong with its farm business."

Will "Relieve" Farmer.

"I am conviced the McNary-Haugen bill will relieve the farmer, because it will give him better and more stable prices," he said. "Providing as it does for a federal board to determine the prices of farm produce, it will protect him against the low rates he has had to suffer.

"Heretofore, the tariffs and laws of America have given more protection to industries than to farmers. It is time the farmer gets some protection, and the prosperity of all the nation depends on the prosperity of farm producers."

Boyle, arguing against the bill, attacked the fixing of prices, the "dumping farm produce abroad as provided for by the bill," and the expense the proposed board would require. He declared that the bill would harm both farmer and consumer.

Don't Like Price Fixing.

"Price fixing is bad economics," he said. "It is against the principles of American commerce. It restricts freedom of trade.

"The dumping of produce abroad would have two bad effects. It would raise prices for the American consumer. And, because, products would be exported at low prices—the losses to be sustained by the farmers—it would put an added burden on farming people."

Benjamin Hooper, Anti-Labor Lackey, Heads Rail Board

Chairman Ben W. Hooper of the United States Railroad Labor Board, has been re-elected to the chairmanship. While Hooper stated several months ago that he did not desire re-election, he said today he had accepted the action of the board.

Governor Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky, member of the "public group," proposed Hooper's election. Belief was general that Morrow would seek the post for himself.

The so-called public is well represented by Governor Morrow. A notorious reactionary, he is now using the troops against the miners in his state.

SMALL LOCALS, 5,000 MEMBERS, BACK MACHINE

elected in an illegal manner contrary to the rule of the organization, tho with the sanction of the officialdom.

The unseating of George Halperin, Local 66, New York, at the International Convention, brought to a close the first battle in the war of Sigman dictatorship against the left wing militants in the organization.

Sixteen delegates regularly elected by overwhelming majorities in their local unions have been ejected from the convention charged with membership in the Trade Union Educational League. That is the net result of a full week's deliberations of an international union which counts itself a big factor in the American labor movement.

Most Active Expelled.

The coast is now clear for the officialdom. By driving out these 16 men and women, the administration has eliminated the strongest forces of the progressive opposition from the convention. The unseated delegates have without exception, been amongst the most active supporters of the principles of amalgamation, class labor party, a trade union policy based on the class struggle. They have fearlessly challenged the rule of a machine which has, by its policies and tactics, led the International organization into a condition of chaos and demoralization.

This morning's session began, as usual, with the reading of telegrams. The administration carefully avoided reading a telegram protesting against the unseating of delegates which is known to have been sent from a protest meeting held last week in Central Opera House, New York, by several thousand cloakmakers and dressmakers.

Case Against Halperin.

The credentials committee then recommended that Delegate Halperin be not seated on the grounds that he belonged to the League and had disturbed union meetings. An important point in the indictment was that, as a member of the Workers Party, he had not protested against the criticism of the International officials appearing in the Freiheit, one of the official organs of the party.

Delegate Halperin, in his reply, charged that a week had been spent in quibbling about technical charges while Sigman's steam roller had prevented discussion on the real issue involved. That issue, clearly demonstrated in his case, was the political view advocated by the militants in the union.

"I am a member of the Workers Party," Halperin stated, "and you oppose the program and policies of that organization. That is why you want to put me out of this convention. Your crusade against the left wing in the International is a crusade against a political party, the Workers Party, which is gaining in influence amongst the workers of the International."

Deny Right of Appeal.

Halperin charged further that the Sigman dictatorship was denying the membership their constitutional right of bringing their differences of view before the convention of the union. The convention, according to the constitution, is the highest tribunal of the organization to which members are privileged to bring any and all appeals. Yet Halperin is accused of being disloyal and disobedient because he urged his local to pass a resolution requesting the convention to reconsider the General Executive Board's decision outlawing the League. Tho the convention is supposed to express the will of the membership, Halperin committed a criminal act in making a motion in the Executive Board of his union, of which he is a member, that Local 66 delegation be instructed to vote against the expulsion policy.

S. P. Tactics.

"You are adopting now the tactics introduced by the Socialist Party in 1919, when, in expelling seven language federations, the first shot was fired in the campaign against the left wing movement in this country," Halperin concluded. "But the Socialist Party has dwindled down to nothing in the five years following. Your present expulsion policy will ruin your organization in the same way unless you reconsider it."

Halperin was finally unseated by a vote of 192 to 35.

When the vote had been taken, disposing of the last case against contested delegates, President Sigman rose to make a statement. He denied that differences of opinion were persecuted in the International, claiming that he had always been an industrial unionist and had never been hindered in propagating his doctrine.

Sigman Exposes Real Issue.

Sigman's brand of industrial unionism, however, is quite a harmless one that does not in any way threaten the power of the officialdom.

In the course of his statement, Sigman himself exposed the real issue involved in his attack upon the militants in the International. The union, he declared, is only an economic organization which cannot consider political questions. The so-called left wing groups are attempting to make the union adopt their political views. For that reason there is no room for them in the International.

This statement was the last bit of proof needed in the evidence which has been piling up during the debates showing the falseness of the official allegations that questions of principle were not involved in the contesting of delegates.

GERMAN FASCISTI PLANNING NEW DEMONSTRATION

Communists Alone Can Cope With Menace

BERLIN, May 14.— The defeat of Poincare has heartened the German monarchists and they are planning new demonstrations in the large cities. The only force to combat the monarchist organizations are the Communists. The social-democrats have completely bowed the knee in submission to the ruling class.

The workers are leaving the socialist party in masses. The surprising gains made by the Communists in the recent elections have enthused the exploited workers greatly.

The Fascisti have not gotten away scot free from their attacks on the workers of Halle last Sunday. Since then skirmishes have taken place between Red and White groups. The striking miners in the Ruhr demand the ownership and control of the mines by the workers.

In face of the rising Communist threat to the bourgeoisie, the reactionaries are seeking election alliances to put the Dawes plan into immediate operation. But tho bankers like to save civilization, provided they can make profit out of their altruistic labors they are not so anxious to drop their millions into the abyss which is yawning before European capitalism at the present time.

SUPT. M'ANDREW GOES TO TRIAL BEFORE BOARD

Teacher Union Demands Czar's Ousting

The Chicago Teachers Federation members were eagerly waiting yesterday afternoon to hear what action the board of education would take in its session on the charges preferred against Superintendent William McAndrew. The case was due to come before the board meeting yesterday.

It is understood that the teachers had sent in their lawyers' opinion to the board on the matter of the Elementary Teachers' Councils. The teachers' attorney's report maintains that the question of holding teachers' councils in school hours has already been finally settled, in accordance with the rules and by-laws of the councils and with the last decision of the superintendent.

The superintendent's supporters are expected to send in a report on the meetings of the Elementary Councils also, but whether they will take the stand the teachers' attorney has, is doubtful.

Miss Margaret Haley, business agent for the Teachers Federation, is determined to carry on the fight against McAndrew and his illegal methods until the superintendent is out. She is insisting that the charges she made against McAndrew on April 30th be acted on at once by the Board of Education.

Demand That All Burns Stools Be Dropped From D. of J.

NEW YORK, May 14.—A person outside the United States department of justice, and in no way connected with the Burns-Daugherty ring, should succeed William J. Burns as chief of the bureau of investigation, according to Senator Burton K. Wheeler in a New York interview. A similar demand made by the American Civil Liberties union, New York, in its campaign to oust the strike-breaking chief of government detectives.

"It is true that Daugherty and Burns are out, but the department is still filled with people appointed by Daugherty, and there is need for a thoro housecleaning before the machinery is clean," Frank A. Vanderlip, former president of the National City bank, New York, told a meeting of the Institute of Politics and Citizenship, Brooklyn.

SEE FARM-LABOR PARTY AS HOPE OF FOREIGN-BORN

Milwaukee Council For St. Paul Convention

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, May 14.—Enthusiastic indorsement of the June 17 convention at St. Paul has been given by the Milwaukee Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, composed of labor unions and foreign language groups.

The council sees a strong political movement by the workers and farmers as the greatest weapon against the persecution of foreign born workers now being carried on thru immigration laws and by other methods.

Mass Meeting Coming.

At a mass protest meeting, May 28, at West Side Turner hall, 304 Fourth street, against such discriminatory legislation as the Johnson bill, speakers in German, Hungarian, Slavic and English will put the Farmer-Labor party case before the workers.

Tom O'Flaherty, editor of the Irish People and on the staff of the DAILY WORKER, will be one of the speakers.

The council's statement on the Farmer-Labor issue says in part:

Urges Farmer-Labor Unity.

The council further believes that the best way of combating legislation directed against the foreign born is for native and foreign born workers to organize their political and industrial power and to fight shoulder to shoulder against the bosses.

The executive committee of the Council for Protection of the Foreign Born Workers urges, as the first step in this direction, that all foreign born workers shall join the labor unions in the industry in which they are working, thus fighting with the workers who have organized their power against the bosses.

A strong organized labor movement, embracing native and foreign born workers alike, a strong Farmer-Labor party to fight the political battles of the workers and farmers—these are the weapons with which the native and foreign born workers must fight to secure better things for themselves.

The council urges the affiliated organizations to discuss this question at their meetings and to conduct a systematic campaign for every member joining the union of his industry and to support the developing movement for a Farmer-Labor party to fight the political battles of the workers.

Secretary.

Farmers' Insurance Tax-free In Spite Of Big Companies

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 14. — Two thousand mutual insurance companies in the farming communities of the country are relieved of a ruinous decision by the internal revenue bureau, by an amendment adopted by the senate in the revenue bill at the demand of Sen. Shipstead, Farmer-Labor. This amendment wipes out the phrase "of a purely local character" in the tax-exemption given to farmers' mutual insurance concerns.

The internal revenue bureau, by a ruling that these words meant only companies operating in a single neighborhood of a few square miles, had begun to collect some 8 years back taxes on the sums assessed by these mutual companies to pay for losses to their members thru fire, hail, tornado and other calamities. The private insurance companies were back of the ruling, since they expected to drive the mutuals out of business and write hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of insurance at increased rates.

CARDINAL LOGUE OF IRELAND MAINTAINS PRECARIOUS TOEHOLD ON WRONG SIDE OF FREE STATE LINE

DUBLIN, May 14.—The struggle between the Free State and the northern government over the fixing of the boundary between the twenty-six counties under the southern government's jurisdiction and the six counties under Orange rule is growing in intensity. When Lloyd George divided Ireland into two parts and set both fighting each other, he performed a service to the British ruling class that they should not soon forget. No doubt Mr. George has long ago received material compensation, tho the fickle voters have consigned him to comparative oblivion.

The Irish question no longer is an international thorn in the British imperial foot. After the treaty was signed a factional struggle between rival groups of bourgeois nationalists culminated in civil war. When the Republicans were defeated, the question of the border boundary assumed importance. The British rulers simply say, "The Irish cannot agree among themselves."

The radical Irish workers are not shedding any tears over the fact that the Irish bourgeoisie are disunited. To them a united front means unity among the workers against the capitalists, to secure possession of their rightful heritage, the land of Ireland and its wealth-producing machinery. As the Voice of Labor said in a recent issue, there will never be a satisfactory solution of the boundary dispute until the workers and peasants on both sides of the border are in the saddle.

Capitalists Worried.

Since the British Labor party assumed office, the workers in Belfast have made considerable political gains. This has produced a nervous feeling among the big Belfast capitalists. Sir James Craig is more afraid of his own exploited wage slaves than he is of Cosgrave and the Catholic south. He could get along much better with capitalist adherents of the Roman church than with radical workers, who would hang his holiness on the nearest lamppost, provided the latter was without his Fascisti bodyguard.

It is not surprising therefore to have Craig suggest to President Cosgrave of the Free State that they both meet "as Irishmen," without "having any Englishmen butting in," afraid that some progressive British laborite might be appointed as the third member of the boundary commission. Since then Sir Robert Borden of Canada has been invited, and perhaps Craig's patriotic Irish heart may induce him to compromise on the Canadian.

A Reactionary Prelate.

The boundary dispute is aggravated by the position in which Cardinal Logue, the Catholic primate of Ireland, finds himself in. His palace is in Armagh (being a prince of the church, he must live in a palace, and republican America is learning a little about papal titles these days), right close to the Protestant cathedral, which once belonged to the Roman church, but was lost to it when the British rulers changed their religious clothes. The greater part of his flock is in the south of Ireland, but quite a number are in the six counties and are very much at the mercy of the Orange wolves, who not alone interfere with their spiritual rights, but even subject them to physical violence.

Cardinal Logue is one of the most reactionary dignitaries in the most reactionary political-religious institution in the world. He is a dyed-in-the-wool imperialist and was always against the movement for Irish independence. Today he sides with the Free State because the interests of his church demand it. No cardinal can be appointed in Ireland without the sanction of the British government, and since that government granted its first subsidy to Maynooth college, the Roman Catholic seminary, in 1845, the Catholic church has been a very efficient police force and information service to Downing street.

Plutes Like Him.

In a statement recently issued by the cardinal, he deplored religious strife and pointed to his three visits to America, where he was treated more generously by the Protestants than the Catholics. The cardinal has no reason to complain of his treatment by the ruling classes in any country. They know his value in keeping the eyes of their slaves on an imaginary heaven while both the clergy and the capitalists rob them and divide the swag between them.

The cardinal does not see any hope of a settlement of the boundary question, and neither do the workers—that is, until there is a workers and peasants' government in Ireland. With the exception of the small labor representation in the Free State parliament, the real producers in Ireland have nothing to say about boundaries or treaties. Even that representation, under the leadership of the reactionary imperialist, Thomas Johnson, has simply formed a tame opposition to the Free State government and bogged itself in the mire of compromise and class collaboration.

But, as the Voice of Labor points out, there must be a new forward move on the part of Irish labor to win back the position occupied by it a few years ago, drop its recently adopted attitude of political parochialism and join the world revolutionary movement for the conquest of power by the workers.

Such a labor movement would settle the boundary dispute and Cardinal Logue, Sir James Craig and all they stand for.

Textile Industry In New England Is In Desperate Condition

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Without objection the Senate adopted, within a few minutes, on May 12, the resolution by Sen. Walsh of Massachusetts, calling upon the Tariff Board for information as to the cause of wholesale unemployment in the New England textile industry, and the Smith resolution declaring for immediate drastic reduction in freight rates on farm products and supplies. Textiles in Massachusetts are in such desperate condition that even Lodge spoke for the Walsh measure, while Cummins joined Smith—spokesman for the anti-Cummins majority of the interstate commerce committee, in urging the freight rate reduction. The Smith resolution declares agriculture to be a fundamental industry, and asserts the policy of the government to be one of "fostering" agriculture by reducing freight rates for the revival of agricultural prosperity.

Magnus Johnson reported that the price of butter—which is the last resource of farmers in the northwest—is now tumbling, and more banks will close as a consequence.

Negro Moves Into Good Neighborhood; Is Nearly Lynched

OAKLAND, Cal., May 14.—It is all right for a Negro to live in West Oakland—in fact most of the Pullman porters on the transcontinental lines have their homes here. But when a Negro tries to buy a home in the fashionable Piedmont district of Oakland, that is another story. Sidney Bearing, a wealthy colored man, attempted to bring up his family away from slum influences, and had to face a mob of 500 white neighbors who threatened to lynch him. Rescued by the police, Bearing agreed to sell the house he had bought.

Small Children Are Exploited By Theatre And Movie Managers

NEWARK, N. J., May 14.—Theater managers and dancing teachers are exploiting small children by making them perform at vaudeville and movie shows, according to the Newark Children's Aid society and the Professional Women's club, which are trying to restrict the public dancing and singing of small children.

MYSTERY OF RUSSIAN GOLD THAT UNCLE SAM LET ALLIES STEAL IS PUZZLING WASHINGTON FOLKS

By LAURENCE TODD

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Among the items of "justice" dealt over the board at Versailles was a bag of gold taken from the Russian government by imperial Germany at Brest-Litovsk, Article 259, paragraphs 6 and 7, prescribing that all money and evidences of indebtedness given by Russia to Germany under this treaty were to be handed over to allied and associated powers to be held for disposal by them. This gold amounted to $59,000,000 and has since grown to $62,000,000.

The United States, Italy and Japan were trustees, along with Britain and France. But the other day, during debate in the chamber of deputies, Premier Poincare disclosed that the whole sum had been divided between France and Britain. And now it appears that the Washington government knew nothing about this distribution.

Stolen From Russia

This money belonged to Russia. So did $340,000,000 which was shipped from Russia to England during the war to bolster up exchange with America. The Russo-British negotiations in London are concerned with these deals among others. What Secretary Hughes will do, if the British actually repay this money to Moscow, is not forecast. He might protest against any settlement between those powers, on the ground that America's share of the gold has not been reserved to her.

Coolidge is staging one trick after another, but none of them seems likely to do him any good next November. His latest is the sanctioning of great military activity, and the assumption of total innocence of the violent attacks made on the peace organizations by army officers. His local organ has even denounced the Women's Conference for Political Action—a La Follette auxiliary—as being tainted with dangerous foreign pacifist influences. If public resentment at his tactics becomes as powerful as its repudiation of his Mellon tax evasion scheme, he will publicly indorse peace. Otherwise, he will plead for "patriotism on guard."

WORKER ARRESTED FOR STEALING BOTTLE OF MILK; HANGS HIMSELF

(By The Federated Press)

WEEHAWKEN, N. J., May 14.—Frank Okonsky was known as a good father and desirable citizen in Weehawken, where he worked for years as a longshoreman. He lost his job. He walked the streets but could not find work. His wife and four children were starving. On a doorstep he saw a bottle of milk and a loaf of bread and took them home to the hungry family. Before he got home, a policeman arrested him. In his cell he hanged himself.

BIG BUSINESS TELLS SPOKANE WHO IS MASTER

Vetoes High School Meet On Centralia Case

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPOKANE, Wash., May 14.—After the local board of education had consented to allow a lecture on the Centralia case in the Lewis and Clark high school auditorium, the Associated Industries of the Inland Empire set up such a protest that the educational authorities were impelled to rescind their promise.

Another hall has been obtained for the Centralia lecture, and the change of location is being widely advertised.

Friends of the Centralia defense here see in the Associated Industries' action the hand of the lumber interests of this state, which largely dominate the employers' association. For four years these interests have been opposing all efforts to prevent dissemination of the facts about the Centralia case, in which eight I. W. W. members are serving from 25 to 40 years in prison for defending their lives and property against an Armistice Day mob in 1919. The conspiracy to raid the I. W. W. hall in Centralia, all evidence concerning which was suppressed by the trial judge, was instigated and directed by F. B. Hubbard, a lumber magnate.

Directors of the Associated Industries of the Inland Empire include J. P. McGoldrick of the McGoldrick Lumber Company of Spokane, and F. E. Peters, general contractor. Both of these men have had intimate opportunity to observe the power of the Industrial Workers of the World in organizing the workers in the lumber and construction fields for better wages and improved working conditions.

Hundreds of Spokane business men have lately received copies of a pamphlet entitled, "Eight Men Buried Alive," issued by the General Defense Committee of Chicago, which quotes affidavits from six jurors in the Centralia case admitting that they were terrorized into convicting the accused industrialists.

Auto Slaves Losing Work.

(By The Federated Press)

DETROIT, May 14.—Continued decline in industrial employment in Deroit substantiates the Federated Press prediction of March 15. During the last week the number employed by members of the Detroit Employers' association decreased by 3,741 to 231,617. This marks a total decline of 10,714 below the peak of the year. Part time is increasing with approximately 10,000 working a 40-hour instead of the normal 50-hour week.

The automobile industry reports a falling off in production during April of 12 per cent to 15 per cent as compared with March. The production rate is an eighth lower than a year ago. The estimated stocks of unsold cars increased, indicating production running ahead of demand.

'LAND FOR USERS,' WORLD FARMERS' MEET DECLARES

50 Nations Represented In Rome Confab

(By The Federated Press)

A living wage for the farmer, the possession of the land by those who actually till it and freedom to organize for economic, social and political ends are among the principles of the World Agriculture society now in conference in Rome. This organization, with representatives from more than 50 nations, emphasizes the importance of the farmer in world economy.

The World Agriculture society came into being as the result of a conference in France, in 1919, which met to consider voluntary co-operation by producers and consumers in the study of world problems of food supply and the welfare rural populations. It differs from David Lubin's International Institute of Agriculture, which is a governmental body for compiling and disseminating reports, in that it aims to represent voluntary organizations of farmers—to become in a sense a farmers' international.

The principles on which the organization rests as stated by Laurence H. Parker, its executive secretary, include:

1. An adequate supply of food for all people is essential to permanent world peace. A hungry world means chaos.
2. This food supply must be furnished by the farmers of the world.
3. The conservation and improvement of the soil should be one of the chief concerns of world statesmanship. But no government decree nor resolutions of conferences can insure proper use of the soil: that is up to each individual farmer.
4. The working farmer must have a living wage. A meager sustenance with a scant surplus to sell does not meet permanent social justice.
5. The land should be controlled by those who use it.
6. International co-operation in agriculture will gather and interpret facts, spread popular education in farming and country life, seek legislation in the interest of the farmer as a producer and to simplify and cheapen distribution of soil-grown products.
7. No co-operation on an international basis will suffice unless it encourages free organization of the farmers.

Railroad Magnates' Lobby Wages War On Barkley Labor Bill

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 14.—When the Barkley railroad labor bill comes up again in the house, on May 19, for three hours' debate on the special calendar, its supporters will attempt to keep the house in continuous session until the opposition permits a final roll call. The bill can come up only on two days a month, and the railroad lobby is fighting it by continuous breaking of a quorum and forcing of quorum calls. The progressives will try to keep the legal quorum—100 members—present on the floor continuously all night and all next day, if necessary, to compel the old guard to face the decisive vote.

Short Items From Russia

MOSCOW.—The French premier, M. Poincare, wired the Soviet government "in the name of humanity," begging not to execute the four members of the Kieff counter-revolutionary organization, "the Center of Action," found guilty of espionage and counter-revolution. His telegram was printed in the Moscow press under the head, "The Insolence of Poincare."

KIEFF.—The telegram of Poincare in connection with the trial of the counter-revolutionary organization, "the Center of Action," created a wave of indignation among the workers as well as among the educators. The professors of the local university, in an interview with the correspondent of the Rosta, stated that they consider his telegram as the lowest form of cinism. Others considered his telegram as an insult to Russia.

• • •

ODESSA. — Great indignation is shown here by the professors of the local university and people active in public who are not party members, in connection with the telegram of M. Poincare, which is trying to save the lives of the convicted members of the "Center of Action."

The Peasants and Lenin.

WELSK, Vologodsk Gub.—At the Volost conference of Welsk county the peasants decided to have a "Lenin desatin," which will be worked by public labor and the profit from which will go for the benefit of the homeless children, to liquidate illiteracy, etc. They recommended similar action to other Volost conferences, some of which took similar action.

MOSCOW.—The Moscow Pravda, official organ of the Communist party, is organizing in all the big centers of Russia groups of labor correspondents, so-called "Rabcors." It is being done for the purpose of eliminating the waste of time of the correspondents and to instruct them in the proper way of writing labor news.

FOUR BILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF GOLD IN AMERICAN BANKING CHESTS SHOWS WHO WON WAR

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Who came out on top in the world war?

American finance and the American dollar.

If you don't believe it read the annual report of the federal reserve board, particularly the part dealing with the inflow of gold from abroad. The $2,000,000,000 in gold which American bankers got out of Europe, according to the report, has to an increasing extent made the dollar the world's standard of value and the United States the world's financial capital.

"Since the federal reserve banks began operations in November, 1914," says the report, "over two billions of gold have been added to the stock of the United States by importation. It is the gold which has been thus received that now constitutes the largest portion of the gold reserves of the 12 federal reserve banks.

"The first billion of this gold came prior to the entry of the United States into the world war. The second billion of gold has been received during the five years since the conclusion of the war. Net imports of gold during the year 1921 alone amounted to around two-thirds of a billion dollars. The gold reserves of the federal reserve system which stood at $2,063,000,000 at the end of the year 1920 increased to $2,875,000,000 at the end of the year 1921, to $3,047,000,000 at the end of the year 1922, and to $3,080,000,000 at the end of the year 1923."

$4,300,000,000 In Gold.

Of the world's total monetary gold stock of about $9,000,000,000 the United States now holds over $4,300,000,000 or more than twice the amount held in 1914. Europe's gold stock has decreased by nearly $2,000,000,000 during the same period. The gold holdings of the principal countries of the world in 1913 and 1923 are shown in the following table.

Gold Holdings	Dec. 31, 1913	Latest figures 1923
United States	$1,904,694,000	$4,247,201,000
United Kingdom	830,100,000	754,400,000
France	1,200,000,000	709,479,000
Japan	64,963,000	600,194,000
Spain	92,500,000	487,841,000
Argentina	292,600,000	451,293,000
Netherlands	60,900,000	233,876,000
Germany	915,700,000	111,247,000
Russia	1,011,500,000	45,043,000

"By virtue of its creditor position and its unprecedentedly strong gold position," says the reserve board "the United States has now become the world's gold center. As such it has assumed the high responsibility of so managing the vast gold supply domiciled here that it may be available for redistribution by export as occasion may arise without producing any untoward or disturbing effects in our own domestic, economic, and financial situation."

New York—Financial Capitol.

This means that New York is about to become the financial capital of the world, taking the place held by London down to 1914. The world's chief free gold market tends to command the greatest confidence and therefore to attract the largest volume of foreign financial accounts and business from every quarter of the world. American bankers dreamed of this during 1916 before we entered the war. And by entering the war to insure victory of the nations most heavily indebted to them they made sure that the ultimate victory would be theirs, a victory of American finance and the American dollar.

NOT A LYNCHER PUNISHED IN U. S. ALL LAST YEAR

The Law No Protection For Negroes

By LUDWELL DENNY
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, May 14.—"Americans now realize that it is not the lives of Negroes that are concerned but the honor of America," says the 14th annual report of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, commenting on the decline of lynching. It credits public opinion with bringing the number of victims down from 61 in 1922 to 28 in 1923.

But there were no convictions of members of lynching mobs. One mob leader when brought to trial for first degree murder was acquitted.

Rebel Peons Still In Jail.

Eight of the 64 Negroes sentenced to life and long prison terms in connection with the Arkansas peonage riots of 1919 are still in prison. Of the 12 sentenced to death, 6 have been freed after a 4-year legal battle conducted by the association and 6 have been made eligible for parole.

The fight for racial rights at Tuskegee hospital for colored war veterans has been won with the appointment of 14 colored physicians and 37 colored nurses. Mob deportations of Negroes were stopped in Johnstown, Pa., and Spruce Pine, N. C. Exclusion of Negroes from freshman dormitories at Harvard university was prevented.

In its activity against the Ku Klux Klan the association helped to pass the New York anti-klan law, requiring public membership lists and prohibiting circulation of anonymous letters and unsigned printed matter. A klan rally was prevented in Denver and an order secured from Gov. Wm. E. Sweet that "the klan is neither needed nor wanted in Colorado."

Pressing Anti-Lynching Bill.

The Dyer anti-lynching bill, killed in the last congress by a filibuster of southern senators, is being pressed in the present session. The Capper-Fairfield bill for uniform regulation of marriage and divorce is opposed because it prohibits marriage between blacks and whites. Senator Capper has promised that the objectionable clause will be eliminated.

Opposition to the education (formerly Sterling-Towner) bill is advised on the ground that it would legalize the present discrimination against colored children in the south, and would back that discrimination with a federal law and $100,000,000 a year. In many southern states $10 is spent on the education of every white child to $1 or $2 for every colored child.

The Crisis, monthly organ of the association, has a net paid average circulation of 37,100, the report states.

Detroit Solon Would Ban Peace Movement; His Knowledge Scant

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Representative McLeod of Detroit, a member of the American Legion, who sent a letter to the department of justice, suggesting jail sentences and the breaking up of the organization of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, in case the charges of disloyalty and foreign intrigue which he had heard about it should be sustained, knows nothing about the W. I. L. P. F.

Questioned by the Federated Press, the youthful congressman admitted that he did not know that Jane Addams was the head of the organization; he did not know the character of the resolutions or of the general program of the league; he had heard none of the speeches, nor had he secured copies of any of them. He had acted on the information of a young woman employed in his office, and of one the Daughters of 1812, who tried to break up the sessions of the league congress here a week ago. One Legion post, he said, had since sent him a message of approval of his statement.

McLeod is innocent of any knowledge of the career of Jane Addams or of any of the scores of other world-famous women for whom he proposed jail sentences, "if." He now says that he has not sought to prejudge them, but thinks the department of justice can establish the truth.

The World of Labor—Industry and Agriculture

WOMEN ORGANIZE MAY 17 MARCH ON N. Y. CITY HALL

Workingclass Women Want Better Homes

To the DAILY WORKER:-- We have been asked why we call our organization "the United Council of Working Class Women"—why not just plain "working women"? The argument is made that the latter is simpler and more commonly in use.

Yes, it is simpler in that one word less is used. But, the fact is, the two terms are not the same; don't mean the same thing.

The "working woman" is the woman who works in industry. If she is organizable she soon finds herself in the union of her trade. If her industry is not organized and she is interested in organization, she is in the shop, the store or the factory where she can talk to her fellow workers. Her economic problems are direct industrial problems. She comes in direct conflict with the boss and all the conditions of either large or small scale production. Her problems as a woman of her class, by very nature of the fact that she is a "working woman" are centered in industry where she works in conjunction with other workers. Her interest in organization as a member of the working class, is outside the four walls she happens to call "home."

The "working class woman," on the other hand, has been left behind in the development of capitalist production. She is the woman in the "home," the woman in the kitchen; buried away from social labor with a thousand individual tasks to perform daily for husband, sons and daughters, or little children in the isolation of loneliness and futility. Here then is no strong urge to organization, no easy road to an understanding of what the working class struggle is all about. Yet it is she, the working class woman, who feels most the pressure of the pay envelope that does not cover the needs of her family.

While the male member of the family has his struggle in the shop against the boss, it is she who must gather enough, at the end of a month's tussle with the cost of food and clothing, to meet the impossible rents for a miserable shelter. It is she who must face the landlord when the money is not all there, to ask for an extension of time; it is she who bears the brunt in strike-time, when the children tug at her skirts begging for bread she cannot give them. And the less she is enlightened on the problems of the strikers, the worse for her and her husband, the worse for her family, the worse for the working class!

Yes, it is the working class woman who is now begining to awaken! Yes, husbands and brothers and sons! Yes, working women! It is we—the women who have hitherto been poked away in the kitchen spiritually as well as physically who are arousing ourselves and each other to the necessity of getting together, to take our part in the struggle that our class is waging against the unbearable conditions that oppress us! We are learning that our problems and the problems of our men in the shops, are but one problem, that our common problem is but the problem of the entire working class. We are building a powerful organization—the United Council of Working class woman, join us. If you know ready at all times to protect the workers' interests. If you are a working class woman join us. If you know a working class woman, urge her to join us.

Yours Fraternally

The United Council of Working Class Women.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: On May 17th, the United Council of Working Class Women of Greater New York will go out in demonstration to demand of the city that it build houses and rent them to the workers at cost. All women should join this demonstration and take their children with them if they can.)

NEW YORK, May 14.—The United Council of Working Class Women, organized for the protection of workers' interests, boasts the livest bunch of women in Greater New York. These women realize the necessity first of building a powerful organization, and have taken as their immediate task that of drawing as many conscious working class women as they can reach into the existing Local Councils, and organizing new councils where none exist.

They work thru outdoor rallies, indoor meetings and by house-to-house visits in which they interest the women by personal talks and by distribution of literature setting forth the aims and purposes of the organization.

Push Baby and Pamphlets.

The women work with extraordinary zeal and enthusiasm. Mothers with infants at home, bundle their babies into the baby carriages and get right out on the job, so determined are they to have their part in interesting their sisters. A woman who will push the baby carriage with a two or three months' old baby in it to carry leaflets to the women in the neighborhood is a member of which any workers' organization might well be proud.

At present, they are putting all their energies into the work of creating organizational strength and in preparing for the May 17th Demonstration Parade to the City Hall on Saturday. Working class women and their children will come out that day to demand that the city build houses and rent them to the workers at cost.

The U. C. W. W. has its headquarters at 125 Fourth Avenue, New York City, where information may be obtained.

SOCIALIST TACTICS DISGUST THE OKLAHOMA WORKERS AND FARMERS; BALK AT THIRD PARTY PLATFORM

By JOSEPH MANLEY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 13 (By Mail).—The Saturday morning session of the sixty-five farmer-laborites, opened with tense expectancy of a battle that the newspapers had freely predicted, between the communists on one hand as the champions of the class Farmer-Labor Party and the St. Paul Convention; and on the other hand the Leader "steam roller" championing the idea of a loosely joined committee standing for La Follette and the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action.

The matter coming before the convention had been left over for a decision from the night before. It was that the proposed Oklahoma Farmer-Labor Party "have a flexible policy of endorsing other party candidates."

Dan Hogan, who was in the chair, was forced to recognize a motion that "Joseph Manley be made a fraternal delegate to the convention." This motion was the signal for the fireworks.

Speaker after speaker under the influence of the Leader crowd tried to scare the farmer delegates by telling them of the dire things that would happen to them if they should "listen" to this Communist agent of the Moscow Communist International."

Manley Is Seated

Finally the vote was taken and Secretary Chamberlain not being able to steal all the votes said I was seated by the narrow margin of 31 to 30. Immediately I asked for the floor and after some hopeless opposition it was overwhelmingly granted. My speech in favor of the St. Paul Convention and a class Farmer-Labor Party caused a rising vote of thanks at the conclusion, much to the discomfiture of the Leader crowd, and especially of Mr. Edwin Spurr, who was hurriedly brought to the rescue as "the state secretary of the old Farmer-Labor party" that never existed except in his own doting imagination.

Mr. Spurr created much confusion by his claim that he was a member of the "national committee of the Farmer-Labor party." It will be remembered that he is a member of the Farmer-Labor party of Oklahoma that bolted the July 3 convention.

Ernest Chamberlain, editor of the Leader, launched out in a bitter attack and malicious attempt to misrepresent the policy of the Workers party toward LaFollette. He quoted Comrade Ruthenberg's article in part from our old friend, the New Majority (whose editor, by the way, does not believe in attacking the Communists).

Chamberlain, Houchin and a person named Hicks—a political jackal the like of which Oklahoma is cursed with—each in their turn sought to terrorize the delegates. When the vote was taken, these enemies of the St. Paul convention and a class Farmer-Labor party succeeded in getting a narrow majority for their nonpartisan indorsing of old party candidates policy.

Delegates Get Disgusted.

This so disgusted a large number of delegates, who had never heard of the name of Communism before, that they left the hall in disgust, several of them saying to me: "If your farmer's program is Communism, we're for it."

This exodus took all the punch out of the gathering, and it was a very tame affair until the credentials committee started to "explain," almost at the close of the session, why it had not seated J. E. Snyder. Their "explanation" was not accepted, and Snyder was granted the floor. He made a speech, in the course of which he explained how he and Delegate Cobb, while both members of the Workers party, had worked ceaselessly to build up the convention, going out thru the state and sending out letters to hundreds of farmers. He told the convention how Chamberlain had "edited the call" so as to make it possible to shut him out thru not being a resident of Oklahoma for a year, tho his people were all farmers in the state. At the conclusion of Snyder's speech, Spurr tried to make a motion that "the other Communists be excluded from the convention." This was too raw even for the Leader crowd, and the whole matter was dropped.

Chamberlain, for the "policy committee," tried to ram thru quickly a motion to send a single delegate to the St. Paul convention. It was so scandalous that I was forced to take the floor and point out the utter unfairness of tying up the rank and file in the person of a single delegate. Chamberlain's motion was defeated, and delegates are to be elected, one from each county, 70 in all. Hogan tried to have the picking of the delegates, and in true steam roller style, referred it to the executive board. The writer predicts that there will be a delegation at St. Paul representative of the workers and farmers of Oklahoma beyond the control of Dan Hogan. Chamberlain, for his "good" work, was rewarded by being selected as the delegate to the Cleveland C. P. P. A. gathering.

"God Help LaFollette."

The few delegates that were left listlessly adopted a program that Chamberlain said was "Bob LaFollette's." If it is so, God help LaFollette. It is a mixture of meaningless phrases about the suffering people—much less radical than Mayor Hylan's talk about the "interests."

George Wilson was nominated for United States senator, and L. L. Libby for corporation commissioner. The great event was when LaFollette was nominated for president. Then the whole game became clear.

The hybrid monstrosity born under the name of the Oklahoma Farmer-Labor party, with a middle class third party platform, shaped around the personality of LaFollette and the prestige of the Farmer-Labor movement, has for its parents a gang of political high binders that the workers and farmers of Oklahoma have already had bitter political experience with.

But a new element has entered the struggle. A goodly portion of the delegates to this misnamed convention have now a clear conception of a class Farmer-Labor party. They are going back to their farms (that are owned by the bankers), determined to keep up the fight against capitalism and its "Greeks bearing gifts."

HOOVER DODGES MARTIN CHARGES OF ANTI-RED AID

"No Organization" In Bolshevik Districts

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Questioned by The Federated Press, Herbert Hoover has replied in a special interview to the statements made by Capt. J. V. Martin of the shipping board vessel, Lake Fray. Martin showed that Hoover sent him a cargo of food and motor trucks to the aid of Yudenitch, just before that counter-revolutionary invaded Russia from Esthonia in 1919.

Hoover denies that he intervened, while admitting that the food and trucks did go to Yudenitch. He claims they were used solely for the civilian population and not to assist the military expedition.

Paris Russian Group Responsible.

In the first place, he asserted, the $4,450,000 worth of food was sold to the "Provisional Russian government" in Paris. That is, there was in Paris a group or committee of former imperial ambassadors with whom the allies dealt, two years after the revolution in Russia. Yudenitch was operating with their sanction and support, as were Kolchak and others. The 60 motor trucks which he sent to Reval for delivery to Yudenitch's general supply committee were sold by the American war department to this Paris crowd, which gave its notes in payment. Hoover merely forwarded these, and he says he did so with the stipulation that they should be used only in distributing famine relief.

Alibi: No Relief Discrimination.

But Hoover's fundamental alibi is this: He says that there was no discrimination in this plan of famine relief, as against civilians within the lines of Russia.

Refusing to discuss the prospect of restoring normal relations between the United States and Russia, Hoover said that Russia's economic situation was steadily improving.

There is talk in Washington that Hoover is disturbed by the stubborn anti-Russian prejudice and policy of Secretary Hughes. But when Hoover is asked to talk about Russian recognition he hints that that ground has been staked out by the state department, and he must stay off.

Actors' Strike Called.

NEW YORK, May 14.—The Actors' Equity Association have decided to go on strike against the Producing Managers' Association on June first. The Equity also voted to accept the terms offered by the Managers' Protective Association, a Shubert off-shoot of the old managers' Association. The vote was 1099 to 1.

FILIPINO SUGAR SLAVES' STRIKE GROWS STRONGER

Workers Rebel Against Hawaiian Planters

HONOLULU, May 14.—(By mail)—Thousands of Filipino sugar cane workers from the Ewa plantation were expected today to join the fifteen thousand workers already out on strike for higher wages and a decent standard of living. These workers have been chafing all month to become active strikers. They have been doing all they could to assist the workers already out, by going on a "silent strike," slowing up on the job, and sending food to the strikers' camp.

A Dollar A Day?

Filipino plantation workers on the islands of Maui and Kauai are reported eager to join the ranks of their striking comrades. The slogan "Is A Dollar A Day Enough For You?" has caught the masses who have been mercilessly exploited by the barons of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association, who control the territorial government.

The Filipinos are asking for $2 a day to enable them to approach a better standard of living. The present wage of $1 a day is pitifully insufficient for these workers and their large families even in a tropical country where some foodstuffs are more plentiful.

Attacks Labor Commissioner.

The Filipino Labor Union and the so-called "High Wages Movement," led by Pablo Manlapit, an attorney of Honolulu, are in charge of the strike. They have attacked the resident Labor Commissioner, Mr. Cayetano Ligot, charging him with dishonesty in the discharge of his duties, with accepting money from the sugar planters' association, with incompetence, and with failure to co-operate in the activities of the Filipino community.

Four Japanese newspapers of Honolulu have rallied to the aid of the strikers and are soliciting funds for their support. Editorially, the papers say that the bettering of conditions among the Filipinos is essential to the well-being of the community as a whole. The Japanese labor organizations are also supporting the strike, remembering their own battle in 1909.

Injunction Against Bosses.

A unique use of the injunction is threatened by strikers. They are considering applying for an injunction against the forcible and unlawful evictions which take place on each plantation as the workers strike.

In the first evictions of workers' families from the plantation houses, many sad scenes took place, with insular police and troops lending aid to the bosses, as usual. The striking workers were peaceful and did not provoke the violence of the police.

One death resulted from the evictions and is the cause of the suit against the plantation company. A baby only a few months old, was ill with pneumonia in the hospital, but when the evictions began the parents were forced to take away the baby, altho it was desperately in need of a physician's attention. In the long journey to the city the child grew worse and by the time it was brought to the attention of a doctor again, it was too late. The family was disrupted by the sad and unnecessary death.

New Workers Join Strikers.

Scabs brought in from the Philippines quit work as soon as they realize what they are doing. Many of these were hired before the strike broke, but join the ranks of the strikers as soon as they hear of the situation. Boys of the Industrial School refused to scab and went on "silent strike" when their masters forced them to go to the plantations.

The strikers have all been lodged in city dwellings and every precaution was taken to insure sanitary conditions in the main camp. Food for a long fight was saved, altho it limits the workers almost entirely to a rice diet. Donations of fruit, fish, and doughnuts have been made by various sympathetic firms and friends.

Whether the workers will be able to gain their demands from the hard-boiled sugar trust owners of Hawaii is doubtful, but they are putting up a significant fight. They have issued a regular strike paper, in English, called "And Bantay," besides bulletins in Filipino dialects. They are making a splendid demonstration of working class unity.

Progressives Worry Railroad Owners Says Nickle Plate Chief

The railroads are well able to solve their problems, and would do so with satisfaction to everybody, but for the interference of "the Magnus Johnsons, the LaFollettes, the Brookharts and Shipsteads," Col. W. A. Coiston, vice-president and general counsel of the Nickle Plate railroad, declared here at a meeting of railroad men under the auspices of the Traffic Club of Chicago

MASSACHUSETTS FALLS IN LINE WITH CALL FOR FARMER-LABOR CONVENTION PLEDGED TO JUNE 17

BOSTON, May 14.—Massachusetts has fallen in line with the whole series of states which are organizing state Farmer-Labor Parties in support of the June 17th Farmer-Labor Convention. The call for the Massachusetts convention, to be held on June 1st in Boston, has just been issued in the name of a number of local trade unions and labor fraternal organizations.

The call for the Massachusetts convention, as other state calls, pledges support of the June 17th convention. The call reads as follows:

CALL FOR STATE FARMER-LABOR CONVENTION IN MASSACHUSETTS.

To be held Sunday, June 1, 1924, at Boston, Mass.

To all Labor Unions, Central Labor Councils, Workers' Political Parties, Workers' Co-operative Associations and Fraternal Organizations, and Farmers' Organizations in the State of Massachusetts:

Greetings:

Thruout the country, the industrial workers and farmers are uniting their forces into State and Local Farmer-Labor parties. The political domination of the employers, bankers and "open shoppers" is being challenged. Success has marked these first steps, in several instances, notably in the State of Minnesota, from which two United States Senators were elected on a Farmer-Labor ticket.

To link these local and state parties together and unite the political organizations of farmers and industrial workers for the 1924 Presidential Campaign, a National Farmer-Labor Convention has been called to convene at St. Paul, Minn., June 17th, 1924.

This call has been issued by the Committee of Arrangements in the name of the following organizations: Washington Farmer-Labor Party, North Dakota Farmer-Labor Party, Montana Farmer-Labor Party, Nebraska Progressive Party, Federated Farmer-Labor Party, Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party and the Buffalo Labor Party. Invitations to participate are based on endorsement of the following tentative program:

A.—Public Ownership. B.—Governmental Banking. C.—Public Control of all Natural Resources. D.—Restoration of all Civil Liberties guaranteed by the Constitution. E.—Abolition of the Use of Injunctions in Labor Disputes.

The forces of farmer and labor in the State of Massachusetts are at present without any political expression of their own. They must be united to be represented effectively at the June 17th Convention. This is the only hope for success in the November elections.

For this purpose, the undersigned organizations and trade unionists hereby issue a call for a State Farmer-Labor Convention to be held at Franklin Union hall, 41 Berkeley street, Boston, Mass., on June 1st, 1924, at 10:00 a. m.

Invited to send delegates to this convention are: Local labor unions and central labor councils, workers' political parties, workers' co-operative associations and fraternal organizations, and farmers' organizations which indorse the principles set forth.

The basis of representation shall be one delegate for a membership of less than 200, and two delegates for a membership of two hundred or over.

The purpose of the June 1st Convention is to create an organization in the State of Massachusetts which will be represented at the June 17th Convention at St. Paul, Minn., to adopt a State platform, and to nominate a full ticket for the State elections in November, 1924.

United action of Massachusetts industrial workers and farmers is the need of the hour.

EXPECT AMERICAN WORKERS TO LIVE ON $28 WEEKLY

That Means Little On A Part Time Basis

Wage earners in the industrial establishments of the country received an average of $26.80 a week during March, according to the report of the U. S. bureau of labor statistics. With full employment thruout the 52 weeks of the year this would mean annual compensation amounting to $1,390. This is approximately $1,000 short of the so-called health and decency standard.

Compared with a year ago these wages show an increase of 2.4 per cent, a neglible gain in purchasing power in the course of 12 months with the present wage tendency downward. Eight industries employing 1,200,000 workers, or more than one-eighth of the total factory workers of the country, are paying lower wages than a year ago with a consequent lowering of the standard of living they maintained in March, 1923. These include both men's and women's clothing, shirts and collars, cotton manufacture, boots and shoes and the manufacture of automobile tires. The decrease in purchasing power varies from 2 per cent in the shirt and collar industry to 8½ per cent in men's clothing.

Average earnings in typical industries during March were reported as follows: meat packing $24.37, baking $25.54, cotton manufacture $16.82, men's clothing $28.81, iron and steel $31.10, foundries and machine shops $29.18, saw mills $20.87, boots and shoes $22.50, printing $35.95, automobile $33.57, railway car building and repair $29, electrical equipment $28.32.

New Amalgamated Local Charges Law Violation For Women.

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, recently organized in this city, have filed charges with the commissioner of labor against eight San Francisco firms doing tailoring work under contract for local retailers. It is claimed these firms are violating the eight-hour law for women, in some cases working their women employes from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m. Others work late into the night, and sanitary conditions are bad in all of them.

DETROIT BOSSES TO RUSTLE SCABS FOR CAR STRIKE

But Organized Labor Is Ready For Fight

By SHERMAN BOWMAN

Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, May 14.—The Employers' Association of Detroit, an organization of 79 firms employing two-thirds of the Detroit factory force, has offered to recruit strikebreakers for the street railway commission in the event the 3,500 platform employes of the municipally-owned lines here strike.

Chester M. Culver, manager of the association, said his organization would canvass member factories for volunteers to man the cars, explaining that about 6,000 former conductors and motormen are working in factories here.

Line-up of Forces.

This offer from the industrial capitalists' local "union" throws new light on the line-up of forces growing out of the platform-men's demands for a 14 per cent wage increase, a readjustment of working schedules to eliminate split runs and recognition of the union.

The efforts of the acting mayor and the street railway commission to wreck the local Amalgamated Assn. of Street and Electric Railway employes have been greater than before.

The men were successful in their previous attempt with respect to wages and working conditions and nominally successful with respect to union recognition by the city hall. It was agreed at that time, by a resolution spread on the commission records, that the commission would not officially recognize the union but would use the union machinery in arbitrations. Local executives of the union also were kept on the street railway payroll.

Fired Union Officials.

Now the commission has taken the union executives off the city payroll because they failed to report for work on the cars, as ordered by the general manager of the lines. And instead of agreeing to arbitrate thru the union officials the commission has posted notices that it will arbitrate only if the employes choose representatives at a special election this month, the commission dictating the electoral methods. This is in spite of a petition by 95 per cent of the platform men delegating the union officers to act for them.

The Detroit Federation of Labor is prepared to throw its resources into the balance if a break is inevitable.

Governor Kills Safety.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—Following the recent scathing letter addressed to Governor Richardson by Will S. French, retiring commissioner of the California industrial accident commission, a report issued by Joseph J. Rosendale for the Industrial Association show 329 violations of safety regulations in building jobs in this city alone—a result of the crippling of the commission by the governor's "economy" budget.

FEAR ROUSED BY FRENCH GROWTH OF COMMUNISTS

Washington, Not Workers, Getting Frightened

By LAWRENCE TODD.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

WASHINGTON, May 14.—If there is one feature in the French returns that causes anxiety outside the state department here in Washington, it is the ominous growth of Communist power in Paris and other industrial cities of the republic. Election of Andre Marty, who ran up the red flag on the French warship he commanded when ordered to fire on the Soviet forces in a Russian Black Sea port, is significant of this drift.

Marty was tried and convicted of treason and mutiny, and was imprisoned. He was elected a score of times to municipal and other offices by the Communists of Paris, and finally was released, last summer, after he had polled nearly 60,000 votes in the district which includes St. Cloud and Versailles. Now he takes his seat in the chamber of deputies from this district, triumphant over Andre Tardieu, who was French high commissioner for loans in America during the war. Tardieu is an extreme reactionary.

Longuet Is Defeated.

Defeat of Jean Longuet, grandson of Karl Marx and spokesman of parliamentary socialism, is announced, while Marcel Cachin, editor of the Communist organ L'Humanite, is returned by a decisive majority. Cachin was last year charged with treason when he urged the Ruhr miners to resist French militarism. The French senate, mildly progressive, refused to try the case against the Communist leader, and Poincare threatened to resign, but did not make good his threat.

Defeat of the Poincare government in the French election appears to be satisfactory to almost every element in Washington except Secretary of State Hughes and the army-navy-diplomatic bloc.

Many of the most reactionary politicians in Congress are pleased, since they feel that Poincare had begun to hurt American business by his Ruhr policy.

It is taken for granted that the government at Paris will at least discuss the military occupation of industrial Germany, and will at least discuss with the United States the funding of the $4,000,000,000 war debt.

Hughes Is Not Pleased.

Secretary Hughes is not pleased, because his policy has been one of assisting Poincare. Morgan & Co. have been back of the reactionary regime in France, and recently have had to throw another $100,000,000 into the scale to save the franc. Hughes was appraised of this deal before it was made.

Senator Shipstead has demanded an investigation of Hughes' part in the affair, pointing to the record of the quick involvement of the United States in the world war after the British had overdrawn on Morgan & Co. ot the amount of $400,000,000.

Shipstead asked whether the Morgan loan to France is to involve the United States in a new war to save French credit. Hughes now faces the fact that the French people, who were claimed by the Morgan-controlled press to be solidly with Poincare, have repudiated him and gone far to the left.

one outcome of the German and French voting, politicians here concede, will be a great increase in the confidence of the progressive forces in the United States, in their ability to carry the election next November. The after-war spirit of pessimism and supine reaction is over, its last outposts in France and Japan have fallen. Reconstruction and reconciliation, as outlined by the British labor government and as voiced in America by Borah, LaFollette and the moderate radicals, are coming in.

RELEASE LAST "POLITICAL" IS WOMEN'S CALL

Zogg Imprisoned Under Repealed Act

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Release of the last war-time political prisoner, Nicholas S. Zogg, is demanded in a letter just received by Senator Burton K. Wheeler. The demand is made by a delegation of interested Pennsylvania women and is signed by Lavinia L. Dock of Fayetteville and Ellen Winsor of Haverford.

Bogg is the only "political" prisoner who escaped the executive eye in the December releases. He was sent up from California in 1918 and has served six of his twelve years' sentence in Atlanta prison. Zogg was given ten years under the now repealed Espionage Act and two years under the Draft Act for opposing enlistment and aiding "prisoners of conscience," the letter recounts.

Zogg Old and Sick.

The prisoner is now sixty years old and ill with tuberculosis. No reason appears for his further incarceration in a notoriously bad prison.

The Pennsylvania women further point out that their delegation interviewed James A. Finch, Pardon Attorney of the Department of Justice, who admitted that the D. of J. "agents provocateurs" had framed the case of Fritz W. Bischoff, a German who was recently granted communtation. The women protest the "repugnant" methods of the D. of J. and call attention to the fact "that Nicholas Zogg is still held in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary under a repealed Espionage Act, while all other political prisoners, even suspected German spies, have been freed."

The Pennsylvania women have also sent out a plea that all other interested citizens write to President Coolidge urging the release of Nicholas Zogg.

INVESTIGATION OF PAXTON HIBBEN, FRIEND OF SOVIET RUSSIA, IS DROPPED BY WAR DEPARTMENT

(By The Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 14.—When you are defeated the strategy of war is to retreat. On that principle the U. S. war department has called off its frameup investigation of Captain Paxton Hibben. Hibben, who has been active in Russian relief was recommended for promotion to major, reserve officers' corps. But Secretary of War Weeks last July ordered him investigated, on the charge of "holding beliefs favorable to enemies of the U. S. government." Hibben believes in Russian rcognition.

Hibben denied the charge at a hearing in October. When Hibben and his counsel in preparation for the suspended hearing examined the papers in the case they found that 41 documents had been removed from the file by the war department. It is believed that Hibben's effort to force the return of the missing papers caused Major General Bullard to hush up the whole matter and dissolve the investigating board of officers.

Both Old Parties Are Aided Financially By Big Meat Packers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 14.—When the senate was considering his resolution calling upon the chairmen and treasurers of the Republican and Democratic national committees to tell the senate what contributions they received during and since the 1920 campaign from the Big Five meat packers, Senator Johnson of Minnesota declared that both of the old parties had contributed to the deflation and ruin of the farmer. He cited an investigation made by the Minnesota state senate, showing that campaigns in the interest of big business, and against the farmers and wage workers' political program had been heavily financed by business concerns. The meat packers, he believed, had been generous to the Republican party war chest, and the Republican administration had failed to enforce the packers and stockyards' law in the St. Paul market.

Senator Norbeck of South Dakota charged that the Nonpartisan league spent "more money in South Dakota in 1918 than Newberry ever spent in Michigan." Johnson replied that this was money subscribed by the farmers in self-defense against the business crowd.

The Johnson resolution was adopted.

Russian Daily Paper "Novy Mir" To Open Office In Chicago

The Russian Communist daily, Novy Mir, is opening a branch office in Chicago at 1113 West Washington boulevard. A branch of the editorial board, consisting of three labor journalists and a staff of about ten correspondents, will take care of the Chicago department in the paper and cover the northwestern states. According to the present plans, there will be a correspondent in every Russian labor organization in Chicago, and all phases of the life of the Russian workers and labor news in general will be covered.

There are at present over 30,000 Russians and over 100,000 Russian speaking and reading people in Chicago. Up to the time of the revolution most of these people did not care to boast about being Russians. Some of them were even ashamed of it and were calling themselves Poles, etc. Since the revolution this has been greatly changed. The Russians are no more ashamed of themselves. They are proud of being immigrants from Soviet Russia.

Organizations and persons who are interested in any business with the Novy Mir are invited to address the Chicago office, Novy Mir, 1113 West Washington boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

"Baby Banks" For Southern Labor Is O. K.ed By Council

By J. W. LEIGH
(Federated Press Correspondent.)

NEW ORLEANS, May 14.—"Baby banks" known as credit unions were indorsed by the central trades and labor body. The proposed bill would permit seven residents of Louisiana to apply for permission to organize a credit union by signing an act of incorporation.

Par value of the stock would be ten dollars. The unions would receive savings, make loans and invest to the extent of 10 per cent of the capital stock. The bill also provides that the credit unions shall be organized only within groups that have a common bond of occupation, association or residence within a well defined neighborhood, small community or rural district. The rate of interest on loans to the member would not exceed 1 per cent a month. Similar unions exist in 15 states and have existed in Europe for many years. In cities such extension, it is said, creates credit for wage workers at low interest, and in the country assist in farmers' short term loan problems.

Debs Still Ill.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., May 14.—As soon as his strength permits, Eugene V. Debs, now an invalid in his Terra Haute home, will go to a sanitarium for special treatments. Since the treatments will require several months, Debs will be unable to attend the national convention of the Socialist party to be held in Cleveland July 6.

SECRETARY DAVIS GETS PANNED BY PENNSY LABOR

record, that official introduced Davis to the delegates as "one who worked himself up from the rank and file to an official in the cabinet" as a union man.

An icy atmosphere came over the convention as Davis took the floor and began to speak.

It was a speech that reeked with apologetics for the reactionary republican machine with which Davis is alligned—a speech that pleaded for harmony with the employers.

Attacks Foreign Born.

Davis tried to justify the new strike breaking immigration laws that he has helped to nurse thru both houses of congress. What is more, the former Welsh immigrant practically called on the delegates before him to act as spies on European working men who come here "illegally."

Silent as a clam about the brutal force his government uses towards workers who go on strike and ignoring the numerous injunctions his gang issues against organized labor, the strike breaking secretary of "Labor" begged the workers to have kindly feelings towards their employers—pleading for class collaboration.

"Money Is Not All."

"Money is not all in this world," weakly urged the representative of the multi-millionaires to the representatives of the men, who have to fight the bosses for each mouthful of food on their tables.

Davis concluded his Civic Federation speech and sat down. If he expected the working men present to respond to his palaver as Gompers and Alton B. Parker, are accustomed to do, he was mistaken.

Storm of Protest.

The delegates showed their resentment when a motion was made to give Davis a rising vote of thanks.

Working men rose to protest from different parts of the floor. Delegate Lever of Philadelphia, asked by what authority Davis was invited to speak.

Chairman Maurer tried in vain to close the incident and asked for yea and nay votes.

The hall reverberated with the thunder of "nays."

Davis begged for the privilege of making an explanation, which was granted.

Endorses Strike Breaking.

His explanation tried to explain Coolidge's activities in breaking the Boston police strike, saying he himself had endorsed the strike breaking telegram, and tried to defend the present administration's policies. Davis ended by challenging his opponents to debate.

It was a challenge that the outraged delegates took up quickly, but Davis didn't fight when the gage was accepted.

Scores of delegates rose to their feet, demanding the floor to answer Davis. The mover of the original motion insisted that the chairman had no right to call for a yea and nay vote when the motion called for a rising vote.

President Maurer adjourned the convention rather than let the rising vote against the labor secretary take place.

Merrick Accepts Challenge.

Delegate Fred Merrick of Pittsburgh, one of those who accepted Davis' challenge, has put his acceptance into the form of an official letter to Davis.

Important sessions of the state Farmer-Labor convention are taking place in the evenings, with the majority of the F. L. delegates also delegates to the State Federation of Labor convention.

New Immigration Bill Gives Britons Great Advantage

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 14.—British immigrants will get 91,000 out of the 150,000 chances of entering the United States which are to be offered to the world, after July 1, 1927, if the immigration bill now in conference becomes law. Representative Sabath of Chicago, discussing this clause in the house, has shown that the allotment of quotas, according to the ratio of national origin of the people of this country—except the descendants of slaves—means that German immigration will be limited to 22,000 per year, Scandinavian to 5,000 or so, and other desirable stocks to similar handfuls.

Progressive senators have only now discovered this absurdity in the conference bill, tho it was approved by both house and senate. It is section 11 of the conference report. Shipstead, Norris and others are going to try to have it eliminated by fighting the whole report.

THE SPIRIT THAT WINS

By C. E. Ruthenberg

The National Office of the Workers Party is in receipt of the following letter together with a contribution of $3 to the Farmer-Labor Party Campaign Fund:

> "Comrades: I have little to spare and am a poor beggar. I did however ask a nephew for a dollar or two for the campaign. He wrote me that I gave enough, and sent me $2 for my birthday. I did not ask it for that, so send it to you endorsed. I also send a money order for one dollar. I hope there will be a union of forces. This being disunited is the devil. I see the date is now June 17.—G. A.—Grand View, Calif."

The spirit of this letter is the spirit which has been behind the great movements in the interests of the down-trodden and oppressed. It is the spirit which has been shown by the Russian workers and peasants while fighting against overwhelming odds for their Workers and Peasants' Government. It is a spirit like this which will build a great mass movement in the United States to establish a Workers and Farmers' Government here.

BRITISH PACIFIST SAYS FORCE ONLY CAN BRING PEACE

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 14.—"In all of the decisions of the League of Nations, I do not know of a single one that has been just," Bertrand Russell, British scientist told a New York audience. He added that the league would not have prevented the last war and will not prevent the next war.

"Idealistic motives will never prevent war, only selfish motives," he said. "And three or four more first class wars will be necessary before strong commercial nations for selfish motives, try to outlaw war." But he looked forward to the time when it would be to the interests of Wall Street, the master of Europe, to stop European wars. Then the European and American bloc under the United States will fight the Orient, which under Russian leadership will revolt against western capitalist exploitation, Russell predicted.

"What will the workers in the U. S. and other capitalist countries do when their governments increase the subjugation and force war upon the Orient?" he was asked. He pointed out that pacifism on the part of the eastern countries is useless, that armed rebellion is the only weapon in the last analysis which will stop even "civilized" oppressors like Britain and the U. S. Russell said that white missionaries did more harm than white traders because they are crusadors trying to impose a "superior" civilization and give an idealistic excuse to white countries to war against so-called backward peoples.

Cast-off Workers Must Buy Own Food Even In Poorhouse

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—"We get only one nourishing meal a week; the rest of the meals we get beef from which all the nourishment has been boiled for the employes' soup. It is then warmed up and served to us as 'roast beef.' You should taste it!" says a pathetic letter to a local newspaper from "Several Inmates" of the Relief Home (poorhouse). "Do you know that the prisoners in the county jail get better food than we? Inmates who have no money to buy food grow weak from lack of nourishment. We must buy even our own sugar or go without it."

Italian ex-Socialist Dictator Bans Workers May Day Meetings

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, (By mail)—All May Day celebrations were banned by Mussolini. The Fascisti Party threatened with severe punishment all workers who joined any May Day demonstrations. Employers were given permission by Mussolini to fire workers who downed tools on labor's International holiday and in case of mass desertions from the factory, to lock them out.

The Italian Communist Party in an open letter to the Unitarian and Maximalist Socialists suggested that the three parties devise ways and means of bringing the workers out in a great demonstration thruout Italy. Both parties refused.

The Unitarians boasted that they favored democracy and taunted the Communists with being in favor of a dictatorship. No doubt, the Unitarians are opposed to the dictatorship of the workers, but they allow the Mussolini dictatorship to sit lightly on them.

One of their reasons for refusing the United Front appeal of the Communists was that a mass demonstration would be dangerous.

New Trial League For Sacco-Vanzetti, Class War Victims

(By The Federated Press)

BOSTON, May 14.—Greater efforts to save Sacco and Vanzetti, convicted in 1921 of murder on perjured evidence, from the electric chair are being made by the recently organized Sacco-Vanzetti New Trial league. The league is cooperating with the original defense committee which familiarized the labor circles of the world with the attempt by the U. S. department of justice to fasten a payroll murder on the two Italian-Americans whom it wished to get out of the way to conceal one of its own murders.

The league is publishing a bulletin at 43 Tremont St. Boston. The first issue appeared May 1. The executive committee of the league includes Mrs Elizabeth Glendower Evans, author of the 10c pamphlet, "Outstanding Features of the Sacco-Vanzetti Case," John S. Codman, J. H. Krauzer, J. Van Vaerenwyck and Selma Maximon, secretary.

Soviet Russia's Ultimatum

Soviet Russia has discontinued trade relations with Germany as a result of the failure of the reactionary German government to make amends for the recent raid on the offices of the Soviet trade delegation in Berlin.

The capitalist press tries to minimise the importance of this action but quite outside of the economic dislocation that it will bring about in Germany it has a deep political significance that will not be lost upon the more intelligent supporters of capitalism and which should not escape the workers interested in the rise to power of the first workers' and peasants' government.

Soviet Russia, because of the backwardness of the revolutionary movement in other capitalist nations, has been forced to make certain compromises with the capitalist system but the ultimatum to Germany signifies that this period is nearing its end. Soviet Russia, in severing trade relations with Germany, serves notice upon the capitalist world that compromise and concessions are things of the past when the issue is one of protection of representatives of the revolutionary Russian working class.

In Europe the revolutionary wave is rising again tho it may sink once more under the attacks of fascism that seems to replace the spineless governments which keep a weak hold on capitalist state power in the interim between Poincare and collapse. Soviet Russia has successfully withstood the period of rampant reaction in Poland, Germany, Italy and France and if and when all vestage of capitalist democracy is again wiped out in western Europe, the working class of Russia will be in a position to do more for the European workers than extend its sympathy.

This is what the severing of trade relations with Germany means and in the stern attitude of the Soviet government, based as it is on a knowledge of its own strength and the strength of the European revolutionary movement, there is little consolation for capitalist governments of Europe, tho their apologists may whistle to keep up their courage.

The Lone Opposition

The one notable fact about the Ludendorff-Fascisti demonstration at Halle, Germany, Sunday, was that the Communists furnished the lone opposition. While the members of other parties may have proclaimed at times their hostility to the return of monarchism, it remained for the Communists alone, to carry that hostility into action.

It was the Communists who had destroyed the Moltke monument, at Halle, symbol of German militarism. It was the German government, with the Socialist Ebert, at its head, that gave the generals, princes, including the ex-kaiser's fifth son, and other riff-raff of the deposed kaiserdom, the right to hold their Halle demonstration, under government protection, and replace the destroyed memorial to a human butcher. A reputable correspondent cables that socialists joined the nationalists and fascisti in the demonstration, with its 50,000 participants, mostly youths, after the fashion of the Italian fascisti.

The Halle demonstration will again prove to the German workers that the struggle for their emancipation goes forward on the shoulders of the Communists. More than four millions, at the recent elections, by their votes, showed that they realized that fact. New millions will be continually won to this view until complete victory over monarchism and capitalism, in all its forms, is achieved.

Cachin and Longuet

One of the big lessons of the French elections is seen in the re-election of Marcel Cachin, Communist, and the crushing defeat of Jean Longuet, socialist, the discredited grandson of an illustrious ancestor, Karl Marx.

It was Cachin that faced a charge of treason when he urged the Ruhr coal miners to resist the aggressions of French imperialism. It was Cachin that was to be placed on trial before the French senate. It was Poincare himself who threatened to resign when the senate refused to go thru with the trial.

All this time Longuet was ever active preaching hatred against the Communist International. He went to England and then toured the United States with his doctrine of anti-Communist hate. To be sure, the British and American workers refused to listen. Now the French workers have completely repudiated Longuet, and with him all that he stands for. No doubt, Premier MacDonald, of Great Britain, will be able to read the handwriting on the wall, and draw the lesson. But he will plunge on to his own fate—defeat at the hands of Communist workers.

The Future in Pullman

The striking carbuilders have gone back to their jobs in Pullman. They fought a game fight. They got about all they could, against the big obstacles that confronted them. They are determined to do better next time.

While the Pullman carbuilders toil at their daily tasks under the lash of the speed-up system, let them remember that their greatest strength is in organization, political and industrial. You came out on strike this time without an organization. While on strike you organized some of your numbers into the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen. Let no day pass, Carbuilders of Pullman, without securing new adhesions to your union. When your industrial organization is strong and powerful, Mr. E. F. Carry, president of the Pullman Co., Knight of St. Gregory, of the Roman Catholic Church, will not be able to reject you. He will be compelled to listen to your demands, and grant them.

But industrial organization is not sufficient. You must also have your political party. In this strike many of you have had your first contact with the Workers (Communist) Party. You have heard its speakers. You have read its literature. Daily you have followed the developments of your struggle thru the columns of the DAILY WORKER, the daily spokesman in the English language of the American Communist movement. You will be doing yourself a service by joining the English-language branch, or one of the several foreign-language branches of the Workers Party in Pullman and by subscribing for the DAILY WORKER, or one of the many foreign-language Communist publications.

The big lesson of this strike is that the workers must be prepared for the next struggle. Now is the time to prepare.

He Didn't Get Enough

Victor Berger hasn't had enough of Woodrow Wilson. The Milwaukee socialist congressman wants to rattle the bones of the dead war president, persuade the "14 points" to do a post-mortem tango and, presto, save the Germans from the terrible French, British, Italian and Americans.

Berger wants to revise the Versailles Treaty in the now faded light of the Wilsonian program. He has introduced, seemingly in all seriousness, a resolution to that effect in congress. He wants surgery work on the treaty done by a conference to include representatives of all nations that are signatories to the Versailles treaty. This gathering like the fake disarmament conference is to be held in Washington, D. C., before the first Monday in December, this year, which is the day of the assembling of the next regular congressional session, and, so spread the smell oil, "Cautious Cal" Coolidge is supposed to call it.

Berger has been out of congress for six years. His joke resolution can only be looked on as an effort to make up for lost time. In discussing his resolution he immediately raises the question of "war guilt," a matter that is considered taboo even in the Second (Socialist) International, having been dropped years ago. When Berger tried to raise this question at the last Hamburg Conference of the Second and Two and One-Half Internationals he was promptly sat upon. But Berger is persistent, even if tainted with some forms of insanity, and seriously proclaims:

"If any nation can be held more responsible than others (for the war) Russia and France—and to a certain extent Great Britain—are to be regarded as by far the guiltier."

For the purpose of the resolution Berger seems to have discarded the theory that it was a capitalist war. But that does not now fit in with Berger's sympathies for Germany,—not the Germany of the workers and farmers, but the Germany of Scheidemann, Ebert, Noske and other hangman of Communists.

The Treaty of Versailles is a scrap of paper torn into so many shreds that not even Victor Berger can piece it together again. As a result of the Versailles pact Europe is drifting rapidly into another war that will be more widespread and more devastating than the last. This is so because the Bergers in Germany sabotaged the social revolution in that country, in 1918, making the writing of the Treaty of Versailles at Paris possible. But the ending of the next war will find the Bergers going into the discard with the capitalists they serve, and the treaty, that will need no revision, will be written by the spokesmen of workers and farmers in all countries, freed from the capitalist yoke everywhere.

Demonstrate!

The United Council of Working Class Women in New York City has called for a demonstration this Saturday against the city hall under the slogans of "Down with the Landlords! Down with the High Rents and Firetraps." The day will come when hundreds of thousands will march on New York's City Hall under those same slogans. It is absolutely necessary that the demonstration this Saturday be made as effective as possible. This is a case where numbers will count.

Every mother that feels the death grip of dark, filthy and unsanitary tenements upon the thin life thread of her children, should be in line. Every worker who resents the clutch of the profiteering landlord should add himself to the procession. The time to protest against the next firetrap horror is now; not after it has taken its huge toll of workers' lives. Join the demonstration, Saturday. Help sound the call to action, that will rouse, not only labor in New York City, but the whole working class thruout the entire land against the murderous housing conditions now prevailing under the profit-hungry capitalist social system.

OUR BOOK REVIEW SECTION

By GEORGE McLAUGHLIN.

Vocations, by Gerald O'Donovan, Boni and Liveright, New York City.

I started this book with acute misgivings, as I learned from the "blurb" that it is not flattering to the Holy Roman Tools. I expected an ignorant tirade. To my delight I found it a stark picture of the unnatural life of priests and nuns—well-written and sympathetic.

Two sisters enter a convent. One endures the petty convent politics, the idle chatter and the uselessness of her life for three years and then calmly leaves—to the chattering rage of all the "holy" men and women. The other upheld by a fat vanity and a series of liaisons with priests enjoys the life.

The characters are vivid—the village publican and his wife; the dreamy old Mother Superior; the business manager—an abrupt Robot; the priests—one a sensualist, one full of dry wisdom; one a brainless loon and wonderful evangelist by virtue of "soulful" eyes, a "sweet" voice—and a habit of stealing his sermons. An excellent book to read and a better one to give a girl, who has discovered a "vocation" in the convent.

Land and See Tales for Boys and Girls, by Rudyard Kipling, Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.

Kipling has written rattling good stories and much stirring verse for which he may be forgiven his "hate" stuff—"Mary Postgate," "Cleared" and "Ulster" (for which last "A. E." took him sternly to task). His last book is a bitter disappointment, dull and insipid. The theme is fit for Boy Scouts—"Be loyal to God, King and Boss"—and the yarns are mediocre; the following being typical: a hashed account of medal winning exploits, a blurb of his boyhood school and nineteen pages to prove that a man ignorant of rifle work, can't use a rifle.

"Americanization of Edward Bok," an autobiography by Chas. Scribners Sons, (New edition).

This is an excellent book to read with Woodward's "Bunk." I am unable to believe that my country Americanized Bok.—He is a hundred per center, who happened to be born in Holland. He combines business shrewdness, nauseating sentimentality and genuine American snobbishness, in a perfect blend.

When only thirteen years old, he practiced the fundamental capitalist theory that to make money, one hires a man to work for him and pays him less than he produces.

He describes minutely his observation of our aristocratic small fry—Grant, Hayes, Beecher, Lyman Abbott, Cleveland, Roosevelt, and other nonentities.

His American sentimentalism and "idealism" crop up, when he tells of his crusades. He improved American architecture and house furnishings—while Jacob Rus was fighting unsuccessfully and unaided to clean up the awful New York tenements. He campaigned against fake culture in women's clubs and against Paris styles in women's clothes—while Ogden Armour was using the Saturday Evening Post, (companion magazine to Bok's "Ladies Home Journal") to smoke screen Upton Sinclair's exposure of the filthy packing houses and their brutal labor conditions.

His mushiness gets full play on the World War. He tells with snug complacency of his share in propagandizing the war and raising money for it. Never once did he ask "For what purpose?" He sloshes maudlin sentiment over the troops, uses superlatives on the two wounded he met—but is willing to send 4,000,000 more into the same inferno. In conclusion he hopes that "Russia will prove a second U. S. A."

MUSIC.

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

"So Long Susan"

"So Long Susan," a musical comedy in four parts, was given for the last time by the Blackfriars, a University of Chicago organization, at Mandel Hall on the university campus last Saturday. The Blackfriars is an order of university men, whose sole purpose is to give a musical comedy written and performed by themselves every spring.

"So Long Susan" was written by Jack Oppenheim and Robert Pollack. Balzac Bones, a student on the Midway, is in love with a coed named Susan Smith, who has jilted him for a football star. Sitting in despair in front of one of the women's dormitories, Balzac meets Herr Tonic, instructor in physics, who gives him a potion that will take him back centuries.

The second part, which is by far the best in the show, takes place in the Mermaid Tavern in London, in Queen Elizabeth's time. Marlowe, Fletcher and Ben Johnson are waiting for Shakespeare to appear when Balzac shows up. Balzac at once falls in love with the barmaid. (According to Blackfriars custom, the women's parts are taken by men. Jack Stambaugh, who played the heroine in every scene made an attractive girl, but a heroine who sings in a light baritone is a trifle disconcerting.) After a time Shakespeare arrives, and the house provides the playwrights with forbidden liquor.

With the arrival of Sir Walter Raleigh occurs the most beautiful scene in the show. Sir Walter has returned from Cathay, and shows the company what he has found there. In comes a mob of beautifully costumed mandarins each bearing a huge, three-foot mah jong tile. The dance of the chinamen and their song, "In the Temple of Mah Jong," is one of the finest things one can find in any musical show.

But soon the famous Rugby player, Sir Henry O'Hare enters, and the barmaid jilts Balzac for him. There is a duel between the L. of C. man and his rival, during which Queen Elizabeth herself appears with her prohibition squad. She exclaims in regal tones "the 'ouse is pinched," and has all but Balzac and Sir Walter "thrown in chines." She refuses to arrest the hero because, as she says, "we do not deal with minors in this precinct." Disgusted with it all, Balzac drinks another draught of his potion.

The third scene is in the lobby of the Hotel Parthenon during election night. Balzac is running for mayor of Athens against Paris. Paris has given away free garters to obtain support, but Balzac has the backing of Plato, manager of the hotel and stands the better chance. The hero falls in love again, this time with Helen of Troy, who throws him over for Paris when the election returns, received over the radio, shows that Balzac has won. Balzac drinks the last of his magic elixir, and reappears on the university campus.

Thruout the Greek scene are so many exceedingly funny episodes, that space will not permit description of them. Diogenes with his lantern, the little girl reporter from the Athenian Examiner, the chorus of weeping and laughing philosophers, dressed as the "joys" and "glooms" of the Hearst cartoons, and the Swedish cook of the hotel deserve more extended mention than can be given here. But the profusion of musical numbers thruout the scene is its one bad point.

Of course the play has its happy ending, and its finale of all the music of the show.

The acting was excellent. William Kerr as Balzac, Jack Stambaugh, the heroine, Robert Lanyon as Herr Tonic and Owen Nugent as Queen Elizabeth were especially good.

On the whole the music was not so good. Most of it was of the kind that any hack can reel off, three yards of score for a nickel. The song "My Vagabond" and the chorus "In the Temple of Mah Jong" were the best bits in the show.

But the entry of Queen Bess and the prohibition squad was worth sitting thru all the rest to see.

New York Women To March On City Hall To Hit High Rents

NEW YORK, May 14.—A demonstration staged by the United Council of Workingclass Women will march on city hall next Saturday afternoon to demand of the mayor that the city build houses and rent them to the workers at cost.

The marchers will gather at Rutgers Square at 1:30 p. m. In case of rain the demonstration will be held on the following Saturday.

In a statement issued by the office of the organization arranging the demonstration, the government is assailed for spending billions on war and nothing on the protection of the workers.

An appeal is made to working class women to join the Council, which has an office at 125 4th Avenue, New York City.

Liars' Mud-slinging Contest.

NEW YORK, May 14,—Lawyers and capitalist newspapers got the worst of it in a mutual mud-slinging contest before a New York Bar Association meeting. President Henry W. Taft charged newspapers with blocking justice, conniving with unethical lawyers, ruining the reputations of innocent people by false and sensational stories, and sabotaging legal reform. Don C. Seitz, business manager, New York World, denied that lawyers were interested in law reform, saying that the laws were generally drawn up in law offices for secret or private ends. Lawyers are more eager to smash laws than to defend them, said Seitz.

Dinner Pail Epics
by Bill Lloyd
T. Linderas

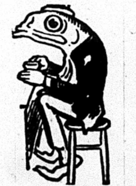
I see as how the actor folks is casting off the money yokes, and threatening to go on strike if they can't get the terms they like, and workers of the tragic muse is breaking into labor news.

Until the new societee makes art as free as it can be, I guess it ain't no scenic lies that actor folks is working guys, for in this money-grabbing age we have a coupon-clipping stage, where managers who love the mart control box offices and art.

It don't take makeup by the pound to give the footlight favorite ground for throwing in his mimic lot with those what union cards has got. He needn't step much out of part, for its real work to turn out art.

The girl who stuffs her legs in tights, the man who works the bright spotlights, the kid what plays the juveniles, the usher girls who walk sum miles, J. Caesar dying with a groan, the sport who plays the slide trombone, the stage mechanic with his crew, the young (perhaps not) ingenue, the guy what dies as Romeo, the chap that makes the curtain go, the folks what set up scenes so nice, Eliza crossing on the ice, the gink who guards the ticket box, old Rip Van Winkle with false locks, the wardrobe mistress with her thread, fair Desdemona choked in bed—all these who make up mimic life are victims of the bosses' knife.

I'll say they better unionize before the god Appolo dies.



THE POOR FISH says that Secretary of Labor Davis ought to go back where he came from.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

For the first time in history William (Billy) Sunday fell down on a schedule to deliver two sermons. The evangelist was ill with an attack of food poisoning following a banquet which was given in his honor by local bankers. It was rumored that the liquor was not what it ought to be, but this report may be concocted by the Communists, who were responsible for the investigations now going on in Washington resulting in the removal of Denby, Daugherty, Burns—three patriots. Sunday was delirious, and when approached by friends made a collection speech. "He is getting to be himself again," said the doctors, and all fears over his condition were allayed.

"Spike" O'Donnell, a Chicago business man who does not conduct his affairs according to the rules and regulations of the Chamber of Commerce, was standing on a street corner with young "Spike" on his shoulder, just to give his heir an opportunity to see Cardinal Mundelein, who had arrived with a red hat from the pope. "Spike" had something like $9,000 in his pocket, perhaps the price of a few barrels of moonshine. However, when Mr O'Donnell put his hand in his pocket, preparatory to inviting his son into a drug store for an ice cream soda, he found the pocket still there, but it was as empty of cash as a capitalist politician's head is of ideas. "Damn the crooks!" growled "Spike." "An honest man cannot take a walk these days without a bodyguard. Even the holy cardinal's blessing does not seem to have had a beneficial effect on the hardened sinners." But "Spike" is so crooked that there is a suspicion he picked his own pocket unconsciously while waiting to see his shepherd, Cardinal Mundelein, in his scarlet robes.

"The New Leader," one of the few survivors from the flock of socialist weeklies that flourished in this country a few years ago, has entered the lists against the Weekly People for the funny-sheet championship of America. It has an editorial staff large enough to man a big metropolitan daily and its foreign dispatches conceived and written in the editorial room of the weekly are very amusing if not instructive or accurate. In its issue of May 10, it presents an array of figures that would baffle Leland Olds of the Federated Press, to prove that the Socialist Party of Germany gained a great victory by losing 5,000,000,000 votes since the 1919 elections. This means a smaller party but a happier little socialist family as the Weekly People apologized when it expelled another live member—in the days when it had somebody to expel.

In the same paper we find a report of Morris Hillquit's debate with Bertrand Russell. Hillquit holds that the British Labor Party is revolutionary while Russell is of the opposite opinion. Russell's intellectual foot slipped when he admitted that the MacDonald government was composed of honest men. Quick as a flash Hillquit pounced on him with, "In these days that is revolutionary." The debate suddenly took on a Teapot Dome flavor. Hillquit also explains that the term "revolutionary" has no connection with barricades or bloodshed. Let the capitalists glut their thirst for the blood of the workers, if they will. Socialists must remain calm and decent except when it is necessary to spill some Communist blood ala Noske, Scheidemann and Company.

James O'Neal uses up one column of space repeating that the labor fakers, the Jewish unions and the East Side pawnbrokers will have nothing to do with Communists, therefore the St. Paul convention must be a failure. John Fitzpatrick at the July 3 conference declared that the Communists could not make themselves felt in the American labor movement in the next twenty years. Today John's political influence does not extend far beyond the Loop. The Catholic Church once said it would never recognize the heliocentric theory and burned Bruno at the stake because he held that the sun was the centre of our planetary system. But the church lived to change its view tho Bruno died. The German labor leaders told General Hell-and-Maria Dawes one month ago that the German workers had no use for Communism. We do not know how much the good news cost Dawes but the elections tell us that the German faker was a darned liar. Prediction is a dangerous form of diversion, as Fitzpatrick, the Catholic Church and the German labor fakers know by now. James O'Neal and his mythical 1,000,000 votes will be wiser tho sadder after June 17.

Rail Lawyers Fight Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Railroad lawyers who have been pouring into Washington are hopeful of delaying action on the Barkley railroad labor bill until the end of the session, if adjournment is not beaten.

On the other hand, they are alarmed because Rep. Shallenberger of Nebraska has started a petition to discharge from the interstate commerce committee the course that was taken with the Barkley bill—the measure for repeal of the guaranty clause—Sec. 16a—in the Esch-Cummins law.

PARIS, May 15.—Confusion reigns in the ranks of the left bloc that defeated Poincare in the recent elections. It was much easier to defeat Poincare than agree on the spoils of office.

The socialist party is running arround as usual with its head in a sack not knowing what to do. A combination of left parties is necessary to form a government. No one party has within one hundred seats of having sufficient strength to hold power for one day.

Parliamentarism in Decay.

The French election again reveals the rapid decay of parliamentary government. The prediction is freely made here that the big battle in the near future will be between the Communists, who stand for the dictatorship of the proletariat and the big capitalists whose interests can no longer be served by a debating society and therefore, want a Fascisti dictatorship. This so-called democracy is

CALL WALKER TO PINCH HIT FOR REACTIONARIES

Renegade Socialist In Anti-Communist Talk

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 15. John H. Walker, president of the state federation of labor and renegade socialist and labor partyist is another pinch hitter against Communism who was scheduled to follow Victor Olander on the floor of the Illinois miners' convention.

Walker, the Farrington henchmen are saying, will attack the Farmer-Labor convention coming on the 18th in Peoria. The former socialist will also praise the policies of rewarding labor's "friends" on the old party tickets, especially, Len Small, who is keeping Kattorfeld, a Communist, tightly imprisoned in Joliet.

Walker, The Lobbyist.

As Walker interpreted it in a speech at the Portland convention of the A. F. of L. the function of a state federation president consists largely in his legislative activities, helping to elect "good" men to office and then lobbying efficiently with these "good" men so that they will do something after they were elected.

The Farmer-Labor movement which permits the rank and file to do something for themselves, is one of Walker's pet aversions.

McCarty Kids Delegates.

Pinning all their hope on labor legislation via the capitalist route, the leaders of the convention have just one fear that they kid the workers any longer. In order to make them think that they actually are getting some results, they brot in Dennis McCarty of the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen to brag up the success of the non-partisan system in Illinois.

McCarty boasted that out of 95 candidates recommended by the labor officialdom in the Illinois primaries last April, 81 were nominated and he assured the delegates that the outlook for legislation favorable to labor at the next state assembly is highly promising. All that is wanted, he said, is for the workers to support the candidates at the polls in November.

Mine Union's Insurance.

Among the direct benefits of membership in the United Mine Workers, is the $350 death benefit which is worth $14.66 per year, in fact no insurance company would insure miners of all ages for that sum at that rate, said Secretary-treasurer Walter Nesbit in his report. Nesbit recommended amending the district constitution so that district officers be required to BOSTON, May 15.—By an amendment to the constitution of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, adopted yesterday, 153 to 50, an iron heel dictatorship of the officials is clamped upon the membership. The administration, which is riding roughshod over the convention, with the aid of the delegates from the small locals, jammed the amendment thru.

The general executive board of the union is given the right to suspend or revoke the charter of a local union if the local is "guilty of improper conduct," the G. E. B. to be the judge. Protest as to the definition of the loose term "improper conduct" was offered by delegates, who charged that the elasticity of the term made possible the abuse of power by a few

DAUGHERTY BROTHERS BAG ALIEN FUNDS IN MAL'S OHIO BANK

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Colonel Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian, today told the senate Daugherty investigating committee that he deposited $50,000 of alien funds in Mal Daugherty's Washington court house, Ohio bank at the request of the former attorney general and Jesse Smith.

Miller said, Jesse Smith first came and asked him to deposit the money in Mal Daugherty's bank and then he (Miller) went to see the attorney general, to ask him if it was his wish that he do so, and was told that it was.

Communist International Endorses Party Policy

The question whether the Workers Party was following the correct Communist policy in supporting with all its strength the formation of a Farmer-Labor Party in the United States has been raised by members of the organization in this country.

In order to settle the question of whether the Farmer-Labor United Front was a policy for a Communist Party such as the Workers Party should put into effect and in support of which it should throw all its strength, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party submitted this question to the Communist International, with which it is affiliated as a fraternal organization.

The view of the Communist International on this question is expressed in the following cablegram:

> "Communist International considers June 17th Convention momentous importance for Workers Party. Urges C. E. C. not to slacken activities preparation June 17th. Utilize every available force to make St. Paul Convention great representative gathering labor and left wing.
> Executive Committee, Communist International.

The fact that the Communist International supports the policy which the Workers Party has been following in relation to the June 17th Convention should inspire every Party member to more earnest support of the June 17th Convention.

The Party must throw all of its energy into familiarizing the workers and farmers of this country with the purpose of the June 17th Convention. It must endeavor to have delegates elected from all labor and farmer organizations so that the June 17th Convention will be a great mass demonstration of workers and farmers in support of independent political action in the interests of these classes and against the domination of the government by the capitalists.

The June 17th Convention is the first step toward realizing the slogan of a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

In supporting the June 17th Convention, our Party is rendering the greatest service to the movement of the workers and farmers in this country.

Forward to a mass Farmer-Labor Party!
Forward to the Workers' and Farmers' Government!

Central Executive Committee,
Workers Party of America.
William Z. Foster, Chairman.
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

SECRETARIES OF STATE AND WAR ARE HIT

Involved in Delivery of Arms to Kolchak

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—In connection with the sale of $5,552,000 worth of rifles and ammunition to Kolchak by the American government in July, 1919, disclosed in Secretary of War Weeks' report on his sales of arms to Mexico, another letter has turned up.

This is one from Secretary Lansing to Secretary of War Baker, dated July 25, 1919, just after the return of Lansing and President Wilson from Paris. A letter previously published by The Federated Press and the DAILY WORKER, from Acting Secretary Frank Polk to Baker, dated July 11, stated that President Wilson had authorized Polk and Baker to sell war supplies to Kolchak on a basis of 10 per cent cash payment.

Wilson specified that no formal recognition should, however, be given Kolchak's government, then located at Omsk. Polk urged Baker that whatever was to be done, should be done quickly.

Says Lansing, on July 25:

"My Dear Mr. Secretary (Baker): Referring to previous correspondence, and more especially to an oral inquiry made today by Colonel Pierson on behalf of the director of sales, I am writing to say that the department of state recognizes Mr. Boris Bakhmeteff as ambassador of Russia and was informed by Mr. Bakhmeteff that during his absence at Paris the Russian embassy here would be in charge of Mr. Serge Ughet, who would act as charge d'affaires ad interim of Russia.

"This department has not ceased to regard Russia legally as a co-belligerent. Moreover, as you are already aware, this department has favored making aavilable to Russia such supplies as it may prove possible to ship. Consequently I trust there may be no difficulty in coming to some arrangement with Mr. Serge Ughet, charge d'affiares ad interim of Russia, or with such other agencies as may seem to you proper, for selling or otherwise disposing of such surplus war materials as may prove available.

"I am, my dear Mr. Baker, very sincerely yours,

"ROBERT LANSING."

Five days later the contract for delivery of 268,000 rifles to Kolchak in Siberia, for his war against the Soviet republic, was signed.

DIAGNOSIS OF COOLIDGE CABINET SHOWS IT IS IN VERY BAD HEALTH

Diagnosis of the political health of Calvin Coolidge's cabinet shows the patient's case is hopeless.

Exposure of Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes' connection with the Martha Washington shipping scandal and Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover's activities in delivering the Alaskan salman industry to the Fish Trust, is having a fatal effect. The political standing of Coolidge's aides, past and present, is as follows:

POLITICALLY DEAD.

Edwin Denby, former secretary of navy, who turned over the navy's oil reserves to the oil robbers.

Harry M. Daugherty, all-around crook and underworld shyster lawyer.

William J. Burns, arch labor framer and overpress-agented detective.

POLITICALLY DYING.

Charles Evans Hughes, agent of the Standard Oil company, in plot with Samuel Gompers to prevent recognition of Russia and to grab oil fields in the near east. Now exposed as using his office to put money in the hands of his former clients.

Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, star actor in the million-dollar booze scandal. He is a big whisky distiller and chief prohibition enforcement officer. Arch aid to multi-millionaire tax dodgers.

John W. Weeks, secretary of war and banker, who grafted three millions in Bosch Magneto stock, a German company. Now caught in $5,000,000 airplane scandal.

POLITICALLY SICK.

Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, who diverted one million dollars of American relief funds to aid czarist war on Soviet rule. Now uncovered as assisting $60,000,000 salmon steal. The Hoover case is about hopeless.

Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, Wall street tool and enemy of farmers, whose only claim to health is his newspaper decision over Magnus Johnson in a milking contest.

Hubert Work, secretary of the interior, who succeeded Albert B. Fall, and aid the criminal acts of his predecessor.

James J. Davis, secretary of labor, also Pittsburgh banker, author of the scheme of finger-printing the foreign born workers. Repudiated at this week's session of Pennsylvania Federation of Labor.

Calvin Coolidge, president, champion strikebreaker of America and ringleader of the cabinet of crooks. Just exposed in telegrams as trying to "deliver" Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford, great open shop capitalist.

June 17th Cheered By Washington Co. Farmer-Labor Party

McMURRAY, Wash., May 15.—The Farmer-Labor party of Skagit county, Wash., held its initiatory campaign meeting in Yeoman hall, Saturday night. John C. Kennedy, state secretary of the party, as speaker of the evening, pointed out that the discredited condition of the old parties made the movement spontaneous thruout the country toward an honest government for producers in support of a real platform to be promulgated at St. Paul, June 17. Much enthusiasm was shown. A good number joined the game by taking out party cards.

FARMER-LABOR MASS MEETING WILL BE HELD IN PEORIA MAY 17 WHILE MINERS CONVENTION IS IN SESSION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 15.—The Farmer-Labor Party of Illinois of which Duncan MacDonald, former secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Mine Workers Union is secretary pro-tem, will stage a mass meeting here on Saturday night, May 17, to discuss the June 17 farmer-labor convention in St. Paul and the sensational exposures of capitalist crookedness and graft made in Washington recently.

Delegates attending the miners' convention, now in session here, will have an opportunity to hear why they should support a political party of their own and not allow themselves to be dragged along at the tail of Governor Small's political chariot merely because it suits Frank Farrington and the betrayers of the work-votes for ther own selfish interests.

The speakers will be Duncan MacDonald, former president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor; Arne Swabeck, delegate to the Chicago Federation of Labor; Freeman Thompson, president of Sub-district No. 4, and Jack Johnston, assistant secretary of the Trade Union Educational league. The meeting will be held at the Labor temple.

The eyes of the workers and farmers of America are now turned on St. Paul as it becomes clearer every day that the July 4 conference of the C. P. P. A. has no intention of organizing a working class party or any kind of a party. "On to St. Paul" will be the slogan of the meeting on Saturday evening.

SALE OF BOAT PUTS HUGHES IN BAD HOLE

Used Office In Clients' Behalf, Say Probers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes is busy hunting affidavits to support his plea that he didn't know his subordinates in the department of state were urging shipping board officials to authorize the transfer of the transport Martha Washington to an Italian firm for a price far below that offered by an American firm.

The scandal arises from the fact that Hughes acted as special counsel for the interests that his department later sought to favor and that he has said to have received payment from his clients. Hughes' assistants assert that the secretary had severed all connections with his clients before he entered the cabinet but the House Committee investigating the United States shipping board is sceptical of that assertion.

The scandal is further aggravated by the fact that the shipping board has no legal right to make the transfer of a transport to a foreign concern. At least such is an opinion once officially rendered by Hughes himself.

To Quiz Hughes.

Hughes' statement that he was innocently ignorant of the activities of William Phillips, then undersecretary of state, will be probed by the house committee, it is expected. The secretary himself is slated for an early appearance before the committee, it was learned.

Phillips, who has been promoted to the post of ambassador to Belgium, is also scheduled for a quizzing by the committee, it was stated. Foes of the administration on the committee say that Phillips' place in Belgium, where he is said to be assisting in the putting thru of a Morgan loan, can be taken by under-diplomats while he testifies.

"For the Secretary."

The committee has copies of correspondence from the shipping board files showing that on September 22, 1922, Phillips wrote Chairman Lasker, on the subject of the Martha Washington transfer "for the secretary of state." Another letter "for the secretary of state" is written to the board and dated July 10, 1922.

A. A. Adee, second assistant secretary of state, wrote to the board on the subject of the Martha Washington on November 27, 1922, and signed himself "Your obedient servant, for the secretary of state, Alvey A. Adee."

A Weak Excuse.

The secretary of state's excuse that he knew nothing of this correspondence carried on in his name is a weak excuse. First of all, this excuse is made in a public statement and is not made to the committee that prepared the charges. Secondly, it is not regarded as credible that Hughes would be uninformed about a matter that he had been connected with so intimately as special attorney.

Exposing Hughes.

The matter of the Martha Washington transfer for a low price to favored foreign interests is being seized on by foes of the administration. Trifling as it is, compared with Hughes' larger activities as a Standard Oil Secretary of State, it is considered as an entering wedge to bigger exposes.

French elections, defeating the political interests that Hughes favors and leading towards French recognition of Russia, have weakened still further the prestige of the arch foe of Soviet recognition in America outside of Samuel Gompers.

RIGHT WING DARLING GETS HOT RAZZING

Amalgamated Workers Protest At Feinberg

By EARL R. BROWDER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 15.—Rank and file indignation against the expulsion policy in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union flamed out in Carnegie hall when thousands of needle trades workers booed and hissed Israel Feinberg, vice-president of the I. L. G. W. U. and a leading sponsor of the expulsion policy.

The demonstration occurred at the one New York day session of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers convention which was attended by working men and women from both needle trades organizations. It came when right wing elements at the Amalgamated convention attempted to stage a welcome to the visiting I. L. G. W. U. official.

Lefts Help Restore Order.

An uproar of protest filled the hall. For a quarter of an hour the folks from the workshops expressed their sense of outrage at Feinberg. President Sidney Hillman had great difficulty in restoring order, succeeding finally with the assistance of left wing elements and the band playing "The Internationale."

It was a message of protest hot from the hearts of the workers, and will not soon be forgotten. Reactionaries were white with fear and chagrin.

Stop Fascisti Music.

Italian members of the rank and file took a hand in the proceedings at another stage in the proceedings when the band began to play the Italian Royal March. The band just got a dozen notes when Italian delegates were on the platform. The music was stopped. No Fascisti stuff went with the workers. The royal march was absent from the program thereafter.

David Wolff, the reactionary appointee to the New York joint board, did not attempt to address the convention. When announcement came that Wolff had been instructed to speak before the delegates they sat in dead silence. But Wolff did not appear, and it was then explained that he was busy.

Stone Not for Third Party.

Warren Stone, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, took the platform as an invited guest and touched on the question of labor in politics, saying:

"I have never favored a third party ticket. I believe that you may see an independent candiate, perhaps LaFollette. Further than that I would not care to go."

The convention's day in New York was a day of riotous greetings, with music, flowers and demonstrations. The convention returned to Philadelphia this morning. It is expected that serious business now begins.

House Won't Budge For Coolidge On Jap Exclusion Bill

WASHINGTON, May 15.—President Coolidge has accepted defeat of his efforts to modify the Japanese exclusion clause in the new immigration bill by negotiations with congressional leaders and a veto of the whole measure is seriously being considered, it was indicated at the White House today.

Word was said to have reached the president that his conference with house leaders yesterday, when Secretary Hughes explained to them the serious diplomatic consequences of passing the exclusion provision in its present form, had not swerved them from support of the July 1 effective date.

Rich Beer Runners Feel Pretty Safe In Chicago Courts

The jury trying Frankie Lake, alleged millionaire beer runner, and three other officials of the Illinois Beverage company for liquor violations, failed to agree and reported back in court today. The case was given to the jury late yesterday. One of the defendants was William Reargon of Ottawa, president of the brewery. No date for a new trial has been set.

Illinois Coal Miners Must Stand With Alex Howat

ALEXANDER HOWAT, fighting leader of the Kansas miners, who licked the notorious Industrial Slave Law of that state and caused the political defeat of Governor Allen, was expelled from the United Mine Workers of America thru the treachery of President John L. Lewis, who put up a united front with the coal baron controlled government of Kansas against Howat, the fearless champion of the Kansas coal diggers.

Lewis' action was resented and bitterly resented by the rank and file of the United Mnie Workers. They have demonstrated their opposition to the action of Lewis by supporting Howat in his fight to get back into the union, by resolutions and by funds to carry on the fight.

No section of the International Union did so much in this respect as the Illinois miners. They poured their money into Kansas and they backed Howat at every district and national convention where the question of his reinstatement came up.

At Indianapolis, the Illinois delegation was practically unanimous in supporting Howat, despite the treachery of Frank Farrington, formerly a Howat supporter, but now an ally of John Lewis and therefore the enemy of every progressive in the miners' union.

Frank Farrington, in a speech delivered at a special convention of District 21, United Mine Workers of America, held in Muskogee, Oklahoma, on May 15, 1922, defended Alex Howat and flayed John L. Lewis for his illegal action in deposing Howat and the other district officials. Today Farrington is silent because he made his peace with his arch foe, Lewis, and between them they intend to crucify Howat, the outstanding battler in the miners' union.

The working class of America is watching this convention of the Illinois miners. The capitalists are watching it. The latter hope that the Lewis-Farrington machine will be able to prevent the convention from going on record for the reinstatement of Alex Howat. But we have confidence that the miners of District 12, the leading battalion in the greatest industrial army in America, will challenge the autocracy and treachery of the Farrington-Lewis combination, and follow the lead of the Kansas miners in demanding the reinstatement of Howat to the United Mine Workers, with full rights and privileges. This will serve notice on the coal barons that the rank and file of the miners will not stand idly by and see their foremost defender crucified by leaders who have more in common with the coal operators than they have with the men who pay them their salaries.

GIVE GARMENT CHIEFS BIG POWERS

individuals despotically interpreting their authority.

The amendment gives full final control over local unions and their members' acts and views into the hands of the general executive board, and destroys the autonomous expression of the affiliated units of the union. It assures the international officialdom the tyrannical control of the minority over the majority of the membership.

Other amendments offered and being reported on by the committee on law are aimed at the left wing militants. The officialdom is making every possible effort to stop up any loopholes thru which the active opposition can climb thru and disturb the official equilibrium.

Amendments Against Expelled.

The convention adopted an amendment yesterday which provides that expelled or suspended members shall not be eligible as delegates to the convention, but made no qualification as to the possible reinstatement of these members affecting their eligibility.

The president of the international is given power, in another amendment which passed, to call meetings of local unions at his pleasure, take over the chair, and otherwise conduct the meeting. This gives the president the constitutional right to determine, by his authority as chairman, the character and actions of local unions' membership meetings.

Little discussion is permitted on any of these amendments, and all criticism is overridden by the administration machine. More amendments of vital significance to the union members are yet to be taken up.

Show Socialist Banruptcy.

BOSTON, Mass.—(By Mail).—The bankruptcy of the Socialist movement was forcibly demonstrated at yesterday's session of the international convention by Meyer London, Socialist ex-congressman. In a shallow, emotional address, London tried to stir the delegates' enthusiasm for a vague sort of progress and a vaguer better world. But not once during his half hour's talk did London concern himself with the tremendous problems confronting the labor movement; not once did he bring forth a class issue or make a class appeal.

Silent on the enemies of labor, the open shoppers and oil-smeared government. London sneeringly attacked the militant left wing elements in the international. That was the message brought by a prominent Socialist leader to the convention of an international union once regarded as one of the most revolutionary organizations in the country.

Orgy of Gompersism.

This was quite in line with a speech made earlier in the session by Lucy Robbins, self-styled organizer of a fake amnesty movement and booster of Gompersism. Miss Robbins greeted the convention with a smile of joy. She was enthusiastic over the wonderful ovation the convention had given Samuel Gompers, and by the friendly spirit manifested toward him by all the officials of the international. She was delighted to see that old antagonisms within the labor movement were being overcome. For now Hillquit and Cahan, chief representatives of Socialism, were ready to take Gompers into their midst, and with the ousting of all "disrupters" from the organization all was tranquil in the happy family.

Here was a signal indication of the state to which the Socialist movement has degenerated. The significance of the international convention lies not only in the disclosures of the utter incompetency of the Sigman administration and its ruthlessness in crushing oppsition to its policies, but also in its striking demonstration of the complete collapse of Socialism.

No Message of Solidarity.

All the high priests of the Socialist party have addressed the convention—Hillquit, Cahan, Panken, London, etc. With little exception their speeches have been mere outpourings of shallow oratory, bearing no relation to the bitter struggles of the working masses in this and other countries. They have brought no message of solidarity, have issued no call for a militant, aggressive struggle against capitalist oppression. Instead, they have made the convention platform their rostrum for attacks upon the "lefts." Appealing to the delegates in beautiful words for greater idealism, they have applauded the action of the same convention in ousting from its midst earnest militants who have proven their idealism by innumerable acts of devotion to their union and by their courageous battle for the class interests of the workers in their industry.

Ignore Vital Problems.

The convention of the international has been in session nine days, and as yet none of the pressing problems confronting the workers in the ladies' garment industry has been taken up. The order of business thus far has consisted in speeches and the unseating of delegates, rounded out with banquets, dances and concerts. Tho the international stands before a general strike, tho the next year will be a crucial test for the organization, no question of any consequence to the workers in the industry has yet been considered.

That this procedure will still further destroy the confidence of the membership of the international in their leadership cannot be doubted. Already there are indications to show that the workers in the shops who are concerned with the struggle against the bosses which confronts them daily in increasingly bitter form, are aroused over the acts of the Sigman dictatorship.

Ovation to Militant.

The attitude of the rank and file of the union was well expressed at a banquet tendered here by Local 56 of Boston to all the operators delegated to the convention. Joseph Borohovitch, one of the ousted delegates from Local 9, was asked to speak. He received a tremendous ovation, the applause which greeted him when he arose to address his fellow-members lasting almost five minutes. The attentiveness with which all listened to his explanation of the situation within the interntional, the enthusiastic burst of applause when he concluded were a significant demonstration of the feeling of the rank and file.

Significant also were the lack of interest displayed in the addresses of the international officials present at the gathering.

From New York as well comes the news that when seven unseated delegates from Local No. 9 arrived in the Grand Central terminal they were met by several hundred workers from their local, who greeted them with flowers as victors, not as the conquered. These workers expressed their fullest faith in the delegates, and assured them they were determined to carry on a struggle to win back the international for the membership, and make of it a weapon in the class struggle of the workers, not a tool for the political ambitions of the bureaucrats.

REPORT OF DR. SUN YAT SEN'S DEATH EXAGGERATED SAYS CANTON DISPATCH

LONDON, May 15.—Canton officials ridicule reports that Dr. Sun Yat Sen, head of the "South China Republic," is dead, the Hong Kong correspondent of the Central News telegraphed today, and attribute the report of his death to the fact he has been incommunicado by a fortnight's illness.

The foreign office in Pekin announced Sun Yat Sen's death officially yesterday, but it never has been confirmed from Canton. Reports of the death have been circulated for the last three days.

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD ANSWERS CALL OF BOSSES

Need Scab Government Gang Against Workers

The U. S. Railroad Labor Board has decided to "intervene" in the dispute between the engineers and firemen on one side and the managers of 90 western trunk line railroads on the other, following the request of W. M. Jeffers, representing the general managers' committee.

Jeffers said in a letter to the Labor Board, that the dispute is "likely to interrupt commerce." In announcing that they would take charge of the matter, the Board said, "They had reason to believe that a dispute exists, which is likely to interrupt commerce."

Harry P. Daugherty, representing the engineers, and D. B. Robertson, representing the firemen, say that no such likelihood exists. They say that the roads were willing to grant the increase of five per cent, but wanted the modification of certain working rules, which have existed for years. This the representatives of the men were unwilling to agree to. The modification of the working rules would more than offset the increase, Daugherty said.

The decision of the rail board was reached despite the fact that a bill is pending in congress which would abolish the board and its functions. This bill has the backing of all the rail unions.

Representatives of both the workers and the managers were ordered to appear before the Labor Board on June 3rd, when the board will begin hearings, unless a settlement is reached before then.

The order of the board follows in part:

"In view of these circumstances, the board has reason to believe that a dispute exists which is likely to substantially interrupt commerce. The board therefore, exercises its authority and hereby orders the parties directly involved, to attend a hearing which will be set for June 3, unless in the meantime a settlement is reached. Pending hearing and decision thereon, both parties are directed to maintain status quo by order of the board.

NEW YORK WOMEN MARCH ON CITY HALL TOMORROW

NEW YORK, May 15.—"On to the City Hall," is the cry the marching members of the United Council of Working class women will raise Saturday, when they parade from Rutgers' Square downtown to demand of the City Council city-built houses for workers' families.

The women have expected to be cheered on their way thru the city. They have been discussing the fearful situation that has developed in this congested city that makes thousands of workers crowd together with their families in cramped and insanitary dwellings. They have formed local district councils of their organization and have made every effort to reach all working class women in the city so that their demonstration and their fight will be effective.

Trade Union Support.

The trade unions have been appealed to by the women and information concerning the dreadful conditions, has been sent out. Support for the council's demand for city-built houses to be rented to workers at cost, has been sought from the unions.

The women will carry banners proclaiming their demands and possibly some of them will push their baby carriages as they go, but hundreds of them are determined to go "on to the city hall" and make their complaints against landlords and bosses known thruout the city.

Headquarters of the United Council of Working Class Women at 125 4th avenue, is directing the mass demonstration and parade Saturday and has been active in sending out speakers during the last weeks to inform the workers' wives of their plans.

Exploding Olander's Lies

VICTOR OLANDER, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor and member of the Seamen's Union, having formerly been its secretary, made a lie out of whole cloth, Wednesday, at the Peoria convention of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, when he said that the Communists had wrecked the International Seamen's Union.

Olander's lie is just a parody of the excuse that President Andrew Furuseth is continually reciting for the failure of his administration of the seamen's union. Only Furuseth lays the disruption to the Industrial Workers of the World and Olander to the Communists. The real cause was the rottenness of the seamen's administration.

The causes of the appalling slump in the Seamen's Union which took place since 1921 are two-fold: first the weakness that followed the long drawn out and unsuccessful strike of that year; secondly, the administration's folly in destroying what was left of the seamen's solidarity by a campaign against radicals and a war on all progressive proposals.

The campaign against radicals took the form of expulsions and illegal removal from office. This was illustrated in the ousting of Editor Thompson, from the Seamen's Journal,—an act which alienated the progressives thruout the union and cut off an inspiration to that class fighting spirit without which a union is hamstrung. Thompson was ousted as an "I. W. W.,"' tho he was not a member of that organization. The charge of "Communist" was not raised then nor has it since been raised by President Andrew Furuseth, the leading anti-red in the Seamen's Union.

Another union wrecking policy of the seamen's administration was the opposition to amalgamation and all working agreements with the longshoremen which the progressives desired. Never were the seamen in greater need of an alliance with other marine workers than after the lost strike of 1921. Yet Furuseth and such supporters as Paddy Flynn and Victor Olander fought this proposal bitterly. George West, of the Nation, met Furuseth last fall just before the latter was to go into a conference with President Clopek, of the International Longshoremen's association for the purpose of discussing an alliance. The conference was called by the longshoremen's leader and Furuseth's attitude was plainly expressed when he told West that the conference would come to nothing.

The mushroom growth of the Marine Transport Workers' Union of the Industrial Workers of the World which took place on both coasts in 1922 can be attributed to the seamen's hope of finding in another organization the solidarity which Furuseth's tactics were making it hard for them to secure in the older movement. Communists from the beginning argued against dualism but after the wobbly organization leaped to a temporary membership of some 27,000 and a year later still had several thousand members, more in fact, that Furuseth's union, they did their best to bring the two organizations together and they are still carrying out this policy.

If Victor Olander will read the Communist literature, instead of manufacturing Communist myths, he will find that the Communists have been a genuine influence towards overcoming the caste bars of dualism. The propaganda of the transport section of the Red International of Trade Unions is going out in the forecastles and stokeholes of America's ships urging unity and an end of dualistic separation. The Communists are flatly and uncompromisingly opposed to the deadening spirit of the Furuseths, Olanders and Paddy Flynns just as they are opposed to the withdrawal of the radical elements from the conservative unions. They stand in the marine industry as in all industries for a regenerated unionism, an industrial unionism, a fighting unionism that brings the wage-earners together to win their rights from the bosses with whom the Furuseths, Flynns and Olanders prefer to fraternize.

WITH THE COAL MINERS

turn into the treasury all interest collected from deposits and investments. He said that he had turned in $362,000 of such money since he began his duties, April 1, 1917.

Death claims paid members of the Illinois district from July 1, 1921, to March 31, 1924, numbered 2,881 and amounted to $957,550, Nesbit reported.

Machine Sabotages Howat.

PEORIA, Ill., May 15.—The clash between the rights and lefts began with a substitute offered by the Resolution Committee covering fifteen resolutions condemning the tactics and dictatorship used by the international officers at the last international convention in the Howat case and asking for a special convention to give Howat a fair trial.

The substitute condemned the Kansas court law, declared the right of trial by jury of every labor man for any alleged offense, but it ignored all other points. A motion was made to have substitute printed and placed in the hands of the delegates before action. Farrington said that that procedure had never been followed and on account of expense, should not be followed now. None of the sponsors of the substitute even mentioned Howat's name, altho if adopted, it would have denied him the right to appeal his case to a special convention.

Thompson Protests.

All of them suddenly became economical. Those in favor of having the substitute printed, and there were many, pointed out its misleading nature and that it failed to touch the subject matter of the various resolutions. Delegate Thompson summed up the case of those apposed to the committees' report. He stated that the convention had invited Howat to speak and now the resolutions committee wanted to dispose of his appeal for a special convention before Howat had a chance to state his case.

The only way the machine could stave off defeat was to offer a substitute motion that the convention take up all resolutions where the committee offered no substitute until the substitutes could be printed. This is what was wanted and was unanimously adopted. The resolutions were distributed to the delegates on the request of John Hindmarsh just a few minutes before the committee started its report.

Hit Use of Enemy Press.

A heated argument came on resolution number 5, condemning the tactics of international organizers for printing malicious and false statements in the capitalists' press about sub-district number five's special convention. This attack narrowed down to one Ben Williams, an international organizer. The committee moved that it be referred to the sub-district; this was hurriedly carried thru without discussion, Farrington stating that when he put out the motion that he did not see any one on the floor.

Watts moved a reconsideration, which was carried by 190 to 185, after a heated discussion in which Williams was severely condemned with only one delegate, himself an organizer, defending Williams. The matter was then referred to the sub-district convention for action. Resolution number eight demanding more stringent safety laws, was adopted.

Rap Jacksonville Pact.

The discussion brought out by Watts the fact that during the life of the present three-year agreement the miners could not advocate a change in the mining laws that would increase the cost of production without first getting the consent of the coal operators.

The resolution showed that explosions occur, men are killed, and that the mine inspectors report that the company had complied with the mining law, but that the miners had been killed by the gas law. Farrington absolved himself from all blame for the present agreement, saying that type of agreement had been in effect before he had become the district president. He failed to show any effort of his part to have it altered.

Farrington's Dismal Facts

By TOM TIPPETT.

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

PEORIA, Ill., May 15.—In Farrington's report, read by him to the convention at the opening session, a dismal picture of the Illinois coal industry is presented. It reveals that there are 374 shipping mines in the state which employed last year an average of 99,081 men, all members of the U. M. W. A. The mines worked on an average of 146 days or less than half time and produced a total of 73,410,837 tons of coal. This means that Illinois mines have a potential producing capacity of 150,000,000 tons annually.

Nonunion Competition.

During approximately the same period West Virginia, with about the same number of men employed, mined 103,000,000 tons, or nearly 30,000,000 tons more than Illinois. The great bulk of the West Virginia coal was mined under nonunion conditions at 1917 wage rates or lower. In Mingo, Logan and McDowell counties in southern West Virginia, where most of the nonunion tonnage was produced, the miners are paid 90 cents for loading a four-ton mine car, and the highest inside day rate is $4 per day. In Alabama, Kentucky, and Tennessee the situation is relatively the same as in West Virginia.

150 Mines Closed.

There are at present 150 Illinois mines completely closed, many of them for months with no immediate prospect of resuming and with every indication that more mines will suspend. The 150 closed mines have thrown out of employment 30,000 Illinois miners. Very few mines are working more than half time and the great majority not that much.

CHURCH REFUSES TO INTERFERE IN LIBERTIES' WORK

Wards' Activities For Free Speech Upheld

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 15.—Harry F. Ward, chairman of the American Civil Liberties Union, and Methodist minister, can continue to advocate free speech without interference from the Methodist general committee on the state of the church.

Rev. John C. Willetts of St. Joseph. Mich., launched an attack on Ward for his part in helping W. Z. Foster during his trial for violating the Michigan criminal syndicalism law. He asked that the conference bawl Ward out and get the church straight in the eyes of the world.

Helped Unseat Christ?

Willetts said that by helping Foster, Ward was aiding the Third (Communist) International, which was attempting to unseat Christ from his heavenly throne on the right hand of God.

The conference voted that Ward's activities as chairman of the Liberties Union did not come within the jurisdiction of the conference.

The conference also adopted a resolution calling on the general conference of the Methodist church to oppose war.

Chaplain for War.

The resolution on war was adopted only after a hard fight lead by an ex-army chaplain. The resolution merely expresses the opposition of the Methodist church as "the organized expression of Christ's way of life," to war, and leaves to each individual the decision as to what stand he will take in the event of war.

Elmer Kidney, of Pittsburgh, opposed the resolution saying that the church would be branded as an organization of slackers if it was adopted. After the resolution was passed Kidney said that it was only an "academic question, anyway. If war comes theories will vanish."

FRENCH GIVING IN

fast becoming a laughing stock. It has outlived its usefulness and must go.

In the meantime, French politicians are quietly arranging the necessary compromises in the interval before Premier Poincare resigns. Edouard Herriot, millionaire socialist mayor of Lyons, and one of France's leading business men, is the likeliest successor to Poincare. He has gone to the south of France, the Palm Beach of French politicians.

The socialists are fanning the air with doubts as to whether they shall enter a coalition cabinet or not. This is only a bluff in order to make a good bargain. As a matter of fact, they are itching for office and will surrender anything except their salaries in order to get there.

Foreign Policy to Suffer.

The foreign and domestic policy of the new regime promises to differ radically from that of Poincare in certain important features. The evacuation of the Ruhr hinges on Germany's acceptance of the Dawes plan and also perhaps, on the willingness of the bankers to grant the necessary loans in the face of Poincare's defeat who was the White Hope of the House of Morgan.

The recognition of Soviet Russia is practically assured when the new government takes office. The procedure followed will be recognition first, and business afterwards. In other words, MacDonald's policy toward the Soviet Republic will be taken as a model.

One of the most important results of the recent elections was the stunning defeats received by the Catholic church in France. It is reported on good authority that the French embassy at the Vatican will be abolished and the bonds between the church and the state resumed under the Poincare regime will be broken. Poincare and many of the big chiefs of the war period were Catholics and the willing tools of the heavy industrialists.

Small Nations Hard Hit.

The small nations that were supported in their ambitious plans for aggrandisement and imperialist expansion, are hard hit by the new turn of affairs. Poland had already seen the handwriting on the wall and was feeling out Moscow for better relations between the two countries. But Roumania was caught more or less off its guard and will now be left holding the bag. The presence of heavy Red troop formations on the Bessarabian frontier does not add to the peace of mind of the Roumanian reactionaries.

The Poincare disaster removes Soviet Russia's most bitter enemy in Europe from the political stage.

SANE AND DECENT DICKS HOPE OF CIVIL LIBERTIES CAMPAIGNERS

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—A vigorous campaign to "restore to sanity and decency" the bureau of investigations, or spy bureau, in the department of justice, has been launched here by the American Civil Liberties Union. Progressives and many Democrats in House and Senate sympathize with the view that these spying activities, which have been uniformly turned against the labor and radical movements, should be curbed this year, by house-cleaning in the department and by cutting the appropriation.

RUSSIA REFUSES TO RESTORE PRIVATE PROPERTY

SOVIET ENVOY IN LONDON WARNS BRITISH BANKERS TO KEEP HANDS OFF REVOLUTIONARY INSTITUTIONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON. (By Mail).—M. Rakovsky, the Soviet Charge d'Affaires, delivered a stinging reply to the city bankers who presumed to dictate the terms on which a commercial arrangement between the British government and the Soviet republic would be arrived at. Comrade Rakovsky was backed up in his stand by the great mass of British labor.

Russia needed money, he said, because of the demand for payment of pre-war debts. Soviet Russia would not tolerate any suggestion that loans would be purchased by the surrender of one tittle of the freedom gained by the Russian workers and peasants thru their revolution.

Mr. Rakovsky stated that he was well satisfied with the progress of the negotiations. To come to an agreement both sides must make concessions, and there was no time so favorable for them as the present.

He proceeded to deal with the bankers' memorandum, which, he said, was "obviously aimed at breaking off the negotiations."

The memorandum, he observed, had two parts. The first was an important statement of facts about the British money market. The second "is an absolutely inadmissible attempt to interfere in our internal politics." Altho the memorandum demanded non-interference in each other's home affairs, in paragraphs 3 to 5 it made an attempt on the very foundations of the Soviet Socialist state.

"The memorandum demands the re-establishment of private property. The memorandum demands the abolition of the monopoly of foreign trade. The memorandum demands a change of our code. Our answer to such an attempt is a categorical 'Never!'

"Intervention has failed, altho it was backed by a coalition of 14 states. The same fate inevitably awaits every attempt at intervention in a new form—and that is the end for which the memorandum is actually making propaganda."

Russia's Resources.

An attempt at such intervention would deeply harm Russia, and could not benefit Britain. Intervention in the past had only increased British taxes and unemployment and reduced British trade.

The intention of the memorandum was to destroy the chances of a loan to Russia. "I must state in all frankness that, should we not be required to pay off certain liabilities, we would not ask for a loan." Russia by herself had been able to restore 70 per cent of her pre-war agriculture and 35 per cent of her pre-war industry. But if they are faced with the payment of pre-war debts, then they must say in advance:

"You must help us to do it.

"We cannot act like certain other states which have formally recognized their debts but never paid off a penny."

Britain herself had no reason to consider the present volume of Russian trade sufficient.

"Let me just point to one example: You intend to carry out an enormous program of housing for the working class. Is it not quite plain that most of the timber needed for the purpose could not be obtained on profitable terms from anywhere but our country?"

Capital Is Safe.

It was the intention of the Russian government to leave the larger portion of the loan in England. "We have a detailed plan made of orders referring to different branches of British industry.

"Our loan will be used, in fact, for the increase of Anglo-Soviet trade. I also want to add that the amount of the loan we are asking for is much smaller than what had been mentioned in the house of lords from private conjectures."

The bankers should consider whether they were prepared to help the small investor and enable him to get back part of his money invested in pre-war loans.

"It is not true that the loan invested in Soviet Russia runs any risks. I am able to say that these loans, far from having less, will offer more guarantees than other loans contracted here on the English market."

The Soviet would not restore property to former owners. The suggestion was disposed of at the Genoa conference. But practical business offers would be made, one of which might be to lease owners their former businesses as concessions.

"The reported view that the Soviet government is not in favor of attracting foreign capital is absolutely false. I can categorically state that at the present time more than ever before the Soviet government will consider with the greatest favor any serious offer in this direction.

"Coming back once more to the question of the liquidation of pre-war debts, I must say that this question could be solved satisfactorily only subject to a consideration for our counter-claim—that is to say, on condition of real help being extended to us and interested circles, taking into account the ruin brought upon us by intervention and which we are now warding off with so much pains."

The War Cloud.

Turning to the question of disarmament, Mr. Rakovsky said that Russia's pacifist policy was the best evidence that the loan would be used for productive purposes. Every small investor was interested in seeing that his money was not used to aid militarism.

"Since the nations prepare for war, it means that there will be war—if not tomorrow, then the day after tomorrow. And, in raising the question of disarmament we do not serve the will of the working masses of the Soviet union alone, but firmly believe that we meet the wishes of all nations. And more particularly we are convinced to meet the desire of the working masses in Britain.

"An agreement between Britain and the Soviet to that purpose, an agreement which will be certainly joined by many other states, will become the starting point of an active and decisive policy of disarmament.

"There are certainly many conditions which must be taken into consideration in the question of disarmament, such as the territorial extent of the country, the volume of population, etc. But these are questions of detail, to be dealt with at a future conference. Here we have only to set forth the principle."

Bare Real Estate Stealing by "Best" Washington Folks

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Back of the "best families" who try to dominate official society and work the social lobby in Washington, always in the interest of special privilege, is the real estate ring. Just now the city is much disturbed by revelations of the crooked financing of real estate companies, resulting in extortionate rents. Senator Ball, chairman of the Senate committee on the District of Columbia, has reported some of the facts.

He finds that there are mortgages amounting to $9,000,000 more than the last sale price of 32 of the largest apartment houses in the city; that many of these houses are mortgaged for more than $1,000,000 above their actual cost. This has been done by making fake sales, transferring the buildings from one dummy to another. Ball named apartment after apartment with the figures of cost and debts, proving this statement.

These disclosures came out during a struggle to renew the rent law, under which a rent commission regulates the charges which may be made for housing. The real estate ring is against its renewal.

N. Y. FARM-LABOR PARTY ENDORSED BY MORE UNIONS

State Convention Comes Next Sunday

NEW YORK, May 15.—The latest group of organizations to send in their credentials to the state secretary of the Buffalo Labor Party which are sending delegates to the state convention of the Farmer-Labor Party of New York state which is to be held at Schenectady on Sunday morning, May 18, are as follows:

Branch 585 of the Workmens Circle, Branch 24 of the Workmens Circle, The Glove Workers Union, Electricians Local 2, District 1 of the of the Amalgamated Metal Workers, Cuttters Local 10 of the Amalgamated Shoe Workers, Local 1 Bakers Section of the Amalgamated Food Workers, Brooklyn Local of the Barbers Union and the Buffalo Central Trades Council.

There are many local unions and other organizations which have elected their delegates but have failed to send in the names and the credentials of their delegates, while there are other organizations sympathetic to the Farmer Labor movement which have not as yet elected their delegates even tho they have been represented at the City convention. The time is very short for action and what is needed is that every organization immediately elect their delegate.

This convention for the formation of a state Farmer Labor Party will be a success, if each organization interested in a Farmer Labor Party in the state of New York act on this call immediately and elect its delegate. All credentials should be sent to the state secretary, Mr. Frank Herzog, 63 Leroy Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

All contributions to carry on the work and help defray the expenses of the convention and organization work, should be made payable to W. J. KELLY, 81 East 10th Street, N. Y. C.

FOLEY FOLLOWS MURPHY AS TAMMANY SACHEM IN 14TH STREET WIGWAM

NEW YORK, May 15.—James A. Foley, son-in-law of the late Charles F. Murphy, is the new chief of Tammany Hall.

The surrogate finally acceded to the demand of the organization that he accept the mantle of the fallen leader and assumes his duties at once. His resignation from his surrogateship is expected today.

Foley was virtually drafted, Tammany leaders admitted, and only accepted the leadership after Gov. Alfred E. Smith had visited him personally and asked him to accept.

Schenectady Ready For N. Y. Farm-Labor Convention Sunday

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 15.—Preparations for Sunday's state convention of Farmer-Labor groups are well under way. Hundreds of delegates from labor unions, farm organizations and independent political party crowds are expected to assemble here.

The local trades assembly held a convention of hopeful groups on May 11 to help pave the way for the coming Sunday's meeting, which was called by the Buffalo Trades and Labor assembly and the New York Federated Farmer-Labor party. A state Farmer-Labor party will undoubtedly be launched at Sunday's convention.

Know of No Break.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 15.—National headquarters of the brotherhood of locomotive engineers here said today no word had been received by officials that negotiations of engineers and firemen of western lines for "the New York Central increases' had been deadlocked.

Chairman of workers' committees of the western lines have the brotherhood's approval to negotiate and will report to officials here whatever action they take finally, it was said

ROOKY IN SOVIET RED ARMY TALKS INTERNATIONALISM TO FOREIGNERS; HE LIKES HIS JOB

By GERTRUDE HAESSLER
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

MOSCOW, May 15.—Americans and English in Moscow got a good idea recently of how a rooky feels when he joins the Red Army. The Anglo-Saxon section, Political Emigrant Club, had a mixer where the English-speaking foreigners in Moscow mixed thoroly with Red Army soldiers.

Three speeches brought out the contrast between the treatment received by raw recruits in the Red Army and in capitalist armies. One speaker was a political commissar of the Red Army, who cares for the political education of the new soldiers. The second was Stewart, delegate from Great Britain to the Communist International. The third was a rooky (himself in person).

And from all the speeches the following impression comes: In the good old czarist days, the raw recruits were taken far from their home environment, beaten into disciplined soldiers, taught nothing but blind obedience, and kept ignorant.

Red Army Like a School.

The Red army, on the contrary, is run like a school. The soldiers are trained, but also taught why the training is necessary. They are taught by friendly teachers, who have supplanted the tyrannical officer of the army of autocracy. The soldiers mingle with the civil population and are kept in touch with their homes. They are given a careful political training, which makes them realize what they are being trained to defend.

Naturally, coming almost entirely from peasant or proletarian stock, the spirit of the Red soldier, conscripted to fight for his own interests, is different from the soldier in the capitalist armies, conscripted to fight for the wealthy under the guise of national patriotism and often driven into the army by starvation.

Rookie Talks Internationalism.

The recruit at the mixer spoke on international affairs from the class conscious proletarian point of view. He hoped that the MacDonald government in England will show the workers that only by having their own army can they gain release from capitalist rule. He told how last October it seemed that Germany would soon be free, but that afterward they realized it was a miscalculation.

Then came the lighter part of the program, rollicking tunes played by a string orchestra, the members of which were the workers and soldiers of the Kremlin; plaintive folk songs and brisk army marches, sung by student soldiers; comic recitations which made even those people laugh who couldn't understand Russian.

And after it all came the dancing—Russian formal steps, mixing with the American fox-trot. It certainly turned out to be a mixer—American and English girls trying out Russian folk dances, with the burly Russian soldiers, in their uniforms, trying to fox-trot and one-step.

NEGRO BOURGEOIS LEADER QUIZZED ON SANHEDRIN

Miller Challenged By Ignored Workers

RICHMOND, Va., May 15.—Dean Kelly Miller, chairman of the recent All-Race Sanhedrin held in Chicago, spoke here on "The Meaning of the Sanhedrin Movement," in Reformers' hall, and made no mention whatsoever of the vast mass of Negro workers and farmers who were scarcely recognized at Miller's Sanhedrin.

The Negro "leader" lauded the late President Wilson as a statesman, and Gandhi as "the greatest spiritual leader since Jesus Christ." He suggested that a lesser Sanhedrin be held in Richmond, and showed by the basis of representation for the regular 1925 Sanhedrin that it would be packed with his well-favored bourgeois elements.

Why No Workers' Delegate?

When Miller concluded his soft talk, Thomas J. Stone took the floor, with permission to speak three minutes, and briefly stated his great interest in the Sanhedrin as he read of it from day to day in the DAILY WORKER. He asked Miller two questions: Why no representation of the Negro farmers and workers was on the provisional executive committee of the Sanhedrin, when 90 per cent of the Race were of these classes, and why the Sanhedrin had not recognized the unqualified support given to the Negro liberation movement by the Communist International.

Miller failed to answer Stone's first question, and to the second he replied that he was in favor of "Socialist" ideals, but his Race was too weak to co-operate with unpopular foreign movements, and that the Negro must unqualifiedly support "standard American institutions."

KLAN ATTACKS U.S. SEAMAN IN FULL UNIFORM

Disliked Their Parade, Say Moron Kluxers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NILES, Ohio, May 15.—Members of the Ohio State Police, organized and directed by the Ku Klux Klan, arrested a seaman from the U. S. Navy here last Friday night during a Klan parade for alleged interference with their parade and took him to their klan meeting and compelled him to kiss the flag. The seaman was in uniform and was escorted by state policemen.

Organized labor in Ohio for years has been opposing passage of the state police law and here comes along the nightshirt boys, after digging up an old law allowing farmers to organize for the purpose of protecting themselves against horse and cattle thieves and organize the Ohio State Police.

In the steel towns hundreds, if not thousands, of state police—men tote a tin badge, gun and handcuffs. Klan organizers are raking in easy money making State Policemen at several dollars per head.

Col. E. A. Watkins, Baptist preacher of Youngstown, editor of the Klan organ, called the "Citizen and Colonel" in the British Army during the World War, which was attached to the British Spy Service is reported organizer of the State Police.

The DAILY WORKER, in the near future, will expose the new White Terror in Ohio and lay bare the giant conspiracy against labor being hatched up by the Ku Klux Klan. Organized labor in Ohio must demand an investigation of this armed menace and have the law repealed. The Farmer-Labor Party in Ohio at its coming convention, must make this one of the issues of the campaign. A complete investigation must be made or robed and armed Klan policemen will confront labor when they strike against their masters.

ANOTHER CROWE STRIKE BOMB IS MERELY A DUD

When David Krause, one of the striking garment workers, was arraigned in S. Clark St. police court yesterday, he was charged with assault and battery. The charge was placed against him after the states attorney's office had held him for more than four hours Wednesday and then released him without letting him know the charge against him.

Crowe's men acted in such a serious and secret fashion that everybody who had heard about the case thought that Krause was going to be charged with murder, at least. When the clerk of the court yesterday read the charge against Krause, R. J. Ricker, his attorney, burst out with: "Good God! is that the charge? I thought that he was going to be charged with train robbery, at least. The states attorney's office labors and brings forth a misdemeanor charge. We will take a jury trial."

Sixty strikers will be brought before the Honorable, the Solemn, the Dignified Judge "Dennie" Sullivan today to answer to contempt charges.

It has been some time since Judge "Dennie" has tried any strikers for contempt and it is felt that he will be in his usual ugly form today. But the strikers are not worrying. They see that no one has yet lost a leg for being in contempt of "Dennie."

Labor Lines Up For Peoria Meet On This Sunday

Chicago labor unions will be well represented at the Illinois Farmer-Labor convention, which will open Sunday at the Labor Temple in Peoria, Ill. Three locals of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers have elected delegates and forwarded credentials to the organization committee at Peoria.

Carpenters, moulders, boilermakers, and other local unions have sent in credentials for their delegates. Scores of miners attending the convention of the Illinois mine workers will attend the convention representing their locals from all over the state. The Belleville Central Labor Council and the Winnona Labor legion have elected delegates and forwarded credentials.

Many co-operative and fraternal bodies have responded to the call.

It is hoped that immediately following the convention, the newly organized Farmer-Labor political group will start a campaign all over the state boosting the June 17 convention at St. Paul.

The best efforts of the reactionary labor leaders in attempting to sabotage the convention have proved unavailing. The workers want a real class party in the coming election and are eager to take part in any move that promises to help build one.

Sunday Not Yet In Heaven; Don't Want To Meet Jesus Now

ROCHESTER, Minn., May 15.—Still strong enough to bellow, "The Lord is my shepard, I should worry," "Billy" Sunday arrived here to go into a sanitarium. Threatened with immediate entrance into heaven early this week in Memphis, Tenn., Sunday hired a special train and rushed off to the best doctors he knew of to prevent his meeting his friend, Jesus, before he was darn good and ready to meet him. Sunday's doctors said that his condition was better and more than they had hoped for, but not more than he deserved. Sunday thanked God for that.

COOLIDGE HITS SOLDIERS BONUS WITH VETO AX

Says Country Owes Nothing To Vets

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Enactment of the bonus would delay tax relief, the foremost need of the nation, President Coolidge told congress today in a special message returning the bonus bill without his approval.

"We have now reached a financial position where we may lighten the tax burden," said the president, "but if we now confer upon a class such a gratuity as is involved in this bill, we delay tax relief indefinitely."

The president said the provisions of the bill were not in harmony with any recognized principles of national finance.

Consideration for the whole country outweighed in his mind consideration for a class.

Veterans themselves, he said, would be better off if not burdened by the taxes involved in the bonus bill.

"Certainly the country would," the message read.

"We have hardly an ill day that cannot be laid directly or indirectly to high taxes."

The president said he could not recede from his purpose to do what he could to bring about tax reduction.

The expenditures in this bill are against the interests of business, Mr Coolidge declared. We owe no bonus to the able-bodied soldiers of the world war. Patriotism cannot be bought or sold.

Service to our country means sacrifice. This bill would condemn people who are rich to turn over money to those who are poor.

On a division, the house late today voted 112 to 109 to vote immediately upon the proposal to override the president's bonus veto. Majority leader Longworth demanded a formal roll call.

Germany To Sign Booze Pact With U. S. Next Week

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The United States and Germany next week will sign a liquor treaty identical with that which has been negotiated between this country and Great Britain, it was learned here today. Negotiations over the pact have been brought to an end and secretary Hughes and ambassador Wiedfeldt are expected to sign the document formally as soon as it is put in shape.

Double-faced Parsons Denounced.

NEY YORK, May 15.—Hardly a day has passed in New York in the last two months without an inflammatory speech against pacifists and radicals by generals of the United States army and officers of militarist organizations. Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, commandant third naval district, has shifted the attack to the churches, which are for peace in times of peace and for war when war is declared.

Of "concealed pacifist" parsons he says: "There is hardly one of these men who are condemning war who did not stand in their pulpits during the war and egg us on. What can they do during peace? They can keep their mouths shut if they can't do anything else."

LABOR FIGHTING TAX ON WORKERS IN YOUNGSTOWN

K. K. K. City Heads Put Occupational Levy

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 15.—The United Labor Congress went on record tonight opposing the occupational tax passed by city council calling for a tax ranging from $3.00 to $15.00 per year to be placed on workers in the different industries. The purpose of this tax is to fill up the coffers of the city treasury and keep the pork barrel politicians on Easy street. Labor will fight the Ku Klux Klan administration now ruling Youngstown and contest the legality of the tax in court.

A month ago the pork barrel brigade tried to put this tax on the employers who raised such a howl that the administration devised the present tax of shaking down the workers.

City council passed the ordinance as an "emergency measure" and the mayor signed it immediately, so it's now a law.

The steel barons are having a merry time jailing steel workers in Farrell and passing laws compelling them to pay for the right of working in "their" towns.

The big question now confronting the politicans is HOW to collect the tax. Labor leaders hotly scored the Kluxer adminstration and favored another Boston Tea Party.

Steel workers now pay a Garbage Tax of $4.00 yearly to have their garbage collected (if they have any), this coupled with the Occupational Tax, makes their lot a hard one that is mighty near the breaking point.

The workers announce that they will go to jail before they pay the tax. A storm is brewing in the Empire of Steel.

Telephone Trust Probe Demanded By Gouged Consumers

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 15.—Congressional investigation of telephone rates and service in the United States including a probe of the American Telephone and Telegraph company and the subsidiaries of that trust, is demanded in a petition sent to congress and President Coolidge by the City Parliament of Community Councils of the City of New York. The petition points out that states and localities have not been able to cope with the domination of the A. T. and T. and its twin trust, the Western Electric company. New York City is contesting in the courts the latest 10 per cent rate increase by the local subsidiary.

Coolidge Will Take Parting Shot At Jap Exclusion Bill

WASHINGTON, May 15.—A Japanese exclusion, effective July 1, this year, was scheduled to come up in the house today, for a final vote. After its adoption by the house, it will go to the senate and then the completed bill goes to the president.

Yesterday the president called to the white house leaders of both parties in the house in what was understood to be a last and futile attempt to secure postponement of the exclusion dates.

OCEAN FALLS, B. C.—The lumber bosses are taking advantage of the present slump in the lumber industry of this province and are attempting to re-introduce the ten-hour day in the logging camps.

The Pacific Mills, Ltd., of this place has a clause in the employment contract which reads: "I agree to work ten (10) hours per day, if required by the company." This clause would perhaps protect the company if the proposed eight-hour act passes.

BORAH TO FORCE RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA

Republican Plank To Follow French Lead

WASHINGTON, May 15.—An influential group of leading republicans, including some senators, will seek a plank in the republican party platform at Cleveland looking towards American recognition of Russia, if, as is expected here, France accords recognition of the Soviet regime.

Senator Borah, long an advocate of a broader Russian policy, probably will lead the movement. Borah is slated for membership on the resolutions committee which will report the platform.

Foreign relations generally, and Russian recognition in particular, are to be emphasized in the campaign by Borah and other speakers, who hold that the United States cannot legislate prosperity for its farmers or business men, but must seek it by establishing relations abroad that will reopen to the fullest degree all world markets.

The uncompromising stand of Secretary of State Hughes against Russian recognition has had its effect on American public opinion and in addition there is a disposition not to regard this as an important question, so far as the bulk of the people are concerned.

But to Borah and others who have studied it in the light of America's world economic position, the question is paramount. They intend to convey to the people this summer reasons why it is important.

Same Situation as Mexico.

They plan to do this by raising the question at the Cleveland convention when the discussions will be assured wide publicity. They will follow by submission, in public addresses, of a concrete proposal for intelligent handling of the Russian question, in much the same way as the Mexican problem was solved—thru appointment of a commission to meet with a similar Russian body for discussion and formulation of a basis upon which relations can be renewed.

WIDOW OF MORGAN'S WAR VICTIM RETURNS BONUS TO MICHIGAN AS PROTEST AGAINST KILLING

By STANLEY BOWMAN
(Special to the Daily Worker)

LANSING, Mich., May 15.—There are many angles to the soldier bonus question. Workers or their dependents or survivors need money daily in no matter what form it comes. But the buncombe of professional political oratory, thru which state and national senators have sought to buy votes with bonus appropriations, appears clearly in the light of the following letter, written to the Michigan State Senate by the only one of tens of thousands who refused to accept a share in Michigan's $30,000,000 voted bonus. She is Mrs. Jean Piper, a writer on the Brooklyn, N. Y., Daily Eagle, widow of Elmer Piper, who died in France. State records show she was clearly entitled to the bonus which she received and now returns. Sent privately to a friend, her letter would seem unimportant. Mailed into the Michigan Senate and read there, it is illuminating.

Her letter follows:

Editorial Department,
Brooklyn, N. Y., April 17, 1924.

President of the Senate, Michigan
State Legislature, Lansing, Mich.

Dear Mr. President: Enclosed herewith you will please find Postoffice order in the amount of $400. This money, Mr. President, is the Soldiers' Bonus money given me by the State of Michigan.

Last summer I wandered thru the senate chamber. It was empty. I sat in one of the seats and wondered what it must be like to be a lawmaker.

I am returning this bonus money because I believe we have all been mistaken,—the State of Michigan in passing a Soldiers' Bonus in the first place, and we, who are entitled to receive it, in taking it. We have capitalized war. We have established a wrong precedent for the coming generations. There must be found some way to honorably settle differences between nations, and the rulers of nations, other then plunging a whole civilization into warfare, which if it comes again, will exterminate the greater share of mankind. Are wrongs righted by violently thrusting a million or more men from one plane of existence to another?

General Sherman was right when he made his famous statement concerning war. AND, it does not end when the Armistice is signed.

In the long, long days that have gone since that morning when I watched my husband striding across the brown prairies of Texas to join his regiment, the whole realization of what war really means has borne itself in upon my heart. It would have been too awful if it had come all at once. It would have crushed me. If I had this vision two years ago, I would never have applied for the bonus. Now I see; and because I must "carry on," I return the money to my State; and trust that it will divert it into channels where it will do good to someone. I wish it might be used for the education of some child, made orphan by the war.

The insurance money is a different matter. Each man earned it. It is what any man would leave to his wife. The bonus is a moral issue.

I could dispose of this bonus money myself in ways which are known to me to be needy; but I feel that I must register with the lawmakers of my State; and I know of no other way than by returning this money. After all, it is only money. The spirit which prompted Elmer Piper to enlist, and all the other sons of Michigan, and the noble sacrifice they made has no price. The long days, that have merged themselves into years, when we who wait have longed for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still, and the smile that made life all sunshine, have no monetary value. And, gentlemen, I can not look into the faces of little children until I, too, have done my full part in seeing that this thing shall not be again.

Please read this letter before the assembled Legislature.

Respectfully yours,
MRS JEAN PIPER

Careful Cal May Lose Caution In Muddle Of Bills

WASHINGTON, May 15. With the revenue bill in conference, and absolutely certain to be adopted in a form satisfactory to the Democratic-progressive coalition in the senate and house, President Coolidge faces the choice of a fight or a surrender. If he vetoes the tax measure, with its high surtaxes on big incomes, its publicity of income tax returns and of tax refunds, and its inheritance tax provisions, he will have made one of the big issues of the presidential campaign. If he fails to veto it, thereby abandoning his Mellon plan, he will cut a ridiculous figure.

Other bills which have been enacted in face of the frantic protest of the white house are the soldier insurance bill and the Japanese exclusion measure. He is opposed to the Norris-Sinclair and the McNary-Haugen relief bills, one or both of which is likely to pass. He is backed into a corner.

His own supporters do not know whether he will fight.

NEWARK, N. J., May 15.—"Dr. Percy D. Stanley, physician and lawyer," is the latest unique sign. He is unable to determine which profession he likes best, so is trying both.

IOWA CALL TO JOIN ST. PAUL JUNE CARAVAN

Farmer-Labor League Asks For Delegates

(Special to The Daily Worker)

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, May 15.—The call to join the caravan to St. Paul on June 17 for the formation of a national Farmer-Labor party and nomination of candidates for president and vice president has been sent out thru the state by the Farmer-Labor league of Iowa. The call states:

"The farmers and workers of Minnesota and the other northwest states who issue this call have already united into powerful Farmer-Labor parties. They realize, however, that exploitation by the financial interests can only be stopped when national unity of these groups is attained. The success of the farmers and workers in the northwestern states is a guarantee that the June 17 convention will be the largest representative gathering of workers and farmers ever held in America.

"All progressive groups of workers, farmers and professional people are invited to elect delegates. Real national political unity is the need of the hour. Full co-operation will be given any and all groups who wish to support independent candidates, regardless of whether or not they attend the St. Paul convention. The workers and farmers want immediate action, and the only way to assure them action is by sending delegates to the June 17 convention, which is definitely committed to the formation of a new independent national political movement."

Auto Caravan to St. Paul.

The note added to the call mentions the "auto caravan" of delegates that is being arranged and will start with the farthest south delegates, in Texas. All delegates going to St. Paul overland by their own cars are urged to get in touch with the state secretary of the Farmer-Labor league and arrange for a common meeting point to join the caravan.

A. P. Kramer is the state secretary, with offices at 155 West Graham avenue, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

The head of the call sent by the Farmer-Labor league reads:

"Let's say it at St. Paul on June 17."

Scientific Lecture Offered Detroit By Russian Professor

DETROIT, Mich., May 15.—On Monday evening, May 19, Prof. P. Tutyshkin of the Pedological Institute of Moscow will lecture in English, at the House of the Masses, corner Gratiot and St. Aubin avenues, on "Heredity, Degeneration and Regeneration."

Those who heard Prof. Tutyshkin lecture when he was in Detroit a few months ago will want to hear him again. We urge those who have not heard him not to miss this lecture. Prof. Tutyshkin has first-hand knowledge of conditions in Russia today, especially in relation to education, and his lecture will prove of absorbing interest. Admission is 25 cents.

FIGHT AGAINST MILITANTS WEAKENS TOLEDO TRADE UNION MOVEMENT

By S. DITTER

The recent suspensions of seven members of the Machinists' Union in Toledo for membership in the Workers Party and the T. U. E. L. is having a demoralizing effect both on the local of the machinists and the trade union movement in the city, due to the fact that these militants were active in general organization work both in the local union and the Central Labor Union.

The members of the machinists' local are taking the attitude that it is of no use going to the meetings now since the men they elected were suspended by the International officers and the action later upheld by the president, W. H. Johnston, who is learning fast from the tactics used by I. L. G. W. U. officials and determined to rather destroy the organization than give up his power, even to the extent of protecting common crooks in office. It is rumored that the Business Agent Harry Ebright and the Financial Secretary Conrad both had a considerable shortage of the local's funds and therefore the militants would have to be prevented from taking office. It is said that both of these fellows made good the shortage, one thru immediate payment, the other paying off with monthly notes.

These two "loyal members" have, however, resigned from their positions whether under pressure or otherwise, and International Organizer Griffith has been elected Business Agent. He is having a hard time convincing the membership that the I. A. of M. is a democratic organization where every member has a right to express himself. This same Mr. Ebright has been given his reward by his masters in an appointment as city mechanic by the Ku Klux city administration.

It is significant that this same individual is President of the Central Labor Union of Toledo which recently carried on a campaign to raise funds thru voluntary assessment in order to build up its treasury and then spent the money to buy a 1,000 dollar hupmobile for the business agent.

The militants were the driving force in that campaign as their plan was to propose to use the money for organization purposes. However, they are now out of there and the C. L. U. has taken up its usual interest in baseball and stag parties, etc., and as a result nothing is being accomplished. Toledo becoming an open shop town and politically falling into the hands of the K. K. K.

The Toledo Union Leader, the official organ of the C. L. U., which is read by nobody and is more reactionary than some of the capitalist sheets, is carrying on a vicious campaign against the June 17 Conference, and hoping for the speedy downfall of the Soviet government in Russia. The usual stories that the capitalist press were publishing after the Bolshevik Revolution are being copied now by this yellow fake sheet. The members of organized labor in Toledo are not falling for this old bunk and are beginning to interest themselves in the DAILY WORKER and in another six months a thousand subscribers, no doubt, will be added to its readers.

The suspended members are carrying on their fight for their rights to the General Executive Board of the I. A. of M. and will appeal to the coming convention to be held in Detroit September 15th if the G. E. B. decides against them.

At the time the metal industry is facing a crisis and shops are laying off men by the thousands, and the need of organizing workers in the industry is generally admitted, our international officials are actively engaged in throwing out the best workers in the union instead of being active fighting the attack of the bosses.

This damnable policy must be repudiated by the coming convention of the I. A. of M. and these petty bureaucrats shown their place so that we can rightfully say that we are a fighting militant organization founded on the principles of the class struggle as stated in the preamble of the constition.

Cleveland Public Safety Head Bows To Union Firemen

CLEVELAND, May 15.—Membership in a union is now a recognized right of Cleveland city employes. The anti-union director of public safety, who threatened to discharge any city fireman daring to join the Fire Fighters' union, has been compelled to come to an agreement with union officials that membership in a union is an inherent right of city employes. The director had discharged from service the president of the Fire Fighters' union and forbidden any fireman to hold union membership.

The wave of public protest frightened the politicians. Calling a hurried last-minute conference with labor, the local politicians guaranteed the right of city employes to join whatever unions they please, and requested the agreement be kept confidential.

Ohio Going Strong For Farmer-Labor Convention June 17

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 15.—Central labor bodies in many Ohio cities have indorsed a state convention in Columbus, June 7, to pick delegates for the national Farmer-Labor party convention, St. Paul, June 17, according to the Committee of Forty-eight, New York. Lima, Massillon, Marion and Mansfield are listed as Ohio towns which have taken action. "Our conference at Columbus has been called to swing Ohio progressives into line for the great November drive against the old parties, both of which have betrayed the people into the hands of Wall street," it is explained. Fifty thousand copies of the St. Paul convention call have been sent out by the New York office, and there has already been a large response, according to J. A. H. Hopkins, national committeeman.

FUR DELEGATES PURR SOCIABLY IN MILWAUKEE

Picnic Convention In Socialist City

The Fur Workers' union convention went off on a Socialist Sunday school picnic yesterday to Milwaukee, the geat "Socialist commonwealth," as they fondly termed it in their discussions. Mayor Daniel Hoan, Socialist Mayor of the Socialist town, met the happy furriers at the train and escorted them about his little domain.

Hoan had personally invited the International convention to visit his fair city when he greeted them on the first day of their sessions in this city. The delegates showed great eagerness to "see their dreams fulfilled" in the great beer city to the north.

Part-Time Work Decided.

The fur workers decided to act on the question of unemployment late Wednesday afternoon before suspending work for the Milwaukee trip. The agreement, signed five months ago, provides the machinery by which the union representatives confer with manufacturers' association representatives to deal with unemployment. The convention, in special consideration, passed a resolution that instructs the General Executive Board of the union to call upon the conference committee (union and association representatives) to introduce part-time work to help solve the very serious unemployment which now prevails in the industry. The convention's resolution also provides that employed members shall contribute a sum to help their unemployed fellow workers.

When the agreement was being considered five months ago, the left-wing militants of New York were most active in demanding some sort of part-time system or division of work to allow more of the workers a chance. It was then pointed out that over half of the fur workers are out of jobs six months or more in a year. Now the administration sees the wisdom and necessity of the measure the militants fought for and is attempting to inject it into the agreement half a year late.

Left Winger May Come.

The credentials committee reported that one delegate from Local No. 1, New York, was sick and absent. This is William Cherniak. His substitute is one of the ablest of the opposition's fighters, S. Leibovitz. Altho the convention is supposed to end Saturday, Leibovitz will be in time for today's proceedings if he was promptly notified and able to leave New York at once. His arrival should cause some disturbance to the machine of the International which had planned its convention's work knowing there would be almost no voice of serious dissent raised among their handpicked delegates.

The convention was expected to hold a short session in Milwaukee but it is altogether doubtful whether any sort of serious business could be attempted on such a Socialist holiday.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS
CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

International Communist Youth to Meet.

By HARRY GANNES.

Following the Fifth Congress of the Communist International, the Young Communist International will hold its international gathering in Moscow in the latter part of June.

Among the many important problems that will face the representatives of the international working class youth at the Fourth Congress of the Y. C. I. will be the complete transformation and organization on the shop nuclei basis. Recent events have, also, put the war danger at the top of the list as a problem to be met and discussed and acted upon.

In the United States especially has the war danger become a paramount issue. In the letter written to the Workers Party convention of last year, the C. I. stressed the war danger and urged preparations to meet it.

Close co-operation will be required between the American Communist Youth and the organizations of the Young Communist International in those countries which might be plunged into war, and hence this will be an important question before the congress.

With the experience of the German and Scandinavian leagues in shop nuclei activity will come about a clarification of this issue on a world scale. In the United States the preliminary requirements for shop nuclei work have more than been covered. Practical application of the shop nuclei has been stressed, particularly by the National Executive Committee, but that speed that was expected has not been realized. The main difficulty is the actual local work that is needed in the establishment of the nuclei which the local comrades lack. That an organizer will be necessary to tour the country for the sole purpose of aiding in the establishment of nuclei everywhere is the opinion of all the comrades who have surveyed the problem of directly transforming the entire Young Workers League on the shop nuclei plan.

Tho a youth organization, the Young Communist International is more than interested in the world political situation. In every country in which Young Communist Leagues are organized they take an active part in determining the political policies of the various Communist parties; of course, subordinating themselves to the political directives of the party once a decision is reached. In the United States, the Young Workers League has not lagged behind in taking a stand on the political issues facing the party. The Y. W. L. as an organization has acted in harmony with the C. E. C. of the party in advancing the Farmer-Labor party campaign.

There will be, no doubt, a special commission at the Fourth Congress of the Y. C. I. that will deal with the problems of the American section. The rapid growth and development of the Young Communist movement in this country, as well as the increase in the work carried out, have brought to the fore many new and difficult problems. There has been a tremendous change within the league since its organization two years ago.

There will be two delegates at the Fourth Congress representing the Y. W. L., with full rights as a regular section. Tho only a fraternal organization in name, the Y. W. L. is considered one of the best disciplined sections of the Y. C. I., and has diligently endeavored to carry out the world program as it applied to the United States.

An interesting point to be taken up at the congress is the adoption of a program. This program has been in the making for two years now and has had the attention of all affiliated sections. At the last bureau session the questions of religion, the agrarian youth, and several others, were added for discussion and for inclusion in the program.

The Fourth Congress of the Y. C. I. will be an outstanding gathering, not so much for its fundamental decision, but for the steps it will take for the practical application of its program and policies.

CONGRESSMAN FREE DISCUSSES MOONEY CASE

"Ought To Have Hung", Yelps Dumbbell

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—A press correspondent walked into the office of Representative Free of California, and asked him to discuss the possibility of getting a new trial for Tom Mooney. Free, who was district attorney of Santa Clara county, just south of San Francisco, from 1907 until 1919, said that he knew all about the legal situation in the Mooney case, and did not see that it had anything to do with Congress.

The correspondent agreed that only Governor Richardson could bring about a new trial, by pardoning the famous labor prisoner and permitting the new trial to be had on indictments that are still pending. He pointed out what Free already knew—that the trial judge, district attorney and members of the jury have been convinced, due to confessions of perjury by the chief witnesses, that the trial given Mooney and Billings was unfair, and his conviction a reproach to the law.

He Knows It All.

Free, in a rising voice, repeated that he knew all about the case, and wouldn't discuss it.

"Aren't you interested in getting a fair trial?"

"That has nothing to do with me as a congressman."

"Do you think Mooney got justice?"

"No. He ought to have hung."

"Then why not vindicate the law by giving him another trial?"

"I say I won't talk about it. There's the door!"

His caller, rising, remarked that there was no occasion for his being in that mood.

"And I don't want you in here again," continued the man of firmness, shrinking back in his chair.

"Your temper would not encourage anyone to come in," he was told, and the interview stopped.

A Great Joiner.

In the Congressional Director, where the vanity of come-and-go politicians is paraded in lengthy autobiographies, Free devotes 24 lines of fine type to his own career. He has been a member of the regular republican machine organization, village attorney and county attorney, and is in his second term in the House. "He is a 32nd degree Mason, a Knight Templar, past exalted ruler of San Jose lodge, B. P. O. E., a member of the San Jose Rotary club, I. O. O. F., and an active member of the Chamber of Commerce of San Jose."

He wears the emblems of as many as possible of these, and votes with Longworth and Gillett.

No salvage.

American Legion In War on Peace Meet at Chicago University

The American Legion is all het up again. The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom Summer School is scheduled to open Saturday and they are going to use one of the buildings of the University of Chicago. So the legion is rushing on to the "U. of C." authorities and telling them that the League is a pacifist outfit and should be kicked out of the university.

The legion says that the university has been imposed on by the league and that the university authorities "don't know nothing about them" and they will tell all.

Mayor Dever had promised to speak at the opening of the league summer school but since the legion got on the job opposing it the mayor has decided to take a vacation beginning the evening before the school opens.

An excited congressman in Washington has introduced a bill which he announces is aimed against Jane Addams and the Peace League. The worthy congressman drafted his bill after finding from the attorney general that there were no laws against Jane Addams.

Under the law, advocating opposition to a war of defense would be a crime. Since all wars are of defense the new bill will make everything a joke.

THE POWER COLUMN

Who Will Get Them?

On the walls of the headquarters of two local militant labor movements there will hang after June 15th a banner presented to the revolutionary workers of two cities which made the best record in the first semi-annual subscription campaign for THE DAILY WORKER.

Two-thirds of the big campaign is over and already militants in numerous cities are exerting their greatest efforts for the last part of the campaign which will determine who the winners will be.

DAILY WORKER
SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN.
W.C.

simile of the banner to be presented to the cities ing the highest percentage of their quota in the DAILY WORKER campaign.

Will your city's name be on one of the banners?

The banners are already prepared. All that remains to be done is for the names of the victorious cities to be inscribed. One banner will be given to the city of the first class, that is the city whose quota has been set for 100 or more; the other banner to the city among those whose quota is less than 100.

For those who have been actually participating in the campaign the next month will be one of strenuous work and excitement. It is no small honor to win a campaign of this kind, historic in the full sense of the word and of such vital importance to the future of the revolutionary movement in America. Will those who have been allowing others to bear their share of the DAILY WORKER actively resolve before it is too late to take up their share of the campaign to help bring to their city, the banner and the honor which goes with it?

Last week when Ambridge, Penn. went over the top, we asked the question who will be next and the answer was not long in coming. Superior, Wis. always a leader in the campaign turned in a brave week's work and brought their percentage to 110 per cent. Not quite enough to catch up to the busy workers of Ambridge, who brought their fine record of last week up another notch to a mark of 113 per cent.

REVERE, MASS. which has been making claims that it will lead the procession has also gone over the top and now is the proud possessor of an even 100 per cent record. Toledo, O. is within one jump of a perfect score and on the basis of their past performances, will surely surpass their quota long before the campaign is over.

Just as we go to press Toledo comes thru with another bunch of subs putting it over the top with one to spare.

Many other cities are rapidly approaching the goal and there is little ground for excuse on the part of those who have made little headway so far. In the month which is yet remaining there is still plenty of time for those who have not yet produced their share of the results.

There is one suggestion which can be offered to organizations in cities which have so far reached the lower end of the list. Sometimes with a new publication like THE DAILY WORKER, it is difficult to produce results thru lack of organization. Workers Party branches, city central committees and other labor organizations are urged to set aside a DAILY WORKER fund out of which trial subscriptions are to be purchased for workers whom it is thought can be interested in THE DAILY WORKER. Many cities in which there are Workers Party branches may use this method as a legitimate means of bringing up their standing in the DAILY WORKER quota list, and in preparing the way for a growing DAILY WORKER circulation in their city.

World Authors Ask Nobel Prize For Thomas Hardy

THOMAS HARDY.

Thomas Hardy, considered the greatest living English writer, has been recommended by the P. E. N. club, international organization of men of letters, for the Nobel prize for literature this year. Hardy is the author of "Jude the Obscure," "Tess of the d'Ubervilles," "The Mayor of Casterbridge," and many other novels, poems, essays and a play, "The Dynasts." William Butler Yeats, Irish poet and dramatist, was winner of the Nobel literary prize in 1923.

ITALIAN COMMUNIST DAILY SOON

The Italian section of the Workers Party is preparing to transform its weekly paper, "Alba Nuova", into a daily Italian workers' paper. The first issue of the new daily, which will appear under the name "Il Lavoratore", is to appear on May 18th. The Italian daily will cover the news of the labor movement the world over, giving first attention to the struggles of the Italian workers in the United States, at the same time dealing with the main developments of the struggle in Italy.

The subscription rates for the paper are the following:

City of Chicago	$8.00 per year	6 months $4.50	3 months $2.50
Other cities	5.00 per year	6 months 3.50	3 months 2.00
Canada	8.00 per year	6 months 4.50	3 months 2.50

Subscriptions should be sent to Il Lavoratore, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

MEMBERSHIP, ATTENTION!

Continuing the work of familiarizing the party membership with the united front policy of the party in relation to the Farmer-Labor party, the central executive committee has arranged a series of meetings at which Comrade James P. Cannon will speak on the question of the party labor party policy. The meetings arranged will be held in the following cities:

May 20—New York, N. Y., Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second avenue, 8 p. m.
May 21—Philadelphia, Pa.
May 23—Buffalo, N. Y.
May 24—Pittsburg, Pa.
May 25—Cleveland, Ohio; mass meeting, Labor temple, 2536 Euclid avenue, at 3 p. m.
May 26—Detroit, Mich.; House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin, corner Gratiot, at 8 p. m.

Every party member is urged to attend these meetings and branches to see to it that at least some members of the branch attend so that a further report can be made at the branches.

No More Strike Breakers Wanted.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 15.—Strike Breaker George L. Berry of the pressmen's union, and now attempting to drum up enough political notoriety to win the Democratic vice presidential nomination, suffered defeat at the hands of Schenectady workers. The local labor organizations turned the pleading legionnaire down flat, considering that one strike breaker at the head of the government is more than enough. Berry's army record won't carry him far in this town. He joined the day after the armistice was signed, and promptly made himself noisy in the ranks of the American Legion.

DISABLED SOLDIERS ARE ROTTEN-EGGED AT BASE HOSPITALS IN PALO ALTO

PALO ALTO, Cal.—Decayed eggs is the piece de resistance in the diet of the disabled war veterans in the base hospital here, according to complaints made to the veterans' bureau. For desert the wounded heroes are given cast off scrapings of ice cream. Many of the wounded veterans regret that they did not die in France during a German gas attack rather than run the gauntlet of odors in American hospitals, where they are not even protected by gas masks. The veterans' bureau is notified that up-to-date nose protectors must be provided at meal time or else the decayed offer must be withdrawn.

MERRICK CALLS DEBATE BLUFF OF SEC'Y DAVIS

Demands Showdown In Convention City

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 15.—Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, challenge before the convention of the State Federation of Labor that he would debate with "any one, anywhere," on President Coolidge's stand on labor has been accepted by one of the delegates to the state federation, Fred Merrick of Pittsburgh.

Merrick, who is a member of the executive committee of the Western Pennsylvania Council for the Protection of the Foreign Born, has written to Davis:

"I respectfully challenge you to a public debate in Allentown at some time during the present week, so that the delegates in attendance at the convention may have an opportunity to hear the discussion."

Asks State Series of Talks.

Merrick further challenges Davis to "a series of discussions in different parts of the state of Pennsylvania, and particularly in the city of Pittsburgh." Merrick, disagreeing with Davis' stand on the immigration question, and particularly on the Johnson bill, has challenged the labor secretary to debate or discuss the matter with him before the public.

Secretary Davis made a plea for rigid immigration laws when he addressed the convention of the State Federation of Labor, and his debate challenge was given when Coolidge's friendship to labor was questioned from the floor.

Delegates Want Debate.

Davis' defense of the administration and willingness to challenge the world for the chief executive created quite a stir among the delegates to the convention, and Merrick's acceptance of the cry has aroused further interest, not only in the possibility of a debate on Coolidge, but more in the possibility of hearing a lively and intelligent discussion of the difficult immigration subject.

Whether Davis will dodge the debate on some stall or another remains to be seen. He threw down the gauntlet to all comers, and a real champion has picked it up.

The Third Annual Picnic of the Workers Party, Local Chicago, will be held on Friday, July 4, at Stickney's Grove. Speakers, dancing, games, refreshments, etc., are being provided. Sympathetic organizations are requested not to arrange any other affair, but to give all possible support to the July 4th picnic.

Russia and France

It is declared that one of the first acts of the new government, that is soon coming into power in France, will be to recognize the Russian Soviet Republic. This means that all the great powers in the world war now have their eyes on Moscow.

Italy and Germany have granted Soviet recognition. Great Britain has declared her intention. Now France is beginning to take actual steps in this direction. These developments result in many complications, most of which seem to play into the hands of the Russian Workers and Farmers' Republic.

The ill-fated raid of the Berlin reaction on the Soviet Trade Delegation comes crashing down upon the heads of the German government. The Soviet traders turn their eyes instead to London and Paris, and the rulers of Germany are left to do their own worrying.

But it is not believed that the Soviet representatives will give in to the French government, any more than they have to the British diplomats, on the question of the czar's debts. Instead, the Russian Soviet government has bills of its own to present,-and the largest of these will no doubt go to France, since the biggest inspiration for war on Soviet Rule has come from Paris. The French imperialists have financed most of the counter-revolutionary efforts directed against Soviet Russia. These subsidies have resulted in great part, in the heavy taxes imposed upon the workers and farmers of France by the Poincare government. But the French are now faced with the damages wrought upon Soviet territory by these subsidized attacks.

The question, therefore, is not whether Soviet Russia will make good on the czar's debts to France, Great Britain and other countries. It is one whether the workers and farmers of these capitalist countries will force the payment of damages inflicted upon the First Workers and Farmers' Republic. This question will be one that will test the real nature of the governments that have come to power in London and Paris.

Killing the Pension Bill

President Coolidge has vetoed the Bursum Bill, providing for the increase of the old soldiers' pensions by approximately $48,000,000 a year. The Chief Executive swung the axe in the name of "economy." This veto is looked upon as the first of a series of presidential vetoes upon a similar excuse.

It is enlightening to note how Coolidge and his masters are animated by a desire to save the country money when the funds to be spent by the government do not go into the pockets of those who own and control the industries of the country—the employing class. To the veterans and soldiers' widows of the Civil and Spanish-American wars, the sum saved the government by the Coolidge veto is quite substantial. But to the government of the United States, a government which squanders hundreds of millions in gifts and bonuses to the bosses, a government which in the 67th congress alone gave away more than fourteen billion dollars to the bosses, this is an insignificant sum. Yet, this government, being a government of, by and for the exploiting class, shrinks at paying a little more to its war victims.

According to the last annual report of the Commissioner of Pensions, there are today in the United States more than a half a million pensioners. These include the soldiers who bled in the wars and the widows of those who gave their lives away to win these wars for the capitalist crew wrecking the country today. These men gave their all to fight in wars in which their masters were the beneficiaries. These men were killed and slaughtered to maintain the present system of private capitalist property relationships maintained by the government of the United States. Still, it is this very government, as the defender of the very system responsible for the wars that robbed the unfortunate masses of their limbs and lives, that now refuses to make allowance for the welfare of the survivors or their descendants. At the same time those who have not shed a drop of blood in the imperialist Spanish-American War, those who sold the government poisoned meat for the soldiers facing the deadly fire of their adversaries and the perils of tropical disease, are today being granted huge railway bonuses, shipping premiums, and sundry forms of gifts at the expense of the great mass of the country. Whose government is this? Coolidge has answered.

Henry Ford refuses to testify in the Muscle Shoals hearings before the senate agricultural committee. Some more information might be worried out of him, showing how "Cal" Coolidge planned to "deliver" to the Detroit billionaire the valuable Alabama water power site. And that would be bad for Henry

An Advantage

"One advantage possessed by the strikers is that they have an energetic and fearless daily newspaper, devoting extensive space to the conflict—the DAILY WORKER, established here in January by the Workers Party."

This tribute to the DAILY WORKER is found in the current issue of "The Nation," in an excellent article by John Nicholas Beffel on the Chicago garment strike under the title of "Injunctions Don't Sew Dresses."

Beffel has become known nationally for his faithful interpretations of labor's struggles on many fronts. But he has done an extra good job in word-picturing the brilliant battles fought by the Chicago ladies' garment workers. "The Nation" is to be complimented on the publication of such an article.

Beffel gives special attention to the courageous picketing, in the face of police brutality and court persecution, that has faced the strikers in their efforts to organize their jobs.

He also draws the lesson of the failure of the workers to organize for the election of their own judges, pointing out that labor's officials "contented themselves with calling for the defeat of 'enemies' and the rewarding of 'friends' on the old party tickets."

We would suggest to the editor of "Justice," official organ of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, that he republish the article in full. The members of the union should call upon him to do this. It would give them an insight into the Chicago strike that they have not yet received thru their own publication.

The Klan in Action

One of the side investigations at Washington that is not attracting the attention it should from the masses, is the examination of witnesses now going on before the Senate Committee on elections and privileges looking into the election of Senator Mayfield, in Texas.

The testimony of District Judge Clark, of Waco, Texas, once a leading figure in the Lone Star State Klan organization, has revealed a series of outrages committed by the hooded champions of capitalist American democracy.

Since Texas is said to be afflicted with the second or third largest coterie of Kleagles, being outstripped only by Indiana and Ohio, it is safe to assume that the conduct of the Kluxers in this state is not only typical of the behavior of the Klansmen, in other sections of the country, but is even to be emulated by the "dragons" and various other shrouded holligans in other states. It has already been disclosed that Mr. Mayfield was sent to the senate from that Southern citadel of democracy, Texas, only thru his having the support of the Klan which terrorized the state thru the maintenance of a private espionage system, special flogging squads, and an especially picked clique of gangmen. Of course, all of these wanton crimes were committed under the guise of being "essential to the welfare of the country" and some of "the best people of the community participated in them."

This testimony is of tremendous import to the workers and farmers of the country. Again it is shown by incontestable evidence that those who do the loudest yelling in defense of our much-vaunted democracy are the very ones who are hiding the blackest outrages behind the most abstract vagaries. At this moment especially should these disclosures make the working masses think and act. We are on the eve of a national election. Mr. McAdoo, who is still parading the country as a liberal and a friend of labor, is an ardent Ku Kluxer. When Mayfield was elected, Mr. McAdoo congratulated him. McAdoo is intimately connected with the Klan organization, which is now being only partially unmasked. He is responsible for every act and move which sent Mayfield to the Senate.

We are not astonished at the gall displayed by the counsel of Doheny. Just as it is natural that those who talk loudest about the sacredness of pure democracy of capitalism should be perpetrating the worst outrages against the masses, so is it logical for the gentleman who has been doing most posing as a friend of labor, McAdoo, to be the national spokesman of the blackest enemy of the working and poor farming classes—the Klan.

The Klan revelations in Washington should evoke amongst the masses not a spirit of moral revulsion but a determination to get rid of the enemies of labor regardless of the mask they wear or the phrases they mouth.

"Cal" Coolidge has gone into training for the forthcoming circus at the republican convention in Cleveland, by attending a real circus in Washington. But the Cleveland show should be the more side-splitting in its efforts to delude the workers and farmers of the nation. Very funny because the masses are getting hep to all the tricks in this Wall Street trained animal.

By their votes at the recent elections in France and Germany, the workers and farmers of these two countries have shown, in greater numbers than ever, that they want peace. They want peace thru the abolition of the whole capitalist system thru the ascendancy of Communism.

These are blue days in Kentucky when a congressman can be found guilty of bootlegging. Whisky hasn't got the free rein that it once had in this commonwealth of the "Southern Gentlemen," of scab coal mines and non-union steel mills.

Even the Negroes of the South are turning against their traditional emancipator, the republican party. They will soon be found where they belong, in the National Farmer-Labor movement.

Cardinals and Capitalism, Red Hats and Revolution

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

SPLENDID honors are falling in a shower on the heads of American Catholics and, by a process of diffusion of which the Catholic hiearchy are past masters, upon the rest of the American populace.

TWO American cardinals where but one grew before; red hats, red robes, papal blessings and papal knighthoods; stately ceremonials and parades, high masses and incense, children with flowers singing songs of praise—each child, incidentally, displaying a badge on which is a picture of one or both of the new church dignitaries and which sells for ten cents. The church does not forget the pennies of the poor even when it pulls off a well-staged program with a marked political angle.

Religion and Politics.

RELIGION and politics are never very far apart in the Catholic church at any time but with the creation of two American cardinals in the persons of Hayes and Mundelein, the two questions are so close together that a Communion wafer could not be thrust between them.

IT is all rather obvious—as obvious as the reasons for the publicity given the whole process of cardinal creation by the Hearst papers in a country in which there are some 18,000,000 Catholics.

DURING the war and the period of intense revolutionary activity that followed it, the vatican fell upon evil days. The faithful wanted bread and peace and land and the church could not give them these things and remain a ruling power. The Catholic empire of Austria-Hungary crumbled; Poland, despite her new-found independence, was in the throes of revolt; the Italian workers were driving towards revolution and in no spot in Europe could the vatican see any hope for the establishment of that temporal power which it has never ceased to claim and enforce at the slightest opportunity.

When Revolt Was Checked.

THE tidal wave of revolution ceased for a while to rock the foundations of European capitalism and there set in a period of apathy and hopelessness which the vatican was not slow to take advantage of. It made peace with the French government and for the first time since the expulsion of the monks, there is a French ambassador at the vatican: Cardinal Ratti—now pope—went to Poland as an emissary of the French government and helped to organize the offensive against the workers' and peasants' government of Russia; came the Fascist counter-revolution in Italy and once more the vatican had a friend at court in the person of Mussolini; in Germany the Catholic party, particularly in Bavaria, dreams with inspiration from the vatican, of a new Catholic empire in Europe. Perhaps Poland and Bavaria, they say, can unite under the banner of the papacy with Czecho-Slovakia and the remnants of Austria to give once more political backing to the ambitious keeper of Peter's keys.

BUT bankrupt nations need money first and the House of Morgan from which the money has come and by which more is promised—loans to France, to Czecho-Slovakia, to Poland and the proposed loan to Germany, the loan to the Fascist government of Italy—is the fiscal agent of the vatican in the United States.

"America First."

THE Catholic church has decided to pay some attention to the United States for the reasons implied above; it is today the only stable capitalist nation where there are any large number of Roman Catholics; the creation of princess of the church among the clergy and knights of St. This and That among the laity is a good method of bringing into line many Americans who, as a nation are among the worst trucklers to titles at large, despite their boasted love for democracy.

THE proposed Morgan loan to Germany has received the endorsement of the vatican, Morgan himself has made a pilgrimage to Rome, but there are several millions of people in the United States who look askance at the project and who fear that the same result that followed similar loans to the allied governments during the war, will now accrue from this one. The backing of the House of Morgan in this new imperialistic adventure by the American government is a matter on which the American masses have not expressed themselves as yet, but which will soon be a burning issue in the coming presidential campaign.

Where Religion Comes In.

WHAT better method could be devised to secure sanction of this slave scheme by the dupes of the vatican than to make it a religious issue with the vatican expressing the wishes of the deity in the matter by its endorsement of the house of Morgan, followed by the elevation to the second highest office in the church of the American clergymen who will make clear its stand on the question?

The big capitalists have come to see that of all the Christian religions the Catholic church is the only one that has any real influence and organization; it is a powerful machine and its edicts admit of no argument; they must be accepted without question by the faithful and they are backed, according to Catholic dogma, by God himself. Superstition and its companion, fear, together with a tremendous economic power, are the weapons wielded by the Catholic church over the millions who subscribe to its creed. It is no mean ally for a desperate capitalist class to have and the House of Morgan is using it to the limit.

Natural Unity.

IT is not hard for the finance-capitalists to form a united front with the vatican—the most reactionary force in modern society. The catholic religion is a slave religion and it fits in well with the Morgan plan of enslaving the whole working class of Europe. The catholic church is ruled from the top; there are no referendum votes. It has never even resigned itself to capitalism but looks ever backward to the dear dead days of feudalism when its lightest word was law to both prince and peasant. It has adapted itself to capitalism very efficiently but it dreams of a world of toiling millions, whose rulers it chooses, and whose miserable ignorance and physical suffering will wipe out all thought except that of a happy life in the hereafter to which the church will hold the key.

THE Catholic church is not only a great religious institution; it is a tremendously powerful financial institution as well; in the United States it has millions of dollars invested in great industrial enterprises and in Europe its properties are of incalculable value. It has a vested interest in the capitalist system.

Germans, Irish and Poles.

IT is not surprising therefore that the vatican should give its wholehearted approval to the Morgan plan for enslaving the German workers. Cardinal Mundelein is of German descent and thru him it is believed that the large group of German catholics in the United States can be rallied to support the Morgan-Dawes scheme. Cardinal Hayes is Irish and there are millions of Catholics of Irish birth and descent in this country and the influence of the church among this politically active nationality will be exerted for the House of Morgan. The Poles, another numerous national group, have not been neglected. Anthony Czarnecki, editor of an influential Polish newspaper, has been made a knight of St. Gregory. That the Lithuanians may not feel slighted one of their priests has been made a monsignor.

So much for the masses.

The Cardinal Capitalists.

THE entente cordiale between the big capitalists and the catholic church was never more in evidence than upon the return of the new cardinals to America. They were welcomed and photographed, immediately upon their arrival, in a room on the New York pier on which they landed, furnished especially by Rodman Wanamaker. Cardinal Mundelein was banquetted by the head officials of the United States Steel corporation and "his services in the Chicago district" were referred to in glowing terms. He made the trip from the east in a private car furnished by the vice-president of the Baltimore and Ohio and in Chicago a banquet was given him at the Drake hotel—one of Chicago's most high-priced and exclusive hostelries.

E. F. CARRY, head of the Pullman company, employing thousands of underpaid catholic workers, many of whom were on strike at the time, was brought the order of St. Gregory by Cardinal Mundelein; it was presented in "recognition of his philanthropic work."

THE attitude of the capitalist press—always a good indication of the trend of capitalist opinion—has been one of actual sycophancy. Such words as "prince," "enthroned," "glorious," "multitude of his flock," "regal robes," "impressive spectacle," "symbol of his rank," "His Eminence," "blessing on whole city," "hail return in splendor," "trumpets sound fanfare," "in full regalia," "benign visage thrills crowd," "Chicago's prince of the church ascends to his crimson throne," etc., ad nauseam, have made up the head-lines upon which the eyes of the newspaper reading public has feasted.

Evidence of Influence.

It has been a splendid tribute to the power of the catholic church that will make the Ku Klux Klan gnash its teeth in impotent fury for the klan does not know how to meet the power of the vatican.

DOUBTLESS the rank and file of catholics—those who bought the badges with the cardinal's pictures—believe that all this pageantry was the reply of the Holy Roman Catholic Apostolic Church to the assaults of the klansmen and the hiearchy will encourage that belief; it is one of the best established dogmas of the church that its followers are persecuted for their faith and the klan has been a godsend to it.

The catholic church however is not worrying about the klan. It is worrying about the breakdown of capitalism and the rise of social revolution. It wisely picks America and the American capitalist class together with the backward sections of the working class to save capitalism and the church from defeat.

Basis For War.

EVERY day's dispatches from Europe indicate that no European capitalist nation, nor any combination of European nations, can save capitalism in Europe. Only the United States has the financial resources to halt the breakdown and enough backward workers to do the bidding of the capitalist class if it becomes necessary to suppress social revolution in Europe by force of arms.

IT is another holy war that the Catholic church is preparing for—a war on behalf of capitalism and catholic christianity and it hopes to use its tremendous power in the United States, linked with the power of the finance-capitalists, for a war of conquest that if successful would again make the catholic church the only religious power worth mentioning in Christendom.

In all America only the Communists raise their voices in protest against this monstrous scheme of church and counting-house, as in the world at large only the Communist International stands four-square against the House of Morgan's plan for enslaving the German working class as a first step to a more rigid enslavement of the working class of all capitalist nations.

THE creation of two cardinals, the pomp and ceremony consequent thereon, were not religious incidents except in the narrow sense. The House of Morgan and the catholic church, representing together the blackest reaction on the globe, united under the red hat, have merely been conducting a political maneuver which if successful will drench the world with blood while it resounds to the groans of the workers—groans which will mingle with the rattle of their chains to make the most horrid music ever heard in a world to which misery is not new.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

Likes Our "Center Shot."

My Dear Brother Engdahl—That was quite a center shot you gave the Seattle Union Record on Tuesday, May 6, under the editorial head, "Getting the News."

I have quite a time with our Farmer-Labor people trying to explain that we will get publicity for the party when we go out and make it do something, say something, write something or put in motion something that will bring publicity and cause the newspapers to print stories.

Many of them think the Union Record is not toting fair in casting about for the mess of pottage and neglecting the great questions of the day—things of vital importance to farmers and laborers—but the Union Record will probably warm up to the occasion later in the campaign.

I am sending you copy of a declaration of my candidacy for governorship, that I believe is so far different from anything of the kind ever written that you will be tempted to print it.

In the election of 1920 the Farmer-Labor party became the second party of the state of Washington, Robert Bridges, candidate for governor on the Farmer-Labor ticket, receiving 55,292 more votes than W. W. Black, the Democratic candidate for governor.

A big meeting of all candidates for governor is being held in Tacoma at this writing. The promoters have advertised that all candidates for governor have been invited.

I was not invited. Just why the state chairman of the Farmer-Labor party and candidate for governor on the Farmer-Labor ticket, the acknowledged leader of the second party of the state, was not invited to participate in a meeting of all candidates for governor I am not able at present to tell.

But I have written a statement for the newspapers, a copy of which is inclosed.

If any person has any doubts as to why my name was left out, the answer may come after reading the statement.

I stand by the people, am not afraid to say so and talk right out in meeting.

I know the situation in different farming sections of this state and stand ready to demand that the legislature do something for the people now running away from the land to the refuges of nowhere.

If you want to use the story, all well and good. It is yours. Its publication might help all of us in getting together for June 17.

Yours in the fight for humanity,

JACK SHOMAKER,
State Chairman, Farmer-Labor Party of Washington.

"When a burglar gets so he can't tell glass from diamonds, he ought to retire," Paul Winters, 45, told Judge Lewis in confessing to a petty robbery. Lewis was "retired" for from one to 14 years.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

At a meeting of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor now in session at Montreal, Samuel Gompers declared that the American labor movement must get rid of its "unclean" elements. "We must drive the rascals out," he said. We do not remember being in such hearty accord with Gompers since—well, we don't remember ever being in accord with him. However, on the matter of putting this resolution into operation we suggest that Gompers set a good example to the others and step out. He is the chief rascal.

While Gompers was threatening to disconnect the crooks with the A. F. of L. treasury another labor faker was unloading himself of some trite piffle at the triennial convention of the Switchmen's Union of North America, held in Denver, Colorado. J. B. Connors, assistant international president of that organization predicted that "the radical element would never gain control of the unions so long as capital treats labor with intelligence." Which means if you read between the lines, "so long as capitalists allow some of the crumbs from their table to fall into the maws of the hungry labor fakers."

Coolidge killed the Bursum pension increase bill with a veto. He had a narrow escape tho. It was the first victory in a long time, except the easy ones over Hiram Johnson in the Republican primaries. The vote was 53 to 28, just one short of the necessary two-thirds majority necessary to override his veto. Spanish and civil war veterans will not thank the president. Harding vetoed the same bill last year. Bursum plans to bring it up again but by the time he is liable to get it thru, the veterans may be in a position to debate its provisions with Wilson, Harding and Jess Smith on the River Styx. It is interesting to note that 16 Democrats voted to sustain the veto and only 12 Republicans. It looks bad for the soldiers' bonus bill.

James H. Maurer, socialist and President of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, took a leaf out of the black book of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, in inviting James J. Davis, secretary of Labor in the Coolidge cabinet to address the convention, now in session at Allentown, Pa. Davis is one of the archfoes of the foreign-born workers. Like Samuel Gompers he is an alien. Davis was born in Wales and Gompers hails from Whitechapel, London. The secretary of labor delivered his usual tirade against the foreign-born but soft pedalled his finger-printing and deportation plans. Perhaps the labor leaders are not properly "psychologized" yet. Or perhaps he feared that he could not be as bold before a delegate convention of workers as he could at a Republican Party conference.

Maurer did not have plain sailing at the convention. A delegate asked who invited the Coolidge tool to the convention. Maurer brazenly admitted he did. Those who thought a few years ago that the Socialist Party of America would not fall so low as the Socialist party of Germany in its subservience to the ruling class can now clearly see they are mistaken. Unfortunately for the workers in Germany and in the rest of Europe the Socialist Parties there had a mass following and were capable of rendering real service to the capitalists. Here the Socialist party is used as a press service by Samuel Gompers, who is the chief labor lieutenant of the capitalists. James Maurer, once the Socialist war horse of Pennsylvania, has given up the fight against the capitalists. He has made peace with the enemies of the workers. Peace unto his dead radical soul.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is running two daily papers on the West coast. Unless he looks out, Samuel Gompers will have him down as an agent of the Communist International. In one of his recent issues he published the following paragraph about Russia:

"How different are the facts concerning Soviet Russia that occasionally seep thru from those furnished by the Better American Federation. By the paid propagandists we are told of the reign of terror that reaches from border to border of Russia. Then comes a dispatch stating that the most northerly weather and radio station maintained by any nation is that at Karsh, on the Kara sea. This station is conducted by the Academy of Sciences at Leningrad, a branch of the Soviet government. Two men are at the post and it is possible to send them supplies but once a year. I am more and more convinced that Russia is truly a civilized country."

We are inclined to reach the same conclusion. Soviet Russia is the only country in the world that is consistently trying to raise the level of culture of the masses that will enable them to build up a real civilization under a social system where knowledge will be used to lighten the burden of human beings and make the machines do the heavy work, in contrast to this system where labor saving machinery increases the wealth of its owner and tends to throw thousands of workers out of employment.

RUSSIA DEMANDS GERMAN APOLOGY

LATEST MOSCOW TO BERLIN NOTE CAREFULLY GUARDED; RUHR COMMUNISTS ACTIVE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, May 16.—A new note from Soviet Russia, the text of which was carefully guarded, today demanded full apology from Germany for the incident the week before last when a building occupied by a Soviet commercial mission was raided by police who claimed they were in search of an escaped prisoner who had taken refuge there, but who utilized the opportunity to go thru all the mission's records.

The Russian note is understood to have demanded complete recognition of the extra-territoriality of the commercial mission's property.

COMMUNISTS ACTIVE IN THE RUHR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, May 16.—New Communist activities developed in occupied and unoccupied Germany today.

Communists increased their demands for seizure by workers of all the mines of the Ruhr. At the same time opposition was promised to a forthcoming fascisti demonstration at Fuerstenwalde next Sunday.

In the occupied areas, Communist workers began a new campaign to prevent miners from acquiescing in French demands for operation of a group of pits under the Micum agreements among French and German industrialists.

Strike negotiations in the Ruhr may be closed today with an arbitration award.

MINERS ASK FOR SPECIAL CONVENTION

Demand Square Deal For Alexander Howat

The immediate calling of a Special International Convention to give Alexander Howat and the other expelled Kansas miners a fair trial which so far has been refused to them by President John L. Lewis is demanded in a resolution from the Centralia local of the United Mine Workers of America and presented to the District 12 convention now in session.

Following is the resolution with its signatories:

Resolution No. 3.

To the Officers and Delegates assembled at the Thirtieth Consecutive and Fifth Biennial Convention of District No. 12, U. M. W. of A.:

Whereas, Alex Howat has been refused the floor of our last International Convention, and by such refusal the demands of the many local unions that the Kansas issue be brought out on the floor on the International Convention and settled once and for all time have also been refused, and

Whereas, Repeated demands have been made upon the International Executive Board the last two years past, that the Kansas Issue be settled and this has not been granted the rank and file, therefore we believe that the only way this issue can be rightfully settled is by the calling of a Special International Convention to give Alex Howat and all other Kansas Mine Workers who have been expelled from our union a fair and impartial trial and a decision rendered that shall be final and binding by the delegates present; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Local Union No. 52, located at Centralia, Illinois, do hereby demand that the District Convention of District No. 12, instruct its officers to immediately demand a Special International Convention for the above specific purpose.

SHORT WORK-DAY LAW IS F. L. DEMAND

Peoria Political Meet Takes Up Miners' Issues

On the eve of the state Farmer-Labor convention which opens in Peoria tomorrow the district office of the Workers Party issues a statement on the industrial crisis facing the miners and other workers.

The statement, which follows, is of especial interest in view of Frank Farrington's attempt to sidetrack the short-hour work day solution of unemployment in favor of an operators' program of cheapening production.

Workers Party Statement

"Support the mine owners to reduce the price of coal and create bigger market."

This is the message of Frank Farrington to the Illinois miners, many of whom have looked unemployment and starvation in the face for a number of months. Of course, the mine owners would never think of foregoing part of their profit to reduce prices and therefore they send their lackeys to the workers, asking them to reduce wages.

Other apostles of the class collaboration millenium are out attempting to trick the workers into Farrington's illusions of co-operation with the bosses as a solution to all the present needs of the masses. Johnston, the international president of the Machinists Association, has advanced his scheme. High leaders in the building trades have time and again urged co-operation with the bosses. The bosses never co-operate except on the basis of workers the whole sacrifice, and the schemes advanced by those worthy leaders are nothing but disguised attempts to serve the bosses in the efforts to lengthen hours and reduce wages.

This message to the Illinois coal miners is adding insult to injury. Today, the note to be sounded by real labor leaders should be a demand upon the mine owners to adjust hours and conditions of work to correspond with the stage of affairs of the industry. That will be to demand shorter hours without any reduction in the daily wage so as to offer employment for all and to demand the unqualified nationalization of coal mines with steadily increasing control of the management by the miners thru their economic organization. However, to effectively carry on a struggle for these demands, will also necessitate that the workers organize for independent political action.

Gurley Flynn Speaks For Labor Defense In Detroit Sunday

DETROIT, Mich., May 16.—The Detroit section of the Labor Defense Council has arranged a meeting for Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, one of the best known women speakers in the militant labor movement. McCollester Hall, Forest at Cass avenues has been engaged for Sunday evening, May 18, for this purpose.

The Ruthenberg appeal is now before the Supreme Court of Michigan. Results in the Ruthenberg case will largely determine the disposition of the other 31 Michigan criminal-syndicalism cases. Funds are needed to carry this appeal to a successful conclusion.

Several of the 31 are Detroiters, and the Detroit section must do its share in helping to win our case. We can assure all who have never heard Gurley Flynn speak, of a very profitable and enjoyable evening. Those who have heard her need no further assurance. The admission will be 25 cents.

"DENNIE" SULLIVAN SEES PICKETS SMILE; CASES ARE POSTPONED

After seeing the smiling faces of more than 50 garment strikers who were in court to answer to charges of contempt, Judge "Dennie" Sullivan set their cases to be heard next Wednesday. He indicated a ready willingness to postpone the apparently useless ordeal of trying to stop the strikers from walking the streets when defense counsel requested a delay.

The "Committee of 15" of the Chicago Federation of Labor, is receiving a very good response to its appeal to the unions of the Federation for assistance for the strikers.

They have printed a leaflet for distribution among the members of the various unions. The leaflet embodies the letter which they sent to the local organizations and other facts about the strike. This leaflet was published in the DAILY WORKER.

SIGMAN DODGING 'EXPELLED' ISSUE AT CONVENTION

Union Ratifies Ruling On Jobbers

By REBECCA GRECHT.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, May 16.—The convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is drawing near its end and the report of the Appeals Committee on the cases of the expelled members has not yet been given. The Sigman administration machine is making an attempt to relegate the matter to the background.

The committee on officers reported, giving unstinted praise to the officials for their "able and unselfish leadership" of the union.

The committee's report emphasizes the deplorable, evil conditions in the cloak industry and fully approves the changes in the new agreement with the manufacturers. The changes were proposed by the General Executive Board. These changes propose making the jobbers assume the responsibilities for the production of merchandize thru the system of contractors in the same way as if the goods were manufactured on their own premises.

Make Jobbers Guarantee.

The jobber is to guarantee payment of wages and the observance of union conditions just as if the workers were employed by his directly. The number of contractors a jobber can employ is to be limited to check the unnecessary competition in trade. A three party machinery is proposed for collective bargaining. The organization would include the union, jobbers and contractors.

This is part of the general policy of the Sigman administration to fight sweatshops by organizing the employers (when they consent), while the militants demand that the union organize the workers for the struggle against their employers. Sigman's policy is causing demoralization.

"Don't Waste Money Unseating."

The committee's proposal to increase the per capita five cents weekly was carried. It aroused much opposition. Delegates pointed out that the bad industrial conditions make the workers' payment difficult and demanded that the organization use the money for better purposes than spending $50,000 unseating delegates.

The Sigman machine permits very long discussion on the relatively unimportant matters. Questions on policy, particularly on action against the militants, are railroaded with little or no discussion.

Prohibition Liquor On Upgrade; Deaths From Alcoholism Drop

NEW YORK, May 16.—Deaths from alcoholism among 15,000,000 industrial policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company decreased 17.5 per cent during the first quarter of 1924 as compared to the same period in 1923, the company announced today.

BARE BOOZE GRAFT

Millionaire Bootlegger Tells Of Big Bribes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 16.—George Remus, millionaire "bootleg king" of Cincinnati, now serving in Atlanta penitentiary, told the senate investigating committee today that he paid Jess Smith $250,000 for liquor permits and "protection" from prosecution.

In addition to the $250,000 paid to Smith, Remus said they had an agreement whereby each was to get "about $1.50 to $2.50 a case" on all liquor released. The amount of the "commission," he said, depended upon the number of cases released.

The first payment to Smith, Remus said, was $50,000 in $1,000 bills which he handed him in the Commodore Hotel in New York July or August, 1921."

Pull With Daugherty.

After he was convicted for violation of the Volstead act in 1922, Remus said that Smith assured him that he could have the decision reversed because of his influence with Attorney General Daugherty. This assurance was given him in Washington, Remus said, when he paid with $20,000.

Before he was convicted, Remus said, he had owned seven distilleries in Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky, but that they had been confiscated. He said he paid from $50,000 to $325,000 for them originally. Remus said he entered the liquor business immediately after the Volstead act went into effect, January, 1919.

Chain of Drug Companies.

Explaining his method of operating, Remus said that he organized a chain of drug companies and wholesale liquor companies. He would then get permits to sell legally under the provisions of the Volstead act permitting sale for medicinal purposes.

Remus said James M. Linton, special assistant to the attorney general, defended him in his prosecution.

Remus said that he first met Jess Smith in 1921, in New York.

Remus said that the demand for liquor was greater than the supply, and he met Smith to increase the supply by getting permits for "a consideration."

"What did he say about prosecution?"

Promised Protection.

"Smith said that I might be prosecuted, but I would never be convicted, but I'm in Atlanta now. I first paid him $50,000. I have canceled checks paid to different people for these transactions, including the distilleries for about $1,500,000."

"How much did you pay to Jess Smith in the aggregate?"

"Between $225,000 and $250,000, to the best of my recollection."

Remus said he paid Smith money every time he met him.

He estimated that about 700,000 or 800,000 gallons of liquor were released from bond by him.

FUR CONVENTION ELECTS SUROFF JUDGE AND JURY

The convention of the Fur Workers' union, which is meeting in the Hotel Morrison, will elect officers at its closing session today. Yesterday's sessions were taken up in making changes in the constitution and by-laws of the organization.

Thes echanges were for the most part unimportant. One change provided that local unions could make donations only to organizations endorsed by the International Union.

Suroff Trial Arranged.

A judge and jury to hear the appeal of Max Suroff, impeached left wing vice-president, was elected and held executive sessions last night.

The election took place after a long and hot discussion as to whether it should be more properly appointed by the president. Finally a motion to elect was made and carried. Max Schulberg was elected judge and the following delegates as jurors: Durinsky, Kalinokof, Weinar, Swartz, Fishoff, Stetsky Begun Saffar, Mickel, Rubenstein, Komover and Varofsky.

Meyer London, ex-congressman, was a visitor to the convention. His entrance was well staged.

HOT FIGHT ON FARRINGTON COAL TREATY

Let Bosses Cheat Men Out Of Their Pay

By KARL REEVE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 16.—The thirtieth convention of the United Mine Workers of Illinois passed a modified resolution favoring recognition of Soviet Russia, with the slight condition that Russia must concur in the right of other nations to self government—a right that the Soviets have always upheld.

The convention also unanimously passed resolutions declaring that the "convention stands for free speech and assemblage," and a resolution that it be compulsory to have shot firers employed in all mines in the state of Illinois.

The hottest debate of the day came on resolve number 2 of resolution seven, which was taken up section by section. The resolution "resolves that it shall become a part of our agreement after April 1, 1924, that all operators must be bonded for all payrolls, and also compensation bills where they are not protected by some reliable insurance company."

Men Beaten Out of Wages.

It was evident from the number of those who took the floor in favor of this resolution that the delegates are dissatisfied with the ineffectiveness of the District 12 officers to secure the men their pay. It was brought out that all over the state operators have worked the men overtime every day for weeks, and then gone into bankruptcy, causing the men to lose their money.

Frank Farrington over and over again, in favoring the motion of the resolutions committee that the resolution be referred to the scale committee, admitted shamelessly that he could do nothing to secure justice for the union.

Farrington Gives No Hope.

With a majority of the delegates clamoring for immediate action, Farrington blandly pointed out that the contract for the next three years made with the Illinois operators cannot be changed, and that, in fact, the scale committee will not meet until three years hence. "I can do nothing for you," Farrington said time after time. "I confess my inability to do anything besides what already has been done."

Delegate Andrew Minor of Jamestown said: "I would like to see some immediate action on the resolution. I have $600 coming to me from a mine that did not have the pay roll bonded." Other delegates cited the Chicago Fuel company and the Southern Gem Coal company as corporations which had beat the miners out of the pay roll. Minor declared that the inability of the union officials to protect the members of the union, "when our families are suffering for food and crying for relief, is a disgrace to this organization."

DUNCAN M'DONALD AND SWABECK SPEAKING AT MASS MEETING TONIGHT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 16.—Duncan McDonald and Arne Swaeck will be the principal speakers at a mass meeting in the Labor Temple Saturday, at 8 p. m.

The glaring Teapot Dome scandal and other graft issues will be discussed at the meeting, which is under the auspices of the Farmer-Labor Party. Jack Johnstone will be chairman.

Miners' convention delegates and Peoria workers in general, have signified their intention of coming to the mass meeting which will give a different political picture than that presented by the old party boosters at the early days of the miners' convention.

ST. PAUL SPEAKERS CHEERED AT AMALGAMATED MEET; LEFTS WIN ON PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION

By EARL BROWDER.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 16.—Victory for proportional representation on Joint Boards, which is part of the left-wing program, designed to overcome the gerrymandering tactics of the right wing, was won in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers convention here. The delegates voted 176 to 70 to instruct the General Executive Board to refer the matter to the membership with a recommendation for adoption.

William Mahoney, editor of the Minnesota "Labor Advocate," addressed the convention on behalf of the June 17th convention of Farmer-Labor party advocates in St. Paul. Mahoney's forceful talk received a splendid reception from the clothing workers' delegates. Mahoney speaks with the backing of the St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly and the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party.

Minor Speaks for St. Paul.

Robert Minor, internationally famous speaker, writer, cartoonist, and editor of the "Liberator," addressed the convention, also stressing the importance of the June 17th convention in St. Paul. He gave the delegates excellent arguments for joining the great body of workers and farmers who will break with the old worn-out political parties of capitalism in the coming political meet. His speech was enthusiastically received.

Freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti, Tom Mooney, Warren K. Billings, and other class war prisoners was demanded in resolutions passed.

Many trade and organization issues are occupying the attention of the convention at this time.

Bank Where Missouri Packers Did Business Compelled To Close

EAST ST. LOUIS, May 16.—The Drovers National Bank closed its doors here today following a run which resulted in large withdrawals.

The Drovers National was a member of the Federal Reserve System and was capitalized at $200,000. It had deposits of $626,310 and resources of $1,052,009.

Unexpected loses were incurred thru the failure of two state banks of Missouri. The Drovers National was established many years ago and has been the banking place of many of the packing, mule and horse dealing interests.

Earthquake in Turkey.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 16.—One hundred and seventy persons were killed and several villages completely destroyed during a series of severe earthquakes at Erezerum, Bassankale and Kars, it was learned today, when reports from the stricken area came in.

FARMERS AND WORKERS OF N. Y. MEET TOMORROW

Convention Will Be Held In Schenectady

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 16.—On Sunday morning, May 18, 1924, the state convention of the Farmer-Labor party will open. This convention will be held at the Labor temple, 269 State street, Schenectady, N. Y.

It is the duty of every progressive and radical local union, fraternal and other organization to see to it that their organization is represented by a delegate at this state convention.

The workers of this state have decided that the time is now ripe for the formation of a Farmer-Labor party in New York to represent the interests of the exploited farmers and industrial workers. The workers of New York have had their fill of the cheap politics of both the old reactionary parties and have decided to form their own class party to represent their interests in the government bodies.

Many organizations have already responded to the joint call of the Buffalo Labor party and the Federated Farmer-Labor party of New York city for the state convention and have elected their delegates. However, there are many sympathetic organizations which were represented at the last city convention of the F. F.-L. P. which have not as yet elected their delegates to the state convention. These organizations are urged to immediately act on this call and send the name and address of their delegate to the state secretary of the Buffalo Labor party, Mr. Frank Herzog, 63 Leroy avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

The New York city delegates will leave here on Saturday evening, May 17, on the Albany night boat, which leaves the foot of Canal street and the North river at 6 o'clock sharp. Those delegates who wish to leave for the Schenectady convention with the rest are urged to get in touch with the Albany night boat immediately, telephone Canal 9000, and make immediate arrangements for accommodations. Or they can communicate with Harry M. Winitsky, state organizer for the Farmer-Labor party of New York, to make arrangements for the boat.

TEACHERS WANT SHARE DIRECTING OF EDUCATION

Want To Know Junior Highs Before Adopt

TEACHERS of Chicago refused to be considered robots of the superintendent, according to Miss Margaret Haley, business agent for the Teachers' federation.

"Are the teachers intelligent cooperators in a great public service—the education of the city's youth—or are they Fordized factory hands whose sole task is to adjust a nut as a machine comes by and without voice in the conduct or destiny of the product?" asks Miss Haley.

Board Opinion Sustains Councils.

The elementary teachers have been sustained by the board of education in their contention that the rules of the elementary teachers' councils permitted councils meeting during school hours. Attorney Frank Righeimer gave the opinion for the board.

Miss Haley reports interest, not opposition necessarily, to the proposed establishment of junior highs in Chicago schools. She claims that the teachers object to the methods used by Superintendent McAndrew and the board in preventing the teachers from learning about junior high schools and the platoon system from the special committees' reports. The board failed to publish the reports for the benefit of the teachers; so the federation was forced to see to publication.

Superintendent McAndrew refuses to co-operate with the teachers by offering them any share even in the information concerning the direction of the public schools. The charges preferred against him by the Teachers' federation have not yet been acted upon by the board of education.

CALVIN'S BACKERS REFUSE TO TOTE ANY MORE TAXES

Bankers Instruct Him To Swing Veto Ax

WASHINGTON, May 16.—President Coolidge today is expected to veto the insurance soldier bonus bill. The president has been working on his veto message for a day or two and now is understood virtually to have completed it.

The message returning the bonus measure to congress, will be based on the argument that the nation's finances cannot stand the drain involved in the proposed law. It is stated here that the financing interests backing Coolidge have instructed the president to use his veto.

While the expectation is that the president will act on the bill today, he has until Friday midnight before the measure automatically would become a law without his signature. There is believed, however, to be no reason for postponing action when Mr. Coolidge has completed his message.

Tammany's New Chief Quits After Sixteen Hours Term

NEWARK, N. J., May 16.—Tammany Hall, after a brief 16 hours during which it considered surrogate, James A. Foley, its chieftain, was leaderless again today.

The nominating committee prepared for another series of conferences in the wigwam, beginning at 4 p. m. in an effort to find a man to take over the post made vacant by the death of Charles F. Murphy.

Foley wrote a letter to the executive committee late yesterday declining the leadership on advice of his physician, who pronounced his condition such that his life might be endangered by assuming the chieftaincy of the New York democratic organization.

Dirt Washed Off One.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 16.—The House Committee investigating charges against congressmen today, recommended to the House that representative Zihlman be considered cleared of charges against him and that further consideration of the case of Representative Langley, Kentucky, be deferred pending the result of his appeal from conviction at Covington, Ky., for conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

HOT FIGHT ON FARRINGTON DEAL

tion, instead of delaying for three years, said: "When the coal company does not pay the men it violates the contract, and the operators' association itself should be called on to pay. When the pay roll is jumped after a man works every day for a month, it is a deliberate steal. When a mine is running on part time, the men are generally paid."

Tumulty Challenges Farrington.

Delegate Joe Tumulty of Springfield suggested to Farrington, when the president admitted his helplessness, that, previous to the drawing up of any wage scale, he call a district convention and let the delegates give him instructions so he would not be so helpless in the future. "Let the miners and not the district officials decide on what they want."

Farrington asked Tumulty why he didn't present a resolution to that effect. "Will you consider such a resolution if I present it in the morning?" asked Tumulty.

"No," replied Farrington. "It's too late." The delegates roared with laughter at Farrington's expense.

Altho the resolution was referred to the scale committee, because the miners saw the hopelessness of forcing action from Farrington, the debate brought out clearly how weak the mine union officials have been in representing the men, and what poor contracts they have been making on behalf of the men.

Trouble All Over State.

The discussion brought out that the miners all over the state are having difficulty in collecting compensation due, and that the mine officials have been extremely lax in looking out for the interests of the men. "The operators refused to agree to a clause in the last contract that the pay roll be bonded, and the mine workers abandoned their position," Farrington admitted. "Don't get the idea I sympathize with the coal operators. I don't, but the district board did everything that could be done. Some of the delegates fear this condition will get worse. So do I. But I have done all I could."

Weak Point In Contract.

It was further brought out that several hundred resolutions were brought before the last international convention bearing on this very question, and yet the officials blocked definite action on it. Another weak point which Farrington was forced to try to explain was the clause in the last contract with the Illinois mine operators that

"The right to hire and discharge employes is vested exclusively with the operators.

"The representatives of the mine workers agreed to this," was [illegible]rington's weak defense." Thinking that the contract meant the operators would not employ any but members of the United Mine Workers. But the operators refused to agree to this and insisted on their right to hire men outside the union, whom we were then forced to take into the union as new members."

A delegate pointed out that John L. Lewis in a recent issue of the United Mine Workers Journal, in an article which bears his signature, stated that the operators had a right to hire whom they pleased and the union was forced to admit them as members.

Letting Bosses Pick Members.

Farrington admitted that under this part of the contract, many local unions have been forced to admit bosses and relatives of mine owners into the union.

Another rap was taken at Farrington's visionary scheme for solving the unemployment problem by electrifying the state of Illinois when Freeman Thompson declared that "Increase in electrification and the use of gas and oil are eating into the employment of the miners. Over forty thousand miners are now out of work in the state of Illinois. We should do away with visionary schemes, and the attempt to divide us with quibbling, and unite to fight the common enemy—the employing classes." Thompson also made a plea for more action in organizing the non-union mine fields.

Modify Russian Resolution.

In its original form the resolution favoring recognition of Soviet Russia stated, "Whereas Soviet Russia has the only workers' government in the world today, be it therefore resolved that we go on record for the unconditional recognition of Soviet Russia." This resolution had been adopted by local unions number 2705, 3473, 1507; 2513, 517.

The resolutions committee reported on this resolution, "We non-concur in unconditional recognition of Soviet Russia, but we do believe that every people should have the unhampered right of self-government. We favor the recognition of Soviet Russia if they concur in the right of self-government of other nations as we do for them."

A Workers' Government.

After an extended debate the resolution was finally adopted in the altered form. Delegates Gus Fritz of Bellville declared the original resolution should be adopted.

"If the report of the resolution committee came from the Chamber of Commerce I could understand it," said Fritz. "But when we consider that this is a workingmen's convention and that Russia is a government of workers, I can't see how unconditional recognition is going too far.

"The insertion of the condition that Russia concur in the right of other nations to self-government is nonsense. Does anyone claim that Russia has refused to recognize the United States? We have recognized a government which sent Jim McLaughlin to jail; we have recognized Italy, with its murderer, Mussolini, at the head; we have recognized France. France owes the United States five billion dollars which she will never pay, and yet we recognize the capitalistic Poincare government. Is there any reason why a body of workers should not extend unconditional recognition to Soviet Rssia, a workers' government?"

The DAILY WORKER has become a daily necessity at the convention. Over two-thirds of the delegates have bought the paper every day from Kitty Harris and Natalie Gomez. The entire supply of Labor Heralds was sold out today.

Mussolini Sold Out Italy's Oil Wells To Harry F. Sinclair

ROME, May 16.—Harry F. Sinclair has been granted a concession to work Italy's oil fields and the cabinet council has approved the leases, an official communique announced today. The concession is effective as of May 1st.

Despite a storm of protest against Italy's oil reserves being leased to Sinclair, the government maintains that its action was justified. Provisions, however, are made for "national initiative," which at present is somewhat hampered by lack of capital.

GOMPERS LAUDS INSTITUTION OF PRIVATE PROPERTY

But Fears Overthrow Of System

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONTREAL, Que., May 16.—Samuel Gompers' eulogy of the institution of private property, contained in a public statement at the close of the sessions of the A. F. of L. executive council here, has aroused much protest from Canadian unionists.

The protest is coming from the so-called "moderates," who resent his wholesale repudiation of all movements leading toward a collective social system. Communism, Socialism and Anarchism were condemned alike by the vice president of the Civic federation.

Gompers' defense of private property closed with a warning to employers that the system was imperiled.

Fears Labor Rebellion.

"Destroy the hope of a better life and a fairer division of the rewards of labor thru autocratic use of power that comes by virtue of title in private property vested by the state in the individual and protected by government, and you will compel the working class to rebel against the institution of private property.

"Darken the outlook of a brighter day and a fairer and more just treatment of labor thru a repressive manifestation of state power, and you will force them to resort to an effort to establish a class government following the attributes of caste government.

"It is to avoid just that sort of human misunderstanding and conflict that sets out the American Federation of Labor as the greatest and most constructive force in modern society."

House Turns Down Coolidge Plea For Time On Jap Ban

WASHINGTON, May 16.—By a vote of 308 to 58 the House today approved the immigration bill conference report making Japanese exclusion effective July 1 and restricting general immigration to approximately 150,000.

Administration leaders in the House who opposed the July 1 date last week when the report was sent back to conference, supported it today after announcing that a vote for the report was not to be regarded as a vote against the President.

The conference report now goes to the senate which is expected to accept it tomorrow, whereupon the measure will go to the President for action.

The Illinois miners' union in convention assembled, is expected to go on record for a special international convention to right the wrong committed against the brave Kansas miners who fought a long battle against the tyranny of the coal operators and their government, which finally resulted in a victory for the workers of the entire country in killing the Industrial Slave Law of Kansas, which was accepted as a model for introduction in every state in the union but for its death at the hands of Howat and his followers. The delegates to the Peoria convention owe it to themselves and the workers of America, to see that this wrong is righted.

Boston Democratic Mayor Feigns Anger At G. O. P. Scheme

(By The Federated Press)

BOSTON, May 16.—Investigation of the Massachusetts Calvin Coolidge finance committee by the senate committee probing political corruption is demanded in a letter sent by Mayor Curley of Boston to Senator Walsh.

"Large contributions will be so divided as to give full observance to the requirements of the statutes," says a circular letter signed by George F. Elliott for the committee and appealing for "funds to make sure of the nomination and election of Calvin Coolidge." "There is no limit to the amount an individual may give to this committee," the appeal states, adding that it will be "so divided" as to come within the law.

SEND FIRE-TRAP SCHOOLS AFTER FIRE HAZARDS

School Board Removes Little Risks Only

Fire hazards but not fire-traps are to be removed from Chicago city schools, according to the latest report from Business Manager Byrne of the school board. The hazards were not even noticed until after the Dunning Insane Hospital disaster, when Assistant Fire Marshal McDonald of the city fire prevention bureau, made a casual inspection of schools. The DAILY WORKER pointed out months ago the fire hazards and fire traps among city schools.

Begin On 37 Schools.

Thirty-seven schools will be visited at once and a fund of $37,000 is available for the removing of refuse under wooden stairways, tearing out wooden partitions, putting in assembly hall "exit" signs, building iron fire escapes, etc.

Several schools were closed when the startling fire hazards were discovered. Inspector McDonald was amazed that the dangerous conditions had not been discovered earlier, as the fire-breeding conditions have been in existence a long time.

In domestic science rooms the tables under the gas plates have not been covered with metal. Refuse has been allowed to accumulate under stairways and in basement storerooms. Lumber has been stored under school buildings. Inflammable scenery has been stored in attics. School room seats are not always fastened to the floor and shades or obscuring hangings have been placed over "exit" signs.

Not Even Enough Alarm Bells.

In some cases obstruction such as statuary have been placed in front of fire escapes. Fire ladders are not all secure. Fire alarm gongs have not been placed in all halls and rooms. Steps are frequently found missing from fire escapes.

Even after the clean-up and repair campaign, the fire-trap buildings will remain just as menacing as ever. Removing fire hazards is like ploughing the ground with a sharp stick, assert fire prevention authorities. The real need is for new sanitary, fire-proof buildings.

REVIEW PULLMAN STRIKE ISSUES IN MASS MEETING

Point Need Of Class Political Action

The Pullman strike is to be reviewed before a mass meeting in Stancik's Hall, 205 East 115th street, Pullman, on Tuesday, May 20th, at 8 p. m., under the auspices of the Workers Party. The struggle of the exploited Pullman company workers against their dictatorial bosses is not to be allowed to die with the concluding of the last strike.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and Jack McCarthy, circulation manager of the paper, and Manuel Gomez, well-known speaker of the Labor Defense Council staff, will bring clearly before the workers of Pullman and their families the issues of the late strike and show how that fight merely pointed the way to future action.

Polish and Slavic Speakers.

Speakers in Polish and South Slavic will also help to give the workers an understanding of their true situation and relation to the industrial lords of the country and of their particular community. The course of the strike will be explained and the reasons for the workers' inability to make a more effective showing against the powerful Pullman company.

It will be shown that the workers' fight in this small field indicates the need for greater class consciousness and for a mass class organization to gain political power for the workers of the country.

Smith And McAdoo Boosters Fight For Michigan Support

FLINT, Mich., May 16.—Neither supporters of William G. McAdoo or Governor Al Smith appeared able today to claim a complete victory in the Michigan democratic convention, which adjourned yesterday.

An attempt to put Michigan's 30 delegates to the national convention under the unit rule, was abandoned when serious opposition developed.

Henry Ford, who defeated Ferris by about six thousand majority in the preferential primary, was read out of the party in a resolution which passed without opposition.

RUSSIAN FILM SEEN BY GREAT CHICAGO CROWD

Enthusiasts Fill Every Seat in Huge Hall

A great crowd attended two performances of the motion picture "Russia and Germany" Wednesday night at Orchestra Hall. Long before the doors opened many people gathered for the show and within fifteen minutes time all seats were taken for the first show. Not the least feature of the program was the musical accompaniment, played on the great organ by one of the leading professional motion-picture organists of the city. "The International" and many other Russian army tunes roared thru the great house—and not a pipe cracked. The audience was tremendously responsive and all thru the picture there were punctuations of applause and laughter.

Some In Wrong Church

There was in attendance a very small contingent of German Fascist sympathizers who started to applaud when a steel-helmetted apostle of "democracy" stood guard over the crushed labor government of Saxony. A roar of whistles and cat-calls left no room for doubt as to the sympathies of the great mass in attendance.

In showing the international labor response to the German workers' appeal for help the applause was unanimous, especially when the International Workers Aid World Congress in the Prussian Senate was shown to have in attendance delegates from practically every country in Europe and from practically every faction of the labor movement. The spectacle of Edo Fimmen, of the Amsterdam International of Trade Unions, and Mathilde Worm, Social - Democratic Reichstag member, speaking from the same platform with the noted Communist Willie Muenzenberg, and the French Communist deputy Baptiste, certainly proved the I. W. A. German Relief activity a united front supported by all except the blackest bureaucrats.

William F. Kruse, who photographed most of the scenes shown in the film, spoke briefly of his experiences abroad, and a collection of over $500 was taken up.

John Brown's Body Moldering, So Is American Democracy

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., May 16.—Sixty representatives of the Negro race joined with the John Brown Memorial association in a pilgrimage to the grave of John Brown at North Elba, near here, on the one hundred and twenty-fourth anniversary of the birth of the celebrated opponent of slavery.

A suitable monument to Brown, to be erected by public subscription, is planned by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Field Secretary William Pickens announced. "During the civil war," said Pickens, "the northern armies marched to the song, 'John Brown's Body Lies a Molding in the Grave,' and it is in an obscure spot that his body still lies."

Canadian Russians Moving Back.

MOSCOW, May 16.—Representatives of a group of more than 3,000 Dokoboras from Canada have arrived in Moscow to negotiate terms for settling as an agricultural commune in southern Russia. The Dokoboras have a fine outfit of the most modern farm machinery and several million dollars in capital.

During the time of the czar these people left Russia to settle in Canada. They are leaving Canada because the business men of that country are intent on exploiting them to the limit.

Congress Defies Coolidge, Passes Jap Exclusion Bill

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The immigration bill containing the Japanese exclusion provision was sent to the White House today for final action.

Action by congress was completed when the house adopted the conference report, 308 to 58 and the senate took the same action, 69 to 9.

All efforts by the president to delay the date of exclusion so that a treaty might be drawn with Japan, was futile. He has since given indications to congressmen and senators that he might not veto the measure even tho it did not conform to his exact desires.

COMPROMISERS CONTROL PENNSY F.-L. CONVENTION

Vote To Send Delegates To Cleveland Meet

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 16.—The Farmer-Labor convention closed here after a terrific seven-hour battle which resulted in the defeat by the official machine of the resolution calling for delegates to the June 17th convention in St. Paul, altho the temper of the convention was markedly in favor of the June convention rather than the July 4th at Cleveland, and four of the seven state Executive Committee elected were for June 17th.

The DAILY WORKER was exhibited and the "red" cry was raised by the official machine, led by Chairman Kutz, who succeeded in clouding the issue and getting over the officials' program of endorsement for July 4th.

Resolutions Committee Leads Offensive.

The resolutions committee appointed by Chairman Kutz, a member of the Fitzpatrick Farmer-Labor party, would not accept the resolutions for St. Paul and condemned the July 4th convention. The committee submitted a substitute resolution to send delegates to Cleveland and not to affiliate with a national body without action from the state convention.

Delegate Kushnie, of the resolutions committee, submitted a minority report in favor of June 17th and against the July 4th convention. Practically every delegate spoke on the question during the succeeding debate.

Pat Toohey, a miner, opened the fight for St. Paul. It was really a magnificent sight to see the 18 year old miner standing in the center of the large, luxurious convention hall, giving the old-timers an excellent lesson in politics. His speech was met with general applause.

He was followed by Delegate Mark, vice-president of District 2, United Mine Workers, who spoke for the majority report. Not a single delegate dared applaud him, so strong was the sentiment for June 17th. He had to admit he had nothing against St. Paul.

Fred Merrick, in an eloquent speech, made it clear that the leaders of the July 4th group are against independent political action and that the convention is called to sabotage rather than to form a Labor Party.

Speaker after speaker spoke in favor of June 17th, with the exception of a few union officials who defended July 4th.

Resort to Red Tricks.

The official machine saw its defeat, when Lever, of the Machinists' union, and a half-baked progressive, came to the rescue by proposing a compromise to send delegates to both conventions. Up to that time Lever opposed June 17th.

The radicals refused to compromise. Then the officials began a campaign against Communism, exhibiting the DAILY WORKER as proof of their foul contentions. Chairman Kutz refused to recognize numerous objections against the attempt to obscure the issue by dragging Communism into the debate.

Before closing the discussion, the chairman decided to resort to a tactic usually applied by union officials in critical moments, by making a most vicious and false report of what happened at the July 3rd convention and pointing out that, as part of the national Farmer-Labor Party, this convention must send delegates to the July 4th convention.

Roll Call Impossible.

Chairman Kutz would not allow Fred Merrick and other delegates to make corrections to his misstatements, and succeeded in putting over his trick.

The Lever group joined hands with the reactionaries and jointly defeated the June 17th proposition by vote of 32 to 21. Roll call was impossible as no list of the delegates was available.

The same delegates who voted for July 4th, turned down a resolution condemning Pinchot for failing to keep his promise to pardon political prisoners. The so-called "progressive" Lever of Philadelphia politely refrained from voting on this resolution.

A resolution proposed by Fred Merrick, on the Pittsburgh car strike, was unanimously adopted.

The same officers were re-elected and a state executive committee of seven. Four of these had stood solidly for June 17th, which illustrates the sentiment of the convention.

NEGROES WILL SMOKE OUT THE KU KLUX KLAN

Hooded Terrorists Get Own Medicine

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 16.—In an effort to smoke out pussyfooting politicians on Ku Klux Klan lawlessness and make the klan an issue in the political campaign, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, New York, calls upon Indiana Negro voters to defeat the Republican nominee for governor, indorsed by the klan.

"The klan should be made a direct and paramount issue by colored voters in Indiana, and the N. A. A. C. P. is urging Negroes to defeat any candidate or party failing to make their position in this matter clearly and unequivocally understood," says the statement.

"The N. A. A. C. P. went definitely on record at its conference last year in Kansas City in favor of the political emancipation of the Negro from allegiance to any party on historical grounds. Not what parties have done in the past, but what they are doing today concerns the Negro voter. In a number of states Negro votes have retired congressmen who voted against the Dyer anti-lynching bill, one of them being Dr. Caleb R. Layton, Dupont's candidate in Delaware. There is every reason for Negro votes to be cast against candidates for office, of whatever party, who accept klan support or indorse and represent the klan point of view, with its religious bigotry, its racial intolerance, and its appeal to crude mob sentiment."

BALLSTON SPA, N. Y., May 16.—Ku Klux Klan members who have been trying to make trouble in Saratoga county, New York, got the worst of it in a free-for-all fight, when several hundred anti-klansmen broke up a klan meeting here. Local police were unable to protect the klansmen.

Ex-Gary Officials Try To Dodge Jail In Booze Appeal

Attorneys for former mayor Roswell O. Johnson, of Gary, Ind., the former chief of police of Gary, and 38 others convicted with them in Indianapolis in 1922 in connection with violation of the Federal Dry Act are scheduled to appear in federal court this afternoon in an effort to secure an appeal from the decision of the Indianapolis court. All the defendants were convicted in the United States district court in Indianapolis.

A Crowning Infamy

Coolidge's veto of the even inadequate soldiers' adjusted compensation measure comes as a fitting climax to a series of outrages committed against the great number of workers and poor farmers constituting the overwhelming majority of the expeditionary forces that were rushed to Europe in the last war.

First of all, these sons of the working class, these sons of the farming masses were forced to desert the mills and fields for the trenches to fight to save the profit system under which their bosses, the financial and industrial monarchs, exploit and oppress them.

Once on Flanders Field and at Verdun, these soldier masses were mained and slaughtered without the slightest regard for the value of their lives, but simply for the enhancement of the military prowess buttressing the capitalist class and government in Wall Street and Washington. At the same time the capitalists for whom they were fighting were coining fabulous profits out of the blood that these poor workers and farmers were losing in the war.

After these soldiers bought the victory for their employers at the price of their own limbs and lives, they were shipped back to the "land of the free and the home of the brave" to walk the streets of the big industrial centers, out of work and out of hope. At the same time the very government which they saved was handing out billions of dollars of bonuses to the railway, shipping, mining and manufacturing overlords dominating the economic life of the country.

Soon the soldiers sought at least a pittance of economic relief. An effort was made to secure some legislation granting the ex-soldiers only an infinitessimal fraction of what the employing class had been getting all the time. While the capitalist government lackeys were feverishly at work handing out huge bonuses to their masters, they bitterly and determinedly resisted the advancement of a single cent to any group that was in the slightest way composed of members of the working and farming classes. All attempts to secure a so-called bonus for the ex-soldiers failed disastrously.

Coolidge's veto was long expected. The frankness with which "Cautious Cal" has denounced and fought even the present mangled bonus measure shows very plainly the big business interests must have given Coolidge a mighty substantial guarantee to atone for the loss of votes that his enmity to the bill will surely entail him. Obviously the ruling class is bent on maintaining the inviolability of the principle that this is a government of, by, and for the capitalist interests.

If the conditions making possible for such conduct of the Coolidges and their agents and masters are to be eradicated, this veto must be looked upon as merely the logical, natural next step in a series of crimes committed against all workers and poor farmers by the exploiting class, as the crowning infamy of the outrageous treatment accorded the ex-soldier masses that gave their all to make the world safe for capitalist democracy.

Stone Reforms

Many liberals will greet with joy the announcement of reform soon to be instituted by the department of justice. All the extra-legal and political work that has characterized the activities of the department of justice in the last few years is to be discontinued, according to the promises of Daugherty's successor.

We are in no hurry to celebrate. We know that the leopard cannot change his spots. The department of justice is today, as it was yesterday, the tool, the weapon, of the big capitalist interests owning and controlling the industries and government.

Mr. Stone, it is true, when compared with the unlettered William J. Burns, and the crude, boorish Daugherty, is somewhat of a scholar. Mr. Stone is realist enough to face facts squarely. The rise of Mr. Stone to the office he now holds was occasioned and forced by the menace of a serious mass protest threatening to make changes of the first magnitude in the balance of class political power in the country. The new attorney general's methods are simply the adjustment of a reactionary Coolidge spokesman to the new conditions at hand.

With all the revelations concerning the workings of the extra-legal machinery of the Palmer-Burns-Daugherty gang, the sinister machinations of a system forced upon the country at a time when the working and farming masses had surrendered practically all political initiative and were completely submerged, it would have been the height of folly to continue the use of such instruments at a time when these very masses are growing ever more conscious of the real character of the department of justice and the class which it serves.

Mr. Stone, taking his cue and inspiration from the practical politician, Coolidge, is realist enough to adopt new methods of running the department of justice in the interest of the employing class. When the same service can be rendered to the big financial and industrial groups by legal methods there is no point in maintaining a cumbersome extra-legal machinery, particularly when it is seriously discredited. As a matter of fact, it is much more effective to have the department of justice run by a professor than by a professional detective. The taking over of the functions formerly exercised by the private detectives of Mr. Burns by formally and legally recognized subdivisions of the department of justice is no boon to the working class. The operation and management of the department of justice in accordance with the provisions of capitalist law for the capitalist class is as much a menace to the welfare of the working and farming masses as the use of the hired thugs and gangsters in an extra-legal, or temporarily illegal, fashion against the laboring class.

The changed methods of oppressing the working and farming classes announced by the department of justice are by themselves no victory for the workers. But the fact that the industrial and agricultural classes were able to force the enemy to attempt a change of weapon should inspire these masses to decisive class action which will take the entire governmental machinery out of the hands of the bosses whom the Stones, the Coolidges, the Daughertys, the Burnses, and the Palmers have been and are serving alike.

Let Us Go Ahead

The fire directed against the convention of workers and poor farmers to be opened in St. Paul, Minnesota, June 17, is the best evidence of its prowess, the best proof of its being a grave menace to the organized clique of capitalist exploiters.

The very fact that the charge of communist is being hurled at this giant political gathering of the exploited workers and expropriated farmers by the bitterest enemies of the rural and city masses, is the hopeful sign of its inevitable success. To the employing class, to the grain gamblers, to the financial sharks of lower Broadway, New York, the word communist is synonimous with the most effective challenge to their right to exploit ruthlessly the great masses of the country.

Just now the greatest danger to the maximum success of the June 17th convention is not the vicious attack launched against it by Gompers, Keating, the National Republican, and the Wall Street Journal. A real danger to the development of all the possibilities open to the delegates at St. Paul is the tendency to waver, the inclination to hesitate at this time, as to the organization of a permanent all-inclusive national working and farming class political party to lock horns with the employers.

The tendency to limit the coming monster convention merely to the setting up of an election machinery and then, if voting results warrant, perhaps build a permanent political party of the working and farming classes, must be fought. Today, more than ever before, is the time ripe and the need great for the organization of a class farmer labor party totally distinct from and opposed to the parties of the bosses and the "good men" and "independents" serving as the fig leaves hiding the ugliness of these parties. The Communists have been the lightning rod, the dynamic force, in promoting amongst the workers and poor farmers the country over, the consciousness for the need of the organization of a powerful political party committed solely to the interests of these masses. Since the last national strikes of the miners, the railway workers, the textile workers, when great numbers of workingmen and farmers were given a painful lesson in the capitalist character of American democracy, the conditions making for the building of a party of the laboring and farming classes have become more pressing.

We can realize why it is that men who have spent their lives in playing politics in the reactionary republican party, why it is that half-baked liberals whose height of contact with the organized working class movement was achieved in their working for "good men" and "progressivism" within the decrepit democratic party, should waver again and be hesitant about launching a class party of the workers and farmers. But no member of the working class, no spokesman of the farmers who have lately been "getting" it harder than ever from the capitalists, can soundly advocate delay in such urgent political organization. To postpone the organization of the class party of the city and rural masses, to make the building of such a party contingent upon the whims of any individual, whether he be LaFollette or who not, or upon the numerical trend of the votes, a trend which can only be big if a real class party is organized, is to throw away the best chance to strike effective blows against the exploiting class that has offered itself to the workers and poor farmers since the close of the Civil War.

The Communists have always stood for striking the most damaging blows against the enemies of the working and farming classes. Consequently the Communists stand for the organization of a mighty, national class party of the workingmen and dispossessed farmers by the St. Paul Convention. Let us go ahead.

"Billy" Sunday, the hell-roaring revivalist, is on his way to a sanitarium in Minnesota. A lunatic asylum would be a more fitting destination. He might meet some of the victims of his blood-and-thunder harrangues.

Billy Sunday says that he and the Lord have been partners for 38 years. If the partnership has been on a fifty-fifty basis the Lord has accumulated a neat bankroll.

Communism will end all wars, including the class war, thru the abolition of all class divisions.

Greetings to The Amalgamated

Editor's Note. — The following greeting to the Philadelphia convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America appeared in the Freiheit, the Jewish Communist daily of New York city. A great share of the attack on the Forward-Socialist reaction in the Jewish needle trades unions is directed against the Freiheit. This is especially true of the officials of the Furriers' union, which is now holding its convention in Chicago. The Freiheit greeting to the Amalgamated follows:

The Amalgamated is a child of revolt; it was born in the struggle against the Gompers reign in the American labor movement. This is what determined from the beginning the path of its development, fixes the character of its activity among the American unions, and even among the radical Jewish unions it has always been an exception. From the beginning our so-called Socialists, have looked askance at the Amalgamated. It was even combatted, in the first place, because at the head of the union there weren't any men of the Forward machine. Besides, the so-called Socialists did not believe in the staying powers of the new tailor organization. They were convinced that the union which has not Gompers' blessing could not survive any length of time, and is condemned to go out of existence.

The time is still fresh in our memory when Max Pine stood with Gompers' adjutant, Rickert, who betrayed the tailors for years, when the Forward used every means to silence or to set at naught the revolution of the tailors. Even the broken windows during the great tailor strike of 1913 taught the Forward very little.

But it became evident that a union can exist without the blessing of Gompers, without the Forward boom, without Max Pine's "refined" speeches. On the contrary, the first years of the history of the Amalgamated are the best proof that only when the workers free themselves from Gompers, and do not allow themselves to be a victim of the Forward terror, can a labor union develop all its powers and serve as a model of class consciousness.

Therefore, in spite of Gompers and the "Forward" machine, the growth of the "Amalgamated," both in members and in fighting strength, developed with such rapid steps that the "Forward" people against their own will, had to change their attitude toward the Amalgamated; not only they, but the old fox Gompers also, had to restrain his grimaces against the evil "splitters."

"The Amalgamated" became the mirror, not only of the Jewish unions, but also of the American unions. It was always the first with fine, new undertakings, with its ready help for other labor organizations, with its warm response to all important happenings in the international workers' world. As the best example, we may cite its concrete, constructive aid for Soviet Russia; it is in fact almost the only labor union in all countries which extended its hand so warmly to the only workers' republic of the world, paying no attention to all the slanders and incitement against Soviet Russia.

Actually, the attitude of "the Amalgamated" toward the Soviet Republic has not changed to this day. At a time when others of our unions utilize the slanders and incitement against Soviet Russia as a means of fighting against all opposition in their own ranks, the "Amalgamated" continues its work as before.

Naturally, the constantly growing strength of the "Amalgamated" gives the "Forward" no repose; the "Forward" wants to rule this union too, with an iron fist, to transform it into a private possession. Therefore, this paper is using every means to reach its goal; it does not hesitate to use any means, and, unfortunately, the "Forward" succeeds to a large degree.

It is an old generality that when one becomes old, one becomes more settled. But when this good behavior takes on the form of conservatism, of constantly entering into compromises, of restricting the militancy of the members, of going along with those who want to utilize every fight of the workers for their own selfish ends, it becomes seriously harmful, a real danger.

This last kind of conservatism has begun to make itself evident in the "Amalgamated": in its methods of work, in its policy with the bosses, it is going more and more upon the old out and out Gompersian roads. It has come to such a pass that it is already hard to differentiate between the radical Amalgamated and the Gompers' unions; the same principles, the same tactics. That holds true not only of strikes, of agreements with higher ups, but also of the internal leadership. No stand is taken on any questions, there is nothing but sitting on two stools and listening to those who rule with terror in the labor movement. On the quiet, there is plenty of mouth-radicalism, but publicly, they are afraid to raise their tone, they are as "still as water, and lower than grass." If it is a question of labor affairs in other countries, they don't dare to take another stand than that of the yellows; but as regards to internal matters, the line of least resistance is chosen in order not to break with the official powers that be.

This situation must lead often to very sad happenings, in case the right machine takes to ruling in the "Amalgamated" also, and rules in such a way as to besmirch the fair name of the union.

That which took place in Local 2, where the "famous" methods are used against the membership, shows what a neutral, two-faced attitude leads to. The fight against the lefts is in fact, going on in the "Amalgamated" also, and if the present game will be continued of not wanting to break with the "Forward"-machine, things might get to such a point that the entire difference will be wiped out between the "Amalgamated" and the other unions in which the fight has taken on the most disgusting forms.

This must not be permitted, and the convention of the "Amalgamated" in Philadelphia, will have to place the "Amalgamated" in the position which it occupied in the year of revolutionary brilliance; the Gompers methods must be rejected, the "Forward" machine must be put in its place, this machine which is trying to dominate the "Amalgamated" also.

The convention has many important problems and it is to be hoped that the delegates will see all these problems so as to solve them in the spirit of the new time, as befits a radical labor organization which does not go backward, but goes forward. Our greeting to the convention and our wishes for successful work.

Lodge As Peacemaker

By JAY LOVESTONE.

SENATOR LODGE'S proposal for another world peace conference and for the entry of the United States into an international world court, separate and distinct from the League of Nations, comes so late in the session of congress that one wonders as to the cause of the eleventh-hour peace bow of the chairman of the foreign relations committee.

Coming on the heels of the "peace" resolution of Senator Pepper, and with only about three legislative weeks before congress, this move of the Massachusetts senator is simply a political maneuver of the Old Guard. All talk that it will embarrass the Coolidge administration is unfounded. Coolidge and Lodge have had their heads close together too long to permit a situation developing whereby the reactionary senate leader would take any steps inimical to the G. O. P. —the party of graft, oil and pelf.

The Lodge resolution is simply a straw showing which way the wind will blow in the Republican camp on the question of capitalist foreign policy, especially European policy. It has been thrown out merely to test the reaction of the mass of voters to be fooled in the coming campaign. Essentially the Lodge resolution offers nothing new in the way of fraudulent capitalist peace proposals. The reversion to The Hague system of impotent conferences, the plan to have a machinery of "justice" apart from the mechanism of the practically defunct League of Nations, and the proposal to avoid domestic questions have all been put forward at some time or other in the same or slightly different form.

There is one phase of the Lodge measure which is of tangible significance at this time, in view of the official support tendered to the Dawes plan by Wall street and its government. The plan to have the international judges chosen regardless of their nationality from "among persons of high moral character," is worthy of the most serious consideration. It shows that the American capitalists feel that with the strategic hold they will have in Europe under the Dawes plan, they can safely entrust more of their European affairs to such a court. This removes the old objection to the League of Nations' court plan on the score of insufficient American representation by superficially avoiding the issue, but in reality enabling the Yankee imperialists to dictate the personnel of the new court. The American capitalist government would be glad to put its faith in an international court where men of "high moral character," hailing from such satrapies of Yankee finance as Colombia, Peru, Chile, the Argentine, and Brazil are "adequately" represented. Thru this Lodge method the honor and faces of the British and French imperialist ruling classes would be saved and the unchallenged supremacy of the American dollar would be secured.

In short, the Lodge peace proposal, the measure just introduced by the Massachusetts senator, who has for years been vitally interested in munitions works, is simply another step in the direction of American capitalism evolving the effective plan they have long sought for establishing their world hegemony hidden behind the mask of a world "peace" organization.

Calles Turns the Corner

General Calles who is about to be elected president of Mexico has, according to recent press dispatches, announced his intention of surrendering completely to the dictation of foreign capitalist interests.

General Calles was the symbol of the progressive forces allied with the militant agrarian party, the labor party, and the communist forces in beating back the Fascist attack of de la Huerta. The reported abject retreat of the Mexican president —to be—affords an object lesson of great importance to the workers and exploited farmers of every country. This lesson is particularly timely to our working and farming classes about to enter the most important political campaign in the last fifty years.

When de la Huerta in league with the native reactionary elements organized the Fascist rebellion against the Obregon government, the Communists of Mexico were the first working class group to call for a defense of the Obregon government. The Communists did this not because Obregon or Calles were followers of the Third International, but simply because they felt that to permit a de la Huerta Fascist victory over even the miserable compromising government, at best only afflicted with tendencies that might, in a spirit of charity, be construed as sympathetic with yellow aristocratic labor, would enable the exploiters to rob the workers and farmers of whatever gains they had managed to win thru years of the most dificult and costly struggle.

De la Huerta is crushed. Calles was saved by the masses. Now the same Calles is preparing to launch a regime to crush the very masses that have saved him and the class he represents. This is not a new phenomenon in the history of class conflicts. Thru this obvious right-about-face, open betrayal, great masses of Mexican workers and farmers will now see Calles in his real role, in the light that the Communists have always seen him— not as a friend of the working and poor farming masses but as a less dangerous enemy of the proletariat and the agrarian masses at a particular historical moment. Experience may be a very stern and costly schoolmaster, but experience is still the best teacher for great masses.

One can appreciate the difficulties in the path of any Mexican government. Ambassador Warren speaking for the Wall Street interests is bringing to bear great pressure on the poverty-stricken country. We can understand how Calles might be compelled to yield something to this pressure of the financial Shylocks. Yet, when he makes the demand that the peasants disarm, Calles is shamefacedly betraying the most vital interests of the Mexican workers and farmers. By this move Calles is attempting to enable his regime to force upon the country the harshest terms of foreign capitalist control. Once the peasants are disarmed, the death warrant to all the promises made by Obregon to distribute the land amongst the poor farmers will have been signed. Once the peasants and workers are disarmed, the most virulent germs for a successful Fascist revolt will be implanted in the Mexican soil—a Fascist movement which might very likely be led by Calles himself the next time.

There is only one way out for the workers and farmers of Mexico. The Communists of Mexico have shown the way. The Mexican workers and farmers can save themselves only by fighting to the bitter end for the Communist demand of "Arms and Land" for the peasants and workers.

The workers and farmers of France and Germany must raise the alarm against the peace between their capitalists that means new wars against the Russian Workers and Farmers' Republic.

Socialist Congressman Victor L. Berger sent cabled greetings to Jean Longuet on the results of the recent French elections. But Longuet was defeated by the workers of his district. That is what we would call adding insult to injury

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

The German government sent the police chief who raided the Soviet trade delegation's headquarters in Berlin on a long vacation. It is predicted that his political career is finished. He is made a scapegoat for a crime committed under the orders of the German government. Chief Weiss was unfortunate. Had he a strong military power behind him and had Russia been an anaemic country without a powerful Red army to make its demands for satisfaction heard, the subordinate official who carried out the orders of his superiors would be promoted instead of sent to a sanitarium. As told in the Berlin dispatches to the DAILY WORKER, Germany business realized that the raid was a blunder, and business rules Germany. Late dispatches indicate that a critical situation faces industry in that country, as many as thirty bankruptcies being reported in one day. While Soviet Russia is making the nations of Europe crawl before her mighty power, we have the spectacle here in America of labor fakers passing resolutions opposing Soviet recognition. As well try keep back the waves of the ocean.

Trying to guess whether LaFollette will run on a third party ticket, as an independent, or whether he will run at all in the presidential Marathon, is becoming almost as popular a diversion as mah jongg. Nobody seems to know whose banner he will carry. The senator is adopting a policy of watchful waiting. Like Barkis in the Dickens novel, he "is willin'" to bask in the political sunlight. But not unconditionally. Various labor leaders express the joy that would be theirs could they have the pleasure of voting for him as head of the Republican ticket, or any old ticket. But perhaps his health will not allow him to run. In which case the labor leaders have the trusty "nonpartisan policy" of Sam Gompers. They will urge labor to cast their votes for the capitalist friends of the labor fakers.

So long as the workers and farmers of the United States are depending on some Moses like LaFollette to lead them out of the wilderness in which they are now, into the promised land, so long will the capitalists laugh up their sleeves at them. To depend on LaFollette or any other liberal capitalist supporter is to build on quicksand. The workers of England for years were tied up to the Liberal party, and they got nothing but injunctions and other anti-labor laws. After considerable lessons in the hard school of experience they organized their own party, and today, while the workers are far from being the ruling class in England, as the Russian workers are in their own country, British labor is a power to be reckoned with. In the United States the workers are placed on the market by their leaders at every election, voting like cattle to be sold to the highest bidder. And like thousands of southern slaves during the civil war, who fought in the ranks of the Confederate army, millions of American workers are yet satisfied to be placed on the auction block and in return for a glittering promise they vote for their enemies, the capitalists, and scorn the advice of the Communists, who urge them to stand on their own feet and use their mass power in order to free themselves from wage slavery and all its evil consequences.

The war veterans would not even have an insurance policy if Calvin Coolidge could help it. And Calvin was carrying out the orders of the bankers, for whom the veterans fought in the louse-infested trenches of France. It would cost the country too much money to give the ex-soldiers an insurance policy on which they could borrow a few dollars after two years "on reasonable rates of interest." There was no objection, however, from the same government to give the railroads billions of dollars for the use of the roads after guaranteeing them a fixed profit during the war. The owners of the railroads did not go over to France. They had plenty of slaves to send there, who worked for $30 a month, saving democracy. A grateful country would take care of them! But now we are told that "you cannot put a price on patriotism." The president's veto will be overridden because an election is approaching and congressmen and senators want to get elected.

THE MAKING OF LENIN

a difference in approach in decisiveness, in readiness to go to the end. It can be said, returning to the relations of Lenin and Martov, that even before the split and the convention, Lenin was known as "hard" and Martov as "soft." And both of them knew it.

ONE Sunday I went with Lenin and Madame Lenin to the Socialist church in London, where a Social-Democratic meeting was intermingled with the singing of revolutionary-pious psalms. The speaker was a typesetter who returned home from Australia. Lenin translated to us in whispers his speech, which sounded quite revolutionary—at least for those days. Then all rose and sang: "Almighty God, make that there be no kings and no rich people," or something like that.

"There is a multitude of revolutionary and Socialist elements scattered in the English proletariat," Lenin said on that occasion when we left the church, "but it is all combined with conservatism, religion, superstition, and absolutely cannot break thru and spread."

It is interesting to observe that Zasulich and Martov both lived apart from the English labor movement, entirely absorbed in the spark and in their environment. Lenin, on the other hand, undertook from time to time independent investigations in the field of the English labor movement

IT is unnecessary to say that Lenin, Mme. Lenin and her mother lived more than modesty. Returning from the London Social Democratic church, we dined in the little kitchen-dining room in their two-room flat. I remember, as if it just happened, the tiny slices of fried meat served in the small pan. We drank tea. We jested, as usual, on the subject whether I would find my way home alone. I was poor at getting my bearings in the streets, and being inclined to systematize. I called this quality of mine "topographical imbecility."

THE date fixed for the second convention was approaching and it was finally decided to move the "Sparkist" center to Geneva, Switzerland. There living was incomparably cheaper and connection with Russia easier. Lenin grudgingly agreed to this. I was sent to Paris with the understanding that I come to Geneva from there together with Martov. Intense preparations were going on for the convention.

AFTER a short time Lenin also arrived in Paris. He was to read three lectures on the agrarian question in the so-called High Institute, organized in Paris by professors exiled from Russia. I remember how Lenin was very agitated before his first lecture, but upon reaching the stage he at once mastered himself—at least externally. Professor Gambarov, who came to hear him, expressed his impression to Deutsch in these words: "A real professor." The kindly fellow thot that he was expressing the highest praise in that way.

LENIN was given to such agitation at public appearances much later, too, and the less his audience was of his own followers, the more formal the occasion for speech, the stronger his agitation grew. Externally Lenin always spoke impetuously and rapidly, so that his speeches were a cruel test for the stenographers.

When ill at ease, his voice sounded unnatural, had a reverberating and impersonal sound resembling an echo. But when Lenin felt that the particular audience which he was addressing strongly needed that which he had to say, his voice acquired extraordinary vivaciousness and elastic persuasiveness, not oratorical in the proper sense, but conversational, except that it was increased to stage proportions.

THIS was not oratorical art, but something greater than oratory.

At the conclusion of the third lecture in Paris, Lenin made a political speech on the agrarian question. I think in Rue Choisy 110, organized not by the High Institute, but by the Paris group of "Sparkists." The hall was packed. After the speech the "Sparkists" went with the lecturer, according to custom, to a cafe. Everybody was extremely satisfied and the lecturer himself was joyfully excited. The treasurer spoke with satisfaction of the receipts netted from the lecture of the treasury of the Spark. It was in all probability something like 75 to 100 francs—a sum not to be jeered at! All this happened in the beginning of 1903.

IT was during that sojourn of Lenin that it was decided to show him an opera. N. I. Sedova, a member of the "Sparkist" group, was commissioned to arrange it. Lenin went to and from the Opera Comique carrying the same brief case which he took with him to the lectures in the High Institute. Charpentier's opera "Louise" was presented—very democratic in theme. Our group sat in the gallery. In addition to Lenin, Sedova and myself, I think Martov was present.

A SMALL, absolutely unmusical event was connected with this visit to the opera which, however, I firmly retain in my memory. Lenin had bought himself in Paris a pair of shoes. They turned out too tight for him. After several hours of torment he decided to get rid of them. As if for spite, my shoes loudly demanded a change. I received his shoes, and at first they seemed to be just the right size.

greater in the United Stated than in almost any other country. Here the masses are utterly bankrupt of leadership. The Socialists have nothing whatever to offer them. Likewise, the "progressives," who with unexamples, cowardice and weakness, have trotted back to Gompers' camp in the face of the bitter struggle, now going on to revolutionize the labor movement. The left wing must take the lead. There is no one else to do so. To the extent of its power it must wrest the control of the masses from their misleaders and throw them into the struggle against the exploiters. This is exactly what it is doing in the great campaigns for the labor party, amalgamation, recognition of Soviet Russia, organization of the unorganized, etc. Such campaigns, instead of being a weakness to us, are our greatest strength. They give us control over great masses of workers who can thus be gradually prepared for more important revolutionary tasks. If properly exploited, they offer the best possible means for education and organization.

AS the struggle goes on, the revolutionary organizations must assemble all the proletarian elements made sympathetic. It must aim to build a mass party. And in doing this care must be taken not so much with the workers themselves but as with their erstwhile leaders. Of course, the left wing must avoid a decisive struggle with capitalism at this time. That goes without saying. Likewise, it must not extend its battle line over too long a line. But I fail to see the point of the steel strike illustration, as it has no bearing.

THE left wing must have a balanced program with education, organization and action going hand in hand complementing and vitalizing each other. The heart of the whole movement must be militant action. This is the program of the W. P. and T. U. E. L. You say it is based upon Russian experience, but this is an error. It is in line with Communist tactics and experience all over the world. Your program of peaceful education and organization will not do. It would make of the left wing a scholastic, sectarian, non-militant group. The program of the W. P. and the T. U. E. L. would make of it a genuine fighting organization, able to lead the workers in their struggles now and bearing with it the promise of eventually heading them in their final clash with the capitalist system. THE MAKING OF LENIN

REMINISCENCES OF LENIN BY L. TROTZKY.

IT IS unquestionable that to the future big biographer of Lenin the period of 1900-03, of the old "Spark," will be of exceptional psychological interest and will at the same time present great difficulties. For it was just in those short years that Lenin became Lenin. This does not mean that he did not grow further. Quite the contrary; he grew—and by what leaps!—both before and after the November revolution. But that was already a more organic growth.

GREAT was the bound from "underground" to power on November 7, 1917. But this was, so to speak, the material leap of a man who had measured and weighed all that one could measure and weigh. The growth, however, which preceded the split at the second party convention was unnoticeable to the outside onlooker. It was the more resolute inner leap.

The present reminiscences aim to furnish the future biographer some material relating to this unusually significant and important period in the spiritual development of Lenin.

I ARRIVED in London in the autumn of 1902—it must have been in October. It was early in the morning. A cab brought me to the flat of Nikolai Lenin. The door was opened, as far as I remember, by Madame Lenin. Lenin was still in bed and his face bore an expression of welcome mixed with legitimate perplexity. Such were the circumstances in which our first meeting and our first conversation took place. Both Lenin and his wife already knew of me thru a letter from Clare (Krjijanovsky), who formally introduced me in Samara into the "Spark" organization under the nickname of "Pen." And I was received as such: "The 'Pen' arrived!"

I WAS filled with tea in the kitchen-dining room while Lenin dressed. I told about my escape from Siberia and complained against the poor "Sparkist" organization at the frontier. The smugglers had mercilessly fleeced me in excess of all tariff and standards. I delivered to Madame Lenin a modest package of addresses and passes, or more probably information about the necessity of discarding several unfit mailing places. At the instance of the Samara group I had visited Kharkov, Poltava and Kiev, and almost everywhere, at least in Kharkov and Poltava, I was able to discover but a very weak system of communication.

LATER I took a long walk with Lenin about London. He showed me Westminster (from the outside), and some other notable buildings. I do not remember how he said it, but the nuance of the meaning was such: "It is they who possess the famous Westminster."

"They" signified, of course, not the English, but our capitalistic enemies. Lenin always had this slight shade, not at all emphasized and profoundly organic, in the timbre of his voice which expressed itself whenever he talked about some cultural treasures or new achievements, about the organization of the British Museum, the wealth of information of the London Times, or, many years later, about German artillery or French aviation: "THEY are capable or THEY possess, THEY have done or THEY have achieved—but what enemies THEY are!" The invisible shadow of "they"—the exploiting class—enveloped all human civilization, in his view, and he was always aware of this shadow as unmistakably as of daylight.

LENIN took me on this long walk to get acquainted and examine me. And it was really an examination thru the "entire cirriculum." In answer to his questions, I told about the members of the Lena colony of exiles, about the internal groups there, how we collectively studied in the Moscow Transient prison his book, "The Development of Capitalism in Russia," and in exile we labored over "Capital" (Marx), but stopped at the second volume. Apparently it was pleasant to him that the young comrades devoted attention to his most important economic work.

Lenin in Childhood.

I WAS quartered by Madame Lenin several blocks away in a house where Vera Ivanova, Zasulich, Martov and Blumenfield, the manager of the "Spark" printing shop, lived. The lodgers occupied rooms one on top of the other. There was another large common room, which Plekhanov christened, after his first visit, "The Dive." In this room there always reigned great disorder. Here coffee was taken and people dropped in for a talk and smoke. Hence, the name. Thus the short London period of my life commenced.

DURING the London sojourn, as well as later in the Geneva period, I met Zasulich and Martov much more frequently than Lenin. Living in London in the same flat, and in Geneva usually dining and supping in the same little restaurants, Martov, Zasulich and I met several times a day, whereas each meeting with Lenin, who lived with his family, was in the nature of a small event.

VERA IVANOVNA was an individual person and peculiarly fascinating. She wrote very slowly, living thru genuine pains of creation. "There is a great deal in Vera Ivanovna which has a moral, an emotional foundation," Lenin said to me once.

It is not difficult to imagine what a contrast Vera Ivanovna, with her vague radicalism and subjectivity, with her slovenliness, made in comparison to Lenin. It is not that there was no sympathy between them, but there was a sense of difference, of natural incompatibility. But she, as a fine psychologist, felt the power of Lenin, not without a certain subtle hostility, even in those days. It was this that she expressed in her phrase about his "deadly grip."

I began to perceive, but gradually and not without difficulty, the intricate relations which existed among the members of the "Spark" staff. I arrived in London, as already said, being very provincial in every respect. Up to that time I had never been not only abroad, but even in Petrograd. In Moscow as well as in Kiev I lived only in the Transient prison. The Marxian writers I knew only thru their articles.

I REMEMBER my atention was attracted by several leading articles and sketches in "The Spark," which, altho unsigned, were written with the pronoun "I," as, for instance, "In such an issue I said," "I already wrote about it on such a date," etc. I inquired whose articles they were. It appeared they were all by Lenin. One day I remarked to him that it was in my opinion literally inconvenient to employ the pronoun "I" in unsigned articles.

"Why inconvenient?" he asked with interest.

"Somehow, it is so," I replied vaguely, for I had no definite ideas on the subject.

"I do not find it so," Lenin said and laughed a little enigmatically. At that time one might have discovered in such a literary method a bit of "ego-centricity," but in reality the emphasis in his articles, even those that were not signed, was a way of fixing his own line of thinking, because of his uncertainty about a line taken by his close collaborators.

HERE there is before us on a small scale that steady, persistent tension towards a goal which breaks down all conditions, which stops before no formalities, and which is the fundamental characteristic of Lenin, the leader.

THE political pilot of the "Spark" was Lenin, but the main publicist strength was Martov. He wrote easily and endlessly in the same way as he talked. Lenin, on the other hand, spent much time in the library of the British Museum where he pursued theoretical studies.

SEVERAL months later, already in the weeks preceding the second convention, there burst forth an editorial difference between Lenin and Martov on the question of the tactics of street demonstrations, more accurately about conflicts with the police. Lenin said:

"It is necessary to form small armed groups, and it is necessary to teach fighting workmen to combat the police."

But Martov was against this. The controversy was taken up by the editorial staff. "Will not something like group terror grow out of this?" I said about Lenin's proposal. It should be recalled that at that period the struggle against the terrorist tactics of the Socialist-Revolutionists played a big part in our work.

I SELDOM came across Lenin and Martov engaged in a private conversation, outside of meetings and conference. Lenin disliked even then long arguments, vague conversations which always turned into gossip and twaddle. This greatest engineer of revolution, not only in politics, but also in his theoretical labors, and of foreign languages, as well as in his conversation with people, was unfailingly possessed of the same idea—his nature was perhaps the most utilitarian which the laboratory of history ever produced.

Alongside of Lenin, his nearest coworker at that time, Martov, already felt himself ill at ease. They were still addressing each other as "thou," but in their relations a coolness was clearly manifesting itself. Martov was more vitally interested in the current day and its sensations, in current literary work, in public and polemical activities, in news and conversations.

LENIN, allowing today to pass beneath him, penetrated tomorrow with his thought. Martov made innumerable and frequently brilliant hypotheses, suggestions which he frequently forgot himself. Lenin took that which he wanted when he wanted it. The embellished fragility of Martov's ideas caused Lenin more than once to shake his head anxiously. Not only were there at that time no different political lines in existence, but they were not even in sight. Only now, looking backward, can one trace them.

LATER, before the split in the second convention, the "Sparkists" divided into "hard" and "soft." This appellation was at first much used, testifying that if there was no clear dividing line as yet, there was already

JAMES CONNOLLY - By J. T. MURPHY

SOMEDAY a Marxist must write the life of James Connolly. We shall never get a true appreciation of Connolly's place in Irish History and the revolutionary Socialist movement of Britain and America until someone, armed with the guiding philosophy of his life, has turned it upon his work and appraised his thoughts and actions accordingly. Desmond Ryan has brought together "a record of facts, opinions, and recollections of James Connolly" which will be exceedingly helpful to whoever undertakes the work, but insofar as he attempts to place Connolly, he enters into the same partisan claims which he condemns in others. "One inclines upon the whole" he says, "to define his probable attitude as that of the official Irish Labor Party," begins an argument to justify his claim, and suddenly drops it as, "perhaps, a profitless conjecture." I doubt this. The controversy and speculation have a significance, which, if properly appreciated, would do much to indicate the right line of approach to an understanding of Connolly.

Why the rival claims for the soul of Connolly? Why the quotation and counter quotation to justify the support or non-support of action? Why still move Connolly's own dying exclamation, "The Socialists will never understand why I am here. Does not the answer lie in the fact that Connolly is among the few great figures of the international working class movement which belong to the transition from the epoch of imperialist expansion to the epoch of social revolution, that he felt himself surrounded by reformism, narrow nationalism, doctrinaire Socialism, none of which had been brought face to face with the task of revolution? I think McManus struck the key to the situation when he observed that Connolly was "the one Socialist that he had ever met who judged every public situation or political crisis with an eye upon revolutionary possibilities." Where were the others to be found at that time? Certainly we do not find them in the British Isles, nor America. We are compelled to turn our eyes eastwards and bring him into alignment with the small Bolshevik group led by Lenin. Desmond Ryan says, "Broadly speaking, James Connolly must be classified as a Workers' Republican and Communist. The doctrines and methods that the Russian Revolution has since familiarized, were his. He would certainly have been at one with Lenin in destruction and construction alike." Ryan is right in this, but the trouble is that Ryan himself does not understand Leninism and consequently, cannot apply it to the understanding of Connolly. He does not understand the great changes that were coming in the ranks of Marxists, the cleavage that was imminent when those who had been transforming Marxism into an apology for reformism were to be separated from those who grasped Marxism as the philosophy of revolution. Nor does he understand the difference between those who marched with Lenin under the banner of Communism and those who under the leadership of De Leon, most of whom at least kept much of their revolutionary powdering and saved themselves in the hour of International Crisis from becoming the abject creatures of imperialism, such as Kautzky, Vandervelde, and reformists of the Second International. He writes with a mind which seems to be a long way back amidst the old controversies between nationalism and internationalism, industrial unionism and the ballot box, talking about peaceful periods and war periods. And yet these are only incidentals to an appreciation of Connolly's position. Connolly's place in history is among the heralds of a new epoch and he must be placed and understood accordingly.

Ryan vividly sketches his struggles. Born in Ulster in the same year as Lenin, "Connolly was 'dragged up' like most proletarian boys . . . Of his parents we know little beyond the fact that the father was a laborer . . . In 1880 Connolly's family became exiles and arrived in Edinburgh where his father obtained work as a corporation dustman. James became a printer's devil in the office of the local "Evening News." He was then under legal age, but his employer for a year defeated the law . . ." Then the sack. "But he was lucky enough to find work soon afterwards in a bakery . . . later . . . two years in a mosaic tiling factory. . . . The company of his uncle, an old Fenian, kept vivid in his memory the glamour and agony of the national struggle. Mitchell too, he read, and much Irish history. Brooding, intense, silent, outwardly cold and inwardly aflame, a spirit of adventure called him to new scenes. Leaving Edinburgh at eighteen Connolly was in turn tramp, navvy and peddler, spending a roving and eventful life in different parts of Brittain. He was married in Perth at the age of twenty-one. An accident to his father recalled him to Edinburgh. His parent was permanently disabled and James Connolly took up his work as dustman in the cleansing department of the corporation . . . But many tomes of ancient and modern history had he handled, the revolutionary phases of Irish history in particular. . . Marx, Engels . . . Association with British Socialists, Morris, Hyndman, Leslie . . . Then to Dublin in 1896 as Socialist agiator and to start the Irish Socialist Republican Party and edit its organ, "The Workers' Republic." Revolt against the Boer war, Anti-Jubilee Empire Demonstration . . . writing "Labor in Irish History" . . . representative of the Irish S. P. at the International Social Congress, in 1900. In at the split of the S. D. F. in 1903, the formation of the Socialist Labor Party in line with De Leon, later in the year he departed for America. Back again in 1910. The organization of the I. T. W. U. . . . The great industrial revolt of 1913. The final martyrdom after Easter Week, 1916."

Here was no complacent trade union leader, but a working class warrior with heart aflame. What could be the use of talking about the philosophy of gradualism to this man steeped in revolutionary lore and compelled to do battle at every step. Once the goal of social revolution becomes his consuming aim and he has grasped the Marxist method of readng history, his evolution towards Leninism becomes a certainty as the years sweep us onward towards the great crisis of 1914. His divergence from the Kautskys in the revolutionary purpose. They had no revolutionary purpose but turned Marxism into a fatalism which saw Socialism emerging thru the gradual transformation of capitalism. What to them was a paralysing blow was to Connolly the great opportunity. Ryan's account of the effect of the Imperialist War on Connolly reads like Zinoviev's account of its effect upon Lenin. "His whole being cried out against it and where Lenin called for the transformation of the Imperial War into the Civil War of the Classes, Connolly called the subject nation of Ireland to war upon the Empire.

"We shall continue in season and out of season to teach that 'the far-flung battle line of England is weakest at the point nearest its heart, that Ireland is in that position of tactical advantage that a defeat of England in India, Egypt, the Balkans, or Flanders, would not be so dangerous to the British Empire as conflict of armed forces in Ireland, that the time for Ireland's battle is now, the place for Ireland's Battle is Here."

Both watchwords were fundamentally sound in relation to the war on imperialism. Both men with tireless energy pursued their tasks, but there is a difference in the means of operation. Both agreed in that they must call into operation the sum total of the forces they could muster against the imperialist, but one had a highly developed party as an instrument to gather the forces and maintain the proletarian hegemony, the other had no such revolutionary party understanding the role of the proletariat in a predominantly agricultural country. Lenin was farther ahead than Connolly and with the Bolshevik Party not only led the workers as the vanguard of the mighty revolutionary movement of workers and peasants, but crystalized and expressed the experience that the world should see and hear and read and understand. Connolly had not such a party. He appealed to the I. T. W. U., the citizen army. He led his recruits to the very forefront of the national struggle and by these acts stamped upon the pages of Irish history the role of the proletariat of Ireland in its war of liberation. But, altho he created the impression that he would not hesitate to turn against some of his colleagues in the national war if they would not proceed to carry out the socialist measures for which he fought, I do not find any clear defining of the role of the proletariat or his aims as that of the dictatorship of the proletariat or what part a revolutionary party must take in relation thereto. His deeds proclaim the answer and one feels convinced that had Connolly not been murdered by the Asquith-Henderson combination and had he lived to see the Russian Revolution and the emergence of the Communist International, he would have completed his writings in full accord with the declarations of the Communist International.

It is this incompleteness which gives rise to the claims of partisans. Ryan speaks of his departure from "his original Marxism" when in reality he was manifesting a firmer grip of its esentials in contrast to the formal expression passing in the name of Marxism whether via Kautsky or De Leon. This was the case on more than the struggle of subject nations. He grasped the essentials of working with the peasantry, and of using the co-operatives whilst the followers of De Leon were concentrating on industrial unionism and the ballot box. He learned his industrial unionism in the industrialized countries of England and America, but he had to apply his philosophy in an essentially agricultural country dominated by a powerful nationalist spirit because of its subjection to England. Fearlessly he faced these problems which did not press upon the De Leonists of Britain and America and as he grappled with them he felt the big differences that lay between him and his old associates. That is why he exclaimed, "The socialists will not understand why I am here." Could he have seen the succeeding years welcomed the Russian Revolution and felt the quaking foundations of capitalism, he would also have heard an answering cry. The revolutionary Socialists do understand and greet James Connolly as one of the valiant few who by their deeds rescued Marxism from sterility and led the way into the epoch of social revolution. J. T. Murphy.

THE WORKERS' FLAG

Unfurl our banner to the breeze
On mountain heights and distant seas;
Where the poor are trodden down
In the country and the town;
Where the children toil all day,
Robbed of sunshine and of play;
Where our sisters earn their bread
In work from which all joy has fled;
Where our brothers give their life
For masters' gain, in bloody strife.

It shall challenge tyrant wrong;
It shall make the weak, the strong;
It shall clasp in brotherhood
Men of every race and blood.

'Tis the flag whose gleaming red
Strikes the workers' foes with dread;
'Tis our flag, we workers, here;
Rise and greet it with a cheer.

James H. Dolsen.

An Italian Communist Daily

By Antonio Presi.

THE battle initiated by the Italian Federation for an Italian Communist daily in America is near its triumph. It was a hard, formidable battle.

We were like a little group of sailors fighting in a terrible storm at sea. A desperate fight.

We possessed only the indomitable determination to arrive at the goal, to give to the glorious and immortal Communist International a new fighting flag, a new impregnable trench defended by a few ardent Communist soldiers.

Only a few months ago our "Alba Nuova" started to come out every week. The atmosphere which surrounded us was full of antagonism, hatred, aversion. But we never cared. The Communist soldiers cannot fear ts enemies; we know them very well. Oportunists, reformists so-called, libertarians of the Makhno type, in- be the center of the anti-Fascist strug- dustrialists, all of them with their publications, launched a relentless offensive against the principle which we stood for. But we never shrank before the rattle snake. We remained immovable, like a rock of granite. We followed our course.

Today the sympathies of the Italian workers are with us, the victory of establishing a daily paper shows that we were right. Those who assail us belong to the category of the impotent, the pusillanimous, good only to fight against the workers' cause rather than the capitalist regime. For more than a quarter of a century that element, because of its sectarian and narrow mind in the class struggle, has continuously divided the workers into various factions. Not in the name of a party, an ideal, a principle, but for their own personal ambition. And for this only reason the Italian working class in America, numerous as it is, is not yet one of the main factors in the organized labor movement of this country today.

And when we look over this great army of more than 3,500,000 workers speaking our language, without a daily paper, without any labor institution, we know how great was the damage done by this gang of demagogues dressed up in the regalia of "proletarian saviors." It is for this reason that our Federation decided to concentrate its main forces to achieve the realization of a daily paper, a paper which can reach the toiling masses and teach them the Communist principles, give them an ideal to defend, to propagate, to realize.

Tomorrow we know what will be the result of the propaganda for the daily paper. We know that thousands of working men and working-women will understand their duty in the great field of the class struggle.

Our paper will be a great weapon against the Fascist movement, it will gle in this country among the Italian working class. And besides that it will be a great help to the American workers because it will fight to dissipate racial and national hatred between the workers of the world, so as to eliminate the ignominous nationalistic teachings so dangerous to the working class interests. Only the enemies of the workers, Americans or Italians, can tremble before this new step made by the workers toward their emancipation; but the working class all over the world can sing the hymn of joy in this movement, because it shows that Fascism cannot succeed in crushing the hope for a new day of the workers of Italy.

Yes, the publication of "Il Lavoratore" is the beginning of the new and triumphant resurrection of the Italian proletariat. The day will come when we will celebrate the downfall of Mussolini and his pretorian army to give birth to the Italian Soviet Republic. It is inevitable. The Italian proletariat is still marching.

FASCISM A MENACE - - By Daniel Horsley

THE need of sounding a warning to the workers who have participated in the revolt in Ireland, was never more acute than the present moment. The issue of 1916 has been clearly forgotten, if we are to assume the last reports on education are true. There is a strong tendency toward the program of Mussolini in the boosting of his educational program. Perhaps traditions of heroic feats crowds out the memories of the basis of the revolt of 1916. It would be mor appropriate if they would read the educational program of Connolly and compare it with that of this military butcher who has only autocracy as the basis of his campaign.

All thru the struggle for Irish freedom has been written indelibly, "Land and industries for the people." And the nationalist freedom of the workers, even in a political sense, this must be insecure and incomplete until they wrest from the governing classes the possession of the land and the instruments of wealth production. Labor must then fashion its weapon of attack or else submit to the will of the capitalist state.

Fascism.

Fascism first raised its head in March, 1919. The Fascisti were ex-service men, elements that remained hostile to the Labor movement. The State was impoverished by the war and the proletarian element, due to unemployment, became a danger to its existence. Mussolini's cry of "Restoration of the Authority of the State" was raised. Co-operating with the State, they succeeded in smashing the trades unions and without mercy crushing out the lives of the revolutionary workers. It was the crucible which molded together the reactionary elements, and with that power controlled the STATE. They abolished the political apparatus and set up a Dictatorship. Everything was subjected to this discipline, except the bourgeois, who still maintained the rights of private ownership of the industries. The Fascisti organized into flying squadrons, began their work of suppression.

An article published in the Avanti on the 2th of November, entitled, "From Tuscana" excellently describes the situation. This article says that the activity of the Fascisti in the towns has quieted down but continues in the rural districts. From the 1st of December, the position tends to become worse and acts of Fascisti violence increase in number. Fascisti again seize municipal and trades union premises, break up and disperse the management bodies (as in Lezzias) raid, burn and destroy (Tore, Annunziato, Collari, Pola, etc.), attack the workers, beat them to death and even kill them. (The worse case that of Turin).

Communists are seized in their places of employment, taken in automobiles and killed on the outskirts of the town. Others are killed in their homes. Recently, however, not only have the Communists, Anarchists and Socialists become objects of the attack. In many places the Fascisti attacked Republicans and workers belonging to the Populist Party. In Naples they raided and broke up the editorial offices of two Populist papers etc., violence against the workers for the benefit of the capitalist class, to maintain the rights of private ownership and control of the state.

Restoration.

Mussolini was faced with the problem of restoration. While the declaration of the Irish programme calls for the ownership and equal rights to all, Mussolini's object was the building up of the industries and turning them over to private owners. In his speech at the First Fascist Congress, Mussolini made it quite plain whom Fascism was to serve. We will quote a few extracts from his speech: "We are proud of the fact that we and no others in 1915 were the first to raise the serious problem—War or a Republic. The fact that Italy, in conjunction with a few other states is today taking part in the Washington Conference, where the fate of the world is being discussed is due to the services of the interventionists of 1915."

"On the economic question we are liberal in the class sense of the word. If it were possible, I would return the railways, the postal system, telegraph, etc., to private hands. Fascism is the fighting army of the Italian industrial capitalism. Its task is not only to combat the "Bolshevik Menace" but to solve the restoration of the bourgeois economic system."

When the late Laurence Ginnell was in Washington and explained what kind of a Republic they wanted in Ireland, a co-operative republic, did they accept the delegates from Ireland around the conference table at the time they invited the Fascists to take part? They made it known very plainly that they did not believe in a cooperative republic, but were willing to have anyone who could be used to prop up this tottering system of anarchy and violence.

Where do we find in any of the speeches of the leaders of the 1916 revolt that it was fought to wrest Ireland from English imperialist robbers only to hand it over to other capitalists?

Fascism is the antithesis of republican principles.

Why Fascism Triumphed.

Fascism was not a lone victory of arms. The passivity of the workers and the treacherous policy of the so-called revolutionary elements led the workers in general into the yoke of industrial slavery. The movement in Ireland seems to be moving toward this same condition. At present there is no effort to cement the forces of labor with the large mass of peasants. That is a very necessary thing. The submerging of labor demands to the upbuilding of the capitalist state has created a docile movement. Parliamentarism is in its embryonic stage but thanks to the chaotic condition of the capitalist system, it will soon be obsolete. When this does occur, it will be the advent of a new power, either Fascism or a workers' and peasants' control. "Less philosophizing and more fighting along the lines of the class war." Internal dissensions of personal character have clouded the issue of class solidarity. The political forces tend more and more to solidify their position. There is on the surface a split but when the class position becomes more clear, the workers will see their organizations subjected to the will of the Fascist state. We must realize that social laws for the benefit of the workers can only be applied by men who understand, and such leaders are not found outside of the revolutionary ranks. Traditions long enough cherished will be swept into the ash can of history, to be replaced by the Octopus of Force to retain their ill-gotten gains.

A Comparison.

There have been many examples in the countries of Europe, to show what depths the capitalist will stoop to defend their power.

Mussolini is their chief representive, and embodies all of the qualities as an example for others to follow. Beware of those who boost his program, their democracy is a sham, whether they carry the name of republican or sinn fein.

Connolly in the cold dark days of his poverty, planned the lighting of the torch in the glow of which so many aleged Irish revolutionists saw their way to fame and power and many alleged Irish revolutionists saw the republic into the hands of Ireland's historic foe. Connolly, too, made the supreme sacrifice. He sealed his sincerity and abolished the stigma they sought to fasten onto the labor movement.

There appears to be a widespread and marked disposition to deny James Connolly his proper place in the historic Irish struggle, but the time will prove that he was the most capable and brilliant spokesman for Ireland and her cause. No heirarchy was needed to bolster up his words and deeds.

Mussolini defends only those who have made the world a sething hell, and blesses it with the prayers of vultures.

Labor in Ireland must organize to fight this propaganda wherever it raises its head. Down with Fascism!

Up with Communism, the hope of the Irish workers and the world's working class.

Playthings of Fashionable Society

By H. Sidney Bloomfield

A big brick building that stands on a hill in one of the principal cities of the Eastern part of the country, houses many little boys and girls that have no fathers or mothers—some of them have neither. A group of prominent business men—with much fuss and ceremony—raise money with which to pay for the upkeep of the building and for the food, clothes and general welfare of the children.

THESE rich men own factories and stores wherein men and women and boys and girls toil long hours at hard and dreary work for which they get little pay and lots of abuse . . . . while the business men reap the profits from the labor of their slaves.

AT a meeting one night, these business men decided to raise more money as the funds were getting low. They decided to stage a Fashion show, to which many people would come. Most of these business men were manufacturers of women's cloaks, suits, dresses and so forth—some of them were retail storekeepers in the same line.

AGREEMENT upon a fashion show was unanimous. For, as each one reasoned to himself, "I have an opportunity to display the products of my shop and create a demand for my goods, I'll have an advertisement inserted in the program which will also boost my business." The retail shopkeepers reasoned likewise.

THE ball-room of the most exclusive hotel in the city was secured for three days and nights, and was filled to capacity at every exhibition to which many hundreds of women, young and old flocked. There were all sorts of women present. Some wore gowns that rivaled those on display. Other women and young ladies wore gowns of mediocre style and quality.

Many ladies that were present bought their gowns on the instalment plan; some spent every cent they could get together, while some bought their gowns without any intention of ever paying for them. Still other ladies induced their gentlemen admirers to foot the bill for the privilege of being allowed to keep their company.

ALMOST every lady had her face decorated with rouge, paint, powder, etc., which ranged from mild soft-brown, copper, flesh and brunette colors to the exciting, bold carmines, reds and vermillions. An Indian, in full war dress and colors would feel cheap at this gathering. These women are "Society Ladies." Millions of dollars are spent by these women on just such gatherings, balls, card games, tea-parties, operas, etc., and millions of dollars are spent by shopkeepers and manufacturers on colored and alluring advertising in the society sections of the Sunday newspapers, magazines, etc. The newspapers devote many pages and entire sections in their daily and Sunday issues and have staffs that cater to these "select people."

THE stage setting was in black, with Japanese jars and antique chairs, and gilded pedestals upon which were vases with flowers. Mellow lights illuminated the stage, and glaring spotlight played upon it. The sight was overwhelming. Six Mannikins, clothed in the most exquisite gowns strolled leisurely up and down the stage. It is hard to describe the beautiful garments that were displayed—silks, satins and brocades; evening gowns and street dresses, opera cloaks and wraps and bridal gowns of shimmering silks and pointed lace—such extravagance in the line of clothes I never saw before.

THE women craned their necks to view the material and the style—a gorgeous, glittering spectacle of artistic creations that cost thousands and thousands of dollars. These society ladies, vanity seekers, these small social moths—insects that eat cloth, were not interesting to me as were the six models who paraded upon the stage, and walked along the aisles, to the accompaniment of slow, dreamy music, gliding and turning, with elegance and dignity, displaying every line of the gowns and suits that gave evidence of the highest skill—the workers that made them were artists.

THESE models are daughters of poor parents and got the jobs as "display racks" because they were chosen from among several hundred girls that applied in answer to the "help wanted" advertisement in the great metropolitan newspaper. They are poor working girls that spend every cent they get hold of to keep looking "beautiful." They were weighed, measured and judged by "beauty experts" just as are dogs and horses before entering the show. These working girls, with beautiful faces and delicate bodies do not own the gowns and dresses that fit them so charmingly.

THESE Mannikins display the wares that were made by the exploited shop girls in some sweat-shop so that the fashionable society women may be attracted and induced to purchase them at the department stores and the cloak and suit shops. These girls have been trained to wear such artistic creations, to walk correctly, to carry their bodies to the accompaniment of the music, and to twist and turn so as to give the gowns the best effect.

SUCH mannikins are genuine tragedians playing a drama with a fatal ending. They are not mere "characters" of the play, but genuine victims of the hypocrisy of capitalist society. For a few dollars a day, these models are the center of attraction wearing the marvelous creations of their sisters, whose sweat and blood, aye, whose very lives are embodied within them . . . . . only to have to take them off at the end of the show and put on their graceful bodies their customary every-day clothes. Only the rich can afford to clothe their wives and daughters in the same attire as is worn by the mannikin on the stage. Only by selling herself to a wealthy man can the model expect to continue wearing such expensive gowns uninterruptedly. Such is the mockery of capitalist society.

HUMAN flesh and blood is the center of attraction and made sport of in order to collect money for the care of orphans. And who knows but what these very mannikins are themselves the remnants of what was once a home and family. Oh! how oppressive and corrupt is the atmosphere at the charity fashion show. Children, innocent victims of capitalist charity. Working girls, the playthings of "fashionable society"—for the sake of charity.

CAPITALIST society is a fake—it is false, rotten and cruel. Charity is the plaything of capitalists at the expense of destitute and suffering children and exploited wage-earners. To abolish charity means the abolition of the conditions that kill the fathers and mothers and leave their children in the hands of the murderers that have their hands stained with blood. Charity is the effect of this diseased capitalist system. It is the result of brutal exploitation. The capitalists, like blood-suckers delight in giving as one delights in feeding a puppy from the hand. The capitalist delights in seeing his vassals cringe and crawl and bow before him in grateful thanks for the crumbs he so charitably gives them.

Unite! Young Workers, for the abolition of capitalism, the curse of humanity.

Pacifism In The Universities

By ELSA BLOCK.

A SENSATION is sweeping the land—or sweeping the newspaper presses. Bolshevism is entering the schools! The Star-spangled Banner is being dragged in the mud of systematic slackerism! Pacifism is eating at the heart of the nation.

SO says the press of America.

THE phenomenon of pacifism is, in fact, to be found in the American universities. It is not what the newspapers say it is. It is not Bolshevism—God save the mark! But it is a serious phenomenon, and whatever weak and watery futility there may be in the pacifism theory, the phenomenon of a wide-spread pacifist movement, as a revolt against the great military caste system which is now the dream of the American imperialist, cannot escape the serious consideration of American Communists.

PACIFISM, in all of its pitiful futility and at the same time in all its significance as a social phenomenon of the time and place, is well shown in the findings of the student conference of Northwestern university, held on February 5 and 6. The report of the findings of the conference is worth publishing as a whole:

THE Northwestern Student Conference was composed of 147 representative students of the University.

The findings were voted on at the last meeting of the conference.

WAR.

CONSENSUS OF OPINION: We should abolish in ourselves the attitudes that make for war; such as hatred, fear, suspicion, race prejudice and rivalry.

Propositions voted on:

1. We believe that the United States should join the League of Nations. Passed by 80 votes.

2. We believe that the United States should enter the World Court. Passed by 96 votes.

3. We believe education which will develop international thinking should be encouraged. Passed unanimously.

4. A. That a policy of preparedness should be supported. Voted down by 94.

B. That we as individuals, refuse to participate in another war. Voted down by 58. 38 students in favor.

THE ECONOMIC ORDER.

CONCENSUS OF OPINION: The standard by which the social order is to be judged is whether or not it provides a means for every man to be reasonably happy in his work. The present order does not provide happiness or even the barest necessities for many. The evils of such a system would perhaps, be remedied by an adjustment to include these suggestions:

1. Production and natural resources for use and not for profit.

2. Workers should do work attractive to them; an additional remuneration should be given for those tasks that are unattractive.

3. Human values should be recognized above efficiency in production.

4. Every able-bodied worker should be employed.

5. There should be a fair division of profits and an equality of opportunity.

Propositions voted on:

1. The student should realize his social obligation to all his fellowmen who have made possible his education. Adopted by a unanimous vote.

a. This realization should be evidenced in application to his work at school.

b. It should also be evidenced in preparation to help those who by their labor for wages, have made possible profit enough for other men to endow a University.

2. The student should make an effort to get information that will enable him to appreciate his social responsibility. Adopted by a unanimous vote.

a. By insisting in the class-room on a fair presentation of both sides of controversial questions; such as History, Economics, and Social Sciences.

b. By making an attempt to get all the information available on both sides of such question.

3. Some students believe that their inability to get both sides of a controversial question is due to three things, and that they therefore have a responsibility to protest against those things, which are:

a. (Protest against) Trustee control that says what a student may and may not study. Adopted by a vote of 82.

b. (Protest against) Endowment by great accumulations of capital when such accumulations result from exploitation of the workers. Adopted by a vote of 56.

c. (Protest against) Control which prevents a faculty member from expressing his own opinions. Adopted unanimously.

RACE RELATIONS

CONCENSUS OF QUESTION: All races should have equality of opportunity. At present ,equality of opportunity does not exist as is evidenced in some cases by

a. Unequal per capita public expenditure of education.

b. Unequal representation in student affairs.

c. Discrimination against certain races in athletic oportunity. The situation should be changed to allow all races equality of opportunity.

Proposition voted on: What does equality of opportunity mean?

1. There should be parallel development of the races, each race keeping to itself, yet each assisting the other in its development. Voted down by 70.

2. There should be complete intermingling of the races, including social intermingling. Adopted by 72 votes.

3. There should be intermingling in a casual and limited way, but not complete intermingling (no social intermingling). Voted down by 63.

If the position taken by these "pacifist" students could be regarded as reflecting a static condition, the American Teapot Dome oligarchy need not be worried. For the students, with all their emotionalism, have here given a one hundred per cent endorsement of the greatest and most ambitious scheme that the two-fisted militarists have ever tried—the League of Nations. Their rebellion against such evils as unemployment and racial inequalities is as helpless and unconstructive as it is obviously sincere.

THE publicity given this comic-opera bolshevism is a perfect example of how the telescope of modern journalism change details into stupendous events. By means of forced draft news stories and strained editorials, careless remarks have been turned into utterances pregnant with impending catastrophe to the respectable proprietor class of the world. Irritated youngsters have become the generals of a world revolution.

UNTIL policy dictated a need for news of this kind, the phenomenon of pacifism went unnoticed. Then, by a process of artificial inflation, it was made to assume an importance and a character entirely different from its real significance.

PACIFIST feeling among the students of our middle-western universities is not a sudden growth. Had the American newspapers been genuinely interested in the state of public opinion, they would have found in the student activities of the past year ample excuse for a display of patriotic indignation. But such matter as the attendance of members of the Young Workers League at the student conference at Waukegan last June, or the forcible injection of pacifist discussion into the program of the student conference at Indianapolis during Christmas week or the bitter attacks of Sherwood Eddy, before a body of students, on the Ku Klux Klan, the American Legion, and militarism—all these events the metropolitan press passed over without comment, or else dismissed with a brief summary. And yet these matters were certainly as "treasonable" as those which later provoked such heated discussion.

THEN came the conference of February 5 and 6, out of which the "pacifist-bolshevik revolution" has been made with printer's ink. The event received little attention from the press. The declaration of thirty-eight of the students that they would "refuse to participate in another war" was treated, it is true, with indignation, but it was the amused indignation that is usually felt for a cause conceded to be hopeless.

SO it happened that when the meeting occurred which first aroused alarm—the meeting at which John R. Fletcher, conscientious objector and political prisoner of three different countries—was to address the Liberal League of Northwestern, not a single reporter from the big metropolitan newspapers was present. The newspapers simply did not have their eyes on the situation. The meeting received notice only accidentally, thru the interest of a student reporter of the militarist camp. The story was given the Chicago Herald-Examiner in garbled form, and from then on no pacifist uterance was too innocuous to receive first place in the news.

THE reason for this sudden reversal of news values is not far to seek. The pacifist demonstration added just that touch of dramatic relief so badly needed by the newspapers in the middle of February. The investigation into the Teapot Dome scandal was becoming a matter of concern to political leaders. It was assuming the aspect of something more serious than a public melodrama, graphic enough to supply material for clever cartoons and vivid enough to command a strained attention. People were beginning to grasp the tremendous implications of the thing. Radical newspapers were making capital of it. And election time was drawing near.

WHILE pacifism was making a dramatic entrance, the Senate investigations were being stealthily bundled out of the back door. The newspapers, have gradually relegated them from the right to the left-hand columns, from the first to the inside pages. At this rate, it is probable that within a few weeks we shall begin to wonder mildly what became of the whole affair.

AND would it be rash to suggest that another, and a more insidious motive actuated the press? Mexican politics has of late been turning rapid somersaults. Subsidized revolutions and counter-revolutions, tending to weaken the Mexican government to an extent that would "justify" the "intervention" of the United States; the establishment of claims in Mexico by capitalists whose business methods have received too much unsavory notice to need description; the nullification of Mexican laws inimical to American interests—these and other factors point to Mexico as the next victim of American imperialism.

IN such a crisis, a favorable state of public opinion is a factor of no mean importance. Once the newspapers had attracted the proper attention to the pacifist movement, they took care to bracket it with other activities against which they wished to arouse popular indignation. Pacifists became the "tools of the Third International," entrusted with the disarming of capitalist nations so that the Soviet government of Russia might be in a position to help the proletariat take over state power unhampered!

BECAUSE pacifism is not a definite economic remedy for the evils of capitalism, but simply a primitive reaction to an immediate phase of capitalist life, the union of pacifism and communism is a marriage of incompatibles. The action of these students shows, certainly, a groping in the direction of revolt which, however blind, is still encouraging. But pacifist activity, no matter how sincere, is hardly revolutionary. It is really an exasperated rebellion against an obvious evil—a perfect example of emotionalism untroubled by intelligent analysis. What pacifists seem alone to have grasped is the single fact that economic rivalry is the cause of war. In such a cause they refuse to fight. Of what will come after disarmament—of this they know nothing. Question them as to present methods and ultimate results, and you will find an utter lack of comprehension. These students have been sacrificing themselves to uphold, not a definite economic policy, but the right to a state of normal indignation.

BEYOND a state of precarious peace, the pacifist hope for nothing. The mere cessation of war is to him the final goal. To the Communist, the destruction of the means whereby capitalism exists is merely a method with a further end in view. Communism is more than a negation of capitalism. It is a definite economic plan proposing a definite economic system to be adopted in place of the present one.

CARRIED to its logical conclusion, pacifism means a policy of nonresistance in the class struggle as well as in international wars. The Communists, so bitter an opponent of wars in which the proletariat of one nation fights the proletariat of another nation so that their masters may obtain more power, is an equally militant partisan in a war that transcends national boundries. It is all very well for the pacifist to argue that social and economic equality should be attained by peaceful means. The fact remains that social and economic equality cannot be so attained. Where pacifism would hold water in a sieve by attempting the cure of economic ills with sentiment, the Communist realizes that the only cure for economic ills is militant economic. . . .

Revival of Alien Sedition Laws

By J. RAMIREZ.

APPARENTLY "Silent Cal" Coolidge does not know his American history very well. And it is perhaps best for his peace of mind. Otherwise he might see what happened 74 years ago to John Adams, the second President of the United States, of what is going to happen to him.

Adams was like Coolidge in many ways, altho a far bigger man from whatever angle you look at him. Like Coolidge, he was a tool of the moneyed interests. He was almost as taciturn as "Silent Cal," and he had the same mean-looking mouth.

In the year 1798, the reactionary Adams Administration forced thru Congress a series of laws known as the Alien Sedition Acts. These measures looked so much like our present-day "Criminal Syndicalist laws" and "Anti-Alien bills" that it is clear they belong to the same family tree. Two years later, the Adams Administration fell with a crash, dragging down the whole bloated structure of "Federalism" with it. Thomas Jefferson and the "Democratis-Republicans" were swept into power on the crest of what has become famous in American history as "the great Democratic revolution of 1800." Jefferson's principal slogan was: "Down with the Alien and Sedition Acts!" and the American people rallied to this slogan en masse, notwithstanding the lying propaganda of the kept press of the day. There were other important, and perhaps more fundamental, conditions in Jefferson's victory over the Federalists, but the Alien and Sedition Acts were certainly a potent factor.

The Federalists were the Sinclairs and Denbys and Senator Falls of President Adams' day. They represented (and practiced) "high finance." They stood for what Adams described as government by "the educated and propertied few." They had no faith in the common people. The Federalist Party ruled the country from the establishment of the Constitution to the so-called Jeffersonian revolution of 1800.

"The predominance of the Federalists in Congress, and in the country," says the noted historian J. S. Bassett, "suggested to the leaders of the Party that they might do what they pleased. 'It was a temptation of power to which the wisest of them yielded.' Their idea that government should be in the hands of the capable classes might now, for the first time in the history of the new government, be put into operation."

They planned a concerted attack against the farming and poorer urban classes and, naturally, they did not fail to make use of the bogeyman of "un-Americanism" to further their ~~dark~~, aristocratic, un-American, purposes.

Restrictive laws against the workers and farmers ~~always~~ seem to go hand in hand with special legislation against the foreign-born. The association is not accidental. A measure which might be too unpopular if labelled frankly "anti-labor" may win a certain degree of acceptance when fixed up as "anti-alien." No "anti-alien laws" have ever been passed which applied to Wall Street manipulators or the agents of capitalism in general.

First the Federalists took up the question of naturalization. Previous laws had given this privilege to aliens resident in the country 5 years. It was now enacted that foreigners who wanted to become citizens would have to prove they had been in the country 14 years, and would have to make a declaration of intention 5 years before sending in their final application.

By means of the vicious Alien Acts, the foreign-born masses were discriminated against in many ways. "Selective immigration" was proclaimed, as well as other similar schemes that are being revived now.

There was also the Sedition Act. "The Sedition Act," says Bassett, "was intended to deal with citizens or aliens who, too severely criticized the government." Like the Alien Acts, it originated in the Senate, where Federalism was rampant.

In reading over John Adams' Sedition Act, one is struck by the startling resemblance to the Michigan "Criminal Syndicalist" Law, under which W. Z. Foster and Charles E. Ruthenberg have been persecuted—and, indeed, to many other State Criminal Syndicalism Laws thruout the country. In its final shape, it made it a high misdemeanor "unlawfully to combine and conspire" or "to commit, advise, or attempt to procure any insurrection and riot, or unlawful assembly, or combination."

Under such a law, the powers that be could jail a class-conscious worker for almost anything—which is also the case under our contemporary assortment of Criminal Syndicalist laws. Ten persons, all of whom of course, belonged to an opposition party, were tried and convicted under the Sedition Act. Many others were indicted but not tried. The political effect of these cases, was to make popular martyrs of those whom the government was persecuting. The state legislators of Kentucky and Virginia passed strong resolutions of protests, the Kentucky Legislature declaring that it would refuse to recognize the law. On all sides, the abhorrent Alien and Sedition Acts were denounced as un-constitutional and as a violation of the elementary rights of free speech and free assembly. Indignation among the enraged people ran high.

The Federalist Party tried to destroy the effect of the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions by insinuating that they were all part of a French plot—the French plot theory being an expedient which the adroit Federalists could employ on any occasion. But, Bassett tells us, "The imputation of a French plot could not be sustained by the Federalists. The public realized that the issue was the Alien and Sedition Laws and back of them was the consolidating tendency of Federalism."

The results were seen in the outcome of the election of 1800.

"Silent Cal" Coolidge is in high favor in the Republican Party today. He is without peer, as a servant of Wall Street and consequently, he is without peer as candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. He has given his approval to Mr. Johnson's "Alien Bill" and has expressed himself as decidedly pleased with Mr. Sterling's "Sedition Bill." It was as a leading member of his Cabinet that the underworld character, Harry M. Daugherty planned his brutal raid on the convention of the Communist Party in Berrien County, Michigan, indicting Foster, Ruthenberg, Dunne and 29 associates. Ruthenberg's appeal, which is being financed by the Labor Defense Council, will soon be heard.

For precisely the same reasons that the leaders of the Republican Party are so unanimously back of Coolidge for President, the workers and poor farmers are solidly against him. The toiling masses of today are no less determined to fight for the elementary rights of free speech and free assembly than their ancestors were in 1800; they will refuse to allow their unions to be weakened by a "selective immigration" which would "select" those docile workers making good scabs, and exclude all those who might add to the fighting power of the American labor movement.

There may well be a "revolution of 1924" comparable to "the great democratic revolution" which put an end to Federalism. I do not, of course, refer to a thorogoing revolution, in the sense of a complete overturn of society; Jefferson's triumph in 1800 was not that either. Nor do I wish to draw any serious parallel between 1800 and 1924, except the obvious one of the Alien and Sedition Acts—altho other points of similarity might well be urged.

The anti-alien (Johnson) and anti-labor (Sterling) bills before Congress typify the present period of Wall Street rule. They are not specifically Coolidge's, for they follow on the heels of the Espionage and Criminal Syndicalist Laws of Woodrow Wilson's term. Opposition to the resurrected Alien and Sedition Acts heralds the downfall of Republicans and Democrats alike. Already the Farmer-Labor forces are forming everywhere.

MAY DAY, 1924 - -

By ERNST ETTLINGER.

ONCE more May day is here. Once more the earth will tremble with the sound of the march of the working masses all over the world. May Day is here. The Workers' Day of Freedom has come. May Day, what hope it brings forth, how great is its significance. The day of the revolutionary working class the world over. From China to Russia, from America to the farthermost corner of Europe, May Day will see the proletariat marching with its slogan, "Down with International Capitalism," "Up with the rule of the Workers."

The working masses of Europe, Asia and America are completely under the heel of international capitalism which is grinding them down to lower levels. The capitalist structure has collapsed economically and is only able to exist by the naked suppression of the workers, and forcing them to accept living conditions which means for them a life of starvation and misery.

Capitalism which slaughtered ten millions of workers in the last world war, which made of European civilization a holecust of misery and which has released all the forces of violence against the masses, is now endeavoring to saddle the cost of the war upon the back of the workers. By increasing hours and cutting wages in all directions, it hopes to increase the exploitation of the workers and wring from them profits in ever greater volume. In order to do this it is trying to smash the unions, the organizations of the workers which have been built up by so much struggle and sacrifice.

Alll of the illusions of democracy are now gone. Democracy which could be used to delude the workers during the days of the peaceful development of capitalism now no longer functions as the working masses are becoming ever more conscious of their destiny. Gone is all the talk of peace, democracy, freedom. The capitalist classes have only one message for the workers and that is armed force to break any resistance to their program.

Under the banner of fascism an orgy of violence and terrorism is directed against the masses in every country with the object of breaking all resistance and completely subjugate them to the capitalist program. That is the meaning of the Dawes report, which is so heartily supported by the copitalist press. This report which has so readily been approved by the liberals and the yellow socialists the world over, the traitors who have so long deceived the workers is nothing but a program to force the German workers to greater exploitation so that they will provide not only profit for German capitalism but also pay reparations to the Allies. If the German working class can be smashed politically and their organizations annihilated, a great step towards the enslavement of the world working class will have been achieved.

The White Terror is triumphant and reigns supreme over the fallen body of the proletariat. In Germany, Finland, Roumania, Poland, Italy, Spain, Hungary, Greece, and other European countries, the naked dictatorship of the capitalist class is openly exercised crushing every attempt of the workers to maintain their conditions. The social democrats, the heroes of the Second International, as well as the trade union bureaucrats, have openly sold out to the capitalist class. In spite of the misery of the masses, in spite of their poverty and wretchedness, they openly preach submission to the capitalist regime, and crush any attempt to organize resistance.

Yes, the White Terror is supreme at least on the surface, but the workers are stirring everywhere and are again beginning to fight the capitalist class openly. A new wave of militancy is sweeping the world, and the working class is once more preparing its forces for battle.

In Great Britain mass strikes swept the country, which have been partially successful and which were prevented from realizing their full demand by the action of the trade union leaders and the Labor Party. In Europe and America the ferment is at work, and the masses are desperately trying to unite forces against the common enemy.

With the approach of May Day, the workers are once more showing their militancy and their determination to overthrow capitalism. May Day 1924 in spite of the White Terror and reaction raging spells hope to the workers and death to the capitalist dictatorship.

In one country, however, there will be a May Day different from that of onv other country, a day of rejoicing, a day of real celebration. In Russia there will be a May Day which will symbolize all the hopes of the workers the world over. May Day this year will find Russia well on the road of economic reconstruction. When the Russian workers and peasants celebrate this year, they will, with pride be able to point out to the world their achievements, and how in spite of suffering and sacrifice they are laying down the foundation for the Communist society. Russia having smashed capitalism is now turning all her energy to build up her economic system and raise the material well being of the masses. In spite of having no aid from the outside, Russia is today the most stable country in Europe, and the only one where the position of the workers is constantly becoming better. Yes, there will be great demonstrations in Russia this year, demonstrations symbolizing the achievements of the past year as well as embodying the hopes of the future. Great meetings will take place in that country pledging the energy and strength of the Russian workers to aid the revolutionary workers the world over in their struggle against capitalism.

HERALD COMMUNE
Dairy and Poultry Enterprise on a Collective Basis to be established in Soviet Russia.
Our delegates are in Russia now to arrange for a suitable farm for this Commune.
Competent workers of the various trades may join us now, as the first group is expected to leave soon.
We meet every second and fourth Sunday at 3 P. M. at the Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia, 1902 W. Division St., 2nd floor, Chicago.

Foster's Reply To Nearing

IN this article Comrade William Z. Foster takes issue with Scott Nearing on the question of policies and tactics to be pursued by the Workers Party. It is a reply to an article by Nearing published in this magazine Saturday, May 10th, 1924.

Our readers will do well to carefully examine and study the two points of view expressed by Nearing and Foster respectively, because the matter dealt with in these articles are of supreme importance to the revolutionary movement of the American workers.—Editor.

DEAR COMRADE NEARING:—I must take issue flatly and fundamentally with practically all the points developed by you in your letter of Jan. 28th relative to the policies of the Workers Party and the Trade Union Educational League. As I understand the situation, your analysis of social conditions is faulty, your facts are inaccurate, and your conclusions are wrong. The four main points you would establish, and which I shall consider one by one, seem to be about as follows:

1. There is no revolutionary sentiment among the working masses of this country, save in a few localities and among the foreign-born workers.

2. The reactionary state of the labor movement, especially as it is expressed in trade union conventions, is a true reflection of the state of mind of the broad rank and file of labor.

3. The militant program of the W. P. and T. U. E. L., carrying with it an active participation in all the struggles of the workers, is not only wrong in principle and futile in operation, but also actually harmful to the left-wing movement in general.

4. The program of the left-wing should not be to plunge into the workers' struggles but to carry on a careful and systematic campaign of educating and organizing the scanty revolutionary forces in preparation for the struggles of the future.

1. The weakness of your whole conception is that it is based upon the false assumption that there is no considerable mass revolutionary sentiment in this country. Thruout your letter, and as the very heart of your tactical considerations, you estimate the body of revolutionary sentiment as being expressed solely by the small number of conscious, clear-sighted, revolutionaries. You overlook completely the revolutionary significance of the prevailing discontent among the working masses. And by ignoring this tremendous factor you naturally draw conclusions which are valueless for our movement.

UNDENIABLY there is a great volume of discontent among the masses of American workers and farmers. This arises inevitably out of the clash of class interests within the frame of capitalism. This discontent, it is true, is mostly unconscious, blind, stupid, timid, and easily misled. But it is essentially revolutionary, nevertheless. It is the raw stuff of which revolutions are made. Revolutions are not brought about by the type of clear-sighted revolutionists that you have in mind, but by stupid masses who are goaded to desperate revolt by the pressure of social conditions, and who are led by straight-thinking revolutionaries who are able to direct the storm intelligently against capitalism. Never mind how stupid the mass discontent now is in America; never mind if the workers think, as you say they do, that "times will pick up again under the present system." The unrest is basically revolutionary, notwithstanding. Capitalism cannot allay this discontent by granting the demands of the exploited. It must increase in volume, intensity, and intelligence until finally it culminates in the revolution. You make a fundamental error when you conclude that the only revolutionarw discontent is that of the handful of class conscious militants, and when you ignore the far greater factor, the general discontent of the masses.

THE W. P. and the T. U. E. L. do not assume that there exists a large body of consciously revolutionary sentiment. On the contrary they merely "assume" the unquestionable, deep (even if vague) discontent of the masses. They know that the real function of the conscious left-wing is to educate, organize, intensify, discipline, and direct this discontent until it develops sufficient clarity, volume, and militancy to precipitate the final struggle with capitalism. You say that radical sentiment must be created by education, while we add to this that above all it must be developed out of the existing mass discontent. Your conception that the conscious elements are the only revolutionary force leads straight to the isolation of our movement and to its degeneration into a studious, sterile, cloistered Communist sect. The W. P. and T. U. E. L. conception, in direct contradiction to yours, makes inevitably for a broad mass movement of revolt and for an increasing participation in the ever-widening, ever-deepening class struggle; it makes for a real fighting Communist movement.

2. In your letter, as part of your general case that there is no real mass revolutionary discontent in this country, you make the rash assertion that the rank and file of the unions are as reactionary as their leaders. You even go so far as to say that Gompers is probably to the left of the general mass of unionists. Then, to support this broad contention, you cite the indifference of the organized masses at the expulsion of Wm. F. Dunne, the rejection of amalgamation and a labor party, and the repudiation of Soviet Russia at the A. F. of L. convention, as well as the continued imprisonment of Mooney, Sacco and Vanzetti, the discrediting of Alex Howat, the expulsion of left-wing militants in the needle trades, and various other outrages by trade union officials and capitalists. You claim that the views of the leaders on these matters are shared by the rank and file because both have gone to the capitalist schools, they read the capitalist papers, belong to the churches, vote the old party tickets—in short, the rank and file have been "taken into the camp by the enemy" just as much as their leaders have.

SUCH a contention, especially coming from one undertaking to use the Marxian method of analysis, is inexcusably erroneous. It runs counter to the truth on every side. The fact is the rank and file of the unions are far and away more radical than their leaders. And naturally so, for their economic position compels them to be. The trade union leaders are actually and ideologically part of the petty bourgeoisie. They draw large salaries; they live the life of the middle class; they are tied by a thousand and one filaments to the employers themselves; They have only a secondary interest in the struggle between the workers and exploiters; they feel no urgent and immediate interest in the building and militant utilization of the workers' organizations; they are content to let well enough alone, so long as their own economic position, as expressed thru the regular receipt of their salaries, is assured. Like the rest of the petty bourgeoisie, they are active defenders of capitalism.

ON the other hand, the workers are engaged in a direct struggle against the employers. For them the most vital consequences depend upon a successful prosecution. Despite their capitalistic training thru the newspapers, churches, political parties, etc. (which it would be idle to deny) they almost instinctively rally to the support of practical movements making for the strengthening—numerically, structurally, ideologically—of their political and industrial organizations. The tremendous spread of the amalgamation movement is proof of that. Between the petty bourgeoisie leaders and the working class rank and file, a struggle goes on constantly over the revolutionizing of the labor movement, with the leaders desperately resisting, by every means at their command, all attempts at fundamental improvement, which attempts almost always disturb the leaders friendly relations with the employers or their control over the unions.

THIS struggle between the rank and file and the leaders of the trade unions is now at a most critical stage. Innumerable instances of it might be cited, taken from every union in the country. Whoever does not perceive it knows nothing of the real forces at work in the labor movement.

STRANGELY enough, practically all the incidents cited by you to show the "consent" of the rank and file to the acts of their leaders are, when viewed properly, striking illustrations of the greater degree of radicalism among the actual workers in the shops. Consider the Portland convention of the A. F. of L.—what expression did the rank and file get there? Practically none. That was almost entirely a gathering of officials. Fully 150 of them violated their instructions when they voted against amalgamation, the labor party, and recognition of Soviet Russia—a flagrant but typical case of official suppression of rank and file radicalism. Or consider the case of Tom Mooney—have not the rank and file surged again and again, with their limited means of expression, in his behalf. And have not the leaders always broken up their movements of protest? The same is true of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. And in the case of the International Ladies' Garment Workers; if the left-wing had demanded such support the rank and file would have split that organization in two.

BUT let us conclude with the Howat case. How you can get any comfort out of that for your theory is a mystery. It is one of the most flagrant cases on record of violent rank and file suppression by a reactionary officialdom controlling the organization machinery. At the recent Miners' Convention, Lewis did not dare to give the rank and file a chance to express themselves on the matter, so, like trade union leaders generally, in handling radical movements, he used the full power of the organization to crush the Howat movement, arbitrarily adjourning the convention to prevent a fair vote being taken. Fully two-thirds of the delegates were in open protest but could do nothing. Then, because the rank and file have no effective means to counteract such outrages by their officials, you conclude that they acquiesce in them. Such conclusions, which are typical of many in your letter, completely invalidate your analysis of the situation.

3. Following logically upon your contentions that there is no mass revolutionary sentiment in America and that the rank and file of the labor movement are as deeply reactionary as their leaders, you condemn the W. P. and T. U. E. L. policy of maneuvering the masses on a large scale as is expressed in our various campaigns. Your objections would seem to fall under two general heads: (a) that we waste our strength because the non-revolutionary masses are unprepared to accept our program, and, (b) that we demoralize our own forces by carrying on maneuvers too complicated for them to follow. Now let us see what there is to these contentions.

THE mistake you make in this matter is to tacitly assume that the left-wing movement is going to the masses with a program so advanced that they cannot understand or accept it, and that therefore we cannot enlist them under our leadership. This would be true if we were to confine ourselves simply to the advocacy of the dictatorship of the proletariat and other revolutionary Communist concepts. But such is not the case. In addition to the ultimate revolutionary program, the W. P. and the T. U. E. L. have a program of every-day work, attuned to the prevailing discontent and the backward state of the working class. The latter can and do understand the need for amalgamation and the labor party, and they are following the left-wing lead in the campaign for these and other measures. With such a program of practical work, coupled to our general revolutionary teaching, we can say, yes, the sentiment is here, what we have to do is to organize and lead it. The proof of the pudding is in the eating thereof. The fact that hundreds of thousands of workers are following the lead of the W. P. and the T. U. E. L. on the political and industrial fields is the best possible proof that they are ready for our program and leadership.

AS for your second objection, that our rank and file cannot keep pace with us, your fears are groundless. If a third party is formed with LaFollette or some similar at its head, and the Workers Party has to support it, the latter will not demoralize itself thereby. Quite the contrary would be the case. The best proof of this is our practice at present. Look at Minnesota. There the W. P. is deeply involved in the Farmer-Labor Party, which is a third party, as we understand the term. But, is it weakened or demoralized by this fact? Not at all. The W. P. has more real power and influence in Minnesota than in any state in the Union, and its members are intelligently following the struggle. Altho supporting the third party, they are pointing out its weaknesses and limitations. The same will be done in the coming national campaign if the W. P. co-operates with the third party thru an alliance. The tactic is not complicated. The time was when revolutionists held the notion that they could not participate in the mass unions and still maintain their revolutionary purity, but that has been thoroughly exploded. The same fate awaits the idea that they cannot safely take part in the mass movements of the workers on the political field. If the W. P. and the T. U. E. L. cannot function and prosper in the every-day political and industrial struggles of the masses, then they have no right to life.

4. As a natural consequence of your conception that the only available revolutionary force in the American labor movement is the small body of conscious revolutionists, you outline a plan for the careful education, organization and development of this precious little nucleus. You say, "our task involves first, education and second, organization." You say almost nothing about utilizing the organization in the struggle. This is because you can conceive it fundamentally as an educational group, standing apart from the great masses and dealing largely with the theoretical aspects of the struggle. You would build it up slowly and cautiously. You would make of it, if your program were followed, simply a Communist sect.

NOW, with such a conception, the modern Communist movement has nothing to do. Above all, the left wing is a fighting organization. We are soldiers in the class struggle, not merely students of it. The left wing is the vanguard of the proletariat, not simply in a theoretical, but also in an actual sense. It must not stand aside performing mental drill stunts and awaiting the great day, but it must participate increasingly in all the struggles of the workers. Education we must have; likewise organization; but both are futile without action. The struggle is the breath of life to every Communist organization.

IT is the function of the W. P. and T. U. E. L. to plunge into the struggles of the workers and by the example of practical leadership to secure control over the masses. The necessity for the left wing to do this, is

Two Elections That Tell a Story

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

WITHIN the past two weeks Germany and France held elections to their respective national legislative bodies. Each of these elections has a story to tell, which is pregnant with meaning and promise for the future. A story of decay among the ruling classes. A story of the millions who are oppressed, rising in anger against things as they are. A story of a splendid spirit of rebellion that is once again taking hold of the working masses of the world, steeling their determination for the fast-approaching day of reckoning.

YES, that day is coming despite all the efforts of Morgan, Dawes, Poincare, Ludendorf, Ebert, Gompers, etc., etc. The end of capitalist misrule is coming on much faster than even the optimistically inclined could believe. Is not that apparent from the elections in Germany? In France? And even in Japan tho it still finds itself in the clutches of a feudal-militaristic oligarchy?

THE Communist International did not always calculate right, particularly where dates were involved. But there is one Communist assumption which today stands as fast and impregnable as on the day it was made, an assumption which is the very soul of the international Communist movement. And it is this: That the time we happen to live in, also happens to be capitalism's last phase of development. That since the last war, the world has entered a period of social revolution, and that the end of this period will see the triumph of working class power in most of the capitalist countries of the world.

Germany—The Crucial Point.

IN the development of the proletarian struggle for power, Germany plays the most important role. Events in Germany have a determining effect upon events the world over. It is really the crucial point for ourselves just as well as for international capitalism.

When capitalist statesmen speak of saving Germany by a proper solution of the reparations problem, they really mean saving capitalism. They wouldn't admit that in so many words. They prefer speaking in terms of industry, commerce, peace, international unity and what not? But it all comes down to the same thing, which is to save capitalism all over the world.

GERMANY is the problem. If you can work out a proposition whereby German industry and commerce can begin functioning normally and freely, without at the same time hurting and crippling the industry and commerce of France, England and America, if you have got that, you have gotten hold of something which nobody has been able to devise as yet.

MANY had tried their hands at it. Just to mention a few: Woodrow Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau, Orlando, Briand, Poincare, and all of them went down in defeat. The job was beyond their powers, beyond the powers of capitalist statesmanship in general.

Now Morgan is making an attempt. Backed by the enormous resources and wealth of American capitalism, the House of Morgan is trying to impose upon European capitalism a new life-saving scheme, the Dawes plan. What is this plan? Nothing more than a new variation of the old theme. An attempt to enable German capitalism to live without injuring the capitalist foundations of France and England. An impossible task, to be sure. But the intentions of Morgan and Co. are good, the theory behind these intentions being, let's try, anyway. And having power enough to impose their will the American bankers may succeed in putting their scheme over. But what of it?

IF they succeed in reestablishing the economics of Germany, they will thereby ruin England and France. If, on the other hand, the Dawes plan will be made to work in the interests of England and France, then German capitalism is doomed, its final end being only a matter of months.

The Elections in Germany.

BEFORE we proceed to drawing conclusions from the elections in Germany, let us analyze the figures of the vote. We shall first compare the results of the election to the old Reichstag with those to the new one and see what we can learn from that.

In the elections to the old Reichstag the following vote was cast:

Deutsche Nationale	3,740,000
Deutsche-Folkische	1,200,000
Folkspartei	3,610.000
Centrum	4,779,000
Democratic	2,202,000
Social Democratic	10,512,000
Communist	441,000
Various	800,000

The new elections produced the following result:

Deutsche Nationale	4,500,000
Deutsche Folkische	2,000,000
Folkspartei	2,000,000
Centrum	7,500,000
Democratic	1,600,000
Social Democratic	5,000,000
Communists	4,000,000
Various	760,000

WHO were the losers? First comes the Social Democratic party with a loss of 5 million votes, or nearly one-half of what it secured in the elections to the old Reichstag. Second comes the Folkspartei with a loss of over a million and a half, or nearly 40 per cent. Third and last, comes the Democratic party with a loss of over half a million, or nearly 25 per cent.

In other words, more than seven million voters, about one-fourth of the electionate, have changed allegiance. What sort of people are they? What social classes do they belong to? It can be safely assumed that these people consist of two social elements: working class and petty bourgeois, the proposition between the two being much more difficult to arrive at. We might, however, reach an approximate figure by finding out where these more than seven million votes went to, and here we find: That the Communists secured about one-half, that is, 3,500,000; the Centrum, over 2 million; the Deutsche Nationale and the Deutsch-Folkische, about 800,000 each.

Now, it stands to reason that the three and one-half million votes gained by the Communist Party of Germany are working class votes. It is also reasonable to assume that very few, if any, working class votes were cast in this election for the Catholic Centrum or for the monarchist-reactionary Deutsche Nationale and Deutsch-Foelkische. If this is so, then a further assumption can be advanced that of the five million votes lost by the Social-Democratic party, about 3½ million were working class and the rest (1½) petty bourgeois.

AND here, let's stop for a while to realize the signficance of these figures. Three million and a half of German workers, who have voted for the Social-Democrats to the old Reichstag, have refused to do so this time. They have decided to give their allegiance to the Communist party, the Party of the social revolution. All in all the Communist Party received 4 million votes.

NOTE also the significance of the fact that most of this vote came from the industrial centers of Germany; the Ruhr, the industrial Rhineland generally, Silesia, Saxony, etc. In other words, the workers of the heavy industries and of the concentrated industrial regions, the strategic points which are most decisive in the proletarian struggle for power, have in their mass accepted the leadership of the Communist Party.

THUS is the German Social-Democracy paying for its betrayals to the working class. Of the 5,600,000 votes secured by the Social-Democrats in this election, the bulk belongs to the well-paid and corrupted labor-aristocracy and to the poorer sections of the middle classes. The proletariat, the real working class is leaving the betrayers in disgust. This is one of the main lessons of the elections to the new Reichstag.

Middle Classes Turning to the Right.

THE second large social group that shifted positions in the recent elections are the middle classes. One million and a half of this group broke with the Social-Democrats. About the same number parted company with the Folkspartei, the party of the heavy and concentrated industry. And over ½ million left the Democratic party, the party of merchants and manufacturers. What's become of them? More then one-half (over 2 million) went to the Centrum, the party of the well-to-do farmers and the Catholic middle classes generally. The remainder divided itself almost equally between the Deutsche Nationale and the Deutsch-Folkische, the two parties which represent the great land-owners, the reactionary junkers and the old military caste.

THESE facts are full of significance. They show that a large portion of the poor middle classes is totally disgusted with the present republican regime and with the so-called parties of the Republic which include the Social-Democrats, the Democrats, and the Folkspartei. That is why so many of the middle class voters have now cast their votes for the monarchist parties of the reactionary junkers and the military, and for the nominally-republican Centrum. The middle class elements of Germany have lost faith both in the parties of capital and in what they believed to be the party of Labor (Social-Democracy). Instead they have turned to the parties of the rich farmers and large land-owners. Clearly, a turn to the right. It remains now for the working class of Germany, under the leadership of the Communist Party, by deeds and action to convince the oppressed middle classes that their salvation lies not with the monarchist reaction but with the successful struggle for the proletarian dictatorship.

THE result of the elections in Germany can be summarized as follows: The working masses have moved to the Left. The middle classes—to the Right. The Social-Democratic party is beginning to decay and will soon be relegated to a position of very small importance. The leading role in the proletarian class-struggle is being assumed by the Communist Party.

A dictatorship of the Right (big industrialists, junkers and military) or the dictatorship of the proletariat—this is the line-up in the class-struggle of present day Germany. The recent elections and the still more recent events in Halle are proof sufficient.

Big Capital Repudiated in France.

THE defeat of Poincare means the repudiation of the rule of Big Capital—the heavy industrialists and large bankers. Poincare ruled in the name of these two capitalist groups. He ruled openly and brutally in their interests.

HIS entire German policy was nothing more than an attempt to put into effect the will of the industrial and financial magnates of France to get possession and control of the wealth of Germany and Europe generally. This, Poincare and his Black National did their best to accomplish. And they have failed, mainly because of the jealousies and intrigues of the capitalists of England and America.

Furthermore, in his attempt to achieve what turned out to be the impossible, Poincare has brought France to the verge of bankruptcy. His financial policies, dictated by Big Business and designed to make the poor classes carry the entire burden of war, rehabilitation, have antagonized against Poincare and his government all classes and groups except the small clique of big financiers and industrialists. The result is the electoral defeat of Poincare.

WHICH, however, does not mean the defeat of Big Business. The heavy industrialists and international bankers of France are still in power just as much as their brethren in England are still in power, altho Britain is supposed to be ruled by a labor government. Nothing has changed in France as far as actual power is concerned. Let's have a glance at the figures:

Composition of New Parliament.

Conservatists	19
Block National	208
Radical Socialists	186
Republican Socialists	20
Unified Socialists	111
Communists	24

WE hope our readers will not be deceived by the label "Socialist" which appears so frequently in connection with French parties. Over there everybody is a Socialist. The truth is that the "Radical Socialists" and the "Republican Socialists," which together have secured 206 seats in the chamber of deputies, are not Socialists at all, not even in the sense in which the parties of the second international are. These two parties are the political spokesmen of the merchants, manufacturers, part of the peasantry and the petty bourgeoisie generally. The party of the second international in France are the "Unified Socialists" which secured 111 seats.

WHAT do the above figures signify as far as the state of mind of the masses are concerned? These figures show that the bulk of the working class and of the poorer middle classes no longer believe in the leadership of Big Capital (which is represented by Poincare's Block National) and have now placed their faith in the parties of petty bourgeois liberalism and socialist opportunism represented by the Radical Socialists, Republican Socialists and the Unified Socialists. These three parties have together 317 seats in the new chamber of deputies, as against 208 of Poincare's Block National. It is very probable that these three parties, which are spoken of as the Left Block, will form a coalition government, and then we shall have in France almost a duplication of the political situation that prevailed in Germany on the morrow after the election to the old Reichstag. Or we may have a coalition between the left wing of the Block National and the parties led by Herriot, which again would duplicate a phase in the development of Germany between the old and new Reichstags.

France Is One Step Behind Germany.

THE old German Reichstag was practically in the hands of the Socialists and middle class liberals with the Catholic Centrum wavering between these and the monarchist reaction. Practically the same combination will rule the new chamber of deputies in France.

NOW, the Socialists and Liberals of Germany, have had their chance and failed. Why? Because they could not and would not break and destroy the power of Big Capital. In fact, they were doing the very thing that Big Capital wanted them to do. The boss of the old Reichstag was Stinnes. With the result that the masses lost faith in these parties, the workers moving over to the Communists, and a large section of the petty bourgeoisie having gone to the monarchists.

THE oppressed masses of France are now passing thru a period of liberal reformist illusions the same as the English masses are. The same as the German masses were at the time of the elections to the old Reichstag.

BUT the masses of Germany have by now partly learned their lesson. The same will happen with the masses in England. The same will happen with the masses in France. The new Liberal-Socialist coalition in France, if such is formed, will in practice serve the same master that Poincare did, i. e., Big Capital. This new coalition will bear another name, will use a different language and will, perhaps, apply different tactics, but in matters that are really vital for capitalism in France, it will differ not one iota from the old government of Poincare. The masses of France are headed toward a great dissappointment and also toward a great awakening.

Politically, France is just one step behind Germany.

LEWIS AND HOWAT BEFORE MINERS

Garment Convention Orders Big Strikes

FARRINGTON FIGHTING TO HOLD POWER

Delegates In Revolt At Packing Of Convention

BULLETIN.

PEORIA, Ill., May 18.—The Farmer-Labor party convention, in session here, listened to addresses by Alexander Howat, Kate Richards O'Hare and Duncan MacDonald. All urged independent political action and unity of workers and farmers. Committees elected and will report this afternoon. Many miners are delegates.

By KARL REEVE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 18.—The Illinois miners' convention reaches its most acute phase this week when the test on Farrington's appointive power comes to a vote. Alexander Howat's speech to the convention and the fight for a special international convention to enforce the reinstatement of the deposed Kansas militant is eagerly awaited. Howat is here now.

John L. Lewis' speech attacking Howat is also awaited,—with ironical wonder as to whether the International president has forgotten the graft charges he once hurled at Frank Farrington, his new ally against the radicals.

Indignation at President Farrington's policy of packing the Illinois Miners' district convention with his own henchmen, illegally elected, reached high tide at yesterday's sessions when the report of the credentials committee came up for adoption.

Decided Against Machine Men.

The credentials committee had decided against a group of Farrington appointees and machine men, and Farrington had ruled that portion of their report out of order.

Vehement protest by the progressive delegates brought out the facts, showing that this group of Farrington men had no right to credentials as voting delegates, and struck a blow at the prestige of the district president.

Farrington's ruling came on a point of order raised by Dave Wilson of Collinsville in favor of the machine delegates, two of whom had been packed in from his own local. The point of order was that article 12, section 5, of the mine workers' constitution "provides that all contests must be in the hands of the credentials committee six days prior to the convention."

List of Illegal Delegates.

The ruling of Farrington that this part of the credentials committee report was out of order, cut off the discussion of the committee's decision on John (Joker) Young, elected district board member from the Springfield sub-district, who is declared to have presented credentials from a local not having paid dues for months; William Wall of Springfield, appointed legal investigator by Farrington; James Box, appointed auditor by Farrington; Herbert Hall of Westville, elected district board member: all four of whom had been contested by Delegates Watts, Tumulty and Johnson.

OVER 200,000 NEW LAWS MANUFACTURED IN U. S. IN 1923! LAWYERS SMILE

NEW YORK.—It is estimated that during 1923, 43 states enacted 15,000 new laws. During the same period, according to Nassau in The Wall Street Journal, congress enacted 300 new measures while towns, cities, and counties added 200,000 more laws and ordinances. He states that the interpretation of these laws by federal and state supreme courts in a single year required 650 volumes of law reports. The passion for mass production seems to have infected all sides of the capitalist state.

CLEAR THIS UP!

John L. Lewis, whom Frank Farrington's men used to call the "Steel Trust" President of the United Mine Workers is coming to Peoria to talk against the "Reds."

This is the first time Lewis has attempted to address an Illinois miners' meeting since Frank Farrington made his sensational charges that Lewis and his associates were paid by the mine owners for expelling Howat and received sums of $100,000 and $650,000 respectively from Kentucky operators and Pennsylvania non-union operators for betraying the workers during the 1922 strike.

Lewis has never answered these charges. Instead he made peace with Farrington against their common enemy, the rank and file.

Nor has Farrington answered the charge made by Lewis that W. J. Lester made a deal with him for the operation of the famous Lester strip mine at Herrin.

These charges are contained in a resolution presented by Delegates Freeman Thompson and John J. Watt incorporating the Lewis-Farrington correspondence.

LEWIS AND FARRINGTON ARE BEFORE THE BAR OF LABOR. LET THEM ANSWER.

FITZPATRICK GOES BACK TO GOMPERS' POLITICAL CAMP

Gets Federation To Quit Farmer-Labor Party

"Politically, we cast our lot with the American Federation of Labor," concluded President John Fitzpatrick to the Chicago Federation of Labor in its meeting yesterday, when the labor leaders decided to abandon independent political action in favor of the Gompers non-partisan political program."

Fitzpatrick recommended to the Federation that it cease all activities for Farmer-Labor movements and return to the A. F. of L. policy of rewarding friends and punishing enemies. His recommendation was adopted after a fight in which J. W. Johnstone, delegate from a painters' local union, and one of the leaders of the Trade Union Educational League, led the opposition to Fitzpatrick's plan.

Johnstone Hammers Betrayal.

Johnstone charged that the president's recommendation was but a prelude to the endorsement of the campaign of Governor Len Small for reelection. He condemned the idea of the Federation's ceasing to back independent political action at a time twenty-one major political scandals involving the two old parties were arousing the workers and farmers to a pitch where they were sore and disgusted. Johnstone pointed out that the old line politicians have been caught red-handed in the act of stealing the nation's resources. He showed that the time was never more favorable, or the need greater, than now for the formation of a real political party of workers and farmers, and that the Chicago federation would make a great mistake in withdrawing its support at this time.

Fitzpatrick had claimed that the "only bona fide Farmer-Labor party was that formed in 1919 by the Chicago Federation of Labor." He said that since that time many parties have sprung up until the air is thick with them, and that the groups are irresponsible and unreliable and do not represent the farmers and workers they claim to.

Fitzpatrick answered Johnstone's demand for continued support of the Farmer-Labor movement with a personal attack.

Some misguided labor faker shouted "Get out!" to Johnstone when he got up to get a drink of water in the corner of the room.

"Like hell I'll get out," Johnstone retorted, and stood his ground.

Johannsen Praises Militants.

Anton Johannsen, active member of the committee of fifteen which investigated State's Attorney Crowe, corrected Fitzpatrick's statement that the Johnstone group had been disruptive in the garment workers' strike. Johannsen pointed out that the militants had been among the most active directors and participants in the ladies' garment workers' strike and had in no way gone against the policy of the union officials in charge.

Treasurer Kennedy reported that $200 had been collected from local unions for the upholsters' union appeal and $1,062.75 for the garment workers' strike.

HUNGRY, STEALS ROTTEN POTATOES; MURDERED BY "DICK"

The theft of a few rotting potatoes, to which he was driven by hunger, cost John Bigol, 44 years old, his life. Bigol was shot thru the heart and killed by Dewey Norman, detective, when he attempted to pick up the culls which truckmen unloading cars in the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul yards at Morgan and Fulton streets had discarded as unfit for human consumption. Only police intervention saved Norman from lynching by an infuriated mob of railroad workers.

Bigol, who lived at 826 North Racine avenue, had been out of employment for some time. He was married and the father of two children, for whom he was unable to provide.

By special grace of the railroad authorities, poor people of the yards district are permitted to pick up the discarded vegetables.

Norman is said to have held a long-standing grudge against Bigol. The evidence of all bystanders refutes Norman's statement that Bigol ran after he had been ordered to halt. Norman was taken to the Des Plaines street police station, where he is being held. Murder may be charged against him.

The inquest will be held today at 1313 West Chicago avenue.

FOOD WORKERS' ORGANIZATION SPREADS TO S. S.

Bosses' Association Gets Union Demands

The strike of the Amalgamated Food workers against the 12-hour restaurants of the North Side, is attracting many workers to the organization. Meetings of restaurant workers have been held on the South Side and the workers have expressed a willingness to strike as soon as possible. The union has advised them to wait till the workers of the North Side have achieved a victory. The officers point out that if the South Side workers wait, they will be able to point to a real victory achieved by their organization and so shorten the period of their own fight.

The fight for decent hours and conditions in the North Side restaurants is going merrily on despite the excited efforts of the bosses to chase the pickets and call in the police. The 17 injunctions issued by Judge Hugo Friend do not seem to have any effect on the strike.

The Amalgamated has placed its demands before the Restaurant Association of Chicago, and the officers of the association have promised to call the attention of the members to the demands and see if there is a possibility of securing a settlement.

The owner of the Virginia Grill, at 26th and Indiana avenue, seeing that the union spirit was spreading among the South Side workers, came to the union and signed an agreement.

NEW YORK AND PHILADELPHIA FIGHTS VOTED

Machine Makes Vicious Attack On Radicals

By REBECCA GRECHT
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, May 18.—The next battle front of the needle trades industry will be in New York City, if the General Executive Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, carries out the instructions of the convention delegates.

With burst after burst of cheers the delegates authorized a general strike call to the 30,000 cloakmakers of the empire city and pledged the united support of the organization to the coming battle.

Strike of the dressmakers of Philadelphia was also authorized when time is opportune and the delegates from the numerous locals of the union likewise pledged their support to the coming battle.

The clash with the Philadelphia employers is deemed practically inevitable if conditions in the organized shops are to be improved and the large number of sweatshops are to be cleaned out.

Deny Hearing to Expelled.

An issue closely related to the coming strikes in the metropolitan cities came before the convention when the appeals committee made its report on the Chicago expelled members who have been leading the struggle in the Windy City. The recommendation of the appeals committee, which was controlled by the machine, was that the expelled members must apply individually for reinstatement as new members and must be approved by the General Executive Board.

President Sigman refused to grant the expelled militants a hearing before their fellow unionists for whom they have been battling on the picket line of S. Market street.

Perlstein Seconds His Boss.

Vice-president Meyer Perlstein, seconding his boss, took the floor and threatened that the Chicago job was not yet finished. Perlstein, who has leaned heavily on the expelled members all thru the strike, appointing one to the most responsible post in the strike committee, in charge of picketing, and another to the post of Waukegan organizer, cried out that their strike activity had nothing to do with their right to enjoy the benefits of union membership.

Many delegates militantly defended the expelled and demanded that the convention rectify the injustices committed by the international executives but the report calling for individual application in place of mass reinstatement, carried.

DAILY WORKER-Freiheit Issue.

A tense moment came when the striking dressmakers' local of Chicago presented their resolution asking the convention to express its appreciation of the splendid services which the DAILY WORKER has given in their fight against the organized boss-

Studebaker Shut Down Expected June 1, South Bend

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 18.—The Studebaker plant here has not yet shut down, but has laid off a number of men and is laying off more from time to time. Complete shutdown is expected June 1, according too Milton Baker, a worker.

The new model Studebaker requires certain changes in tools and jigs and the shifting of machinery, necessitating a partial shutdown. The company is installing a "progressive track" system of production. It is all piece work. The shop is arranged so that one man operates a number of machines and never has a chance to rest. The company demands production at the rate of the fastest man, the pace-setter.

The Wilson shirt factory is running four days a week now, instead of three.

Business men are worrying about the prospective shutdown, as it means the loss of $40,000 business in a month.

ADMIT FEDERATION IS POOR SUBSTITUTE FOR AMALGAMATION

BOSTON, May 18.—Federation as an alternative to amalgamation has not worked, admits the report of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' executives to the convention delegates.

The report goes on to assert that the Needle Trades Alliance, federating the International with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, United Cloth, Hat and Capmakers' union, the International Fur Workers' union and the Journeymen Tailors' union has accomplished "nothing practical."

Insincerity of the officials' attitude is shown by the fact that while condemning federation they have resisted the superior policy of amalgamation. Instead, they are standing pat on the policy of expelling members of the Trade Union Educational League, an educational organization whose program of amalgamation has brought it into conflict with the officials who fear they will lose their craft union jobs if the needle trades internation united into one big industrial union.

FUR WORKERS' MEETING ENDS; REACTION RULES

Will Send Delegates To July Convention

The fur workers' union convention ended its sessions at the Hotel Morrison, Saturday after having made but one move that could in any way be called progressive—a resolution against the Johnson anti-immigration bill.

The convention re-elected all its old officers, Morris Kaufman, president; Andrew Vannes, secretary-treasurer, and Morris Silverman, first vice-president. It also voted to send three delegates to the Cleveland convention of the C. P. P. A., after defeating a motion to send delegates to the June 17th St. Paul convention and adopting a resolution in advocating the formation of a labor party. The convention voted to give $300 to the striking garment workers of Chicago after an appeal had been made by Anton Johannsen of the Committee of 15.

The delegates got very excited when they were told about the wrongs suffered by the political prisoners in Russia and forgot all about the political prisoners in this country.

The General Executive Board was instructed to work out an unemployment insurance scheme for the joint board of New York City. The New York joint board has an agreement with the employers for unemployment insurance which has not been put into effect yet.

"VET" GRAFTER YELPS ILLEGAL AT INDICTMENT

Col. Forbes Able To Hire Best Lawyers

Charles A. Forbes indicted for graft in connection with the affairs of the Veterans' Bureau of which he was formerly the head, will attack the indictment which was returned against him recently. The attack will be on the ground that the indictment was not legally drawn.

Argument on the motions will be heard before Federal Judge Carpenter this morning in Federal court here.

English Want Russian Patents.

MOSCOW, May 18.—In connection with the interest shown on the part of English business circles for the winning of the Russian market, a number of English inventors have applied to the Russian patent bureau for patents to safeguard their inventors, mostly in the technical line.

LISBON, Portugal, May 18.—Threats of a general strike and labor unrest was given as the cause of the declaration of martial law, in Oporto and Lisbon.

AMALGAMATED LINES UP FOR CLASS FARM-LABOR PARTY; DELEGATES GO TO JUNE 17

By EARL BROWDER
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, May 18.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers convention ended here with a victory for progress at a time when unions generally are in the grip of reaction.

The convention voted to send delegates to both the June 17th and the July 4th conventions and instructed their representatives to demand and work for the formation of a class party of Farmers and Workers. The action came after a hot fight by the left wing for June 17th alone and for dealing with July 4th thru the action at St. Paul.

Hillman Pleads for Labor Party.

President Hillman made a strong speech for the Labor party. His arguments really proved the contentions of the left wing.

The majority report carried about 2 to 1, after a short and sharp debate, in which only Delegate Cattalanotti, for the minority of the committee, and Delegate Aronberg, for the floor, were the speakers for June 17.

Promise to Fight at St. Paul.

Aronberg struck home when he pointed out the absurdity of the Amalgamated, a pioneer in labor advancement, waiting to see what came of the conventions, instead of going in determined to bring results, not wait for them. Hillman, in answering, practically promised the convention that the executive would participate in a responsible manner in St. Paul.

Like all other issues, this was fought between the left and center. The right wing had no position, but followed the administration. Even Delegate Beckerman, Socialist leader, bowed to the spirit of the convention by stating that the Workers party should be included in any Labor party formed.

The Local No. 2 situation was acted on by instructing the executive board to investigate violations of procedure and remedy them. This means much or little, according to the temper and balance of forces in the executive board. Feeling in the convention is that right wing abuses will be corrected.

Nominations for officers to be elected by referendum were made before adjournment late Saturday. Hillman, for president, and Schlossberg, for secretary, are unopposed. Among many candidates for the executive board are leading left wingers: Aronberg, Lipsin, Cattalanotti, Capraro, Deluca, Jenkins.

No startling advances or new ventures were made at this convention. It was essentially conservative in tone. Yet not one step backward was taken at a time when most unions are in a state of bitter reaction. The convention of the Amalgamated must be considered a forward-looking boost in the way of progress; a real victory.

LEGION WILL "OBSERVE" PAX LEAGUE SCHOOL

Promise Not To Create Any Trouble

The American Legion will send unofficial observers to the sessions of the Women's League for Peace and Freedom summer school at the University of Chicago. This action follows the polite "razz" the Legion got from President Burton of the University of Chicago. The Legion told Burton that they didn't approve of the Peace League and Burton told them they didn't know what they were talking about and suggested that they roll their hoops.

The Legion has announced that they will not try to make any trouble at the League sessions.

The Peace League officials have announced that they are a respectable group of harmless women who believe in peace but are not "militant Pacifists."

The sessions of the school will last for two weeks and will be attended by women from some twenty-six countries.

RUSS SOVIET ENDORSED BY PENN LABOR

State Federation Also For Amalgamation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 18.—Recognition of Soviet Russia and amalgamation were indorsed in resolutions passed at the closing sessions of the Pennsylvania state Federation of Labor.

The resolution endorsing amalgamation instructs the officers of the federation to report to the next convention what steps they have taken to bring amalgamation into effect.

The resolution on Russia calls the Soviet government "the most stable government in Europe."

Condemn Sedition Law.

The convention also condemned the Pennsylvania sedition laws, which are still in operation and sending workers to prison.

A resolution indorsing Major Berry of the pressmen's union for vice president was tabled after a vigorous fight, led by militants.

Resolutions to send delegates to the June 17 St. Paul convention and indorse a state Farmer-Labor party and to affiliate with it were bitterly fought by President James Maurer.

The expulsion of Rocca is undoubtedly the first sign of internal trouble in the Fascist organization.

OLD PARTIES DROWNING IN OIL, WARREN STONE TELLS AMALGAMATED

NEW YORK, May 18.—That Senator Robert M. La Follette will make the race for president as an independent candidate is the expectation of Grand Chief Warren S. Stone, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Stone expressed this hope in his speech to the sixth biennial convention, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, which came from Philadelphia for a one-day session in New York.

"It seems that both old parties are going to be drowned in oil," said Stone. "Tho 72 per cent of the votes cast are by the producing class, only 27 union men are in congress—and labor is to blame because of its indifference to the political weapon." He added that all we got out of the war was "a heritage of hate, and 23,000 new millionaires in 18 months."

COAL OPERATORS CHEER TALK ON WAGE 'NORMALCY'

Associated Man Also His Public Ownership

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CINCINNATI, May 18.—"Normalcy" should be the objective of the workers in the coal industry, said Melville Stone, former head of the Associated Press, in an address to the National Coal Association's convention.

Stone quoted Harding's phrase with great approval. The phrase was coined by Harding when he was assisting the wage cutting plans of the big employers.

Praising the co-operation shown by the heads of the United Mine Workers with the plans of the operators and the government at a recent conference in New York City, Stone went on to declare his opposition to any policies of ownership of the coal fields by the government. Applaused followed.

Some time ago Senator LaFollette exposed the assistance Stone had given the gouge plans of the National Coal Association, thru Associated Press despatches. Stone sent out a statement, on the authority of the A. P., declaring that coal prices were going to rise—at a time when there was no market reason why prices should rise—and urging consumers to buy promptly and buy heavily.

Directors of Bosses' Union.

The convention elected the following directors at large: P. J. Quealy, Wyoming; Phil H. Penna, Indiana; W. H. Cunningham, West Virginia; E. D. Douglas, Eastern Kentucky.

These district directors were chosen:

W. E. Tytus, Ohio; L. C. Madleria, III. Pennsylvania; George B. Harrington, Illinois; Walter Barnum, Washington; C. E. Bockus, Virginia; Ira Clemens, Kansas; M. L. Gould, Indiana; W. H. Huff, Colorado and New Mexico; W. F. Mageath, Montana and Northern Wyoming; T. F. Farrell, West Virginia; J. G. Puterbaugh, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas; C. W. Taylor, Western Kentucky; S. L. Yerkes, Alabama and T. W. Guthrie, Pennsylvania.

100,000 UNION MINERS.

By TOM TIPPETT.

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

PEORIA, Ill., May 18.—The membership of District 12 has reached the 100,000 mark, according to a report to the convention by Walter Nesbit, secretary of the Illinois Mine Workers. This is the largest membership the district has ever claimed and constitutes about one-fifth of the international organization. This number is double any other U. M. W. A. district.

There are 560 delegates attending this convention representing 351 local unions in Illinois. Twenty-three delegates attended the first district convention at Springfield in 1896. There were but a few hundred members in the union at that date. The state is 100 per cent organized today, the union having jurisdiction over 374 shipping mines.

$1,449,057.79 In District Treasury.

Nesbit's report shows there was paid into the district treasury last year $1,449,057.79. The average dues paying membership during that period was 98,865. The average amount paid per member for the 12 months was $14.66 or $1.22 per month. Out of this the running expenses of the district were paid, including officers' salaries and expenses, field workers' salaries and expenses, relief and aid, death benefits, strike benefits, printing, postage, telephone and telegraph, delegates' wages and expenses to state conventions, legal department and the district paper.

The district publishes an official paper, "The Illinois Miner," an eight page weekly devoted to topics of general interest, edited by Oscar Ameringer. Its subscription list numbers 63,000 (one paper to each miner's home). The cost of publishing and distributing this paper is $1,586.70 per week. This includes all expense of the paper, including editor's salary. The contract for printing "The Illinois Miner" has been given to the Oklahoma Leader Publishing Co. The "Illinois Miner" is a member of The Federated Press.

Coolidge Name Is Sacred Cow in U. S. Printing Offices

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Just as the czar of Russia's picture never appeared on postage stamps, to prevent mutilation of his sacred image by cancelation, so President Coolidge's name must be devoutly handled in the government printing office. When the word Coolidge comes at the end of a long line the printer is not allowed to separate it into Cool-idge and put the second syllable on the next line. "Orders have been given at the government printing office to avoid in all cases the breaking of the name," announces E. Y. Clark, secretary at the white house.

NEW YORK.—Max Wilson, apartment owner, had a private graft besides hiking rents. He sold the ice concession in his apartment building to one iceman for $150. That's business.

Minor Speaks to Amalgamated Convention

Robert Minor, Editor of The Liberator, the official monthly publication of the Workers Party, was given an enthusiastic reception at the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America in Philadelphia. The remarks of President Sidney Hillman, in presenting Minor to the convention, and the address of Minor, were as follows:

PRESIDENT SIDNEY HILLMAN: The Chair takes pleasure in introducing to the convention one whom I regard as a real friend of our organization. Our organization takes pride in having drawn to it the interest of people outside of our own industry and in receiving the co-operation of institutions and individuals. During many years it has been our custom to hear from them at conventions. While our time is limited, I still feel that the convention will surely appreciate a message from one of our good friends, Brother Robert Minor. (Prolonged applause.)

BROTHER ROBERT MINOR: Brother Chairman, Brother and Sister Delegates: When any one receives an invitation from your union to be a guest at one of its biennial conventions, one cannot but feel a tremendous thrill of joy and pride. There is something about the spirit of the Amalgamated Union which is associated in the minds of workers thruout the world as connected in some manner with the great ultimate destiny of the labor movement.

When we hear the name "Amalgamated," we think immediately of what I believe to be now the incontrovertible fact that the destiny of the labor movement is to rule the world. There is a certain breadth of solidarity about the way in which the Amalgamated does things. Just the other day I was being told about a great tragedy out in Western Pennsylvania. One of your speakers here had just told about how free speech is not always to be found in this supposedly free land, and the subject was brought up of certain workers in Western Pennsylvania who are now about to be sent to the penitentiary for exercising their right of free speech and political organization. I felt very much depressed, and someone mentioned that it was the Steel Trust that was bringing about this persecution. And immediately my mind flew back to that great event which is mentioned on this poster, that great gesture of solidarity when the Amalgamated Clothing Workers came so nobly to the rescue of the steel workers in 1919 and '20 against the Steel Trust. And then when I thought of this same enemy attacking the right of free speech and political organization for workers in Western Pennsylvania, I said to myself, "The Amalgamated's old enemy, the Steel Trust, is behind this attack and I think the Amalgamated is going to strike a blow again for the benefit of those workers." (Applause.)

There are many things the Amalgamated does that are associated irrevocably with its name, showing its broad spirit and the militant way in which it acts. Recall to mind the 44-hour week. Recall to mind the fact that the 44-hour week is a beginning, not an ending—there is better coming. Some of us are very much touched by the singular fact that the Amalgamated Union manages to have a 100 per cent celebration of that great International Labor day, May Day, every year. The mere fact that the Amalgamated is able to get away with that, making May Day a holiday in actuality and a day of celebration of International Labor solidarity is a thing which somehow typifies the spirit of the Amalgamated everywhere where the name is known; and we all know it is known in every country in the world.

In another thing we have to pay our homage to the Amalgamated. I remember at your last biennial convention in 1922, the Amalgamated committed itself to independent political action. That was a great pioneer step. Political action is the great issue of the present time and the Amalgamated is looked upon by the workers everywhere as being necessarily obligated by its own high reputation to take a pioneer step in that direction.

It is hardly necessary to say that the singular activity and initiative of the Amalgamated in stepping to the fore and going to the rescue of the first workers' Republic on earth, Soviet Russia, (Applause) is an act which is written forever upon the roll of honor of the world's labor movement. It is singularly happy we can be here, in 1924, to look back at the results of your noble act of solidarity at a time when the first workers' republic of Russia was in a terrible plight and the Amalgamated came to the rescue. In 1924 we can say with pride that the Soviet Republic of Russia is absolutely established as the most permanent, the most solidly grounded government in all of Europe and Asia. (Applause) Over one-sixth of the surface of the earth flies the banner of the Soviet Republic of revolutionary Russia. It has reached a condition where we may say that out of the chaos of Europe now there is one place of comparative prosperity on the continent of Europe and that is Soviet Russia ruled by workers. (Applause). We notice that even the enemies of Soviet Russia are beginning unwillingly to recognize, not a friendly willingness for Soviet Russia to live, but an unfriendly willingness to give up the struggle to crush Soviet Russia. The great capitalist reactionary power of France is typified by Poincare. It has been forced, after changing its administration, the directing personnel of that government, has been forced to come to the conclusion that it must recognize the permanent rule of Russia by the present rulers, the working class. (Applause). England, Italy, France, Germany and then—the United States? We trust, Brothers and Sisters, that you are going to do something about that.

While we see over there the tremendous fact that the rule of the earth by labor is beginning, clarifying our view of the future, we must also look closer home. What do we see in America? Brothers and Sisters, within the last few days I have been looking over some statistics and we find great labor unions in America slowly crumbling to pieces. We see many of our unions actually going down in membership to a mere fraction of what they were. We find that the very right to organize is slowly being taken away from many of the workers. We find injunctions issued which deny the inherent right of labor organization. We find that they go so far as to forbid union officials to transact the business of unions, or union members to meet to consider questions of economic action.

Everywhere it is the governmental power that is used against labor. There are many of us who are firmly convinced, and your union is officially committed to the belief, that the things which will revitalize the labor movement, will save it from this crumbling process, will protect it from the club of capitalistic government action for destroying economic organizations, that the means by which the labor movement can be given a new rebirth, a new hope, a new vision and a new courage to fight, is to enter the struggle as an independent political factor contending with the employing class for the right to exercise governmental power over the land. (Applause).

Political action. What is political action? Political action is action which looks toward this taking of the power to control a community, to say who shall feel the blow, the heavy blow of the community's legal arm.

In this question of political power there are various views. There are some who think that the same representatives in political office can speak for both workers and employers. That is like a view which we find in the economic field, like the view of company unions, the idea that the same union official in a company union organized by the employers can act both for the workers and for the employers.

We find that the Congress of the United States is giving a large portion of its time directly to controlling the struggle between capital and labor, always in the interest of capital. Then there are those who tell us, "Send good men to Congress," and I answer, a good Congressman is like a good employer—there are none. Unless the Congressman is solely the spokesman of labor he cannot speak for labor at all. You can no more have a Congressman who represents both capital and labor than you can have an arbitration board where the arbitrators are representatives of both capital and labor in the same representative.

Brothers, I must not take much of your time. I must let the Chairman get to business. It is necessary before I give way and sit down to mention the great convention which is to occur on the 17th day of June in the City of St. Paul. The convention of the 17th day of June in St. Paul is going to be a step toward not merely "progressive" political action for putting nonedescript "good" Congressman into office, but the convention of June 17th in St. Paul is a step toward a labor party. (Prolonged applause).

June 17th is a convention which is going to give July 4th something to do. June 17th is a convention which is going to perform the only acts that are going to be performed for the definite crystalization of independent political action by the only means that is possible, the foundation of a broad mass labor party, representing workers and farmers, and workers and farmers only. A class that is without a mass party to speak for it in politics is a class without a vote. A labor party, a Farmer-Labor Party independent of all capitalist parties is the thing which today must be the next step of organized labor to revitalize itself and to save even its economic organizations, and the only event in the immediate future which can bring it about is that convention of June 17th. That convention is a united front convention open to all who are of labor and of the farm. That convention is the convention which represents the movement for clear-cut independent political action, and Brothers and Sisters, the more definite that we and you can be in going to that convention, with absolutely definite fixed plans, that we will not leave it without independent political action thru a Farmer-Labor Party on the united front basis with all within it, the more definite we can be, the more we can be assured that the campaign of 1924 shall not pass without being utilized at last for the hearing of the great voice of labor roaring thruout the land—"We want power, we workers!" (Prolonged applause).

to John Young and Herbert Hall, who are now seated in this convention when they should not be allowed to be seated," shouted out Freeman Thompson, while Farrington continually rapped the gavel, calling Thompson out of order. "You're seating men you've no right to seat," Thompson added.

"What kind of stuff are you trying to put over here," called delegate Hindmarsh. "If the delegates to this convention know there is a direct violation of the rules of seating delegates, is the convention to sit idly by and see the constitution violated."

Chosen Contrary to Law.

Delegate Gus Fritz pointed out, "It is true, according to the ruling of the chair that the constitution provides that contests of delegates' seats must be filed six days before the convention and for that reason, perhaps the ruling of the chairman that discussion of these contests is out of order is a correct one. But, however, it seems the local unions have elected delegates who have been illegally seated in the convention. Chairman Farrington says that if the local union elects these delegates, the convention should be satisfied. But if the local unions overlook the law, it is the duty of the convention to set that thing right."

How Machine Tricked Them.

The fact was brought out by Joe Tumulty of Springfield, that the delegates had little opportunity to file protests on delegates six days before the convention, because they didn't know who the delegates were until the convention started. "The first day of the convention, I asked for the report of the make-up of the delegates be presented 8 hours before the seating of the delegates. It is not fair for the delegates to be kept in the dark on these matters. I would like to ask the credentials committee if it is their intention to allow William Wall and James Box of Collinsville, to be seated?"

The credentials committee answered that they had decided against Wall and Fox.

Hindmarsh brought out the fact that the "delegates have no means of finding out the legal or illegal status of the delegates six days before the convention, not in fact, until the convention meets and looks over the report of the credentials committee.

After a vote to close debate had carried, the report of the credentials committee was adopted.

John Walker on Defensive.

John Walker attempted a defense of the charges in the DAILY WORKER that he is a renegade socialist and ex-champion of independent political action of labor. Walker's speech to the convention was an attempted justification of his desertion of the Farmer-Labor movement in favor of the republican "good roads" governor, Len Small. Walker was asked by a delegate if he would use his influence against a socialist who is a union member of the United Mine Workers in favor of an old party politician. He declared he would if the old line politician had a chance for election and could be used in the interests of labor. The delegates were not overly enthusiastic over Walker's antilabor party address.

The convention adjourned at noon today to convene again Monday morning.

Farrington on Defensive.

Frank Farrington was forced on the defensive thruout last week's sessions.

Unanimously Illinois miners' delegates passed a resolution demanding that the union use all its power at the next state federation convention to bring industrial unionism into being, with one union for each industry.

The resolution flayed the craft union system, which divides the workers and weakens their resistence to the employers.

Applause For Howat.

Applause rocked the convention hall when Alexander Howat's telegram was read announcing he would be in their midst.

The charge that the militant Kansan leader had been deliberately and cowardly deserted by Frank Farrington and his machine at the Indianapolis convention, was made by Delegate John Hindmarsh of Riverton.

Hindmarsh told how Lewis and Farrington had buried the hatchet in the last two years.

Farrington on Defensive.

Farrington, in his reply, declared: "A paper is being distributed to the delegates here that is not telling the truth. It assumed the authority to brand me as the most despised man at the convention. It prints scandalous and infamous falsehoods."

Bill Deach, Taylorsville, said: "Farrington is always getting out of order." Applause followed.

Hindmarsh took the floor and made a protest against the chairman making speeches without yielding the chair to the vice-chairman.

About That Strike Time Pay.

Resolution No. 20, instructing the district to pay expenses of delegates to local unions was adopted. A resolution saying officers must pay into the treasury the five months' pay they received during the 1922 strike was voted unconstitutional, but in debate Walter Nesbit, district secretary, admitted a letter had been sent to the sub districts telling of the decision of the executive board not to draw salaries. Many sub-district officials took no pay, later finding that many district officials drew pay despite the executive board's decision.

A Weak Defense.

Farrington put up a weak defense that after the decision not to take salary during the strike he found the decision unconstitutional, so many officials drew their pay.

The facts are that notice of the decision not to draw pay appeared in the capitalist press and the Illinois Miner, but no publicity was given to the fact that some later drew back pay.

COOLIDGE VETO OF BONUS BRINGS ANGER IN HOUSE

"Hand Of Mellon" Seen By Insurgent

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 18.—With little debate, the House passed the Soldiers' Bonus bill over the President's veto. A number of members who voted for the bill originally, switched on the vote to over-ride, but they did not affect the result which was a foregone conclusion. The vote was 313 to 78, or 53 more than the necessary two-thirds of those present and voting.

The senate will act either Monday or Tuesday and will very likely follow the house in disregarding the veto of Coolidge.

The Hand of Mellon.

The strong language of the president's disapproval awakened no noticeable response in the house among members who voted originally for the soldiers' bonus.

"The voice was the voice of Coolidge, but the hand was that of Mellon," commented Representative Nelson, leader of the insurgent Republicans.

Money for Graft, Not Bonus.

Very few here would take the responsibility for convincing their constituencies of the soundness of the Coolidge veto. The president's argument of government poverty will be accepted by very few, especially because the recent scandal revelations have made it clear that huge sums of money are of practically no concern to the government when the same has to be turned over to big business groups.

Nor do many congressmen feel that they can get their voters to accept the obviously hollow noise made by Coolidge in behalf of pure patriotism. The records of the war profiteers, closely allied with the administration, are too well known to too many people to permit any appreciable acceptance of the white house idealistic eruption.

The representatives are plainly anxious to get home and repair their political fences. Many regular Republicans view the Coolidge attitude, which is even harsher toward the bonus than was Harding's, as distinctly detrimental to their chances of reelection.

Quinn Confident.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 18.—John R. Quinn, national commander of the American Legion, this afternoon issued a statement expressing confidence that congress will pass the soldier insurance bonus bill over President Coolidge's veto.

Senate Probes K. K. K. Records.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The senate investigation of the election of Senator Mayfield, Texas, adjourned after a brief session today until Tuesday. Opposing counsel proposed the recess to give them additional time to examine the financial records of the Ku Klux Klan brought here from Atlanta.

GARMENT UNION ORDERS STRIKES

es, the police and the injunction judges.

In spite of the hatred of the Jewish Daily Forward-Sigman machine for the Communist paper, it looked doubtful if the machine would dare to thwart the wishes of the Chicago workers who were the best judges of the services of the DAILY WORKER.

It was known by many of the delegates also, that vice-president Meyer Perlstein, one of the arch supporters of the machine welcomed the support of the DAILY WORKER to the strikers during the darkest days of the struggle, when the workers could not get no other newspaper's aid in Chicago. Perlstein was not backward at the time of the Sullivan injunction against the picketing in asking the Communist paper to "put in big headlines" in behalf of picketing.

Will Continue Fight.

In spite of these facts, the convention leaders jammed thru a counter-resolution attacking the DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit as misleading the workers.

Undisturbed by the machine's hostility, the representatives of the two papers who were present, declared that the Communist papers would continue to fight shoulder to shoulder with the needle trades workers against the employers.

Endorse Russian Recognition.

Recognition of Soviet Russia could not be prevented by the machine tho the chairman of the resolutions committee took occasion to attack the Russian government. It was significant that only the militants applauded the passage of the resolution. The administration, however, succeeded in preventing a resolution instructing delegates to the Copenhagen International Federation to vote for affiliation with the all Russian needle trades' workers on the grounds that it was affiliated with the Red Trade Union International.

Counter revolution in Russia was endorsed when $200 was voted to the Russian anarchist Red Cross and $1,000 relief to the anti-Soviet prisoners in Russia.

Hatred of Soviet Russia.

Hatred of the machine for the workers and peasants' government of Russia flamed out in a lengthy speech by President Morris Sigman in which he said it was "not worth while" to communicate officially with the Soviet Republic.

Sigman's attack on Russia was patterned after the speeches that Samuel Gompers makes before Civic Federation and other employers' groups. It came in connection with a resolution fathered by Socialist party cliques asking Russia to release the prisoners held there for opposing the Soviet system. The resolution passed.

Delegates favoring Russia were not permitted to speak. The suppression of the pro-Russian forces was even more outrageous than at the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor, where five speakers in behalf of Soviet recognition succeeded in getting the floor before Matthew Woll and Gompers cut off debate and began their lengthy harangues. The I. L. G. W. U. action—bearing the hall mark of the Forward and Samuel Gompers, is in striking contrast to that taken by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in session in Philadelphia.

Morris Sigman was re-elected president of the I. L. G. W. A.

William F. Dunne came up for Sigman's abuse in connection with his attack on the expelled members. He assailed Dunne for opposing the Gompers' forces at Portland and praised the Portland convention for unseating him. This attack threw the convention into turmoil.

The rest of the Sigman machine was re-elected. The convention adjourned.

K. K. K'S ROBBED OF ROBES IN NOTRE DAME; FEAR RIOT

Catholics Deny They Committed Outrage

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 18.—Eight Ku Klux Klansmen who were shorn of their nightshirts and masks here yesterday are still hunting those valuable garments. The K. K. K.'s were doing sentry duty on downtown streets here when a gang who didn't realize or didn't care that Klan robes cost a lot of jack, came up and tore the nightshirts from the sentries. There is to be a Klan konklave here, therefore the sentries.

The Klan officials charged that the disrobing act was done by students of Notre Dame university (Catholic). This the worthy fathers of Notre Dame deny, saying that their students were all in bed when the K. K. K.'s were disrobed.

The Klan also charges that the police refused to give them protection after the attack. The klan want to hold a parade, but the police refused a permit. The klansmen say they will parade anyway. The police fear a general riot, they say. They say that the boys who attend Notre Dame are a bunch of hard-boiled micks and are likely to give the klan "what for."

Thousands of the nightshirt mob were gathering here yesterday and today from northern Indiana, southern Michigan and eastern Illinois.

H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, is here from Atlanta, Ga., to lead the festivities.

MOSCOW, May 18.—The Russian aviator Rossinvky contemplates to undertake the fight between Moscow and Vladivostok on a Junkers machine. If his experiment proves successful, this air-route will be regularly established.

MACDONALD HITS THE FAKERS FOR LABOR TREASON

Miners' Ex-Secretary Hits Walker, Farrington

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 18.—Duncan MacDonald, former secretary-treasurer of the Illinois miners' union, flayed Governor Small and the labor fakers who sold themselves to the Republican party at the opening meeting of the state convention of the Farmer-Labor party of Illinois to an audience that packed the Labor temple to the doors.

He lashed Frank Farrington and John H. Walker for their treason to the workers and farmers of Illinois in lining up with the crooked politician who is now governor of the state. He was particularly bitter against Walker, who was once held in high esteem by the miners, but is now in the same category as Samuel Gompers and his crafty henchmen, like Victor Olander, the dry land sailor, and Oscar Nelson, the half-baked lawyer from Chicago, who is tickled to death whenever Mayor Dever allows him to act as mayor for five minutes to represent the city at some labor gathering.

These lackeys of the capitalist class, or "labor lieutenants," as old Mark Hanna used to call them, were shown up in their true colors by MacDonald. They appeared at the miners' convention to block the movement for a labor party. Whether they are getting paid for this work out of the treasury of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, or whether they are merely scabbing on the open hirelings of the capitalists, the fact remains that this tribe of labor leeches are not alone sucking large salaries out of the bodies of the workers, but also destroying the workers' power to resist the encroachments of their masters and preventing them from uniting politically for the purpose of ultimately organizing a government of workers and exploited farmers.

MacDonald denounced Farrington's plan for cheaper production thru electrification. This plan would mean more profits for the capitalists but not more pay for the workers. Any labor saving device under capitalism can only help those who own the means of production and distribution. The capitalists are interested only in making profits and evidently that is what Frank Farrington is also interested in—making profits for the coal operators.

Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party, declared that the Workers Party stood for the immediate organization of the workers and farmers politically in a national Farmer-Labor party. The labor fakers were frantically trying to stop the tide flowing in the direction of St. Paul on June 17th. The reactionaries were marshalling their spellbinders to confuse the workers and try to convince them that more could be gained by making deals with the old parties than by the workers organizing their own political party. This may be true in the case of the leaders who were given good fat jobs for selling the labor vote, but the condition of the rank and file today was worse off than even after years of non-partisan political activity.

Alexander Howat, deposed president of the Kansas miners, who is here on the invitation of the miners' convention, will address the Farmer-Labor convention tomorrow

COURTS SUPREME OVER PRESIDENT, JUDGES' RULING

Cal's Bootlegger Friend Must Go To Jail

When Judge Landis appeared before the Wheeler senatorial committee in Washington a sort time ago he was as sore as a boil at the president for pardoning a bootlegger who held the worthy Landis in contempt.

D. of J. "Seen."

The judge said that he thought he knew more about the case than the president did, and that undoubtedly Grossman's friends had been up to some dirty work or he would not have been pardoned. It developed before the committee that the facts as they were presented to Presidents Harding and Coolidge differed very greatly in important details. This seemed to Landis to indicate that Grossman's friends had "seen" some one in the department of justice.

Taken to the Can.

Judge Carpenter and Judge Wilkerson discussed the request of Grossman's attorney for extension of time or an appeal, and then denied it. Grossman was taken to the house of correction to begin his year's sentence.

The ruling of the court established a precedent, as it is the first time in the history of the judiciary that such a decision has been handed down.

Federal Judges Wilkerson and Carpenter told President Coolidge that when he pardoned Phillip Grossman he overstepped his powers. No one has the right to pardon a man sentenced for contempt of court. The decision means that the court's dignity is above the president's power. If you kill someone you can be pardoned but not if you step on the dignity of the courts.

Grossman was sentenced to one year in jail in February of 1921 by former Federal Judge Landis on a charge of contempt of court for violating an injunction to close his saloon. Efforts to secure a pardon for Grossman were started and the case was brought before President Harding. Harding's death put a temporary halt to the proceedings.

Judges Check President.

Several Carpenter and Wilkerson, declared the president could not interfere in contempt cases, for to do so would rob the judiciary of its power.

Judges Check President.

Several months ago, President Coolidge announced the pardon, and it then developed that Grossman had never served any of his jail sentence.

Judges Carpenter and Wilkerson declared the president could not interfere in contempt cases, for to do so would rob the judiciary of its power.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Officials of the department of justice today differed with Federal Judges Wilkerson and Carpenter, who held President Coolidge had no right to pardon Philip Grossman, saloonkeeper, sentenced to prison for contempt of court.

They said the president had an undeniable right, and should have it, to exercise clemency in such cases.

MORE THAN HALF ILLINOIS COAL MINES SHUT DOWN THROWING OVER 25,000 DIGGERS OUT OF WORK

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor).

The fact that union coal miners cannot protect their standards unless they share actively in the control of finances and management is revealed in a report prepared for the Illinois Coal Operators' association by its vice-president, L. H. Smith.

Smith's investigation found universal recognition among operators of the fact that only well financed and efficiently managed mines will be able to carry on at all during a period variously estimated at from one to five years.

This, in Smith's opinion, means that a minimum of 60 per cent of the mines cannot and will not operate competitive conditions continue. while the present wage scale and competitive conditions continue. Clearly a union miner's job will depend upon his employment in a well-managed mine and enormous pressure will be brought to bear upon those employed in ill-managed properties to accept lower wages to enable the owners to succeed in the fight for markets.

Half Mines Idle.

The report shows that more than half the mines in Illinois are now idle and that approximately 25,000 union miners are out of a job. Out of 397 mines in the state only 197 are working. Of the 200 idle mines 18 are closed temporarily, 27 are idle with policy undetermined. 112 are closed indefinitely and 26 are wholly abandoned. The 138 abandoned or closed down indefinitely represent 21 per cent of last year's production and employ 25 per cent of the miners in the state.

The report continues in part:

"The 197 mines now working produced during the last full coal year approximately 51,000,000 tons. These mines have a potential capacity at 75 per cent work time for the ready production of 75,000,000 tons a year. These mines during April, 1924, operated at fewer than two days a week.

"Adding the 18 mines to be held idle only temporarily and some additional mines whose owners will undoubtedly feel disposed to take a chance on an improved demand during the fall and winter we shall, regardless of extreme curtailment of production as a result of the large number of mines closed, have an ample capacity to produce 80,000,000 to 85,000,000 tons of coal which is substantially in excess of any probable requirements.

Big Ones Survive.

"Among the large number of operators from whom information was sought there is apparent universal recognition of the fact that only those companies that are excellently financed, that have coal of representative character for their districts, whose management is alert and efficient, whose coal preparation is constantly maintained at a high standard and who finally enjoy a large and dependable clientele earned by many years of high class merchandising methods, can expect to carry on at all during an indefinite period variously estimated at from one to five years."

The report calls attention to the fact that in the previous most extreme depression in the coal industry at the end of the period 1911 to 1915, 110 Illinois mines closed down or were abandoned leaving 280 in a position to operate.

BLANKENSTEIN RELEASED FROM PRISON OFFERS TO WORK FOR THE PARTY

Israel Blankenstein was convicted on the charge of being the organizer of the Communist Party in the Pittsburgh territory in May, 1922, and sentenced to serve from two to four years in the Western Pennsylvania Penitentiary. On May 11th, Comrade Blankenstein was released, having served his two years' minimum sentence. He sends the following telegram to the National Office of the Party:

> Feeling fine. Ready for work after a short vacation. Will stay this week in Pittsburgh. Would like to spend week or two in St. Louis or New York. If you want me let me know where you would place me and I will arrange vacation opposite end. Address headquarters. Greetings all.

Joseph Martinovich, who was sentenced to three to five years in the Western Pennsylvania Penitentiary on the same charge as Blankenstein, was released a few days earlier, having also served his entire minimum sentence. Both Blankenstein and Martinovich are held on deportation charges by the Federal authorities. Blankenstein being a citizen of Russia cannot be deported, since permission cannot be secured from the Soviet authorities for his entering into Soviet Russia by the United States government. Martinovich is to be deported to Jugo-Slavia after sixty days if the Federal authorities are successful in making their case.

BRITISH RADICALS CONDEMN PHILIP SNOWDEN'S BUDGET WHILE LIBERALS AND TORIES PRAISE IT HIGHLY

LONDON.—Conservatives, liberals and right wing Socialists greet the first Labor government budget, prepared by Philip Snowden, chancelor of the exchequer, as a satisfactory tax measure.

"It is not a Socialist budget," declares George Lansbury who represents Poplar, a radical London slum area.

Bob Smillie of the miners wished Snowden had been more advanced on the land tax question.

The president of the London chamber of commerce is glad that the "Labor government is as determined as either of the older parties to maintain the financial stability of the country."

Austen Chamberlain, former conservative chancellor, assured the Imperial Commercial association that "the chancellor is eminently conservative."

The liberals approve of the budget in every detail. They congratulate themselves on having allowed Labor to take office.

The budget is not revolutionary. It is for the most part a logical successor of former budgets. But it furthers free trade by abolishing, August 1, the tariff duties on autos and other commodities imposed as a war measure in 1915.

The tax on inhabited houses is abolished. It had hit the poor much harder than the rich, since the poor spend a far larger part of their earnings on housing than the rich.

The discussion among members of parliament after Snowden had made his speech turned chiefly on whether the government would have money enough for its social reform policy. With over $130,000,000 slashed from government revenue, there will be less than $20,000,000 surplus to spend on housing, greater unemployment relief, widows' pensions, etc.

Doheny, Jr., Excused From Testifying On Order Of Court

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Edward L. Doheny, Jr., son of the lessee of naval oil reserve No. 1, today was excused from testifying before the special oil grand jury here, by a court order.

When young Doheny refused to testify last week, the jury sought an order to compel him to doso. Doheny, Jr., yesterday filed an answer declaring he believed the government was attacking his transactions with Albert B. Fall and claimed his testimony might incriminate him.

Despite the argument of Atlee Pomerene, government counsel, that he would be given immunity, Justice Hitz ruled that he need not testify.

Hoover's Russian Relief Testimonal Hangs Prominently

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 18. Secretary Hoover's testimonial from the Russian government, which he proudly displays, framed, on his office wall, bears in richly illuminated and embellished Russian text this message:

Mr. Herbert Hoover, Chairman American Relief Administration, Washington, D. C.

Sir: Whereas, in the period of a disastrous national catastrophe, the people of the United States, represented by the American Relief Administration, readily responded to the needs of the population, already emaciated by foreign intervention and blockade, in famine stricken parts of Russia and confederated republics;

Whereas, the A. R. A. did organize, on a most extensive scale, the supply and distribution of food products and other articles of prime necessity;

Whereas, due to the boundless and entirely unselfish efforts of the A. R. A. millions of people of all ages were saved from death, and entire localities, including many towns, escaped a threatened fearful calamity;

Whereas, at this time, with the cessation of the famine, the magnificent relief work of the A. R. A. is being concluded;

Be It Resolved by the Council of the People's Commissars in the name of the millions of people who have been saved, as well as in the name of the whole working people of Soviet Russia and of the Confederated Republics and before the whole world, to this organization and to its leader, Mr. Herbert Hoover, to its representative in Russia, Col. Haskell, and to all the workers of the organization, to express the most deeply felt sentiments of gratitude, and to state that all the people inhabiting the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics never will forget the aid rendered to them by the American People, thru the agency of the A. R. A., holding it to be a pledge of the future friendship of the two nations.

Acting President of the Council of the People's Commissars, Kaminev.

Chief of the Administrative Department of the Council of People's Commissars, N. Grburov.

Secretary of the Council of People's Commissars, L. Fotiev.

LOVE FOR FASCISM, FEAR OF RUSSIA, IS U. S. POLICY

Hughes Likes 'Minority' Rule Of Mussolini

(By Intl. Workers Aid Service.)

Cordial relations between the United States and the Italian Fascist government have been undisturbed by the recent pronunciamento against bourgeois democracy made by Benito Mussolini, Fascist dictator of Italy, who in a speech at Palmero on May 6th said, "You cannot lead nations without the mailed fist." This is in line with other utterances of his in the past, notably his statement: "In Italy it has been demonstrated that it is possible to govern outside, above and against all liberal ideas. We, the Fascisti, are a minority, but we know what is best for the majority; and impose our will upon them."

There was never a moment's hesitation on the part of the United States to recognize the bloody dictatorship of Mussolini, while on the matter of recognition of Soviet Russia, Mr. Hughes, the secretary of state, declares he will not consider recognition of Soviet Russia because it is ruled by "a minority."

Russia's Claims for Damages.

A drive against recognition of Russia, or at least against the granting of credit to Soviet Russia, was launched in every country by groups of financiers who are insisting on the payment of old Russian debts. For instance, the Association of British creditors, which is most directly interested in the outcome of the present negotiations between Russia and England for the establishment of credit for Russia, did its utmost to cause the Anglo-Russian conference to collapse. But Russia had counter claims against the claims of the British. Russia put in claims for damages for the British participation in the Denikin, Kolchak, Wrangel and other white Russian attempts at counter-revolution which were in fact instigated by the British government. And already the British creditors of Russia are backing down. They have abandoned the demand for the return of confiscated and ruined property and are willing to accept compensation in the shape of concessions.

Recognition Inevitable.

Russia must have foreign credit in order to be able to purchase necessary products abroad. But all kinds of hardships are put in the way. It was easy for Kolchak to obtain credit with the American government. Recent revelations shows that 198,833 rifle and 13,594,026 rounds of ammunition were sold by the American government to Kolchak, the counter-revolutionists, July 30, 1919, "for delivery to Siberia." These arms were supplied to Kolchak on easy credit. Only greed of capitalists for foreign markets can overcome the hatred for the Russian workers' republic. American exporters and investment interests are growing restive because of the United States Department of State policy, especially since the recognition of Soviet Russia by our next-door neighbor, Canada. The greed of the capitalists and the pressure of the laboring masses from below will force the capitalist governments to come to terms with Soviet Russia.

Soviet Agent Warns Against Fakers Who Issue Fake Passports

(By The Federated Press)

MONTREAL, May 18.—Warning against unauthorized persons in the United States and Canada claiming to represent Russia is issued by Yasikoff, official agent of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Montreal. His official statement follows:

"In view of the information I have received that various parties in Canada and the United States calling themselves Russian and Ukrainian representatives are deceiving uninformed persons by issuing to them various documents and visas for the entry within the boundaries of the union which are not accepted by the representatives of the union abroad, I wish to announce that all questions regarding the rights of Soviet citizenship and entry within the boundaries of the union must be addressed to the official agent of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, 212 Drummond street, Montreal, Que., Canada."

Communist Attacks Czech Government For Carpathians

MOSCOW, May 18.—Mr. Gatty, a member of the Mohekho-Slovakian Parliament and Communist deputy for the Carpathian Russians, bitterly attacked the government, in his speech in Parliament, for not having up to the present granted the region he represents the autonomy provided by the Treaty of St. Germains. Mr. Szmeral, leader of the Parliamentary Communist faction, proposed that the administration of the Carpathian Russians be handed over to the Councils of Workers and Peasants' Deputres.

Fearful of the Communist succeses in the elections in Carpathian Russias, and in an attempt to prevent Communist propaganda from penetrating into Roumania, the authorities have closed the Roumanian frontier.

FOREIGN BANKERS LOOK SMALL IN THE EYES OF SOVIET CHIEFS TODAY AS PROSPERITY GROWS IN RUSSIA

LONDON, May 18.—Soviet Russia is not so darned sure whether it wants a loan or not, according to statements made to a Daily Herald reporter by Litvinov, assistant Commissar for Foreign Affairs, and Sokolnikov, Commissar of Finance. The bankers who thought they could strangle Soviet Russia by choking off credits are now waking up to the fact that they were barking up the wrong tree. Russia is progressing and doesn't care who knows it. The Daily Herald story follows:

"There is only a danger of arriving too early in Russia, one can certainly never be too late," seemed to have been the comfortable theory on which the policy of the West in dealing with Moscow was based. A theory like this is too trifling and unreal to be true at any time, but if the incessant efforts of the Soviet Government in the past few years to attract the co-operation of the West lent the maxim of "Never too late," a resemblance of plausibility, realities today disclose the absurdity of the fallacious attitude of comfortable waiting. The impression one gets in Moscow today reveals that the optimists who predicted the possibility of a Russian revival without the help of the West were essentially justified.

The most striking indication of a change in the situation is the remarkable turn of public opinion towards a foreign loan. Only a few months ago the problem of a loan loomed large, and seemed to be the sole hope of salvation for internal reconstruction. Very soon recognition appeared but a stepping-stone towards obtaining a loan. All eyes were turned to Lombard street, for without its intervention the revival of Russian industry, transport, and agriculture seemed to be impossible. Then came a change, and there is now not only an incomprehensible feeling of difference, but a practically negative attitude towards a foreign loan.

A Loan Unnecessary.

Replying to my question as to what terms would be required for the impending loan, Litvinov surprised me by saying, "We are considering whether we would accept any loan at all. The situation is no longer what it was at Genoa or The Hague. A big loan certainly we are unable economically to digest, and a small one we hardly need." And Tchitcherin said, "We don't contemplate a big loan; we can use a loan only for productive purposes such as would be commercially profitable and would pay interest and sinking fund." This unexpected and surprising attitude among statesmen I found reflected in numerous talks with business men and private citizens everywhere. People who were most set upon the hope of getting a loan are now so struck with the progress that the country has made that many are loudly protesting that loan is unnecessary and dangerous to sound progress.

Sokolnikov, Commissar of Finance, one of the most prominent of Soviet statesmen, in a long interview today, made clear the reasons for this surprising change of attitude.

"Two years ago," he said, "we had the choice of two courses. Theoretically we could have secured a speedier recovery of the country by the influx of foreign capital. But the unfriendliness of the West compelled us to take an alternative course, the slower, but steadier and surer development of our resources. The results of two years' efforts is evident in the soundness of our finances, which has been so strikingly demonstrated that it is unnecessary to dwell upon them; while the revival of industry and trade is obvious to every unprejudiced person. Our Budget is still only two-thirds of the pre-war Budget, but we can proudly point out that it is the only purely productive Budget in Europe today.

A Pacifist Budget.

"Our pacific policy, and the repudiation of militarism, navalism, and imperialism are already having financial results. Our entire expenditure under these headings is trifling in comparison not only with the Tsarist, but with most European Budgets. In addition there is a saving of a hundred million gold rubles (£10,000,000) a year in expenditure on the Church Synod and the Imperial Court. Poor tho we are, we have spent in the last few years two hundred million rubles on the development of industry, and we are certain to increase the amount next year to 500 million.

"To understand our careful and 'timid' attitude to a foreign loan you must realize that foreign loans are usually given not for productive, but for military and strategical purposes. We could absorb practically unlimited resources for new strategical railways and for restoring the armament industries and enlarging the army, navy, and air fleet, but we refuse to contemplate, and we don't expect our new friends abroad to contemplate, any such things. For productive purposes alone the use of borrowed money is strictly limited. Industrial revival is a slow process, and must remain slow to be sound.

"I for one shall certainly refuse any attempt to undermine the steady growth of our financal and industrial revival by the influx of foreign gold. Our Budget is assured. This is undoubtedly a slow process, but since it reflects exactly the growth of the productive forces of industry and the increase of the area under tillage it constitutes an assurance of national and economic health."

PEASANTS PLEAD SOVIET ACTION FOR UKRAINIANS

(By Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, May 18.—At the session of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee of Soviets at Kharkov, an interpolation was made by a group of peasant deputies as to what steps have been adopted by the Soviet Government to protect the Ukrainians oppressed in Galicia and Bessarabia, reference being made, in particular, to the obligations undertaken by Poland with regard to the Ukrainians in the Riga Treaty.

Following the explanations given by Mr. Schlichter, Commissioner of the People's Commissariat of Foreign Affairs, a debate ensued, in which many peasant deputies took part and which resulted in the adoption without a dissention vote of a resolution urging the Government to "find ways and means to alleviate the conditions of our ultra-frontier brethren, as would be up to the interests and national dignity of the Republic."

Workers' Aid Meet In New York Sunday For German Relief Work

NEW YORK, May 18.—The second conference of the International Workers' Aid of New York has been called for Sunday afternoon, May 25, at 2:30, at the Labor temple, 243 East 84th street. The conference is to hear the report of the activities to date in the $100,000 campaign and to plan further activities on behalf of the German workers. Delegates have been invited from all labor organizations.

The New York section of the International Workers' Aid has been highly praised by the national committee as being the leading section in the country in raising funds for the German workers. To date it has realized $33,000.

The International Workers' Aid in Berlin has written the New York committee that its funds have been of great service in the strike on the Hamburg waterfront, as well as the chemical workers' strike in Ludwigshafen.

The conference will plan further activities and approve the plans for the summer months and early fall and for the fall and winter campaign. All organizations are urged to participate and elect delegates to the conference.

All organizations that have not settled for their subscription lists and tickets to affairs are asked to settle at once before the conference begins.

Norway Fascists Copy Our K. K. K. Grafting Methods

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, May 18.—The Norwegian Fascists are using the methods of the American K. K. K. in order to build up a strong treasury. In circular letters they send out they stress the fact that they are against Communism, for Militarism, and request contributions in order to buy colors, flags, and banners. Like the K. K. K., regular Fascists must buy the regulation uniforms from the regular fellows who help the organization along. Then they ask another contribution in order to send the circular letter to other people. They miss no bets.

Soviet Ice Breaker Rescues Norwegian Sailors In White Sea

CHRISTIANA, May 18.—The Soviet ice breaker Sobbotnik arrived at a Norwegian fishing port with thirty Norwegian fishermen rescued from small fishing vessels wrecked in a White sea ice jam. Sudden storms of great ferocity almost wiped out the entire Norwegian and Russian fishing fleets. The ice breaker Sobbotnik is so named because it was built by Petrograd shipbuilders voluntarily on the unpaid "Communist Saturdays" in force two years ago.

MAC DONALD KILLS NATIONALIZATION OF COAL MINES

Betrays Interests Of British Miners

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, May 18.—The house of commons today rejected a private member's bill for nationalization of mines by a vote of 264 to 168.

The MacDonald government took care to announce before the vote was taken that it was not back of the bill.

The left wing of the British Labor party is exceedingly angry over the latest exhibition of duplicity on the part of the so-called Socialist government. They are now more firmly convinced than ever that the price paid by MacDonald for the premiership was an agreement with the Liberals that he would oppose the nationalization of mines and kill the capital levy, the two main links in the Labor party program.

The British Miners' federation, with over 1,000,000 members, is pledged to the nationalization of the mines. Its new secretary is A. J. Cook, a left winger. In a statement issued exclusively to the Workers Weekly, Communist organ, he stated that he was in favor of everything he stood for before his election—which is not usual—and among the things he stood for was the bill repudiated by the MacDonald government. While MacDonald is carrying out his agreement with the Liberals and the business elements who are supporting his government, he is violating his own pre-election stand and betraying the interests of the workers who made it possible for him to live in 16 Downing street.

Mr. Frank Hodges, former secretary of the miners' federation, now first lord of his majesty's navy, while an official of the union urged the miners to rely on the house of commons and not on their industrial power for the solution of their troubles. Now that he is a member of the government, he advises the miners that they can gain nothing the house of commons, but must pin their hopes on the power of their union.

While MacDonald and the right wing Socialists leap from one betrayal to another the influence of the Communists is growing. The best evidence of this is the increase in circulation of their official organ, the Workers Weekly.

Young Brazilian Is Out For Title Of Father Of Country

JUIZ DE FORA, Brazil, May 18.—A young fellow, eighteen years and one century, and the father of 48 children, has just announced his betrothal to a lady 95 years his junior.

Vincente Henrique Ferreira, the happy bridegroom, is happy to be the survivor of four such adventures as the one he is now about to embark on. Malthus never had a more dangerous and persistent enemy than Vincent. His last partner in the attempt to carry out Noah's order to the cargo of his ark, presented him with two healthy Brazilians only a few years ago and unless he runs up a record of 50 before he reports to St. Peter, he will consider his life's ambition unfulfilled.

The man who is almost entitled to the title of "The Father of His Country," is as black as the ace of spades and served three masters before slavery was abolished. Only six of his children are girls. His male descendants are prevented from carrying arms for fear they might take it into their head to overthrow the government. When asked how many grand-children he had, he referred the reporter to the Bureau of Vital Statistics and the bible. Vincent's latest female acquistion is pretty and is fond of children. Which, taken in connection with Vincent's record, speaks louder than words.

Dollars For Dolls Needed By Wife Of Steel Strike Victim

The wife of the steel strike victim, Jacob Dolla, who is still serving out his unjust term in prison, is appealing for aid from friends among the readers of the DAILY WORKER. Mrs. Barbara Dolla has written again to express her thanks for the donations she has already received and informs us that she is in need, "for here the work is so slack and getting from bad to worse; three days a week and six hours a day."

"A Dollar for Dolla" is a slogan we used some time ago to solicit help for the unfortunate worker who was imprisoned by steel trust operatives for his participation in the strike of 1919. It is a good one to keep alive, so that his widow may not suffer thru neglect.

Contributions may be sent in care of the DAILY WORKER, or directly to Mrs. Barbara Dolla, Lebanon, Pa.

MOUNT VESUVIUS IS GIVING ITALY A PEACEFUL DEMONSTRATION

NAPLES, May 18.—Mount Vesuvius burst into activity during the night, flames which were visible for miles reddening the sky over the crater of the great volcano. It is believed the eruption will continue for several days, but no danger is anticipated.

GARY GETS MOST PROFITS EVER FROM 8 HOUR DAY

Over $50,000,000 In First Three Months

By LELAND OLDS.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

Announcement that U. S. Steel corporation profits for the first 3 months of the year exceeded those of any peacetime quarter in the history of the corporation proves that Judge E. H. Gary is a prophet grown senile—if he ever was more than a propagandist. The complete refutation which it gives to his gloomy predictions about the abolition of the 12-hour shift should cause his future utterances to be taken for the propaganda of big business.

Scarcely a year ago Gary predicted that the abolition of the 12-hour shift would necessitate a 15 per cent increase in the price of steel products. But the 12-hour shift has been abolished and without raising prices the steel corporation has made a profit of $50,075,445 in three months. It exceeds by more than 90 per cent the average quarterly profits of the five years preceding the war.

Depression Doesn't Dent Gary.

Gary's remarks after the directors' meeting give the impression of a man so cushioned by wealth and the huge surplus profits of his concern that he has grown callous to difficulties and worries of the ordinary citizen. He said in part:

"At the present time there is no good reason for the depression. The fundamental conditions of the country were never better. There are inequalities, injustices, as between different lines of economic activity. (Wage earners will agree to this, also farmers). But this country has prospered and is prospering in spite of those things and it is only a question of time when the man of courage and patience will find that he never had a reason to fear as to the final solution of the problems which circumstances presented. (Easy for the multimillionaire but how about the man to whom loss of a job means the abrupt stoppage of a bare subsistence wage). Our country is rich, the cash in circulation very large and the ability to pay is slowly tho not regularly increasing."

No Cheer for Workers.

This little message of hope from the dictator of the steel industry is recommended to the families of the hundreds of thousands of unemployed workers and to the millions threatened with wage reductions.

Prosperity in the steel industry during the first quarter was not limited to the dominating corporation. The seven leading companies including Bethlehem, Republic Iron & Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Gulf States, Colorado Fuel & Iron and Inland Steel reported combined profits of $74,347,963 as compared with $50,499,699 during the same period a year ago, an increase of nearly 50 per cent.

But there is good ground for the suspicion that the steel industry has been deliberately crowding a large portion of the year's production and profits into the first quarter in order to make possible a short, sharp depression in which to deflate labor.

DAWES REPORT LOOKED UPON AS PLOT TO MAKE GERMANY ECONOMIC VASSAL OF THE UNITED STATES

By LOUIS LOCHNER
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

BERLIN.—Despite the May 4 election in which the monarchists failed to gain as expected, tho the Communists surpassed their own hopes, opinion in labor and radical circles is growing that the Dawes reparations report is an attempt to make Germany an economic and financial colony of the United States.

As one radical economist puts it: "American capitalism needs no longer fight with American labor over importing cheap alien labor, and it can in fact join in the nationalistic cry, America for the Americans.

The Dawes report provides a means to take over German industry. The only country that can take over this industry is the United States, America will use cheap German skilled labor for increasing the profits of American investors—and without having to import these laborers to the United States."

The first step toward undoing what socialization there has been in Germany thus far has just been taken, by reorganizing the state-owned railways as a separate concern, independent of the ministry of communications, under whose direction they were thus far operated. The minister of communications has been made general director of the German railways. But the principle has been put into practice that the railways are a distinct undertaking.

Ludendorff, who "captured" Halle, almost addressed a mass meeting of the extreme nationalists and antisemitists in Berlin. Almost—but at the decisive moment, when it became apparent that the Communists would break up the meeting, the hero preferred not to come. He had been advertised to speak as Kurt Erich—which to the initiated meant Erich Ludendorff. But the Communists got wind of this and mobilized their forces. Instead of a Ludendorff speech there was a merry street fight, in which both sides used clubs and billies until the police interfered.

Political arguments of this kind are a common occurrence.

A reversal to conditions under the imperial regime was brought about with reference to May day, labor's international holiday, by the conservative minister of the interior, Jarres. He forbade all open-air demonstrations of the workers. It is characteristic of the impotence of organized German labor that the ukase was accepted and that only the Communists called out their men and women and organized demonstrations nevertheless.

To which the Socialists as usual replied that the real reason why an excuse was given the minister of the interior was that the Communists proclaimed they wish to remove the government by force.

Over 8,000 farm hands are on strike in eastern Prussia, the stronghold of the German junkers. The districts especially involved are Koenigsberg and Fischhausen.

The strike is so complete there that even the ordinary emergency services such as feeding the live stock are refused by the farm hands.

The police report that during one day of the past week 20 suicides took place in Berlin has once again called attention to the fact that stabilization of the rentenmark has not brought a solution of economic distress. Practically every suicide was due to economic worries.

Potomac's Flood Sweeps Capitol's Squatters To Sea

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 18.—Rich loafers leaned over the rails of the two million-dollar concrete Key bridge here and watched the bodies and homes of poverty stricken "squatters" sweep down the Potomac river after the Baltimore and Ohio canal bank broke. About twenty houses of these poor rebels against landlords were swept away in the flood.

Where an earlier pedestrian saw an old woman in cheap calico trying to bail out her little house, later passers saw the small building leap in the air, then plunge and dive from sight in the raging waters.

"The rich live high and dry," commented Edward J. Irvine, who saw the flood sweeping away the poor squatters, "but even the elements of nature are against the poor until they learn to organize and strike their masters."

LEAD POISONED PAINTER CURES SELF BY FAST

Same Method Good For Other Ills

To the DAILY WORKER: What doctors and medicine could not do was accomplished by a strong power of will.

Benjamin Rifkin, who is a member of Painters Union, Local 144, Chicago, had been suffering from lead colic for a number of years and cured himself by fasting for five weeks. During the course of this fast, he encountered and overcame many difficulties. In the first week he found it was necessary for him to take cold baths several times during the day and drink water mixed with acid juice. The second week it was necessary to use compresses as the knees became weak. In order to prevent the gums from bleeding he chewed gum. The third and fourth weeks, encouraged by the success of his experiment, he forced himself to take long walks each day, in the cold January outdoors, and massaging the body with snow as it came in thru the open window of his room.

The crisis of the whole experiment came during the fifth week when he felt no pain, but the body had become weakened to such an extent that he fainted, was feverish and sleepless. However, he overcame all this and after the fifth week began eating gradually, confining his diet to raw fruits and vegetables.

During the time of his fast he lost 32 pounds. He has, however, regained all he lost in weight and six pounds in addition. Now he is back to work and says, "I feel fine and if I should ever again be troubled by lead colic I shall try my own 'nature cure.'"

It is interesting to note that during the five weeks of the fast, Mr. Rifkin had no assistance of any kind, either from doctors, friends or family. In fact, his wife knew nothing about it, as he told her he was going away to take a cure offered by some hospital in Milwaukee. Instead, he rented a room at the Metropole Hotel, Milwaukee, and proceeded with determination to cure himself. He succeeded.

Shipworkers Refuse 9 Hour Day.

HAMBURG, Germany.—The 45,000 workers engaged in the German shipbuilding industry who have been locked out since January because they adhered to the eight-hour day guaranteed by the official arbitrator, have almost without exception, turned down the suggestion of the employers to work on a nine-hour basis. In Hamburg, of the 18,000 involved, only 500 showed up for work.

Yipsel Re-Union Big Success.

The reunion of former active members of the Young Peoples Socialist league, held at Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch boulevard, last Saturday night, certainly attracted a big crowd. Not only those former Yipsels who joined the ranks of "tired radicals" have showed their great interest, but also those who consistently kept up their activity thru the channels of the Young Workers League and Workers party were in full attendance. A liberal representation from the present Y. W. L. worthies made of the occasion a real gathering of the clans.

ACTORS' UNION BINDS SELF WITH 10-YR. CONTRACT

Agrees Not To Engage In Sympathy Strikes

By LUDWELL DENNY.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

NEW YORK, May 18.—Ten years of peace on the American stage is forecast by the contract signed between the Actors' Equity Association, American Federation of Labor, and the new Managers' Protective Association, which controls 75 per cent of the New York productions. An anti-union managers' group with 11 New York shows and a few on tour are holding out, but it is expected that they will be forced to sign with the union before June 1, when the old contract expires. Besides the new M. P. A. contract, Equity has agreements with the remaining or independent managers and with practically all road and tent shows. The union has about 10,000 members.

Tho the contract with the M. P. A. nominally permits companies consisting of 20 per cent non-Equity members, it provides that non-members must pay into the union treasury a sum equal to initiation dues and fees and continue to pay amounts equal to membership dues. Most of the Broadway shows are already 95 per cent Equity casts. The managers agree to employ no expelled Equity member and no member delinquent in dues. The advantage of the contract to Equity is that no actor hereafter will have a good excuse to stay out of the union, for financial or other reasons.

Equity agrees not to engage in sympathetic strikes, not to close its membership rolls or raise initiation fees for 25 years. It agrees not to interfere with the subject matter, text, or casting of plays, nor to dictate salaries except of chorus girls (now $30 a week in New York and $35 on tour).

A joint board of arbitration with an umpire shall decide all disputes under the contract, which runs for 10 years.

At a union ratification meeting which voted 1,200 to 1 for the agreement, President John Emerson said:

"Aside from a few die-hard Fidelity leaguers (and their number seems to be decreasing daily), there won't be five actors in the whole of America playing the class of engagements covered by this agreement who will remain outside the Equity Association, for every possible motive for staying out has been taken away from them and every possible motive for the managers' trying to keep them out has been taken away from him, as in the future there will be allowed no non-Equity casts into which the manager might put the actor who leaves the Equity, and thus try to form a group to oppose the Equity and its aims."

Three Meetings Of Rail Labor Men Take Up Vital Issues

Three railroad labor organizations are holding their triennial conventions this week. They are the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, who are meeting in Cleveland; Switchmen's Union of North America, which is meeting in Denver, and the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, which is meeting at Newark, N. J.

These three organizations represent hundreds of thousands of workers in all parts of North America. The most important problem that will be discussed at these conventions will be the abolition of the railroad labor board thru the passing of the Howell-Barkley railway labor act, which is now before congress.

Since the last convention of the telegraphers they have started a bank in St. Louis which has deposits of more than $4,000,000.

Oppose C. P. P. A.

Politics will play an important part in the discussion at the convention of the switchmen. There has developed a strong opposition to further participation in the Conference for Progressive Political Action within the union.

The oilers will be faced with the problem of how to raise the pay of their members who are in the government employ, which is a fair section. The government is both a slave driver and a darn poor payer of wages, the oilers declare.

A lover of decorations who swiped $15,000 of trophies from Masonic temple at 912 North LaSalle street, is still at large, police say.

MEMBERSHIP, ATTENTION!

Continuing the work of familiarizing the party membership with the united front policy of the party in relation to the Farmer-Labor party, the central executive committee has arranged a series of meetings at which Comrade James P. Cannon will speak on the question of the party labor party policy. The meetings arranged will be held in the following cities:

May 21—Philadelphia, Pa.
May 23—Buffalo, N. Y.
May 24—Pittsburg, Pa.
May 25—Cleveland, Ohio; mass meeting, Labor temple, 2536 Euclid avenue, at 3 p. m.
May 26—Detroit, Mich.; House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin, corner Gratiot, at 8 p. m.

Every party member is urged to attend these meetings and branches to see to it that at least some members of the branch attend so that a further report can be made at the branches.

"Two Republics" To Be Exhibited In Newark Friday Night

NEWARK, N. J., May 18.—The new Soviet film, "Russia and Germany," which was shown so successfully for the first time in New York City at the Central Opera House, will be shown for the first time in New York, N. J., on Friday evening, May 23rd at 8 p. m. at the Newark Labor Lyceum, 704 So. 14th St.

In Germany, scenes were taken at great risk to the camera man because of the Fascists at work wrecking the young labor government at Saxony, and the great political Communist demonstrations where hundreds of thousands parade the streets, with the leaders, Remmelle, Heckert, Clare Zetkin and others agitating among the masses.

In Russia, the work of the Soviets is now quite different, building up the industries in the most efficient and modern methods available. There are complete scenes of the Moscow international agricultural exposition showing Russia years ago, the meagre huts in which the peasants lived and the modern, sanitary houses being built by the Soviet government for the workers.

Then the problem of taking care of the millions of orphans left in Russia after the great famine, seems to be solved by the excellent work of the Commune Homes. There are complete scenes showing these children at work and at play, especially is it interesting to see them at play in the John Reed Home where a drama written by the children is being played.

This is the best film released by the Friends of Soviet Russia, both in photograph, in titling and dramatic interest. The film is being shown for the relief of the struggling German workers.

SOVIETS WIPING ANNUAL DEFICITS OFF THE SLATE

1923-24 Budget Shows Healthy Condition

MOSCOW, May 18.—The budget of the Union of Socialist Republics for the year 1923-24 amounts to 1,750,000,000 gold roubles. In 1922-23 the deficit constituted 37.9 per cent, and, according to plans for 1923-24, it will be 21.5 per cent of all the expenditures, thus amounting to 356,800,000 gold roubles. It will be covered partly by credit operations and partly by currency issues.

The currency issues in 1922-23 amounted to 399,020,000 gold roubles (29.4 per cent of all federal revenues), and in 1923-24 they are expected to amount to not more than 180,000,000 gold roubles (10 per cent of all the expected revenues).

Less Tax in Kind.

The tax in kind (grain tax) will not exceed 3.2 per cent of the revenues of the budget of 1923-24, while in 1922-23 it amounted to 10 per cent. A characteristic feature of the federal budget of 1923-24 is the fact that it is expressed in gold currency and that it is to be carried out partly in chervontzy and partly in Soviet roubles, according to the rate of exchange of the chervontz.

In 1923-24 the part played by the revenues not derived from taxes (such as revenues from government properties and enterprises) has increased. During the year which has come to a close the revenues not derived from taxes have yielded 476,810,000 gold roubles (49.8 per cent of all federal revenues), and in 1923-24 the sum is expected to be doubled, i. e., to amount to over 803,000,000 gold roubles (52.9 per cent of all federal revenues). For the year 1922-23, not less than 400,000,000 gold roubles were granted as subsidy to the nationalized industries, and in 1923-24 it is proposed to appropriate for that purpose 69,000,000 gold roubles out of the budget resources.

Transport Subsidy Lessens.

In 1922-23 the transport system, together with the postal and telegraph, received from the federal budget a subsidy of 151,000,000 gold roubles. In 1923-24 it is expected that the expenditures for the transport and the postal and teelgraph system will amount to 693,000,000 gold roubles, thus reducing the subsidies to 34,000,000 gold roubles.

Considerable assistance will be given to agriculture, namely, 72,000,000 gold roubles. Altogether it is intended to spend out of the budget resources of 1923-24, 184,000,000 gold roubles for the financing of all branches of national economy.

On Wednesday, May 21st, Comrade Ernest Ettlinger will speak before the North Side English Branch of the Young Workers League at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted Street on the subject, "The Need for a Labor Party."

CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE MEETING.

The next meeting of the City Central Committee will be held on Tuesday, May 20th, at 2733 Hirsch Blvd., Workers Lyceum. There will be a very lively meeting and special reports on the Illinois Miners' convention, the State Farmer-Labor convention, and the Needle Trades' convention will be given by Comrade J. W. Johnstone, A. Swaback, Martin Abern, and others. In addition there will be important business to discuss. The attendance at the City Central Committee has steadily increased and the delegates are awake to the fact that the City central Committee is the real political body of Local Chicago, Workers Party. Outsiders are also invited to attend these meetings.

FASCISTI RUIN ONCE RADICAL GARMENT LOCAL

Amalgamated Italians Fight Russia

"Fascisti" officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Local No. 270, managed to manipulate their clique into giving the Executive Board of the union full power to act in support of the "political prisoners" of Soviet Russia. This action was at the last meeting of the local that two years ago was called the "most revolutionary" in the Amalgamated.

O. Cesaroni is president of Local 270 and was elected by the left-wing element to which he claimed to belong at the time. Power went to his head and now Cesaroni pretends that he is an Anarchist. He directs the local in the most reactionary channels possible.

Frank Pellegrino attempted to get the floor on the question of the Russian "political prisoners" but Cesaroni cut him short and delivered a long, slimy tirade against the Communists and Russia and forced the resolution thru without the amendment which would have given the local members a chance to consider their action.

Yellow and Black.

A Socialist business agent of the union, L. Chiostra, joined the president and O. DeFelices, another business agent and alleged "Anarchist," in railroading the motion thru the protests of various members.

Pellegrino says that Local 270 has no resolutions this year at the Amalgamated convention, whereas two years ago they had many advanced proposals, such as the shop committee system, affiliation of the Amalgamated with the Red Trades International, week work, and a 40-hour week.

"These local 'Fascisti' forget there are political prsoners in this country and in Italy and many other countries, but they must go to Russia to defend the counter-revolutionaries, who well enough deserve to be where they are," Pellegrino remarked on the foul betrayal of his local union by their officials.

Oregon Petitions For Farmer-Labor Place On Ballot

PORTLAND, Ore., May 18.—The Oregon Farmer-Labor party has filed a sample petition with the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon. This petition is for the purpose of putting the Farmer-Labor Party ticket on the ballot this fall. They must have 10,000 signatures of qualified electors before the party ticket can be placed on the ballot.

The party has opened up their headquarters at 515 Worcester Bldg., Portland, Oregon, and are going to carry on an active campaign and put a full ticket in the field this fall. They will immediately begin an active organization campaign all over the state. They will send delegates to the National convention in St. Paul June 17th.

Otto Newman is chairman and Franklin L. Rusmisel, Secretary-Treasurer of the State Central Committee.

Best People Get Jolt From Police; House Scofflaws

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 18.—As the second step in their drive on bootlegging in Illinois' capital city, the booze squad of the local police force has served ultimatums on owners of buildings housing bootleggers to get new tenants.

Owners failing to heed this warning will be served with injunctions vacating the buildings for a year.

The owners, many of them of Springfield's "best" families, were "surprised" when advised their properties housed bootleggers.

Another Bank Busted.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., May 18.—Another state bank has fooled the workers and farmers who had deposits in its keeping. The Dakota Trust and Savings Bank of this city suspended business and was placed in the hands of the state superintendent of banking.

No definite reason for failure was made public, altho it is intimated by officials, that withdrawals during the last six weeks had depleted reserves.

CLASS PARTY ORGANIZED AT PEORIA MEET

Duncan McDonald Is Named For Governor

By KARL REEVE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 19—Ninety-seven delegates mostly representing trade unions, formed the Illinois Labor Party here, adopted a platform, named a state ticket to run at the coming election, and elected Duncan MacDonald as delegate to the June 17th Conference of Farmer-Labor Parties at St. Paul.

The convention, which was marked by harmony of opinion for independent political action of the working class, after adopting the platform and passing resolutions unanimously passed a motion to instruct delegate MacDonald to work for the formation of a class labor party at St. Paul, and if one is formed, the Illinois Labor Party unanimously voted to become a part of it.

The state executive committee of the Illinois Labor Party was also instructed to try to secure the co-operation of other

Progressive Metal Workers Resisting N. Y. Wage Slashing

NEW YORK, May 19.—On Wednesday evening, May 21st, there will be a meeting of Progressive Metal Workers at the Hungarian Workers' Hall, 350 East 81st street.

The bosses in the industry have entered upon a campaign of wage slashing and union busting which has been going on without a show of resistance on the part of the yellow union leaders. Today a first-class mechanic receives 60 cents an hour or less.

Progressive Metal Workers are awake. They feel that it is time to put a stop to the bosses' holiday.

They have therefore, arranged the mass meeting on Wednesday to which have been invited all rank and file who want to improve conditions in the metal industry and halt the wage slashing campaign of the bosses. Many fine speakers will address the meeting, among them A. Overgaard of Chicago, National Chairman of the International Committee for Amalgamation in the Metal Industry. Admission is free.

PULLMAN WORKERS TO MEET TONIGHT FOR REVIEW OF STRIKE

A review of the recent Pullman strike is promised for tonight in Stancik's Hall, 205 East 115th street, Pullman, at 8 o'clock. A mass meeting of workers has been called by the Workers Party and able speakers will go over the strike events with the workers, showing how the weakness of inadequate organization prevented the strikers from gaining full benefit of their demands.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, Jack McCarthy, circulation manager of the paper, and M. Gomez, active on the Labor Defense Council, will discuss the strike with the workers.

All of the men who went out in a spontaneous strike against the Pullman Company and all other workers of the plant or town will be particularly interested in this evening's meeting. The issues and difficulties of the strike will be intelligently taken up and the need for greater organization proved by specific reference. The Workers Party position for a mass class Farmer-Labor Party will be clearly set forth with a demonstration to the workers of the necessity for uniting in independent political action to fight the boss with his own weapon: POWER.

Speakers in Polish and South Slavic will also address the mass meeting tonight at Stancik's Hall, Pullman.

Worker Seriously Hurt When Tank Car In Oil Plant Exploded

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 19.—Fire caused by an explosion in a tank car swept the Craig Oil and Refining Co. plant here today.

At least one man was seriously injured. Police were unable to determine whether others were within the range of the flames.

A great cloud of smoke went up after the explosion, enveloping the plant. Flames shot 250 feet into the air.

All available fire fighting apparatus was hurried to the scene. Police established a safety zone two blocks from the plant.

Thousands of gallons of oil and gasoline are stored at the plant and police feared new explosions.

Chicago real estate sharks promise higher rents. Officials of the Cook Coouty Real Estate Board characterized the report that they are pledged to reduce the present high rents as "bunk."

DAILY WORKER'S EXPOSE OF ILLINOIS MINE REACTIONARIES GETS UNDER FARRINGTON'S SKIN

PEORIA, Ill., May 19.—President Frank Farrington and his associates have denounced the DAILY WORKER in the last three sessions of the convention. In addition, the DAILY WORKER reporter heard Farrington threaten the representative of another Chicago paper that he would have to stop printing stuff matter that knocked Farrington or he will have to leave the convention. The reporter got in bad by stating that "Farrington had climbed aboard the Lewis bandwagon," and by ridiculing Farrington's alliance with Governor Small.

Farrington has been buying the DAILY WORKER every day from Kitty Harris, as have two-thirds of the other delegates. When one delegate heard Farrington's attack on the DAILY WORKER he said, "If the DAILY WORKER representatives get thrown out of the convention, there will be a lot of other delegates thrown out with them. I am not a Communist, but I like your paper."

At the Friday morning session of the convention, Farrington declared, "We have a paper being distributed to the delegates that is not telling the truth. It has assumed the authority of branding me as the most despised man at the convention. It prints scandal and infamous falsehood, and nobody says nay."

George Mercer Complains.

George Mercer, chairman of the resolutions committee, on Friday afternoon, holding a copy of the DAILY WORKER in his hand, denounced it and blamed the Workers Party for the poor showing made by Walker in the Labor Party campaign. He forgot that the Workers Party was not in existence at that time. "I have been reading two or three of the numbers of this paper," said Mercer. "They call Farrington a traitor, Walker and McCarthy, they say, are just kidding you and they tell you Olander is a liar, and that the Socialist party is bankrupt in intelligence."

Saturday morning, Walker again objected to being called a renegade Socialist by the DAILY WORKER, and then admitted he was just that. He objected to the DAILY WORKER declaring Walker begged on his knees for favors from the old party politicians, and then said: "If he thought it would get the trade union movement favorable legislation he might get down on his knees to the politicians."

However, the DAILY WORKER has too long a record as a friend of the rank and file miner to be discredited by cheap attacks of thin-skinned labor

I. L. G. W. LEFT WING'S FIGHT TO CONTINUE

Staff Writer Tells How Sigman Won In Boston

By REBECCA GRECHT
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON.—(By Mail).—The expulsion policy of the Sigman dictatorship triumphed for the time being when the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union defeated resolutions demanding the unconditional reinstatement of all expelled members and the cessation of persecution of the militants. The vote was taken after the official steam roller cut short all discussion of the issues involved, refusing delegates the right to explain the principles of the Trade Union Educational League which was under fire. Nevertheless the fight for more efficient unionism and more revolutionary conduct of the class struggle which the T. U. E. L. is organizing will go on.

The approval of Sigman's red-baiting policy came at the close of the report of the Committee on Officers' Reports on the so-called "left hysteria in our union." This report charged the progressives with deliberately disorganizing the locals, with carrying on malicious campaigns of slander against the officials, and with belonging to a dual union, the Trade Union Educational League, which was viciously attacked as an outside agency seeking to disrupt the International.

Resolutions from numerous local unions were read demanding in no uncertain terms that expelled members be reinstated, and that freedom of belief be tolerated in the organization. The committee recommended that these resolutions be not concurred in, and that the report be accepted.

Saroff Defends Expelled.

Delegate Saroff was then given the floor in defense of the militants. Attacking the policies of the International officialdom as responsible for the present chaos in the industry, he charged that the Sigman machine was driving out of the union all the elements who had a truly constructive program for building up and strengthening the organization.

Saroff denied that the league was a dual union as it had never usurped the functions of a union. He explained the principle of amalgamation for which the militants were battling, claiming that this had aroused the bitter opposition of the officials only because it threatened their well-paid jobs. The International, he emphasized, did not object to politics in the union for it permitted Abe Cahan, an outsider representing the socialist party, to dictate its policies. The real objection was against those who propagated principles in any way opposed to those sanctioned by the International.

When he demanded whether agitation for independent political action could be regarded as disrupting the union, sneering comments were heard from all those who had been loudest in applauding the administration's policy, and first in calling previous question to choke off discussion of the progressives' position.

Floor Denial to Others.

Delegate Saroff was the only one permitted to speak. No sooner had

URGE FOREIGN BORN TO PROTEST DAVIS' STAND HERE TOMORROW

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 19.—All foreign-born residents of this vicinity have been urged to come out and demonstrate their opposition to the bill for the registration of aliens, which will be advocated here at Carnegie Library, on May 21, by Secretary of Labor Davis. The secretary will speak at 8 p. m., at the library, corner of Ohio and Federal streets.

MINERS HEAR HOWAT GIVE CLARION CALL

Urges Farmer-Labor Party On Convention

By KARL REEVE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 19.—Declaring that the time had come for the workers to assert themselves in a "real live Farmer-Labor Party," Alex Howat, expelled Kansas mine workers' president, won the enthusiastic support of the miners' convention.

Howat spoke for several hours, sharply criticising the government of the two old parties and the use of the injunction in strike-breaking, condemning the Kansas Industrial Court Law, and urging the United Mine Workers' union to organize the unorganized mine fields of this country.

Refers to 1919 Strike.

Referring to the strike of 1919, Howat said that the government had stepped in with an injunction just when he believed the miners had the coal operators licked to a finish. Howat stated that at that time the strike was called off, implying that the International union officials had sold out.

The deposed mine president urged the miners to "elect men to represent us, the rank and file, in the legislative halls of this country." He said: "We'll always be in the same shape as long as we go along with the old parties.

"Let us refuse to be hood-winked any longer," cried Howat, "and deceived by a few screaming politicians. We can only judge by the past, and we have learned by the past that there is no hope for the workers in the class of people who are in the old parties.

For F.-L. Despite Walker.

"I am for a Farmer-Labor Party even tho Brother Walker is discouraged by the few votes he received, and I haven't changed my position in the least.

"There must be a start sometime and the time has come for the workers to make that start on a party of their own."

The former mine union president then continued that if the capitalists want laws to be respected they should make laws the people could respect. He declared that the time had come when the people should let the lawmakers know they want their rights and are ready to fight for them.

Told of Allen's Folly.

He told how Governor Allen of Kansas had the idea he could ride into the presidential seat at the White House on the backs of the workers by putting an end to strikes with his Industrial Court Law.

Howat related how Governor Allen had had fond hopes of passing industrial Court Laws all over the country.

"We must be aggressive in going on with the fight," Howat called to the convention. "Let there be no surrender to the employers of labor. Some move must be made by the International organization to see that the unorganized miners of this country are brot into the field of the miners' union."

Victim of Farrington Deal.

Howat was brought dramatically before the attention of the delegates in the morning session when the resolution demanding Farrington explain the famous graft charges, was before the delegates.

"The victim of the Lewis-Farrington deal is sitting in this hall right now—Alex Howat!" cried John Watts, one of the movers of the resolution.

Tremendous applause greeted the mention of the honest Kansas fighter.

Check Graft Probe.

JUDGE VICTIM OF PHOBIA WHEN ALIENS APPEAR FOR CITIZENSHIP

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 19.—Joseph Aspinall, New York State Supreme Court Justice, who makes a practice of denying citizenship to persons who exercised their legal right in claiming draft exemption as aliens during the war, is on a rampage again. Within the last few days he has denied citizenship to 118 applicants on that ground without even giving them a hearing.

Think This Over

Here is something for Chicago workers to think about.

John Bajur, a friendless laboring man was shot dead as he was coming out of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad yards with his hands full of a few rotten potatoes which he had taken to keep his family from starving.

Bajur was shot Sunday by a railroad gunman named Dewey Norman. The killing was peculiarly atrocious. Witnesses say no warning was given the starving man before the gat barked.

Yesterday an inquest into the cause of Bajur's death was halted—at the request of a certain Lawrence Packman who said the American Legion wanted to testify.

Can a corporation gunman shoot a starving worker without warning and then escape investigation thru the aid of the American Legion?

Is membership in the American Legion a license to commit murder with impunity—so long as the victim is a friendless worker? What about it, workers of Chicago?

DORIOT, FRENCH Y. C. L. LEADER, FREED AFTER ELECTION AS DEPUTY

PARIS, May 19.—Jacques Doriot, recently elected a Communist deputy from a Paris suburb, was granted amnesty today by the President of France. The President was forced to free Doriot after his election; it was not any sudden rush of generosity to the President's head that freed Doriot.

Doriot was sentenced to prison for two years because of anti-militaristic activities in the Ruhr. He will take his seat in the Chamber of Deputies June 1. Doriot's activities in the Ruhr district were in connection with work of the Young Communist League of France. The French government got very excited in trying to discover a plot between the Young Communist and the German government. The Communist Leaguers made no bones about their working with the Young Communist movement of Germany but denied that they were trying to help the German government.

JACQUES DORIOT

Scores of other young Communists were also arrested and sentenced to from 15 days to 18 months in prison. Doriot will work for the release of his comrades who are still in prison from his seat in the Chamber of Deputies.

Threat Of Methodist Church To Follow Christ, Raising Hell

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 19.—Interest in impending action by the Methodist Episcopal General conference on a resolution "outlawing" war as far as the church is concerned, today overshadowed that manifested in the election of four new bishops.

Election of bishops for vacant Episcopal seats at Buffalo, Omaha, Chattanooga and Singapore was first on the day's order of business, however.

The conference appeared divided over the resolution against war. The committee on the state of church adopted by a considerable majority a resolution calling for the church to take a decisive stand in opposition to war while leaving it to an individual's own conscience whether he participates.

Telegrams opposing adoption of the "anti-war" resolution have poured in during the past few days.

WORKERS PARTY NATIONAL OFFICE IN NEW BUILDING

Ruthenberg Saws Bars Off Windows

The DAILY WORKER has new neighbors. The National Offices of the Workers' Party and the Liberator have moved to the new DAILY WORKER building. The National Office and the various language federation offices had all their furniture, books and papers sent over from 1009 N. State street Saturday afternoon and yesterday morning they came into the new quarters ready to straighten out their stuff and proceed to work.

When C. E. Ruthenberg, national secretary, arrived at the new address the first things that struck his eye were the iron bars on the rear windows of his new office. Calling the attention of all and sundry to this insultingly counter-revolutionary condition he called for a hack saw. Nick Dozenberg, head of the literature department, produced the saw and the two men began the removal of the obnoxious bars.

Bob Minor, editor of the Liberator, returning from his trip in the east, arrived in time to see the wielders of the saws attacking the bars on his windows. "Here, here, that will never do," snapped Bob. "If the revolutionary workers are to achieve freedom it will be only thru their own efforts. If bars are to be sawed I will saw my own bars. Gimme the saw." So saying Bob got to work.

The new telephone number of the national office will be the same as that of the DAILY WORKER—Monroe 4712 and 4713. The address you know—1113 W. Washington street.

Female Fink Kills Man Who Shared Love With Others

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 19.—Mrs. Grace Dolby, 35, was arrested in a rooming house here today and held on charge of murder in the death of George B. Hackney, a widower, and father of four children.

Jealous of his attentions to other women, Mrs. Dolby, who has a husband and four sons, threw carbolic acid in Hackney's face in a motion picture theatre last night, causing burns and shock from which he died on the way to a hospital.

DISCOVERY OF BURNS FRAME-UP PLOT CAUSE OF NOTORIOUS FINK'S SUDDEN EXIT FROM DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The reason for William J. Burns' sudden decision to disconnect himself from the payroll of the Department of Justice was revealed when the Brookhart committee investigating Harry M. Daugherty and the D. of J. while under his direction unearthed proof that the Mexican revolution of 1921 in Lower California, was financed by the oil thief Doheny, with Albert B. Fall as disbursing agent.

William J. Burns tried to frame the D. of J. agent who furnished the department with the information. News of the forthcoming expose reached Burns and he decided to quit. It is doubtful however if his hurried exit will save him from being placed in the dock.

An agent by the name of Gershon was dismissed from the D. of J. in 1921 for interfering with the shipment of arms to Mexico. Fall called Gershon to his private car and told him to lay off. Daugherty and Burns knew of Fall's activities.

Gershon wanted to get this information before the investigation committee and Burns was warned in a telegram on February 1st, this year. It was this telegram, the Brookhart committee was after, when it asked Daugherty for the D. of J. files, and were met with a refusal. Immediately Burns learned that Gershon was on the war path he proceeded to frame him. He wrote a letter to L. C. Wheeler, his agent in Los Angeles, suggesting that arrangements be made to "get" Gershon. He said it could be "fixed up" with the District Attorney. But Burns was gotten first. It looks as if this notorious crook's career is nearing a close.

INQUEST OVER FINK'S VICTIM IS POSTPONED

Murdered Man Stole Handful of Potatoes

The American Legion is holding up the inquest over the body of John Bajur, 44, who was shot and killed Saturday by Detective Dewey Norman, of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, for the theft of a handful of rotten potatoes.

The inquest, which was to be held yesterday morning, was postponed until Friday on receipt of a letter from Lawrence Packwood, 6226 Stony Island ave., asking that the Legion be permitted to appear in defense of Norman.

The letter attempts no justification for its action, and no reason for its stand can be found excepting that Norman is apparently a Legionaire.

Evidence of eye-witnesses indicates that the shooting of Bajur was a cold-blooded murder. Martin Nalas, 610 May street, was present when the shots were fired.

"I was just passing by the yards," Nalas told a DAILY WORKER reporter, "when I noticed a man who was carrying a few potatoes in his hands. As he was passing the doorway of the yards' office, a detective sprang out. Without a word he fired three shots at the man with the potatoes. I am sure that he gave signal and no command."

Stole Potatoes to Live.

Bajur, who is Polish by birth, had been employed irregularly as sawyer at the Chicago Mill and Lumber Co. His wages seldom amounted to more than $24 a week, and his family, consisting of a wife and two children, found it impossible to live in their three tiny rooms at 836 N. Racine avenue, without taking in a number of boarders. For some time Bajur has been working only a few hours a day; he has been unable to protect himself thru union action, since the Chicago Mill and Lumber Co. makes it a point of honor to fire any employee affiliated with a labor organization.

A son of 18, Adam, has been out of work for many weeks. Bajur's other child is a girl of 15, of stunted growth, with the drawn cheeks and compressed lips that tell of years of hunger and cold. She said that neighbors had often come in with stories of the vegetables that could be picked up in the yards.

Norman is being held at the Desplaines street police station, pending the inquest.

Strike Urged As Weapon For Sunday School Teachers

BURLINGTON, N. J., May 19.—A strike of Sunday school teachers is the novel suggestion of Walter S. Athern, Boston University. In an address to the New Jersey Sunday Schol Association's annual convention, he said this was apparently the only method whereby teachers could get "tools."

GOMPERS IS FOR AID FOR LABOR FOES

Labor Fakers Cogs In Capitalist Machine

(June 17 Press Service.)

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 19.—The differences between the leadership of the American Federation of Labor and the Conference for Progressive Political Action as compared to the desires of the rank and file as represented in the National Farmer-Labor-Progressive Convention to be held in St. Paul, on June 17th are clearly shown by an examination of the three groups in action.

Mr. Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, has issued a letter to all of the local unions in Minnesota in which he states that Congressman Schall has a "100 per cent labor record" and is worthy of the support of organized labor in his campaign for the Republican nomination for United States senator. Mr. Schall is one of the Republican opponents of Magnus Johnson, who was elected by the farmers and workers of Minnesota on the Farmer-Labor ticket. This appears to be a direct slap at the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota which has succeeded in electing two United States senators and will without doubt elect its entire state ticket this fall. At the time of the election of Senator Shipstead in 1922, the C. P. P. A. tried to persuade the workers and farmers that they ought to support the Democratic candidate.

The Conference for Progressive Political Action has recently issued an appeal for the purpose of inaugurating "a nation-wide campaign for the election of true representatives of the people to Congress and to state and local offices." Thruout the entire document they talk only of individuals, nothing of building a great political party of the farmers and workers.

In California, the old Farmer-Labor Party, the Non-Partisan League, the Socialist Party, and the Workers Party have united in calling a state convention to be held in San Francisco on May 31 and June 1 for the formation of a state Farmer-Labor Party. This call is having the support [illegible] all the workers and farmers who are for independent political action by the workers and farmers. There also exists in California a state committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action which has the backing of those conservative elements opposed to a new party. This latter group has recently issued an appeal to local unions in the state asking them to organize local groups of the C. P. P. A. In this call there appears the following paragraph:

Oppose Farmer-Labor Unity.

"Attention is called in this connection to a call recently issued for the formation of a new political party in California, to be known as the Farmer-Labor Party. The last convention of the American Federation of Labor, by a record vote of 25,066 against 1,895, rejected a resolution favoring the formation of a new political party. The same American Federation of Labor convention urged the organized workers to be partisan to principles and not to be partisan to political parties. The last convention of the California State Federation of Labor also voted against the formation of a state Conference for Progressive Political Action. The State Building Trades Council, which met at Sacramento, resolved to do likewise."

These three documents plainly show that the workers and farmers have nothing to hope for from the leaders of the American Federation of Labor. It is still the time worn policy of "rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies," dressed in another suit of clothes. They do not even practice consistency in carrying out their avowed policy. Their action in supporting a candidate in the Republican primaries in Minnesota, where the Farmer-Labor Party is a full grown party, would indicate that the tie to the two old parties is greater than their tie to their friends, as represented by the choice of the rank and file of the farmers and workers. Actions of this kind cause those who are for political action independent of the two old parties, to believe that the Washington environment has thrown the labor officialdom into close contact with the political machines of the financial interests.

Learned From Experience.

Contrasted with this, the workers and farmers of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana and Washington have learned from bitter experience that they have nothing to expect, except oppression, from either the Republican or Democratic Parties. Years of struggle against the political machines of these groups, which they found to be dominated by the lumber trust, the railroads, the bankers, the wheat gamblers, the mining interests, the power trust, etc., has convinced them that although it may take a little longer, the only solution of the economic problems confronting them is to build a political party controlled by the workers and farmers and organized in such a way that it can aggressively fight for control of the governmental power and use it in the interest of the useful members of society.

In the northwest states, these Farmer-Labor Parties have become a reality. The convention to be held in St. Paul on June 17, frankly states that it is thru with the parties of Wall Street. It will endeavor to lay the foundation for a new party, that will ultimately be able to establish a workers and farmers government in the United States. The arrangements committee urges all local unions, co-operatives, farmers' groups as well as other groups of progressives who are definitely thru with the two old parties, to elect delegates to the St. Paul Convention. June 17 is destined to mark the building of a party representing the interests of the producing masses.

PLAGUE OF BANKRUPTCIES BREAKS OUT IN BERLIN AS BUSINESS DROPS

BERLIN, May 19.—German business is in a critical condition. Many business houses particularly in the shoe and foodstuff industries are asking moratoria. The commercial boycott by the Soviet government hit German business a solar plexus blow. Doubt that the Dawes plan will be accepted has increased the nervous tension.

The gigantic strike in the Ruhr is having its effect thruout the country. Thirty-five bankruptcies were reported in the last two days.

While the demoralization of Germany is becoming more complete, Soviet Russia is progressing rapidly. Compared to the conditions in the rest of Europe, with the possible exception of France, Russia is enjoying prosperity.

The German Nationalists are demanding that the Marx-Stresseman government refrain from committing the country to the Dawes plan. It has the backing of the industrialists.

How Sigman Won In Boston

he finished, then the well-trained machine shouted previous question; and tho other delegates had demanded the floor, discussion was closed, amidst heated protest. The recommendation of the committee was accepted by a vote of 204 to 36.

This was the most flagrant example of machine steam-rollering that the convention has yet seen. From the very first day of the report of the credentials committee it was evident that the question of the League and the Sigman expulsion policy were the most important problems before the convention. When in the course of the debate on the unseating of delegates Sigman called speakers to order, who touched upon the League principles, he stated that an opportunity to discuss the question would be given when the report of the General Executive Board on the left wing came before the convention. Now that the matter had finally been brought up for consideration, no debate was permitted, no reply to the violent attacks upon the League was tolerated, and the officialdom had an easy victory.

The report on the "left wing hysteria" immediately followed the report on the case of Local No. 15, Philadelphia, which had been reorganized after the expulsion of the most active workers in the union, because it had refused to accept the order of the G. E. B. outlawing the League.

Protest Philadelphia Expulsions.

This report aroused much discussion. Delegates declared that while the administration preached the necessity of organization campaigns, in practice it used its power to disorganize the unions. The reorganization of Local No. 15 has given a weapon into the hands of the G. E. B. to coerce any local which permits differences of view, and has established a precedent which threatens the ruin of the International. It was pointed out that the expelled members of Philadelphia had demonstrated their loyalty to the union by advising all their sympathizers to apply for admission to the reorganized local, insisting that the union must be preserved under any circumstances. The report was finally accepted by a vote of 204 to 26.

The action of the convention on the question of the expulsion policy was quite in accord with decisions made the previous day which established a czarist dictatorship in the International and made heresy-hunting the prime object of the organization.

Despotic Authority of G. E. B.

A series of constitutional amendments adopted at the convention have practically placed the entire membership and all the local unions under the receivership of the General Executive Board, which has been given despotic authority over the functions, acts, opinions of every unit and every individual in the International.

The amendments to the constitution were offered by the Committee on Law with whose report the convention on the 11th day of its sessions finally began to consider the actual work before it. This committee had been busy for several months under the direction, it is alleged, of Morris Hillquit, framing a new constitution which should legalize and perpetuate the ruthless policy of suppression and persecution carried out by the Sigman red-baiting machine. The result shows that the committee understood its task well, and whatever other criticism may be made against it, lack of thoroness is not one of them.

The chairman of the committee, in introducing his report, stated that the amended constitution differed in no essentials from the old one, simply clarifying certain points so that "there may be no misinterpretation possible in case some matters are brought to court." With the reading of the first amendment, however, there could be no doubt in the minds of anyone as to the significance of the proposed changes.

Revoking Charters at Will.

This was demonstrated in the immediate opposition aroused against the first attempt of the officialdom to bring its iron heel down upon the local unions. An amendment was offered giving the G. E. B. the right to suspend or revoke the charter of any subordinate labor union for "improper conduct." A murmer of protest was heard at once, and demands for the privilege of discussion rang out from all sections of the hall.

Delegates insisted that the term "improper conduct," be clearly defined. They pointed out that by its vagueness it gave the G. E. B. bureaucratic power to control the acts of units of the International, allowing each member of the G. E. B. to determine for himself what constitutes improper conduct. The abuse authority made possible by this amendment was pointedly illustrated by Delegate Hyman, manager of Local No. 1. He called the attention of Sigman to the fact that the provision in the present agreement with the manufacturers, which allows the manufacturer to discharge a worker for "improper conduct" has been so misused that the administration has resolved to eliminate that clause from the new agreement. The machine worked well, however, and the amendment carried by a vote of 173 to 50.

Makes Sigman Dictator.

This was only one of the proposals directed specifically against local unions. Another amendment gives the president of the International power "in cases of emergency to call meetings of local unions, joint boards or other subordinate bodies and preside over them." The president, of course, decides when cases of emergency exist. In other words, he has dictatorial powers to decide how unions shall conduct themselves, to break up union meetings at pleasure, etc. Resolutions introduced giving local unions some measure of local authority, such as the power to establish the recall, were defeated.

International Espionage Act.

The most vicious amendment, termed by many delegates, the International Espionage Act, was Article 11, Section 13, which states that a member may be suspended or expelled for "holding membership or office in a dual union or in any other organization now constituted or functioning within the framework of this constitution and attempting to shape the policies, determine the choice of officers or influence the actions of the I. L. G. W. U. or any subordinate body of the same, or otherwise to usurp or interfere with the legitimate functions and rights of the I. L. G. W. U., its subordinate bodies and its officers, or for active support of such an organization."

The significance of this section was stated by Sigman himself, who declared, replying to a question whether this was not directed against a political party, that any organization, political or educational, comes under this provision.

Dodges "Dual Union" Issue.

When a delegate demanded that Sigman explain the meaning of dual union, he evaded a reply, declaring that he was at the convention on business of the International and would not waste time on organizations not related to the union.

The reading of this amendment created a turmoil in the hall. The machine had been all prepared and called previous question before a single delegate could take the floor. Amidst indignant protests from the militants, and requests for points of information from all sides, the amendment was railroaded thru by a vote of 172 to 31.

System of Inquisition.

The passage of this amendment establishes a system of inquisition in the International. The entire progressive movement in the union is shackled. Every member is now responsible for all his words and acts to the General Executive Board. Charges of disloyalty may be preferred against him for criticising the officials, for discussing union problems outside the union headquarters, for holding any economic or political views not sanctioned by Sigman, or Feinberg, or Perlstein, or any one of the fifteen vice-presidents in the G. E. B. A member may even be suspended or expelled for belonging to a political party that advocates industrial policies not in conformity with those practiced by the International.

The entire constitution, as amended, is the work of a very skillful lawyer. It is full of elastic phrases open to any interpretation. The final authority to interpret them is the General Executive Board.

In addition to approving the expulsion policy and establishing an inquisition, the convention also heard reports from the committees on Education, Insurance, Organization, Union Labels. It adopted recommendations for unemployment insurance, sick benefits, and family protective insurance, all of which were left to the incoming G. E. B. to elaborate and apply.

Publicity In Scab Sheets.

The report of the committee on union labels was given prominence by the administration. In order to combat the growing sweat-shop evil, the union plans to educate the consumer to demand union-made products. For this reason the committee recommended the establishment of a union label department and the appropriation of $200,000 within a period of two years for purposes of publicity in such magazines as the Ladies' Home Journal, Saturday Evening Post, etc. The two papers are under the official ban of the typographical union as scab sheets. Members caught reading them are fined.

The appropriation of such a huge sum of money for union label was severely criticized by progressive delegates. It demonstrates the absolute incompetence of an administration that is ready to spend $200,000 for such a purpose when the crying need is an intensive organization campaign involving hundreds of thousands of dollars.

How little interest the administration really has in the organization of the workers in the industry was shown by the amount of time devoted to the problem at the convention. The committee on organization reported at 10 p. m. In thirty minutes, while delegates were half asleep and scarcely listened, the recommendations for starting an organization campaign were completed, and the incoming General Executive Board was instructed to put them into effect.

MOSCOW ART PLAYERS TELL OF SYMPATHY WITH SOVIET RUSSIA

NEW YORK, May 19.—The Moscow Art Players denied rumors spread by counter revolutionary organizations that they are against the Soviet government, and that they are not returning any more to Russia. In a letter to a local Russian labor paper, K. Stanislavsky, head of the Russian Art organization, states among other things:

"The slanderous rumors about us have been denied numerous times in the Moscow press as well as abroad. As to the latest rumor that we are not returning to Russia, it needs no denial, as we are leaving for Russia the 17th of May."

DULUTH GARMENT STRIKERS' LINE HOLDS UNBROKEN

Amalgamated Fight Now In Third Month

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DULUTH, Minn., May 19.—The Amalgamated Colthing Workers, who are on strike for the third month at the F. A. Patrick & Co. factory in this city, are just as determined to stick to the end as they were when they were forced to go on strike to protect their organization from the unscrupulous attempt of the F. A. Patrick & Co. to break the union by discharging eight of its officers.

The membership of the union signified their spirit of solidarity by standing back of discharged officers of their union. They realized the fact that if such actions of the bosses of the Patrick firm went unchallenged it would not be very long before they would all be subject to the same treatment as their officers were.

The strikers are holding daily meetings where speeches are made by able speakers who are interested in the welfare of the working class. The strikers maintain a strong picket line in front of the factory to show the bosses the unity in the ranks of the strikers.

Jack Kroll of Chicago, general organizer, has arrived in the city to assist Bloomberg in the struggle of the Patrick workers. Both organizers Kroll and Bloomberg expressed their satisfaction of the strike situation as it is at the present, saying that in the ranks there is the same enthusiasm and determination and morale they had the first week of the strike.

Lose In Rail Fight.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The Progressive-Democratic coalition in the senate lost its first fight for restrictive rail legislation when the Gooding long and short haul bill was thrown out of the army appropriation bill on a point of order by a vote of 49 to 25.

MINER'S HEAR HOWAT'S MESSAGE

ence was bitterly discussed by both sides and the machine had all it could do to martial the votes necessary for the quashing of the case.

Frank Farrington, himself, pleaded that the graft charges be dropped and the resolutions' committee begged for peace and tranquility.

John Watt demanded action on the call for an investigation into the charges that Farrington and Lewis made against each other—that Farrington had a deal with W. J. Lester for the operation of the notorious strip mine at Herrin and that Lewis and his associates were paid by the operators for throwing Howat out of the union and got $100,000 and $650,000 respectively, from Kentucky and Pennsylvania operators for betraying the miners during the 1922 strike.

"Truth In Charges."

"I believe there is some truth in the charges brought in these letters," cried Watt. "Why didn't Farrington get up in the national convention and make statements he made here if he says he isn't afraid of Lewis?"

Watts referred to the statement of Farrington that in spite of Lewis's later denial Farrington still believes Lewis charged Farrington in an international board meeting with being corrupt and with dickering with Lester strip mine owner and allowing it to operate during the strike.

"It is true Lewis and Farrington got together but not for good of the organization. They got together and Farrington had to get down on his knees before Lewis and said, 'God's sakes, let's get together.' If they hadn't they would have destroyed each other. The victim of the Lewis-Farrington deal is sitting in this hall right now.'

Let Lewis Answer Charges.

Before the vote to quash the demand for an investigation was taken Delegate Joe Tumulty moved to defer action until Lewis arrived to defend his position, but Farrington arbitrarily ruled him out of order.

Freeman Thompson, another signer to the probe-resoluton, was denied the floor contrary to all parliamentary procedure. A motion to close debate came next and the vote was taken, 349 to 151, to hush up the miners' Teapot Dome scandals.

$1,000 to Garment Strike.

One thousand dollars was contributed to the Chicago garment strike. Charles Wills, of the Chicago Federation of Labor, told of the girl dressmakers' gallant fight against policemen clubs, arrests by plainclothesmen who rode them to jail in yellow taxis and the "Dennie" Sullivan injunction. He declared that the strikers' difficulties came from the fact that only one-sixth of labor is organized, whereas the bosses are 100 per cent organized.

Delegate Hindmarsh, president of the local Riverton union, declared that the miners could lose nothing whatever by sending delegates to St. Paul. "By so doing you will solidify the forces of labor on the political field," he said. "The workers elected Small in the last primaries. Can president Farrington point to one substantial measure Small has favored in the past which meant progress to the workers? Rather than align himself with the corrupt Democratic or Republican parties, altho I am not a Communist, I would rather support the Communists."

"The employers of labor are the men that manipulate the old parties. The workers can never gain their ends thru the parties of the Teapot Dome oil scandal and the 100 per cent patriots. The labor parties in the past have failed because of the inaction and antagonism of the labor leaders. Some of the labor leaders are still antagonistic."

Farrington launched into another attack on the DAILY WORKER. He defended his support of Governor Small in a long speech and lined up with the Gompers' policy of keeping away from independent political action of labor. Farrington declared his intention of supporting Small in the coming election.

On the vote 385 voted against sending delegates to St. Paul and 105 voted in favor of the independent labor party resolution, and against the non-concurring recommendation of the resolution committee.

The resolution of recomemnding that it be made compulsory to install dust shelves in the mine entry to minimize the force of explosions, to place concrete stoppings before all openings to all old workings, and to examine the workings every eight hours was adopted.

Hits Professional.

The resolution condemning appointed auditors "For making a permanent job out of it by keeping them in the office in Springfield, auditing the books of the secretary-treasurer, and resolving that the president of District 12 exercise his power in seeing that these auditors and other appointed field workers do their work in a practical manner and in a reasonable time, whereby it would curtail a certain amount of overhead expense for the state organization," was declared to be concurred with in spirit by the resolutions commitee. The committee recommended, however, that definite charges should be brought if there was any complaint on any auditor, and declared the resolution covered by the constitution. Res. No. 62.

Prison Goods Condemned.

A resolution which was unanimously carried directed the officers of the union to see that as far as possible the miners bought union label goods. An amendment to this resolution, brought before the convention by the resolutions commitee, further declared "prison made goods one of the most detrimental influences to organized labor." Kate Richards O'Hare, who has been sitting at the press table representing the Vanguard, was largely responsible for this amendment.

Local papers have headlined "Convention wars on klan," but this is a distortion of the fact. Resolution No. 17, altho it does not mention the klan, attacks "certain un-American organizations thruout the country which have unlawfully delegated themselves the power to keep the peace and administer justice." Even this resolution, however, seemed to be too offensive to the Klan, for as finally brought in by the resolutions committee and adopted by the convention, the resolution was a statement of the rights of free speech and assemblage.

BONUS PASSED OVER CAL'S VETO; BECOMES LAW

Vets Get Paltry Bone After Six Years

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The "Graveyard" bonus bill became a law today. The Senate over-rode President Coolidge's veto by the two-thirds majority necessary, a 59 to 26 vote. The house over-rode it Saturday.

Crowds of house members thronged into the chamber and crowded around the walls. The galleries were filled.

The bill provides life insurance policies for veterans on the basis of adjusted compensation at the rate of $1 a day for home service and $1.25 a day for overseas service.

Basic compensation of not to exceed $500, for home veterans and $625 for overseas men, is multiplied by an arbitrary figure to arrive at the face value of the insurance policies, roughly two and one-half times the basic compensation.

Hawaiian Volcano Runs Wild.

HILO, T. H., May 19.—To the accompaniment of violent rain and lightning storms, the crater of Kilaeua, which started erupting last week, today continued one of the most spectacular outbursts in recent history. One person has been injured and two soldiers are missing. All roads leading to Kilaeua have been ordered closed.

Police Strike Leader Dies.

BOSTON, Mass., May 19.—The man who made Coolidge president, is dead. He was John F. McInnes, leader of the Boston police strike in 1919. During the police strike, Coolidge managed to bluff the country into believing he stopped a revolution and was nominated for the vice-presidency on his record.

World Flyers Hit Jap Islands.

TOKIO, May 19.—The three American round-the-world flight planes arrived today at Hittokapu Bay on the Island of Yetoforu. The flyers, Lieutenants Smith, Nelson and Wade, took off from Paramsiru at 7:30 a. m. and landed safely at Hittokapu Bay at 2:05 p. m.

Henry On The Shoals.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Supporters of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals scored their first senate victory today when Chairman Norris of the agriculture committee announced he would join them in opposing adjournment of congress until the Muscle Shoals question is settled.

Election Delays War Resolution.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 19.—The General Conference of the Methodist church delayed consideration of anti-war resolution in order to discuss the election of five bishops. The resolution on war will be considered Monday.

More Dogs For Police Force.

NEW YORK, May 19.—The Bremen of the North German Lloyd line arrived today with 87 passengers and 27 German police dogs. One of the dogs, "Bismarck," is said by its owner, Wilhelm Thormalen, to be worth $10,000.

Will Stick to Dirty Shirts.

TRENTON, N. J., May 19.—Altho Raymond Honeyman, a laundry driver, has inherited $50,000, he will continue collecting dirty shirts and will not purchase a motor car. His wife doesn't care for automobiles.

Making Fifth Avenue Safe.

NEW YORK, May 19.—No longer will Fifth Avenue promenaders have to dodge taxicabs speeding to pick up passengers. By a police order only taxis with passengers will be allowed on the famous thorofare.

Calls Off Thaw Fight.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 19.—The appeal of Evelyn Nesbit for a new trial for Harry Thaw, recently declared sane, was formally withdrawn here today.

STRIKING RUHR MINERS REFUSE OWNERS' TERMS

Scabs Treated Roughly By Women

BERLIN, May 19.—The striking miners in the Ruhr refused to accept an arbitration award which lengthens their hours and shortens their pay. The owners accepted the arbitration board's decision. The government declared the award binding, thus serving notice that its bayonets were back of the one-sided agreement.

Tremendous bitterness, suffering and hunger among the strikers and their families makes it doubtful that the government's declaration will have any effect.

An attempt to work the mines with scabs was met with stern resistance by the miners and their wives. In Gelsenkirchen, angry women stormed the city hall, demanding issuance of rations. Police, with drawn bayonets, attacked a demonstration led by women in the town of Rotthausen.

In the mines of Hattingen, women rolled up their sleeves, seized rakes and picks and hauled fires from the pump furnaces, so that the mines are in great danger of being flooded. They brandished heated rakes in the face of men scabs, driving the latter from the mines.

Signs of an epidemic of the dread Asiatic typhus, or something closely resembling that deadly disease, have appeared and are spreading simultaneously in different parts of Germany.

A heat wave is aiding the spread of the paratyphus epidemics.

Two have died and scores are seriously ill at Bamberg, in Bavaria, while at Hemeln the epidemic attacked the troops, 166 members of the Reichswehr being in hospitals.

Newark Can Tour Russia, Germany, By Film Friday

NEWARK, N. J., May 19.—The new film recently received from Soviet Russia, which deals with the tale of two republics, Russia and Germany, will be shown for the first time in Newark, Friday evening, May 23rd, at 7 and 9 p. m., at the Newark Labor Lyceum, 704 S. 14th St.

The film was taken by an American photographer who traveled at great risk over 15,000 miles of Russian and German territory to get pictures of the advancing German revolution. There are scenes showing the soldiers crushing the young labor government at Saxony, and the Fascists drilling and plundering to break the ranks of the German workers. In addition there are pictures of the German Communist leaders, Remple, Heckert and others, agitating among the German workers.

The streets are black with the masses of workers who have turned out for political demonstrations and hunger demonstrations and the masses are surging forward with the leaders addressing them. Then the streets are filled with beggars and the workers counting their worthless marks, millions of them which are necessary to buy one loaf of bread.

In Russia, on the other hand, there is no such turmoil and unrest. There are complete scenes of the famous Moscow International Agricultural Exposition, where the hundreds of different nationalities living in vast Russia are gathered in their native costume and Russia is shown in its economic life 1,000 years ago and now. From the huts to the sanitary homes built by the Soviet government for the workers.

This is the best of the series of films released in this country by the Friends of Soviet Russia. The photography, titling and dramatic interest is superior to any of the other films yet shown.

Committees for May 30 Picnic to Meet

The joint committees of the Y. W. L. and the T. U. E. L. will meet tonight at 8 p. m. in the Folkets Hus (Workers Lyceum), 2733 Hirsch Blvd. Important work for the various committees has been outlined and all members and those willing to help are urged to attend promptly.

The following members are asked to be there without fail: J. Winsburg, Harry Anderson, Steve Rubicky, Henry Berglund, Hans Peterson, Paul Simonson.

Members of the Y. W. L. or the T. U. E. L. not mentioned or already on committees but who are willing to give a helping hand are welcome.

Missionaries Graft on Heathen.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 19.—The missionaires in the Dutch East Indies get a pretty penny for their grafting, reports William F. Adler of a movie film company that has just returned from Java.

"It was not the natives we had to fear when we took our cameras and equipment into the kampongs of the Kia-Kias; it was the missionaries who resent the appearance of any white persons to interfere with their exceedingly highly developed graft," said Mr. Adler, who is also well known as a writer.

"They are very powerful and stand well with the Dutch government. They sell a pair of white cotton trousers for the equivalent of $60 or $70 of cocoanuts."

MASSACHUSETTS FARMER-LABOR CALL SENT OUT

State Convention June First In Boston

BOSTON, May 19.—Massachusetts has fallen in line with the whole series of states which are organizing state Farmer-Labor parties in support of the June 17 Farmer-Labor convention. The call for the Massachusetts convention, to be held on June 1 in Boston, has just been issued in the name of a number of local trade unions and labor fraternal organizations.

The call for the Massachusetts convention, as other state calls, pledges support to the June 17 convention. The call is to all labor unions, central labor councils, workers' political parties, workers' co-operative associations and fraternal organizations and farmers' organizations in the state of Massachusetts. It reads in part:

Call for State and National Action.

"The forces of farmer and labor in the state of Massachusetts are at present without any political expression of their own. They must be united to be represented effectively at the June 17 convention. This is the only hope for success in the November elections.

"For this purpose the undersigned organizations and trade unionists hereby issue a call for a state Farmer-Labor convention to be held at Franklin Union hall, 41 Berkeley street, Boston, Mass., on June 1, 1924, at 10 a. m.

"The basis of representation shall be one delegate for a membership of less than 200, and two delegates for a membership of 200 or over.

"The purpose of the June 1 convention is to create an organization in the state of Massachusetts which will be represented at the June 17 convention at St. Paul, Minn., to adopt a state platform and to nominate a full ticket for the state elections in November, 1924.

"United action of Massachusetts industrial workers and farmers is the need of the hour.

"Fraternaly yours,

"Journeymen Tailors, Local 12, Boston.
"Amalgamated Shoe Workers, Local 1, Chelsea.
"Amalgamated Shoe Workers, Local 43, Lynn.
"Brewery Workmen, No. 14, Boston.
"Workmen's Circle, Branch 715, Brockton.
"Workmen's Circle, Branch 718, Roxbury.
"A. F. Birch, Business Agent, Norwood Building Trades oCuncil.
"James E. O'Malley, National Executive Board, U. L. W. I. U. of America.
"August Osterholm, Secretary, Carpenters' District Council, Norfolk county."

The committee of arrangements is composed of T. J. Conroy, chairman, 50 Benefit street, Worcester, Mass., and Frank Deluca, secretary, 148 Court street, Boston, Mass.

Chinese Streetcar Demands.

SHANGHAI.—Chinese operators of tramways have organized a union and are placing their demands before their employers. They are asking a 30 per cent wage increase, overtime pay, eight hour day, full pay during sickness, company responsibility for accidents and payment of a yearly bonus based on profits.

Are you self-conscious about the impression you make on people?

PERSONAL appearance has a lot to do with the way you feel. Clothes count, of course. But still there is one thing so many people overlook—something that at once brands them as either fastidious or careless—the teeth.

Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel—a difficult problem finally solved.

CAPITALISTS DISCOVER NEW WAY OF SEPARATING FARMER FROM HIS LAND, SAYS WISCONSIN PROFESSOR

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Confiscation of the farmers' lands by taxation is revealed as a probability of the near future by Richard T. Ely, of the University of Wisconsin, in an address before the Tri-State Development Congress. This shows a new route by which the farmer is being made tributary to the industrial state.

Figures gathered by the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics, he said, show that if tax tendencies continue the time will come when the whole annual net return of America's farm lands will be absorbed in tax payments.

Statistical charts were used to show that in Ohio and Kansas the upcurving line representing tax increases is gaining so rapidly on the line representing the increase in land values that it will not take long for the lines to cross. When they cross the government by taking the entire income of the land will have taken the value of the land.

Ely pointed out that this tendency had been accelerated during the last three years because farm lands had been falling sharply while taxes continued to increase. If, he said, land values are absorbed by the state the utilizers of land are tenants and if the drift continues land owners will become state tenants.

Government figures refute recent statements by bankers that the cost of farm labor and its low efficiency are important contributing causes to the plight of the farmers. In spite of the steady rise in the wages of farm labor since 1921 they stand today only 53 per cent above the prewar level. And for these increased wages the worker is giving increased efficiency. According to the official figures there has been an increase of 18 per cent in productive capacity of labor on the farm since the war began.

The long hours put in on the farms must also be considered in any attempt to appraise farm wages. According to the report of the National Bureau of Economic Research on employment, hours and earnings in the U. S., the average farm laborer works over 55 hours a week in winter and 60 hours in summer. In northern states the average week in summer meant 62 to 66 hours of work. For this the average monthly wage without board was $46.91 or with board $33.18. In other words the exorbitant wages referred to among others by the federal reserve agent of the Minneapolis district meant something like 18 cents an hour without board or 13 cents an hour with board.
